New York, Dec. 9.—Bears are inclined to look for lower prices and there is reason to believe that an extension of the shorts interest will be encouraged in view of the large advance in prices up to yesterday noon. Some further reaction will improve the market, but on a decline of a point more it will pay to buy Pa., Atch., U.P., S.R. and Erie. There are bear points on Steel preferred and Pa. But we don't advise short selling of them just now. London will be a heavy buyer of our stocks today.

The Test of Respectability.

The New York "Evening Post" points out the fact that Carlyle's favorite definition of respectability, a "gigman," seems obsolete in the light of modern developments. In place of the old standard "he keeps a gig," we have substituted "he has a steam yacht." Most amusingly was this latter-day measure of wealth brought out in the letters from Paris of the promoter in search of an underwriter. Question arose as to the financial responsibility of one ready subscriber (apparently without ready cash), and the astute American applied himself to the task of rating the fellow. But how did he go to work? Did he go to the banks, the agencies, the Bourse? No, he simply observed the man's manner of life. When he discovered that the backward underwriter kept a yacht, his doubts were instantly relieved, and he cabled the joyful news to New York. Evidently, we say, in the lexicons of today we must look to see the entry: "Gigman; modern, yachtsman."

Privileged.

The Honorable Colonel William J. Bryan appears to believe that the constitutional provision regarding free speech was inserted for his especial benefit.

Fired.

"I understand Blankley was ejected from Jones's house, where he went to pay a visit."

"Yes, he was an old flame of Mrs. Jones, and Jones put him out."

Terms That are Out of Date.

"No one says 'ladies' or 'gentlemen' nowadays, Sarah," said Aunt Betty Modish to her country-bred niece, whom she was endeavoring to "form" on the approved lines of the fashionable type of her world, before presenting her to society. "We are men and women now, Dieu Merci! And it sounds like a servant to speak of people in any other way. And for Heaven's sake, child," continued her up-to-date mentor, "never let me hear you use that dreadful word 'genteel' again. I heard you say that something looked 'genteel and ladylike' yesterday, and I nearly fainted."

"Gran," who was knitting a fleecy mass of white Shetland wool into soft, dainty little baby's garments, looked up quizzically.

"Yes, Sarah," she said, "it is quite true; there are no ladies, in the old acceptation of the term, left in these modern times. They are like old lace and lavender, and belong to a bygone age. The delicacy and refinement, the purity of speech and manners, the sweet primness which laid an embargo on over-free speech, the dignity of demeanor, and the graciousness of courteous deportment, which we used to consider indicative of a 'lady,' are all old-fashioned, and, of course, must not be cultivated. The gentlemen, too, as your Aunt Betty says, have disappeared. Chivalry is quite obsolete, courtly manners are considered ridiculous, and I do not think that Tom, Dick and Harry, whom you will meet when you go out, need fear to have the old-time appellation."

New Story of Pius X.

The following story of the Pope is told in the Italian papers. A deputation of the monks of some Order had obtained an interview with him. According to the etiquette of the Vatican, only Cardinals are allowed to sit in the Pope's presence, and an invitation from him to do so is deemed equivalent to the promise of a Cardinalate. Pope Pius X. is a plain man, utterly indifferent to the etiquette of the Papal Court. He, therefore, begged the monks to take seats. They hardly knew whether they could venture to do so, and whilst they stood hesitating he said to them, "You do not, I suppose, expect me to draw your chairs forward for you?"

Would that all other Sovereigns had strength of mind to put an end to the ceremonial tomfooleries of former ages that encircle them! devoutly exclaims "Truth." All the bowing and scraping, the kissing of hands, the retiring backward, and such like antics are out of date. I recognize the ditty of every citizen to treat his official head with respect, whatever be the title by which he is known. But all such tricks only befit a performing dog, and are out of place when the performers are human beings. Court uniforms, to my thinking, are equally absurd. What can be more ridiculous than some peaceful citizen, fat and scant of breath, masquerading as a deputy lieutenant in a military uniform, or some worthy father of a family in a velvet coat, knee-breeches, and ruffles? Yet so silly and so little sense of humor have these guys that I have seen many of them disporting themselves in clubs in this array, and I am credibly informed that they actually exhibit themselves to their admiring families, as proud of their appearance as a barn door cock is of his feathers.

A Despiser of Letters.

"Sigma" in his reminiscences in "Blackwood's Magazine" (by the way, can "Sigma" be Goldwin Smith?) says that excepting Justin McCarthy, he has met in his time only two individuals who knew Thackeray personally—"one of whom certainly deserves immortality, though unfortunately I am unable to record his name, having forgotten it in the march of time. I met this individual at dinner nearly thirty years ago, when in my first 'Thackeray' enthusiasm. He was a gray-headed, square-jawed 'diner-out,' apparently of about sixty-eight or seventy, with an assertive nisi-prius manner, and one of those rasping voices that seem to dominate the dinner-table. After dinner, on the departure of an intervening lady, I found myself compelled to 'close-up' to this objectionable fellow-guest. As it happened, a minute or two previously I had heard him allude to the Charterhouse as his former public school. 'Why,' thought I, 'this old gentleman was most probably at the Charterhouse with Thackeray; suppose I break the ice by enquiring.' Accordingly, after an uncomfortable moment in which he seemed to be considering whether I was worth talking to or not, I timidly ventured to remark that I had heard him alluding to the Charterhouse, and wondered if by any chance he was there with Thackeray. 'Thackeray, sir; what Thackeray?' he answered with a contemptuous stare. 'I mean the great Thackeray,' I rejoined, rather astonished. 'What!' he rejoined; 'the fellow who wrote books? Oh yes, he was my fag, and a snivelling little beggar I thought him; often have I given him a sound kick for a false quantity in his Latin verses. I thought nothing of him, sir—nothing, I can assure you!' 'Ah, but,' I exclaimed, 'you have changed your opinion since, of course?' 'Not at all,' he growled, 'not at all; why should I?' 'Why, on account of his books,' I retorted, fairly staggered. 'Never read a syllable of them. I give you my word!' he growled with magnificent complacency; then, turning his back with a gesture of infinite disdain, he proceeded to tackle his neighbor on the other side. When I told this to Mr. McCarthy, he felicitously observed, 'What wouldn't Thackeray have given to have known that man!'"

Counsel (to witness)—How can you prove that the prisoner stole six of your handkerchiefs? "Why, because they were my handkerchiefs that were found on him. Look at them for yourself. They are exactly the same as mine." "That proves nothing. I have some handkerchiefs like those." "That's quite possible," replied the witness, "several more of mine are missing."—Ex.

He had risked his life to rescue the fair maid from a watery grave, and, of course, her father was duly grateful. "Young man," he said, "I can never thank you sufficiently for your heroic act. You incurred an awful risk in saving my only daughter." "None whatever, sir," replied the amateur life-saver; "I am already married."—Chicago "Daily News."

Chronic Biliousness

IN ITS TRIAL FOLLOW HORRIBLE DREAMS, DESPONDENCY MELANCHOLY AND GENERAL WEAKNESS.

The proper elements needed to promote good digestion, regularity of the bowels, correct action of the kidneys and liver, must be supplied when a bilious condition of the system is once established.

Ferrozone can't help but do this. It gives the stomach perfect rest, and allows you to partake of and enjoy the variety of food that is necessary for maintaining health. One Ferrozone tablet taken after each meal will separate the nutritious portions of the food from the waste, which is carried off thus preventing and curing constipation and its attendant evil, piles.

Being a potent blood purifier, Ferrozone cleanses the crimson flood of all bile and impurities, and as a result the complexion is restored to a rosy, healthy hue, and the dark circles under the eyes and the deathly pallor of the cheeks, go away never to return.

Taken for disorders of the stomach, commencing with biliousness and ending with derangements of the liver and kidneys, Ferrozone achieves marvelous results. It is at the same time a tonic and stimulant, and a regulator of all bodily functions, and chronic sufferers should not fail to give it a fair trial. It will do them good without doubt, and if the malady is curable it will yield to Ferrozone.

With the use of Ferrozone appetite will be better, the blood made rich and pure, sleep will be dreamless and sound. Your muddy complexion will be cleared and beautified, your eyes will acquire a new brightness, and as your spirits rise and good health returns you will bless the day you learned the secret of Ferrozone's power.

If you think you need Ferrozone go to the nearest drug store and procure a supply. Refuse a substitute and insist on having the genuine Ferrozone, which costs 50 cts. per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25. By mail from N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

ANNIVERSARY CONCERT

Of Otonabee Lodge No. 13, I.O.O.F. in the Opera House Last Night

The complimentary entertainment, given by Otonabee Lodge, No. 13, I.O.O.F. in the Opera House was very largely attended. The occasion was the 21st anniversary of the resuscitation of this lodge, and, following their usual custom, the Otonabee brethren were at home to their numerous friends. The trio of entertainers engaged for this event formed an entertaining combination capable of pleasing the most fastidious audience, and each one of their numbers given last night was enthusiastically received. Master Harvey Gahan, who is but 12 years of age, is well worthy the name "Canada's Phenomena" in the musical arena, and his present marvelous manipulation of the violin presages a splendid career ahead of him as a public entertainer. Miss Pearl O'Neill is an exceedingly clever elocutionist who will in a second visit to Peterborough assuredly be warmly welcomed. She is equally at home in both humor and pathos, and her enunciation is perfectly distinct, even in the most stirring parts of her numbers. She is extremely versatile, and has the pleasing faculty of holding her audience from start to finish, and carrying them with her up to the climax. Especially was this so in "The Race," at the culmination of which the pent-up enthusiasms of the immense audience found vent in a perfect storm of applause. Mr. Ruthven McDonald is a basso of no mean order of merit, equally acceptable in both sentiment and humor. His numbers were enthusiastically applauded, and the audience were especially pleased with his ready acquiescence to their repeated calls for return numbers.

The committee were fortunate in securing the services as accompanist of Miss M. Clarrey, whose clever manipulation of her instrument was highly appreciated by both performers and audience.

The whole event was a huge success in every way and the thanks of a big audience are due to the committee in charge, who spared no pains nor expense in presenting for their entertainment a high class programme in every way. The managing committee were Messrs. Col. J. W. Miller, Jas. Dawson, Jas. Laing, W. S. Robinson, M. Mowrey, Jas. A. Tulley and W. R. G. Higgins. The stage and boxes each side were very tastefully decorated and presented an exceedingly pleasing effect. The tapestry, bunting and rug for the stage were kindly loaned by the J. C. Turnbull Company, the palms by Jordan Bros., and the upholstery by A. Comstock to all of whom the committee return their heartiest thanks. Messrs. Owain-Martin very generously loaned for the event one of their grand pianos, which proved no mean factor in the evening's enjoyment.

ABOUT ODDFELLOWSHIP.

Col. J. W. Miller, in opening the evening's programme, said he, in company with his brother Oddfellows, was pleased to welcome their friends once more to their annual entertainment, which this year assumed greater importance than usual, inasmuch as on this occasion Otonabee Lodge, No. 13 had come of age, it being the 21st anniversary of its resuscitation. Of the first Otonabee Lodge but one member was living to-day, and he is Mr. Jas. Stevenson. It is not so many years ago since a few men organized Oddfellowship in Baltimore, and now in Ontario alone there are 80,000 brethren associated in the grand work of ameliorating the suffering, and relieving the distress, of Oddfellows and their families.

W. H. Hoyle, M.P.P., Past grand master of the Order, gave a brief, but exceedingly comprehensive address on the history and aims of Oddfellowship. This night, he said, was the most auspicious event in the history of Otonabee Lodge, it having reached its 21st birthday since resuscitation, and thus come of age. As to the birth of Oddfellowship, it has been claimed at a convention held at Manchester in 1843 that it originated in a camp of Roman soldiers during the reign of Emperor Nero; also that Titus Caesar in the year 79 gave the name "Oddfellow" to his troops in eulogy of their ready recognition of each other during the night as well as the day. Titus Caesar is also credited with presenting his soldiers with a golden plate, on which was emblazoned the ark of the covenant, and another containing the emblem now in use in Oddfellows' Lodges. The order found its way to Wales in the early ages was established in Portugal in the 5th century, in France in the 12th century, following which a Grand Lodge of Honor was formed in England and remained in existence until the middle of the reign of George III. Oddfellowship is now taught in 14 different languages. There are one and a half million Oddfellows today, and fourteen thousand lodges. The Order employs assets to the amount of 34 million dollars, and last year derived a revenue of twelve millions of which seven million dollars found its way in a quiet and unostentatious manner, into the homes of needy Oddfellows. In 1846 a Grand Lodge and seven subordinate lodges existed in Canada; a movement was then made to extend the order, and in March, 1861, a delegation drove from Belleville to Peterborough, where they arrived late in the evening. Otonabee Lodge was then formed, and that night eight were initiated. After four years this lodge became defunct and lay dormant for 21 years, when it was resuscitated and stands today, with its twin sister, Peterborough Lodge, one of the most enterprising and progressive lodges in the Province of Ontario. This order stands as a monument among fraternal organizations in giving assistance when trouble and affliction overtakes its members. The triple links are elastic enough to go around the world; the message they send is one of love, and the current from which that message flows is truth. While in the dark ages the triple links were emblems of tyranny and slavery, they are today emblems of love and truth, not only to Oddfellows, but to humanity as a whole.

A dance was given after the entertainment.

MEMORY MENDING

What Food Alone Can Do for the Memory

The influence of food upon the brain and memory is so little understood that people are inclined to marvel at it.

Take a person who has been living on improperly selected food and put him upon a scientific diet in which the food Grape-Nuts is largely used and the increase the mental power that follows is truly remarkable.

A Canadian who was sent to Colorado for his health illustrates this point in a most convincing manner: "One year ago I came from Canada a nervous wreck, so my physician said, and reduced in weight to almost a skeleton and my memory was so poor that conversations had to be repeated that had taken place only a few hours before. I was unable to rest day or night for my nervous system was shattered.

"The change of climate helped me a little, but it was soon seen that this was not all that I needed. I required the proper selection of food although I did not realize it until a friend recommended Grape-Nuts to me and I gave this food a thorough trial. Then I realized what the right food could do, and I began to change in my feelings and bodily condition. This kept up until now after 6 months use of Grape-Nuts all my nervous trouble has entirely disappeared. I have gained in flesh all that I had lost and what is more wonderful to me than anything else my memory is as good as it ever was. Truly Grape-Nuts has remade me all over, mind and body, when I never expected to be well and happy again." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

INCIDENTS OF THE DAY

—The Comstock ambulance has been handsomely remodelled and painted.

—It is said that there is a big bal on the tapis, to be given under the auspices of the Peterborough Club.

—John and David Smith were charged at the police court yesterday, with having committed an offense against the Charleton Act, and were remanded until Friday.

—The Cordage Works are running day and night. In addition to the regular orders, the Company has just received a contract from the Dominion Government for rope for a new steamer.

—On Monday evening Court St. Peter C.O.F. nominated officers, pending the election at the next meeting. The Court is arranging for an "At Home" on the evening of the 28th.

SOCIAL AND PERSONA

—Master Harvey Gahan, the boy violinist, with his father, Mr. J. J. Gahan, of Toronto, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Tully, Water street.

—Mr. George McBroom, Superintendent of the London Life, was in town yesterday and gave us a friendly call. He reports business very good in all lines.

—Mr E. B. Quachingbush, formerly of the Dominion Typewriter Exchange, Toronto, has arrived in town, to accept a position as secretary of the Colonial Ink Company, Hunter street. He will succeed Mr. R. M. Waddell and enters upon his duties today.

For the Farmer.

Beets, turnips and carrots can be kept in bins in the barn or cellar. A layer of carrots and a layer of dry oats or corn, or even of sand, will dry them at an even temperature and prevent sudden freezing and thawing. The same applies to potatoes or other root crops. Cold does not do them as much damage as warmth. It is when they thaw suddenly that they begin to decay.

Cows That Are Thieves.

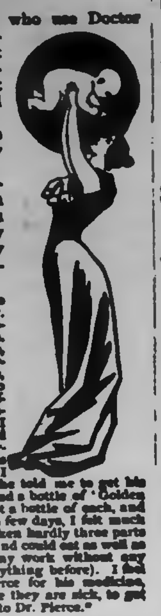
"If the 'man behind the cow' in Kansas would do his part no unprofitable animal would masquerade under the fictitious appellation of 'milch cow,' and she would either go to the butcher's block or be made to return a profit by more intelligent care and management," says Secretary Coburn in the last quarterly report of the Kansas Board of Agriculture. "It passeth understanding why theft by a cow should be tolerated more than theft by a human. In effect the result to the loser in either case is the same. Our Government has found it wisdom to study and establish far-reaching methods for the detection and the repression of the latter; and by the same token why should our farmers and dairymen be less vigilant is regard to this possible proclivity in their cows—beasts described as dumb, yet outwitting their owners? So long as cows of this class are permitted in the dairy herd, so long will there be dissatisfaction and failure. Improvement is the route to success, whether by breeding, better management, or other ways, and intelligence in our cowmen is the power that will force advancement in the right direction. Dairying has come to be one of the most important factors in Kansas agriculture, and, rightly conducted, is one of the surest money-makers of our varied industries. It is incomparably more rational than any one-crop system, or even general farming, as its practice tends to rotation of crops, maintains or increases the fertility of land, and affords steady employment with returns remunerative according to the brains mixed with the business."

Bargains in Pianos

There are some first class bargains to be had in some new and second hand pianos and organs, at W. G. Landrum's, 170 Charlotte street, agent for Heintzman & Co., Toronto. Call and see for yourself.

THE FIRSTBORN.

Why is it that the firstborn child is so often the healthiest of a family of children? The reason seems to suggest itself. As child follows child the mother has less and less vitality; often not enough for herself and none, therefore, for her child.



Expectant mothers who use Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription find that it keeps them in vigorous health. They eat well, sleep well and are not nervous. When baby comes its advent is practically painless, and the mother is made happy by the birth of a healthy child. If you would be a healthy mother of healthy children use "Favorite Prescription."

"I will be very glad to say a few words for Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription," writes Mrs. P. E. Douglas, of Mansonville, Brome Co., Quebec. "During the first four months, when I looked forward to becoming a mother, I suffered very much from nausea and vomiting, and I felt so terribly sick I could scarcely eat or drink anything. I hated all kinds of food. At this time I wrote to Dr. Pierce, and he told me to get his 'Favorite Prescription' and a bottle of 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I got a bottle of each, and when I had taken them a few days, I felt much better, and when I had taken hardly three parts of each bottle I felt well and could eat as well as any one, and could do my work without any trouble (I could not do anything before). I feel very thankful to Dr. Pierce for his medicine, and I tell all who tell me they are sick, to get these medicines, or write to Dr. Pierce."

Those who suffer from chronic diseases are invited to consult Dr. Pierce, by letter, free. All correspondence strictly private. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

THE BEST BRITISH BLOOD IS COMING TO CANADA

A Large Number of Yorkshire Farmers will Sail for Manitoba Next April

London, Dec. 10—A large number of farmers will leave Yorkshire in April for Manitoba. Another Yorkshire party will follow shortly after, and others will leave Wiltshire, Lancashire, and various Scottish centers for different parts of Canada. The parties comprise agriculturalists, mechanics and artisans. Most of the emigrants are going out under the auspices of the Canadian Government emigration offices. The emigration to Canada last year was 60,000 out of a total of 250,000 from England.

The Express, referring to the Yorkshire movement, says: "They are the pick of our people; they will have the pangs of homesickness, but their children will have the love of England mixed with bitter hatred of English history and politics."

Workers For Canada.

A meeting of the British Women's Emigration Association was held yesterday to consider the best means of drafting suitable factory workers for Canada in response to definite offers from Montreal, Toronto, and Hamilton.

Money in the Country.

Sir H. Tozer, the official representative of Queensland, who is chairman of the Imperial Industries Club, said at the meeting yesterday that he had been commissioned by his own Government to make certain purchases which had kept £2,000,000 in the family.

Alex. Smith said that brotherly love in business was all rot. Britain held her position in the colonies because she made better goods. France gave a colonial preference, and her trade had been stagnant for thirty years.

Lord Cecil said the preferential theory was fundamentally unreasonable, and meant interference with the internal trade of Canada. Canadian artisans, thrown out of work by British imports, would not be consoled by the idea that they could become ploughmen.

Agriculturist's View.

The Council of the Associated Chambers of Agriculture have decided in favor of fiscal reform.

Mr. Chamberlain was asked by the Glasgow Co-Operative Defence Association for his opinion regarding the embargo on Canadian cattle. He replied that the question was one for the Board of Agriculture, but he would be glad to have it removed if there were no danger to British cattle.

A correspondent to the Farmer and Stock Breeder says "Canada contains less of our kinsmen than the United States. The natives of the United Kingdom in Canada number only 400,000 and the proportion is diminishing."

CALLED ON THE UNITED STATES FOR LOWER TARIFF

John Charlton Tells Americans They Must Be More Liberal to Canada

Boston, Dec. 10—At the Boston Chamber of Commerce at noon to-day John Charlton, M.P., of Canada, delivered an address on "Canadian Reciprocity." The tenor of the speech was that the United States must grant more Liberal tariff provisions or Canadian tariff rates would be eventually advanced. Mr. Charlton said that the States of the American Union had enjoyed absolute free trade with each other since the constitution was adopted. Great diversity of soil, climate, and productions existed in the United States, but no thought of protecting the interests of one section against those of other sections had ever for one moment been entertained. Canada, he said, was a vast country with the strongest geographical, natural and ethnic affinities to the United States, and the same conditions that applied to free trade between the States would make free trade between the States and the Canadian Provinces equally desirable. Absolute free trade between the two countries could not yet be attained, but the nearer it could be approached the better.

Two Great Questions.

At the present moment two great fiscal questions were engaging the attention of the Canadian and the American people. These were reciprocity between Canada and the United States and preferential trade between Great Britain and her colonies. Loyalty to the Empire and a feeling of soreness towards the United States for alleged unfair treatment on tariff arrangements predisposed the Canadian people to look with favor upon the preferential trade arrangement outlined by Mr. Chamberlain.

A close investigation of the matter would, however, demonstrate that reciprocity of trade with the United States would offer vastly greater advantages to Canada than the British preference that Mr. Chamberlain proposed, and the consideration of the question would be one where sentiment would be opposed to interest. The removal of American duties from Canadian products so long as those duties were retained against the similar products of other countries meant American preference to Canada, and the removal of duties upon Canadian natural products would give a far greater degree of preference than Mr. Chamberlain proposed.

Reciprocity Misunderstood.

It was not to be understood that reciprocity meant the removal of duties upon all articles. It would necessarily be confined mainly to natural products. Last year Canada gave to the United States a free list of $40,486,000, which included manufactures to the value of $22,000,000. The United States free list to Canada was practically nil. Since 1866 the American tariff has been more than double that of Canada. The exports of the United States in 1902 to Canada were $36,814,000 in excess of the exports of that country to Mexico, the Central American States, and all of South America.

The balance of trade against Canada and in favor of the United States last year was $72,564,000, and our adverse trade balances in favor of the United States since 1873 amount to over $400,000,000. At present Canada is buying two dollars in the United States for every dollar of sales in that country. This state of affairs will have to be changed, either by more liberal tariff provisions on the part of the United States or by a sharp advance in Canadian tariff rates.

Canada Will Choose.

In conclusion, Mr. Charlton said "Canada will choose between British preferential trade and reciprocity. It is time, in her own interests, for the United States to manifest a spirit of airness and generosity towards Canada, and the more generous this manifestation of spirit is, the more satisfactory to the United States will be the result. The critical hour is at hand when Canada will have arrived at the parting of the ways, and will decide whether she shall cultivate intimate and natural relations with the United States, or whether she will put up her tariff wall against that country and become a component part of a great imperial trade federation. The United States can decide that the latter shall be the case by maintaining its present tariff policy."

Austrian Says Failure to Seize will Cost England India

Vienna, Dec. 11.—Professor Vambery, in an article in Die Zeit, on the possibility that the British expedition to Thibet will lead to internal complications, declares that Great Britain must acquire Thibet unless it wishes to lose India.

CANNOT FIND TIME

Mr. Chamberlain Cannot Visit Canada at Present

Ottawa, Dec. 10.—A prominent resident of the city has received a letter from a member of Mr. Chamberlain's family, which contains the following statements:

"I fear my father will be too busy to come out to Canada in the next twelvemonth, or indeed, until this campaign has been fought to a finish. Great Britain is not unresponsive to the idea of Empire, as some would have you believe; on the contrary, the arguments of arguments which is winning over the people to a preferential tariff is that it will knit all parts the King's Dominions more closely together. The resolutions received from important bodies in Canada, and the speeches made by leading men have been most helpful. In short, we shall win, if not at the next election, then at the one following, and we shall respond to Canada's appeal while it is yet time. I hope it may be possible in the future for my father to bring the message to Canada himself."

STRONG RUSSIAN SQUADRON

Tokio, Dec. 11.—A strong Russian squadron, consisting of eight warships, including two battleships, has arrived at Chemulpo, the Port of Seoul, Capital of Corea, to support Russia's opposition to the proposed opening of Yongampho to the commerce of the world. The Russians threaten to land three thousand men and march on Seoul, should Corea disregard their warning.

AN ANCIENT ORDER

Charlottetown, P.E.I., Dec. 11—A couple of days after the post office had been removed to its present building a certain firm in this city received a postcard in their box from a well known merchant in the West, requesting them to send immediately three barrels of tar. The order was filled and the tar sent. On looking over the post-card later the man who received the card noticed by the post-mark that it was just fifteen years old. The card had been loosened from some cranny by the workmen who are at present performing a surgical operation on the post office. A clerk picked it from the floor without examining it, and thus the incident occurred.

THE UNITED STATES MUST FIGHT WITH THE GERMANS

General McArthur Predicts That War Between Two Countries Must Come

From the Growth of German Interests in South America

Honolulu, December 10—Major-General MacArthur, U.S.A., during the military conference, said that in all probability war will take place between the United States and Germany in the near future, which makes the Hawaiian National Guard of national importance. The Pan-Germanic doctrine is growing among German-Americans, few of whom volunteered in the war with Spain. He believes that German interests are growing to such an extent in South America that the strain upon the Monroe doctrine will eventually result in a conflict. Hawaii being a strategic point, no nation, he says, will make any attempt upon the shore line of the Pacific States until the capture of the Hawaiian Islands has been effected.

This statement of Major-General MacArthur's has just been made public through the report of Colonel Jones to Governor Carter.

Colombia Bids Defiance.

New York, Dec. 10—The Tribune today says:

Chiefs, officials and soldiers of the army in operation on the Atlantic, the Pacific and in the department of Panama.

With the luxury of brute force such as has not been seen until today in the annals of history, and using the most cunning means known, the United States Government has attempted to take into its hands the dismemberment of our country, disgracing the tricolor flag, which until now we have known how to bear with dignity.

In the epoch of the emancipation of America, Colombia gave proof of an entirety of soul that filled the world with admiration. Venezuela and Ecuador followed and we were able to help in the formation of Peru and Bolivia.

If the forces of the Colombian youth be not sufficient to dominate the Colossus of the North before we have disappeared entirely, those who live will have the satisfaction of seeing our mothers, wives and daughters, take up arms and follow the paths of duty which we have trod.

It is preferable to see the Colombian race completely exterminated than to submit ourselves to the political infamy of President Roosevelt. Well is this chief of American union proving that he does not know how to interpret the boasted Monroe doctrine, and does not comply with the spirit of the letter of the international treaties, such as that of 1846, in which the United States guaranteed to us that Panama should belong always to Colombia.

The whole country has been drenched with the blood of the heroes of our independence. We shall drench it with ours, and show the other peoples of this world an example worthy of imitation.

Chiefs, officials, and soldiers of the army—we will swear to God, and promise ourselves to the country to defend our rights until we have shed the last drop of blood.

Given in the headquarters in Barranquilla, November 28, 1903, by the general in charge of this great state.

DANIEL ORTIZ.

England's Anti-Russian Policy.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 10.—Official resentment of England's anti-Russian policy is so strong that well informed observers expect some form of retaliation in the near future. The purchase of the Chilian battleships by the Balfour Government is classed as an unmistakable affront to Russia, notwithstanding the attempt of the London press to make it appear an act in pursuance of the ordinary naval policy of the country. In the same category is placed the pro-Japanese and pro-Chinese activity of Britain's representatives in the Far East and the aggressive course of the Indian Government in Thibet and in the Persian Gulf. It is only a question of time when Russia will find a favorable opportunity to undertake squaring accounts.

WAR AGAINST UNIONS

Employers Make War Plan For Whole Continent

A FIGHT TO A FINISH

Union Label and Closed Shop the Main Issue

Dayton O., Dec. 11.—Organized warfare against the union label, the eight-hour bill pending in Congress, the boycott, the "socialism, tyranny and lawless violence" of labor unions, sympathetic strikes, and the "closed" shop, found expression today in resolutions adopted by the executive committee of the Citizens Industrial Association of America. This is a powerful society of employers recently organized by D. M. Parry and Frederick W. Job in Chicago. It now invites all the employers of the United States and Canada to form local branches that shall be affiliated with the national body in a Titanic struggle against unwarranted demands of union labor in every branch of business.

One resolution adopted by the executive committee urges members not to place the union label on goods they manufacture. Another attacks the eight-hour bill. Another provides for the formation of a labor information bureau that shall have a practical blacklist of union men who resort to lawlessness or anarchy and are undesirable workmen.

SAY UNIONS MENACE LIBERTY.

"The present industrial conditions have become so deplorable by reason of the indefensible methods and claims of organized labor," says the association in its resolutions, "that the time has come when the employing interests and good citizenship of the country must alone immediate and effective measures to reaffirm and enforce those fundamental principles of American government guaranteeing free, competitive conditions.

"In its demand for the closed shop organized labor is seeking to overthrow individual liberty and property rights, the principal props of our government. Its methods for securing this revolutionary and socialistic change in our institutions are those of physical warfare.

"Because of this warfare the industrial interests of the nation during the last year have been injured to an irreparable degree. Many firms have been driven into bankruptcy and the cases are innumerable in which workingmen have been disabled and even murdered, while numerous families have been rendered destitute by reason of the tyranny and seditious attacks on society by the strike organizations.

"A condition of anarchy has existed continuously in some states for months past, the acts of lawlessness committed under the sacred name of labor is of such frequent recurrence that the public sense of its enormity has become blunted. The period of great prosperity brought about by the unrestricted operation of the law of supply and demand is also being destroyed by the acts of violence of organized labor and as a result we are now confronted with the possibility of a period of depression.

"While we most emphatically object to being classed as enemies of organizations of labor that are conducted on lawful and beneficient lines, yet we are unalterably opposed to the present programme of violence, boycotting and tyranny being carried out by the majority of labor unions.

EMPLOYERS MUST ORGANIZE NOW.

"We, therefore, urge the rapid organization of those who believe in the maintenance of law and order and the perpetuation of our free institutions to the end that they may wield their full and proper influence on the destinies of the nation. Since organizations exist for the apparent purpose of defying law and common sense and are able to intimidate and influence public men and municipal authorities, there is no alternative left to those who desire to preserve bearable conditions in our body politic than that of forming counter organizations.

"It is only through the machinery of organization that we can hope to exercise a potent and salutary influence over public thought and the conduct of public officials, to the end that the rights of American citizenship can be assured to free and independent labor, the rights of property protected and legislation of a socialistic nature prevented from being enacted into law.

SEEKS TO ENLIST ALL EMPLOYERS

"We invite all associations, local, state and national, that sympathize with the purposes of the Citizens' Industrial Association of America to enter into affiliation with us at the earliest practical time, and we urge the immediate formation of local branches of the national organization in all the cities and towns where no organizations now exist that are eligible for membership in this association.

"The committee herewith instructs the secretary of the association to open the books of the organization and to enroll in its membership all associations that desire to affiliate with it."

BLOODSHED PREDICTED.

Chicago, Dec. 11.—"If the fight for the closed shop is allowed to continue, there will be orgies of bloodshed in this country that will surpass the day of the French revolution. The closed shop is un-American, unrighteous, a restriction of the liberties of our people, and a death blow to the individualism that makes for success."

The foregoing sentiment expressed by W. B. Brinton, President of the Peru Plough Company, has been cheered by the members of the Illinois Manufacturers' Association at their annual banquet.

"Our rights," declared Mr. Brinton, "are dependent on the settlement of the question once for all as to whether an employer can hire whom he pleases without being subject to the dictation of any organized body. The Chicago city railway has won a great victory in establishing its right to engage its own employes. Without this right, which is becoming recognized by the great mass of people, the commercial supremacy of the United States will be at an end."

Another speaker declared that after the abolition of the "closed shop" the removal of the union label was the most important thing that came under consideration of the Manufacturers Association.

A SPLENDID PROPOSITION

One of the Best Ever Offered to Canadian Investors

We call the attention of Canadian investors to the proposition of the Rio Colorado Gold and Copper Company, to be found on our financial page. This is a proposition worthy of the attention of all who have money to invest. It is estimated that nearly half a billion dollars are lying in the savings banks of the country drawing three per cent., much of which is waiting a favorable opportunity to invest. Here is a chance where safety and large profits are assured. The Times has been shown a copy of the report of Mr. John W. Wallace, mining engineer, who states that the ore pans out ore to the market value of 174 per ton. A PRETTY WEDDING

Nuptials of Miss Amy Porter and Mr. W.G. Miller on Wednesday Evening

On Wednesday evening a very pretty wedding took place at the residence of Mrs John Porter, Ashburnham, when her second daughter, Miss Amy, was married to Mr. W. G. Miller, of Ashburnham. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. G. Potter of St. Andrew's church.

The bride was prettily attired in Persian lawn, trimmed with lace and ribbon and wore the customary bridal veil. Her boquet consisted of white carnations. Miss Minnie Porter, sister of the bride was bridesmaid and wore a handsome gown of pale blue organdie trimmed with black velvet and buckles. She carried a boquet of pink carnations. The groom was supported by his brother, Mr. Murray Miller. Miss Mary Anderson, of Toronto, cousin of the bride presided at the piano and rendered the Wedding March very acceptably. A Heintzman piano was the groom's gift to the bride and to the bridesmaid a gold chain. Among the other presents were a handsome jardiniere and pedestal from the employes of J. Sutcliffe and Sons, a Teneriffe hand-drawn tea and tray cloth from Mr. and Mrs. Sutcliffe, also a carving set from Mr. E. M. Beer and employes. Mr. and Mrs. Miller will reside in Auburn.

RUSSIA BUILDING FORTS TO RESIST THE BRITISH

Russians Said to be Fortifying Thibet to Check Young Husband's Advances

THE COST OF RADIUM

Paris, Dec. 11.—Dr. and Mrs. Currie, who has just been informed that they will receive half of the Nobel physics prize, will mark the occasion by the announcement of recent further discoveries in connection with the production of radium. It is reported in the Sorbonne that the two experts have found a process of extraction which will materially cheapen the precious metal and bring it within the reach of the general medical world.

AWFUL RECORD OF CRIME

Measures for checking street and saloon murders, hold-ups, burglaries and other crimes which have been bodily committed in the last month, will be discussed this evening at the mass meeting.

A BAD STREET CAR RIOT IN CHICAGO.

Conductor Did Not Wear a Union Button And Passengers Refused to Pay Fares

Chicago, Dec. 10.—In a riot to-day growing out of the recent strike on the Chicago City Street Railway a car was wrecked by a mob of union sympathizers, who furiously attacked the non-union conductor and motorman, badly injuring both. The crew of the car escaped into a nearby building, where they were guarded by police. The riot occurred on the Halstead street line near Archer avenue.

The mob was participated in by hundreds of men and boys. Forced to flee from the car, the two non-union men were severely pummelled. When they fled the mob pursued, but failing to recapture them, returned to the car, and rendered it unfit for use. A patrol wagon-load of police meantime rescued the two non-unionists.

Street car traffic on the line was suspended for nearly an hour, and hundreds of passengers were delayed.

The non-union conductor probably owes his life to Policeman John O'Hara, who threw open the front door leading to a private residence and shouted to the man to take refuge within. Then the policeman appeared at a window and threatened to shoot anyone that attempted to enter.

The trouble occurred owing to the refusal of passengers, among them several women, to pay fare to the conductor, who wore no union button. He announced that the car would stop unless the fares were paid. The passenger seized him, while others, displaying a revolver, ordered the motorman to start the car. The motorman ran the car to Archer avenue and then fled. Both of the victims, it is said, were employed as strike breakers during the recent strike.

AN ENGLISHWOMAN ANSWERS AN ENGLISHWOMAN

A good deal of indignation has been felt in Canada at an article, from the pen of an Englishwoman, which appeared recently in the columns of a contemporary. The writer, who took upon herself to criticise the taste and appearance of Canadian girls, led off by saying that "any Englishwoman who let her lover go to Canada to make a home for her need not fear that he will fall a victim to the charms of Canadian girls;" and goes on to further rub in his state of perfect safety by proclaiming with more venom than truth, that at "Ottawa, Toronto, and Montreal the typical face is hard-featured and sallow, and frequently muddy complexioned—no doubt the result of overheated rooms, pastry and candy. In Toronto, when a woman is over thirty, she wears her hair dragged up behind and tight in front, surmounted by a hard-looking felt hat, which only serves to intensify her plainness." As far as this description goes, in our experience it has hitherto been reserved for one type of Englishwoman at home. How well we all know her! How often have we traveled with her, and let our eyes rest upon her spare unlovely form before us in church! By way of giving even the devil his due, this Dame come to judgment allows that the Canadian girls "have long thick hair," but immediately damns even this faint praise by a mysterious reference to its being dressed in "the Gibson Girl fashion." The writer of the article evidently felt very badly when she wrote, and let her temper get the better of her sense of truth, for nowhere would it be possible to find more charming or better groomed girls than in Canada. In our experience, the first thing that strikes an Englishwoman in going amongst them are their lithe and well-set figures, tiny feet and hands, beautiful eyes, and perfectly magnificent hair, which is always most becomingly dressed. To these natural advantages add an instinct for dressing which enables a Canadian girl to put on the plainest skirt and simplest "shirt waist" in a way which no Englishwoman achieves, and you have a result for which most of us would be willing to barter even the doubtful advantage of our "pink and white skins," which we are proudly told "are seldom seen in Canada."—Woman's World, in Liverpool Post.

The Emperor's Hand.

Napoleon had seven or eight theories to account for his defeat at Waterloo; but he failed to mention one which was concocted by Alexandre Dumas, who says that Napoleon lost the battles which did go against him because he wrote such an illegible hand.

His generals could not read his notes, and trembling marshals, afraid of disobeying and yet unable to decipher directions, went wavering about, and failed to rule the issue.

He would have been a bold man who ventured to criticize the Emperor's handwriting by asking to have it explained. The imperial temper was worse than peppery. The great man one day drew his pistol to shoot a little dog which had barked at his horse. A marshal might have fared still worse.

No one could emulate the daring of that Danish officer who "spoke up" to Nelson, at Copenhagen. He had been sent in before the fight with a flag of truce, and was asked to put his message in writing.

"If your guns are not better than your pens," said he, trying the assortment offered him, "you had better retire."

Characteristic of Chicago.

The patent medicine style of university advertising is characteristic of Chicago, remarks the Detroit "Free Press." Harperesque—in short, to the last, least detail. Only in the Rockefeller institution of learning and applied faking would it be possible. A professor from the University of Michigan goes to the University of Chicago and immediately a prize heifer advertising campaign is inaugurated to entice his students to follow him. One wonders only that the Harper university contented itself with merely offering Professor Mechem's post-graduate courses to the Ann Arbor seniors. What was the matter with Chicago's premium department? Could no business alliance be formed with one of Chicago's famed industries by which the Michigan student who presented so many wrappers of So-and-So's laundry soap should receive a post-graduate course free of cost? Are there no additional inducements to be offered to the Michigan student who forms the greatest number of words out of the letters of Dr. Harper's name?

"Did you give that woman two good eggs for her five cents?" asked the corner-grocer of the new boy. "I did, sir." "You're discharged. You should have sold her two bad eggs, so that she'd come back to kick, and give me a chance to sell her a porterhouse steak."—Baltimore "News."

You Pay Only if Cured

Expects No Money Unless He Cures You—Method and Full Particulars Sent Free—Write For It This Very Day

A Detroit specialist who has 14 certificates and diplomas from medical colleges and boards, has perfected a startling method of curing the diseases of men in their own homes; so that there may be no doubt in the mind of any man that he has both the method and the ability to do as he says, Dr. Goldberg, the discoverer, will send the method entirely free to all men who send him their name and address. He wants to hear from men who have stricture that they have been unable to get cured, prostatic trouble, sexual weakness, varicocele, lost manhood, blood poison, hydrocele, emaciation of parts, impotence, etc. His wonderful method not only cures the condition itself, but likewise all the complications, such as rheumatism, bladder or kidney trouble, heart disease, nervous debility, etc.

DR. S. GOLDBERG,

The Possessor of 14 Diplomas and Certificates Who Wants No Money That He Does Not Earn.

The doctor realizes that it is one thing to make claims and another thing to back them up, so he has made it a rule not to ask for money unless he cures you, and when you are cured he feels sure that you will willingly pay him a small fee. It would seem, therefore, that it is to the best interests of every man who suffers in this way to write the doctor confidentially and lay your case before him. He sends the method, as well as many booklets on the subject, including the one that contains the 14 diplomas and certificates, entirely free. Address him simply

Dr. S. Goldberg, 208 Woodward Ave., Room Detroit, Mich., and it will all immediately be sent you free.

FIGHTING CONSUMPTION

One of the most interesting and useful contributions to recent literature regarding the prevention and cure of consumption is an article in the Outlook by Professor Irving Fisher, of Yale, N.Y., on this important subject. Professor Fisher writes from knowledge and in opening his article he says: "Personally I am interested in tuberculosis as one who has had it and been cured of it." He points out that tuberculosis is both a general and contagious disease, a disease preventable in the first place and curable if the right means are taken early enough. This treatment he sets forth is life as much as possible in the open air including sleeping out at night; the use of proper food; the breathing of pure air and the taking of needed rest for mind and body. As to the outdoor cure he says: "The patient sleeps out even in winter. With few exceptions the colder the weather the better the patient likes it. I have myself slept out when the thermometer registered ten degrees below zero Fahrenheit. Last winter at the Adirondack Cottage Sanitarium six patients, including one lady, slept out (with marked benefit), even when the mercury reached thirty below."

Of course the patients were clothed abundantly and had several mattresses under them while head, nose and ears were suitably protected. The result of this sleeping out was that the patients gained in health and finally became absolutely immune to cold. Home treatment might yield similar results, but the old prejudice against night air, draughts of air, etc., must be firm overcome. The importance of the fresh air cure is also insisted upon, and the reasons therefor are given. The breathing of pure air is an imperative essential to cure. The results achieved by open air life and the breathing of pure air as much as possible are dwelt upon. Professor Fisher's paper is an invaluable one to all.

From New York also comes corroborative testimony. From actual facts obtained, it is found that the death rate in New York City from pulmonary tuberculosis has fallen since 1881 from 4.2 per 1,000 to 2.29 per 1,000, a reduction of more than 40 per cent. This result is due to the recognition by the New York board of health that consumption is infectious and to the use of measures to prevent infection together with the renovation of premises which have been occupied by persons suffering from the disease; and lastly by dissemination of information regarding the disease. By the use of right means remarkable cures of this dread disease have been accomplished, as remarkable as any obtained in the health resorts of the Adirondacks, but by the same means which Professor Fisher advocates,—the rigid vigorous and never ceasing enforcement of the open air rule.

HUDSON BAY RIGHTS

A recent editorial of the London Times tells how necessary it is for an arbitration treaty to exist between Britain and the United States, on account of the possibility of disputes arising between the latter country and Canada.

The Times goes on to say:

"The need for arbitration is all the plainer because differences are apt to be precisely of a sort to excite the passions of both people, especially a possible dispute as to American fishing rights in Hudson Bay, is a case in point. The sending of an officer of the North-Western Mounted Police as Governor of the region where the dispute arises, with orders to expel American whalers from the settlements on the coast and drive them from the waters of the bay, is an extreme measure, if carried out to the letter, may produce a lot of bad feeling. It is this kind of dispute that should be determined by arbitration.

It is just information of this kind that has led to loose ideas in Britain as to Canada's rights and possessions.

The fishing rights of the United States in Hudson Bay have no existence whatever. A treaty signed by both nations settled that forever. The American Republic has no more rights in Hudson Bay that Britain has in Chesapeake Bay in Great Salt Lake, or in New York harbor.

And so long as poachers do their work unchecked in Hudson Bay, it is a tacit admission on Canada and Britain's part that they do not wish to bring the question to a head, or as the United States will understand it, that the claim is not a perfect one.

As Canada's claim is of the best, the Canadian Government, in sending an armed cruiser to Hudson Bay to assert these rights, has done just what should have been done.

If the United States intend to override these rights, the sooner it is known the better.

If Britain intends to allow a matter of plain right as this to be arbitrated, the sooner it is known the better.

In fact, the whole objection to an arbitration treaty with the United States is in the fact that all sorts of impossible claims would be advanced in which the United States had all to gain and nothing to lose, and Britain, out of her over-bubbling friendliness, might be inclined to the assent of these claims.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

With the marriage of Genera, Viljoen to an English music hall singer, the subjugation of our brother Boer will be about complete.

Judging by the speeches of English public men, many want Imperial Preferential trade, many want Protection, some want Retaliation, some want Free Trade, and about twenty-five per cent. don't know what they want.

A Texas negro has been sentenced to one thousand years in the penitentiary. The term seems a long one; but by good conduct the colored brother may earn a discount of three or four hundred years.

The richest nation in the world is not the United States, but a nation within the United States. The Osages of Indian Territory are credited with bank accounts that amount to nearly $5,000 per individual, and the average holding of land is eighty seven acres, valued at $10 per acre. Here, then, is a case where "Lo, the poor Indian," is better off, financially, than even the white citizen of Massachusetts, the richest of American commonwealths.

Womanly Troubles

SHOULD NOT BE ALLOWED TO UNDERMINE HEALTH AND BEAUTY, BUT SHOULD BE TREATED AT ONCE BY FERROZONE

It is impossible to go into details on this subject, but the experience of many a poor woman who is crippled for life, just because she didn't use a good remedy in time, should be a warning to others.

When the first stages of womanhood appear in a young girl, a great deal depends upon getting her over this critical stage, so that in years to come she will not develop green sickness or consumption.

As soon as she complains of flushed face, headache, bearing down feelings, give her at once a course of Ferrozone treatment which will carry her past the circle.

In the adult woman if any irregularities occur, Ferrozone will be found a remedy of remarkable potency and power.

Ferrozone is the ideal regulator for the monthly period and causes all organs of the body to perform their work properly, and at just the expected time.

It purifies the blood, tones up the nerves and vital energies. The stomach is strengthened, and digestive and assimilative processes are improved by the good work of Ferrozone. It regulates the bowels, cures constipation, and piles, and replaces disease and decay by health and strength.

There is nothing better for the complexion than Ferrozone. It removes the dark circles from under the eyes, removes and cures all manner of skin eruptions, gives brightness and brilliancy to the eyes, a rosy tint to the cheeks, whitens the teeth and develops a well rounded plump and handsome form.

Ferrozone is the ladies' favorite, and should find a place in every household. It is prepared in the form of a chocolate coated tablet, convenient and pleasant to take. Price per box 50c. or three boxes for $1.25. Sold by all druggists, or by mail from N.C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

Russia and Japan.

Two Japanese papers, says Public Opinion (New York), The Jiji and The Yomiuri Shimbun, make the anniversary of the invasion of China by Japan in 1894 an occasion for comparing Japan's strength then and now. Contrasting the naval forces of the various powers in these waters at that time with their forces today:—

	Displacement in 1894.	1903.
British squadron	41,720	139,800
Russian squadron	24,175	221,074
American squadron	8,500	62,500
French squadron	10,034	57,867
German squadron	978	34,426

All these figures are independent of torpedo craft, and, making the same exclusion, the Japanese navy now displaces 246,511 tons. The Jiji considers that this country is consequently in a position to hold its own against any single power, and if it were called upon to face two or more powers Great Britain would come to its aid. Further, Japan has great geographical advantages, and thus from every point of view she would have nothing to apprehend at sea. The Yomiuri's figures are much the same as those quoted, but this paper cannot see that Japan is profiting from her strength, for, "viewed by the light of her foreign policy, she seems as helpless as she was when the Liaotung mandate reached her." The Nichi Nichi of Tokio sees no cause to worry as to the future, even if Japan has to endure a good deal for the moment. "Supposing," it says, "that unfortunately war breaks out between Japan and Russia, and, further, supposing that China was so unwise as to cast in its lot with Russia, the consequence would be that England would, in compliance with the stipulations of her alliance with us, have to join in the fight on our side. In that event there would take place a fundamental change in the condition of things in the far east."

A Touchdown Imminent — Minneapolis Journal.

It is said that the British Government is doing all in its power to avert hostilities, and it may be that Russian statesmen believe that Britain would give way on every point rather than risk another costly war following so closely upon the enormously expensive conflict in South Africa. It is, however, significant that Japanese officials of the highest rank have recently reasserted the declaration that their Government is acting in full accord with British officials, and the Anglo-Japanese treaty. The British Foreign Office knows and undoubtedly approves of every move that the Japanese Government is making, and because of that Russia, the most shameless treaty-breaking power known to modern history at all events, is compelled to give greater heed to the Japanese remonstrances. Russian newspaper threats of what is likely to happen to Japan, and rumors from Pekin or Tokio, are not to be relied upon as a guidance of far eastern diplomatic developments, to the same extent as official utterances from the British Foreign Office.

A Club for Women.

A scheme is on foot to establish in London an international club for literary and scientific women, under the name of the Lyceum Club, and the idea is meeting with warm support. A provisional committee, which is in process of formation, already includes the names of Lady Frances Balfour, Mrs. Moberly Bell, Mrs. Oscar Beringer, Mrs. Craigie, Mrs. Walter Crane, Mrs. Katharine Tynan-Hinkson, Mrs. C. E. Humphry ("Madge" of Truth), Mrs. Thomas Hardy, Mme. Longard de Longarde (Dorothea Gerard), Mrs. Katharine Macquoid, Mrs. Mary E. Mann, Mrs. Alice Meynell, Mrs. Molesworth, Mrs. Hubert Bland (E. Nesbit), Mrs. Reeves (Helen Mathers), Mrs. Clement Shorter (Dora Sigerson), Mrs. Flora Annie Steel, the Hon. Mme. Alethea Wiel, Mrs. L. B. Walford, Mrs. Humphry Ward, Miss L. Alma Tadema, Miss Jane Barlow, Miss Rhoda Broughton, Miss Jeannette Gilder, Miss Beatrice Harraden, Miss Ella Hepworth-Dixon, Miss Netta Syrett, Miss Alice Stromach, Miss Sarah Tytler, Miss McTaggart, Dr. Sophia Jex-Blake, and others. A representative provisional committee is being organized in every country on the continent, in the colonies and in America.

It is proposed that the Lyceum, besides offering the usual conveniences of a residential club, should maintain an information bureau for the use of authors, journalists and students. Members visiting countries other than their own for any length of time would receive introductions to members of the club residing in that country, and foreign members visiting the club in London would have introductions to English members, so that their stay might be made as pleasant as possible. Membership will be restricted to:—(a) Women who have published any original literary or black and white work, and wives of men distinguished in literature and journalism; and (b) women with university qualifications. This, it will be seen, embraces all writing women, black and white artists, doctors and women with university degrees. The capital necessary for the formation of the club has been guaranteed, and it is hoped to secure a club house in the neighborhood of the Strand.

The Deaf Heard.

Ex-Governor Hogg of Texas has the reputation of liking to play a practical joke every time he gets a chance. The last time he was in New York City, says The New York Times, the joke he tried to perpetrate was turned back on him in fine style.

It happened that he wanted a shoeshine. The bootblack, a small-sized Italian, began to chatter at him after he had taken his seat in the high chair. Not being in a conversational frame of mind the portly Governor thought it would be a good plan to feign that he was deaf and dumb. So he responded by signs to everything the bootblack said.

This proceeding naturally caused the desired silence on the part of the Italian and the Governor was wrapped in his own thoughts, when suddenly a little newsboy ran up and asked him if he wanted a paper. Before he could reply the bootblack turned to the boy and said:—

"You nota talka to him. Ha deaf."

The newsboy looked him over, says the Governor, and then remarked in a loud voice:—

"Well, say, he's a fat old hog, ain't he?"

The Governor, who weighs 300 pounds or more, relishes telling the story, but he adds feelingly that he kept up his bluff after hearing the brutal comment of the newsboy.

The private, after being sentenced, asked whether he was being punished for insulting the Secretary of State for War or the lance-corporal.

The court remained silent.

Archaeological Research.

The London Daily Graphic of Sept. 10 says: "Several members of the British Archaeological Association, having expressed a desire to inspect the remains of ancient man, recently the subject of a paper read at Sheffield by Mr. W. J. Nichols of Chislehurst, during the recent Congress of that association, a party of antiquaries were conducted over the caves and passages yesterday by Mr. Nichols, who pointed out the remarkable peculiarities and vast extent of the area which has been excavated for many miles underground at a period to which at present no definite date can be assigned. Starting from the only entrance in the face of the cliff close to the railway station, the party perambulated about four miles of passages, which appear to be formed with considerable regularity, measuring about 6 feet to 10 feet in height, with occasional dips of less height and a breadth of 3 feet to 12 feet. The walls in the solid chalk show numerous marks of the workman's pick, and they curve in slightly at the top, with a flat roof formed by the under surface of a stratum of chalk. There are alcoves or side-chambers with bee-hive shaped domes, daisies, or altars, side passages ending in a cul-de-sac, and in one of these labyrinthine walks is a well of very fine and true work and reaching to about 200 feet in depth. Conjectures have been widely hazarded as to the object of these workings, but nothing at present is definitely known beyond the fact that Roman pottery and worked flints have been found.

WESTERN BROKERAGE COMPANY, Incorporated

396 Henne Block, LOS ANGELES, CAL.

Equitable Gold Mining Co.

H. C. LANE, President. S. F. NORTON, Secretary and Treasurer.

Over $300,000 of development work already done. Main shaft 9 x 16 feet, down 700 feet. Over 3,000 feet of drifts, tunnels and shafts showing immense ore body

Destined to become large and continuous dividend payer.

The Equitable Gold Mining Co.'s properties consist of three mines, known as the North Bonanza, Flowery and Kimbark. They are located in Six Mile Canon, less than four miles from Virginia City, Nevada, which is the nearest railroad station.

Years ago, over three hundred thousand dollars of development work was done upon the mines—so they are not mere "prospects" but actual mines. This work was done under the personal supervision of competent engineers, and was paid for by the owners of the mines themselves; thus giving double assurance that the work was well done and that the expenditure was justified.

The Main Shaft (triple compartment, 9x16 feet in the clear) is down seven hundred feet. From this shaft, running along the vein matter, east and west, are four drifts, at different levels, having a combined length (including the Rule winze and the tunnel) of 2,850 feet.

In addition to the above there are four small shafts, with a combined depth of about 300 feet; 535 feet of tunnels, and at least 600 feet of cross-cuts, uprises, etc.

All told, there is 4,650 feet of underground work—the most of which is in ore. Here is nearly one mile of openings in mineralized rock.

It is conservatively estimated by competent and reliable engineers and practical miners that there is developed an ore body of at least One Million Five Hundred Thousand Tons!

As a further evidence of the large amount of work done there is from 75,000 to 100,000 tons of ore on the dumps at the different surface openings—ore that, with modern cheapened processes, can be converted into gold bullion at a profit.

THE TITLE

Title to the Flowery and North Bonanza mines is by patent from the United States government, while the title of the Kimbark is by location and possession.

The Equitable Company obtained the Flowery and North Bonanza mines, both of which are patented, by purchase—the payments therefore to be made out of a share of the net proceeds of the mines. The Company has a written contract, duly recorded, for a deed, and is in possession of the properties, and is now operating them. The sum of $2,000 was paid on the contract, September 30th, 1902, and partial payments have since been made. The Company is entitled to $4.25 per ton as cost of mining and milling. One-half of all over and above this $4.25 per ton goes to the former owners till they receive the total sum of $105,000, without interest. There is no stipulation as to amount of work to be done within any specified time—and no proceeds, no pay. The Company can therefore pay it in one year or it can pay it in ten years. With this exception the Company is free from debt. Its policy is to pay as it goes. In this way it has no fear of financial embarrassments. The title to the Kimbark is by "location," under the mining laws of the United States. Work enough has already been done to entitle the Company to a patent, which in due time will be obtained.

Recent Development Work

Since the Company acquired the property, it has put up poles and wires for a distance of one mile for the transmission of electric power from the Truckee River Electric Power Plant. By this means unlimited power for mining, hoisting and milling is obtained.

It has built a dwelling house for the manager, a large boarding house for the miners, a barn, a power house and blacksmith shop.

It has put an electric hoist and skip into the 265-tunnell; has purchased ore cars and the necessary tools for mining purposes.

It has acquired the Kimbark ground, adjoining the Flowery and North Bonanza mines, and is now developing the property by driving a tunnel.

Dry Placer Miner, formerly of California.

This company has the right, without royalty payments, to use the new patent machine upon all the land it may own, acquire by lease, or operate, in Arizona. We invite special attention to the great commercial value and profit of this machine, and what can be accomplished by it.

What This Machine Will Do.

For the first time in the history of gold mining a machine has been invented which will handle the dry placer gold gravel without water, and in large quantities. This machine will save 98 per cent of all the gold in the gravel, and will do it at a lower working cost than by any existing process. It is operated by a small, compact engine, using crude oil as fuel. A complete plant, capable of handling 300 tons per day will weigh less than 1,200 pounds.

To secure this gold only those placer lands could be worked, which could command large supplies of water, hence the immense bodies of dry placer lands remote from water have never been worked.

Fifteen Hundred Millions in Gold

The United States has yielded nineteen hundred millions in gold, of which fifteen hundred millions—or more than 75 per cent.—were the product of its placers.

Ninety per cent. of the world's total gold supply has been taken from placers by processes which have admittedly lost the bulk of the values.

Simplicity of Machine—Its Method of Operation

The machine is so extremely simple in construction and operation that any intending investor can operate it instantly. He can take a peck or more of sand, either ordinary house or sea sand, or such as is found in the placer lands of Arizona and California, put into this sand ten or a hundred pieces of gold as small as the point of a toothpick, and from that to the head of an ordinary pin, mix the sand and the gold thoroughly, turn them into the hopper or feed of the machine, and in a few seconds the machine will separate the gold from the gravel and recover from 98 to 100 per cent of the gold. It is an absolute, infallible, ocular demonstration of the merits of the machine. It has solved the problem of handling sand or gravel containing gold in regions remote from water.

Cost of Handling Material

Each plant is portable, weighs less than 1,200 pounds and can be easily moved by a few laborers.

The two greatest authorities in the world on the moving of material are "Haswell" and "Trautwine." They say in their standard publications that a laborer can shovel horizontally, 12 feet, vertically 6 feet for 50 feet haul 17 cubic yards in 10 hours.

A well known engineer in his work for the U. S. Government at Sandy Hook, moved 18 cubic yards, 100 feet haul in 10 hours at a cost of 10 cents per cubic yard, paying laborers $1.75 per day.

The dry placer gold-bearing sands of California, Arizona and New Mexico are handled quite as easily as those of Sandy Hook.

Ten laborers can easily supply one machine with 294 cubic yards of gravel in 12 hours, working at the same speed as shown by Haswell, Trautwine or at Sandy Hook.

Placer work on above basis would cost about 11 1-3c. per cubic yard.

Do You Want Monthly Dividends?

We make a special offer of a limited number of shares of stock at this time, because the company requires immediately sufficient to build several machines to operate in the field.

Every machine at work will increase the intrinsic value of the stock.

Twenty machines in the field will increase the price and value of the stock more than double the present offering, and every additional machine means a further increase in price and value.

The Company intends to divide its net earnings every month, so that the stockholders may count absolutely on receiving monthly dividends in proportion to monthly earnings.

THE ROSE OF THE RING

She followed him, and spread a white damask cloth over the table.

When she had finished smoothing out the folds, he put down the tray.

"Studio life makes one handy at this sort of thing," he remarked, with a smile. "Do you want me to light the gas?"

"Please; and in the hall as well, if you do not mind."

He appeared to like his task.

Taking a fusee-case from one of his pockets, he lit the gas in the room, and then made a cheerful light in the hall.

"Now, perhaps, we shall be able to enjoy our tea," he said, coming back, and placing a chair near the table. "Take your seat, Rose; I think we have got all we want."

She sat down, and commenced to pour out the tea.

She was very pale, and seeing her in the full light, he noticed the shadows round her eyes.

"You are as white as a ghost," he said. "It wouldn't do for Bess to scald herself often, if that's the effect it has upon you."

"I wasn't thinking of Bess," she answered, looking down at the empty plate, that he might not see the pain in her eyes. "Haven't you heard the news, Marc?"

"What news?" he inquired, his hand arrested with the cup half-way to his lips.

"Lady Errol is dead!"

CHAPTER XIX.

"Lady Errol dead!" Marc exclaimed, placing the cup down in the saucer with a clattering sound. "When did she die?"

"This morning," Rose replied.

"But how? Was it an accident?" he asked, a foreboding of the truth thrusting itself into his mind.

"No, Marc. She died by her own hand, after confessing to—that terrible deed."

It was the first he had heard of the morning's tragedy.

As long as the daylight had lasted, he had been working in his studio, and news that had traveled so quickly to Rosalie, had not reached him.

He had seen Gretchen in all her beauty, and had been interested in her, even to the extent of loving her.

Her life had seemed so solitary, and the passionate misery in her eyes had appealed so strongly to his manhood.

And now she was dead!

Hers had been the hand that had robbed Sir Felix of his life.

The sacrifice she had made of herself had been for gain of gold.

Marc paused in his restless pacing, and stood beside his chair, gazing down at the pale, pure face of the girl he still looked upon as a child.

One had been like a dark, stormy night, the other was as fair as day, with the light of an unsullied soul shining in her sweet eyes.

He could understand the thrill of repugnance which had swept through him, when last he had stood face to face with Lady Errol.

It was well, he thought, that he had outlived his mad infatuation for her; that he had never by word or deed revealed to her the love she had roused in his breast.

His face grew cold and stern, as he remembered the mystery that had surrounded the death of Sir Felix.

Marc did not doubt but that she would have kept her terrible secret, even though another had been accused of the crime.

"Tell me as much as you know of this affair," he said, resting his hand on the chair back. "The news must have shocked you a good deal, Rose."

She shivered as she answered—

"It seemed so dreadful that she should have been my father's wife—that I should have seen her, and spoken to her, not knowing her guilt."

Briefly, she told him all she had learned from Mr. Monckton; the scene in the church, the wild confession of sin, and the death-wound, self-inflicted in a moment of extremity.

"What was that man to her, that she should have stood between him and his bride?" he asked, his face white and set.

"I do not know," Rose answered. "She called herself his wife; but her words must have been the outcome of a frenzied mind. She could not have been the wife of two men."

"Is the will she produced the same that was missing?"

"Yes; Mr. Monckton assured me there is no room for doubt, where the will is concerned. It all seems so terrible, I cannot bear to think of it. What could have been her motive in marrying my father?"

"I expect she wanted money—and a title."

"What good were they to her? Neither wealth nor title brought her happiness."

"It was a risk," he responded. "She could not have calculated on events turning out as they did."

"She must have been mad," Rose said, looking sadly into the fire. "Quite mad."

"There was method in her madness," Marc retorted, muttering the words half to himself. "What was Mr. Monckton's opinion?"

"I hardly know. He seemed to pity her. He spoke less of her guilt than of her suffering."

"She is beyond earthly censure now," Marc replied in his gravest tone. "It is well to think of her mercifully."

After this, neither of them spoke for some moments.

In an absent-minded way, Rose poured out a fresh cup of tea for Marc.

She was the first to break the silence, her glance wandering wistfully to his face.

"Marc, did you meet her often at Drayton Court?"

He gave a slight start, and changed his position, lifting his head, and meeting her gaze.

"I could not fail to meet her," he replied, "while we were under the same roof. But from the time of her marriage, I saw very little of her."

"Did you think her beautiful?"

"Sometimes."

"Only sometimes?" Rose echoed, opening her eyes wide. "Was not she always the same?"

He shook his head.

"I can scarcely explain myself," he said. "Hers was not a common type of beauty."

There was another pause.

Then Rose asked the question that had been forming itself in her mind during the last few seconds.

"Did you ever make sketches of her?"

"Not in the sense you mean. I painted her portrait for Sir Felix, and, at her own request, a picture of herself as a bride."

With a little sigh, she remembered the days when she had sat for him in the golden summer hours—when her whole life had been wrapped up in those moments passed with him.

He had always been so tender with her, guarding her as though she had been some delicate flower, loving her for her child-like trust in him.

A pang of jealousy smote her heart, as she thought of another in her place.

Had he looked at Lady Errol and smiled, as he had looked and smiled at herself, when her own face had seemed to grow upon his canvas?

Rose tortured herself with a thousand such thoughts as these, and her

Society Notes from Bookville.

Miss Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall is visiting her cousin, Chlorinda Wildaira. In face, figure and manner the young cousins are so much alike that even their parents can scarcely tell them apart. Another member of the family, who is strikingly like them, is the young girl known as "The Maid-at-Arms," who made her debut last season. Miss Vernon and Miss Wildairs have been out longer.

"The Virginian," whose name nobody seems to know, is at the Waldorf with Percy Bines. Young Bines is reported to have dropped a cool million or two of his large fortune recently in a Wall street deal.

Mrs. Wiggs, long prominent in the "Cabbage Patch set" of Louisville, is in town, and has been taken up enthusiastically by the women's clubs. Mrs. Wiggs has achieved an original reputation by entering a profession hitherto monopolized by the uglier sex—that of soap-box philosopher.

Friends of Richard Carvel are much concerned at his long absence. Three or four years ago he was the most prominent and popular man in Bookville society. Several months ago he disappeared suddenly, and the most searching enquiry has thus far failed to reveal his whereabouts.

Society awaits with intense interest the approaching debut of the youngest of the beautiful Allen girls, daughters of James Lane Allen. I hear that she is by all odds the most beautiful, the most winning and the cleverest of these famous sisters, and I predict that she will have a tremendous success.

Sic transit gloria! The death of Richard Harding Van Bibber, obscurely chronicled in the daily papers, made no impression on the younger generation. But people with long memories can recall when Dick Van Bibber was one of the most talked-of men in Bookville, the butt for all the jokes of one-half of society, the object of riotous adoration to the other half. Van Bibber scarcely deserved either. He was a man of some real cleverness and many harmless eccentricities, such as his fondness for shirtwaists and his firm belief that he was the social paragon of his day. It is many years since he dropped into obscurity, and most of his old friends imagined that he was long since dead.

"My dear," said a frightened husband in the middle of the night, shaking his wife, "where did you put that bottle of strychnine?"

"On the shelf next to the peppermint."

"Oh!" he groaned. "I've swallowed it!"

Yankee Friendship?

Some British newspapers are indulging in acrid comments upon the release at Indianapolis, U.S.A., of James J. Lynchehaun, an Irish fugitive from justice, whose extradition was asked by the British authorities on the charge of committing a murderous assault upon his landlady. Commissioner Moores, who dealt with the case, decided after careful consideration that the crime was a political one, and the accused could not therefore be extradited, whereat there was general rejoicing among those who had undertaken to aid Lynchehaun in his fight. These were chiefly members of societies who would oppose anything asked by Britain for no other reason than that Britain did ask it.

The following portion of a despatch from Indianapolis gives the concise history of the case and Mr. Moores' official reasons for his disposition of it:—"Lynchehaun's defence was that his crime was political. He tells on the witness stand of a secret meeting of Irishmen at which it was determined to drive Mrs. McDonnell out of the country. She was an unpopular landlady. Accordingly, some of her buildings were set on fire. Lynchehaun's story of his assault on her was that she came out with a revolver to witness the destruction of her property, and, meeting him, assailed him with denunciations as the cause of it all. In closing Commissioner Moores said:—'It is evident to me that the assault on Mrs. McDonnell was incidental to and part of a popular disturbance; that the popular disturbance, including the prisoner's part in it, had its origin and cause in a movement on the part of the people to overthrow landlordism, and was done to further the movement, and that this movement, futile though it was, did disturb the political and social order of Ireland; that these people would have been in a state of open insurrection had not the right to bear arms been denied them, and, in fine, that the riot of October 6 was for political purposes, and that its participants were engaged in a partisan conflict whose object was a change of laws and an upsetting of existing political conditions. The real test lies deeper than definitions. It is this: Would the crime have been done had there been no political motive and no concert of action to effect that motive? Would the fire and the ensuing riot have occurred save for the long chain of moving causes that preceded it—the discontent of the tenants as a class, the agrarian agitation, the enactment of odious laws, the disagreements between the various landlords in the island and their tenantry, the knowledge that like disagreements existed all over Ireland, the dispersing of the Brotherhood's meetings and the arrest of its speakers, and finally the meeting of October 2, when the delegates chosen by 400 members of a revolutionary order determined to drive this landlord out of the country? I am convinced that these things were all moving causes that led up to the climax of October 6 and that their relation to the riot and the assault was so intimate that they lent their character to the assault itself. Disgraceful though an assault on a woman must always be, I am convinced that this was a political offence for which, under the terms of the treaty, the prisoner cannot be surrendered. Let him be discharged.'"

It is understood that the British Government has entered an appeal against the decision with the Washington authorities.

Two typical comments from British papers, although previously published in Canada, are worthy of repetition as showing how the decision is viewed there. The London Globe says:—"The next assassin of a President will plead Commissioner Moores' judgment with irresistible force if he escapes across the Canadian line. The Americans will have no cause for complaint if the result throws out of gear the whole machinery of extradition between the United States and Great Britain."

The Pall Mall Gazette remarks:—"By the same reasoning used by Commissioner Moores it would always be possible to refuse the extradition of Anarchists guilty of the most dastardly crimes."

But then, both papers, it is safe to say, know as little of Indianapolis as a number of British newspapers and publicists have lately shown they do of Canada, and that is saying a good deal.

There is a considerable foreign population in Indianapolis, including a fair number of Canadians. Some of the latter, whose loyalty to their native land and whose understanding of what the empire stands for, were not affected because, through a variety of circumstances, they found themselves residing in a greater land (so far as population and material wealth is concerned) than the Dominion, had an unpleasant time during the South African war. It was no uncommon thing then for people in Indianapolis to celebrate, by processions headed by bands and in other enthusiastic ways, defeats inflicted by the Boers upon the British forces. There were few—happily a few Canadians—who openly, at least, whatever their secret thoughts, were not ashamed to be more than approving onlookers upon these celebrations, but there were others who boldly condemned them and unswervingly upheld their belief in the British cause and its ultimate triumph. One family among these latter was represented in a public school of the city by a bright young boy. The teacher of his class, a woman, made it a practice to read the despatches to her scholars and comment with satisfaction upon the misfortunes of the British army. Her usual greeting when news of a British reverse was announced was:—"Well, girls, well, boys, did you read what the Boers did to the British yesterday," and then she would go over the story aloud for the benefit of those of the class who had not read it. The feelings of the Canadian scholar may be easily imagined. His turn came on the day that Cronje's surrender to Lord Roberts was announced. He went to school with brighter eyes than usual, his heart beating high. The teacher's face was cloudy; she had read the papers and evidently meant to carefully avoid the subject. But the moment the class was called to order in the class room, the Canadian lad burst out with: "Teacher, teacher, did you see what the Canadians did to the Boers yesterday?" He was punished for talking, but did not mind it; he was not promoted at the end of the session (the power rested with the teacher), although he had consistently maintained a position near the head of the class. He did not mind that a great deal either, although his parents keenly resented the injustice, and he found, after a while, that the boys of the school liked him the better for having stood so staunchly for Canada and the empire, though the teacher did not forgive him. Incidentally, it may be remarked that in Indianapolis, as in many other portions of the United States, the belief at the time of the Boer war, and no doubt it is still held, was that the Canadians made such good fighters because they had learned so much from their proximity to the United States.

Why should the British press worry about the Lynchehaun case? It is only the Indianapolis way of showing appreciation of the favors showered upon the United States by Great Britain, a conclusion which is just as sound as that arrived at by Commissioner Moores.

Stanley Spencer, Aeronauts.

The London Illustrated Sporting and Dramatic News says:—Stanley Spencer, whose elongated motor balloon has convinced even doubters of the ultimate possibility of practical aerial locomotion, belongs to a family of aeronauts, distinguished through three generations. Stanley Spencer first attracted attention by his parachute descents from the roof of Olympia, and soon after his exploits both as parachutist and balloonist in different quarters of the globe made his name famous. Sometimes ascending by the use of hydrogen, and at others by hot air, Mr. Spencer was, in 1898, Dr. Berson's colleague in the ascent of 27,500 feet, when only by inhaling oxygen the adventurers were able to keep life going. After the retirement owing to the injury to his machine of M. Santos-Dumont, Stanley Spencer undertook to construct an airship which should rival that of the wealthy Brazilian, and all London has seen that he has had a fair measure of success. The difficulty of navigating a necessarily bulky object like a balloon against a wind of any force is, there is no mincing the matter, not yet overcome; but the aeronaut (Mr. Spencer) has certainly come as near to attaining this desideratum as anyone hitherto.

For the Farmer.

The best way to get a fast walking horse it to train him as a colt to walk as fast as he can without trotting. A colt generally wants to go as fast as he can, but the trouble is when he is allowed to do this at a trot. On the walk he is made to go slow to cool off after a trot. It would be much better to teach him to walk fast, and not allow him to trot until he has learned to walk as fast as he can without trotting.

THE JOY OF A GOOD CONSCIENCE.

REV. A. P. DOYLE, of the Paulist Fathers, New York City.

Tribulation and anguish upon the soul of every man that worketh evil. —Romans, ii.

A good conscience that is at peace with God surpasseth every joy. It comes to a man when he has loyally and faithfully kept the whole law in his heart and has stoutly resisted even unto blood the allurements of evil.

There are many incentives in this life of ours impelling one to wander away from the paths of rectitude. It is far easier to indulge one's self amid the soft cushions of a pleasure-loving life than to struggle with a soldier spirit to abide by the discipline of the law. It is much more agreeable to float with the tide of easy-going friendships, to yield to every inordinate desire of physical and social voluptuousness, than it is to stem the currents by stern resolve and harsh self-denial.

One way, however, leads to moral destruction; the other leads to the pastures of a peaceful conscience, where prosperity and plenty abound. John the Baptist in his prison is happy; Herod on his throne is miserable. How good it is to serve God! What pleasure and tranquility there are in loving Him! He is benign and merciful to those whose hearts are right before Him. He is terrible to those who offend and deny Him. A good conscience is calm and at rest; a bad conscience is turbulent and agitated. Peace and repose reign in a soul which belongs to God; trouble and inquietude distract the soul of the wicked.

An hour ago I said Mass at the House of Calvary and about me were a score of women in all stages of incurable cancer. I could hear above the lispings of prayer the suppressed moans of pain. The cold finger of death had touched the physical frame of each, but the warm fire of a divine love glowed in their hearts of devotion. The excruciating agony of decaying tissue wrenched from them an involuntary groan, but the pleasure and peace of a good conscience wreathed their wan faces into lines of joy. The certainty of impending death and the severing of all ties that bound them to home and lifelong friendships were little less than a daily martyrdom, but over it all was the glow of a western sun, that touched the landscape of their lives with infinite beauty and brought their hearts into sympathy with the joys of a life beyond the grave.

The conscience of the just man is a type of heaven because he is at peace with God and God dwells in his heart; that of a sinner is a type of hell because it can find no rest and is governed by the spirit of evil. Good men fear nothing; the wicked fear everything. The just are good in themselves because their lives are governed by the inspirations of God; the secret motives and the hidden life of the sinner are corrupt and constantly at war with God. The just enter readily into themselves because all therein is peace and consolation; the wicked dare not enter into themselves because, like the seething of the witches' caldron, their hearts are a turbulent mass of vicious desires and unrestrained baseness. "Know thou and see that it is a fearful and bitter thing for thee to have left the Lord thy God." "What hast thou to do in the land of Egypt but to drink the troubled waters?" The just live well amid the pains and anguish of life and die with joy; the wicked live amid pleasures and enjoyments and die in bitter pain and anguish.

A life in conformity with the commandments of God is even from a temporal point of view the more desirable. It writes its history in the beaming face; it shows itself in the sprightly step of those who are glad of heart; it touches with a dash of sunshine the thoughts, and it lights up with a heavenly glow the desires of a soul that experiences the friendship of God. "A good conscience is a continual feast." —Proverbs, xv.

The joy of a good conscience being so precious, it is to be sought at any cost, it must be secured at all hazards. The first step is through repentance. "But Thou hast mercy upon all because Thou canst do all things, and overlookest the sins of men for the sake of repentance."—Wisdom, xi. The baptism of water washes away from the souls of children the stain of original sin; the baptism of blood washes away every stain from the souls of the martyrs; the baptism of the heart cleanses the souls of all penitents. It is impossible for any one to be saved unless he does penance, and the measure of repentance must be according to the extent of the guilt. "And now, therefore, saith the Lord, be converted to me with all your heart in fasting, and in weeping, and in mourning; and rend your hearts and not your garments, and turn to the Lord your God, for He is gracious and merciful, patient and rich in mercy and ready to forgive."—Joel, ii.

But while repentance is the key that opens the door to the joys of a good conscience a settled purpose to keep the commandments is the means to maintain one in their possession. When Jesus Christ enters into a man's heart to become its master He brings with Him a foretaste of the pleasures of paradise. "I have found Him whom my soul loveth and I will not let Him go." The essence of a good conscience is to possess God, and there is no sweeter joy on earth than this, nor is there any higher bliss in heaven.

ELECTROCENE

With the powerful aid of electricity, grey hair can be restored to its natural color by natural means. The herbs and plants of the mountains and field have in them all the elements of life, health and beauty that the grey hair requires for its restoration.

ELECTROCENE is the product of certain herbs, barks and plants which by long and careful experiments, have been found to contain all the elements necessary to the life, beauty, color and health of the hair. They are not a dye; they contain no vile and deadly chemicals to destroy the hair's life; but from their first application the hair begins to take on the gloss and beauty of youth while gradually but surely the hair returns to its natural color, and will forever afterwards retain it. Such a change is not brought about in a day or a week, but as the roots of the hair absorb the health-giving elements from the herbs and the wonderful electric strength Electrocene contains, nature gives it a fresh lease of life, and sixteen years have been lifted from your appearance. The hair goes back to its natural color, becoming soft and silky, with that lustrous gleam of youth that is the envy of all beholders. Electrocene does not stain the scalp or clothes, is NOT A DYE, but whatever its color was at the most vigorous time of your life, it's color will be again after using. A little patience will bring you the rich reward of a head of beautiful, healthy, natural hair, with the softness and lustre of youth. The growth is promoted and the grey, faded or streaked hair springs again into life and the colors of life. The Electrocene will not rub off, is not sticky, dirty or gummy, and will not stain the scalp. It prevents the hair from falling out, promotes its growth, cures and prevents dandruff, does not wash off, keeps the scalp clean and healthy, produces the most luxuriant tresses from dry, coarse and wiry hair, and causes that turning grey to assume its original color and retains it forever afterwards.

Price $1.00 per bottle or six bottles for $5.00. Sent on receipt of price.

Storm King Group of Mines

TO CANADIAN INVESTORS

The property comprising what is known as the STORM KING GROUP OF MINES offers an attractive and safe investment. The property is the richest in the country and we believe it would be difficult to secure an investment that promises better returns. The following is a description of the mines written by Capt. A. M. Paul, whose reputation as an expert in mining matters is known far and near.

These properties are situated in the Cable Cove Mining District, about fifteen miles north of Sumpter, Oregon, and about one mile northwest of the Baby McKee mine, about two miles northwest of the Last Chance, the Alpine, the Imperial and the California mines.

The properties in this report consist of seven claims. The names of the seven claims being as follows: The Eureka and the Honest Dollar. These two claims are on the same vein. Adjoining these two claims and paralleling them on the northwest is another vein upon which there are two claims known as the Jessie and Golden Rule, and paralleling them on the northwest there is another vein upon which there are two claims, known as the Storm King and the Ozone. The last claim of this group lies to the northwest of the last two named, and is adjoining them. This claim is the Shannon Bell.

In making my report I will commence with the two first named claims of the group, the Eureka and Honest Dollar. The development on these claims consists of a tunnel ninety-seven feet in length, running along the course of the vein, showing two feet ten inches of ore in the top of the tunnel and a little over three feet in the bottom, which assays giving values of from $9.68 to $70 per ton in gold. About four hundred feet in a southwesterly direction there is a shaft on the vein ten feet deep, showing the vein to be from one to two inches wide on the surface and about twelve inches wide in the bottom of the shaft, in which assays give values of from $9.76 to $40 per ton in free milling gold ore.

This vein is exposed by small shafts and open cuts for a distance of fifteen hundred feet, and the course of this vein is north, ten degrees east, and the vein cuts the formation, showing it to be a true fissure, and the formation is granite. This vein shows in places a width of from ten to fifteen feet of mineralized matter, commonly called vein matter, but which is caused by hot solutions from below.

I will now pass to the Jessie and Golden Rule. There has been very little work done upon these two claims, there being one discovery shaft ten feet deep, showing ore on all sides of the shaft, and running in value of from $4 upwards. It is my opinion that with development, this, too, will prove valuable property.

The work on the Storm King and Ozone consists of a tunnel near the point of discovery and is driven along the vein for a distance of one hundred and eighty feet, showing ore all the way from the surface to the face of the tunnel, and averaging in width from six to eighteen inches. Three assays give the following values, $12.50. This being a general sample taken from the dump. The other two assays are $62.68 and $79.08 respectively, thus being the assorted ore for shipment. The course of this tunnel and vein are north, ten degrees west, and the vein cuts the trend of the formation obliquely (which is granite) and by driving this tunnel five or six hundred feet on the present course it will intersect a quartzite reef (which is running north, twenty degrees east) which would make this a contact vein between granite and quartzite, and should produce a large body of ore, at the intersection of the contact.

The only work done upon the Shannon Bell, the last claim of this group is the location work, and is not enough to allow of a report being made.

There is water for power purposes one mile from the property, and timber on the ground, of a very fine quality, sufficient to run the mine for many years to come.

All the assays mentioned in this report were made by the assayer, of the Imperial mine at my request, and the ore was taken by me from the properties mentioned.

I will state that I have been a practical miner since 1870, and am now the manager and superintendent of the Imperial mine in this district.

Terms That are Out of Date.

"No one says 'ladies' or 'gentlemen' nowadays, Sarah," said Aunt Betty Modish to her country-bred niece, whom she was endeavoring to "form" on the approved lines of the fashionable type of her world, before presenting her to society. "We are men and women now, Dieu Merci! And it sounds like a servant to speak of people in any other way. And for Heaven's sake, child," continued her up-to-date mentor, "never let me hear you use that dreadful word 'genteel' again. I heard you say that something looked 'genteel and ladylike' yesterday, and I nearly fainted."

"Gran," who was knitting a fleecy mass of white Shetland wool into soft, dainty little baby's garments, looked up quizzically.

"Yes, Sarah," she said, "it is quite true; there are no ladies, in the old acceptation of the term, left in these modern times. They are like old lace and lavender, and belong to a bygone age. The delicacy and refinement, the purity of speech and manners, the sweet primness which laid an embargo on over-free speech, the dignity of demeanor, and the graciousness of courteous deportment, which we used to consider indicative of a 'lady,' are all old-fashioned, and, of course, must not be cultivated. The gentlemen, too, as your Aunt Betty says, have disappeared. Chivalry is quite obsolete, courtly manners are considered ridiculous, and I do not think that Tom, Dick and Harry, whom you will meet when you go out, need fear to have the old-time appellation."

New Story of Pius X.

The following story of the Pope is told in the Italian papers. A deputation of the monks of some Order had obtained an interview with him. According to the etiquette of the Vatican, only Cardinals are allowed to sit in the Pope's presence, and an invitation from him to do so is deemed equivalent to the promise of a Cardinalate. Pope Pius X. is a plain man, utterly indifferent to the etiquette of the Papal Court. He, therefore, begged the monks to take seats. They hardly knew whether they could venture to do so, and whilst they stood hesitating he said to them, "You do not, I suppose, expect me to draw your chairs forward for you?"

Would that all other Sovereigns had strength of mind to put an end to the ceremonial tomfooleries of former ages that encircle them! devoutly exclaims "Truth." All the bowing and scraping, the kissing of hands, the retiring backward, and such like antics are out of date. I recognize the duty of every citizen to treat his official head with respect, whatever be the title by which he is known. But all such tricks only befit a performing dog, and are out of place when the performers are human beings. Court uniforms, to my thinking, are equally absurd. What can be more ridiculous than some peaceful citizen, fat and scant of breath, masquerading as a deputy lieutenant in a military uniform, or some worthy father of a family in a velvet coat, knee-breeches, and ruffles? Yet so silly and so little sense of humor have these guys that I have seen many of them disporting themselves in clubs in this array, and I am credibly informed that they actually exhibit themselves to their admiring families, as proud of their appearance as a barn door cock is of his feathers.

A Despiser of Letters.

"Sigma" in his reminiscences in "Blackwood's Magazine" (by the way, can "Sigma" be Goldwin Smith?) says that excepting Justin McCarthy, he has met in his time only two individuals who knew Thackeray personally—"one of whom certainly deserves immortality, though unfortunately I am unable to record his name, having forgotten it in the march of time. I met this individual at dinner nearly thirty years ago, when in my first 'Thackeray' enthusiasm. He was a gray-headed, square-jawed 'diner-out,' apparently of about sixty-eight or seventy, with an assertive nisi-prius manner, and one of those rasping voices that seem to dominate the dinner-table. After dinner, on the departure of an intervening lady, I found myself compelled to 'close-up' to this objectionable fellow-guest. As it happened, a minute or two previously I had heard him allude to the Charterhouse as his former public school. 'Why,' thought I, 'this old gentleman was most probably at the Charterhouse with Thackeray; suppose I break the ice by enquiring.' Accordingly, after an uncomfortable moment in which he seemed to be considering whether I was worth talking to or not, I timidly ventured to remark that I had heard him alluding to the Charterhouse, and wondered if by any chance he was there with Thackeray. 'Thackeray, sir; what Thackeray?' he answered with a contemptuous stare. 'I mean the great Thackeray,' I rejoined, rather astonished. 'What!' he rejoined; 'the fellow who wrote books? Oh yes, he was my fag, and a snivelling little beggar I thought him; often have I given him a sound kick for a false quantity in his Latin verses. I thought nothing of him, sir—nothing, I can assure you!' 'Ah, but,' I exclaimed, 'you have changed your opinion since, of course?' 'Not at all,' he growled, 'not at all; why should I?' 'Why, on account of his books,' I retorted, fairly staggered. 'Never read a syllable of them, I give you my word!' he growled with magnificent complacency; then, turning his back with a gesture of infinite disdain, he proceeded to tackle his neighbor on the other side. When I told this to Mr. McCarthy, he felicitously observed, 'What wouldn't Thackeray have given to have known that man!'"

Counsel (to witness)—How can you prove that the prisoner stole six of your handkerchiefs? "Why, because they were my handkerchiefs that were found on him. Look at them for yourself. They are exactly the same as mine." "That proves nothing. I have some handkerchiefs like those." "That's quite possible," replied the witness, "several more of mine are missing."—Ex.

He had risked his life to rescue the fair maid from a watery grave, and, of course, her father was duly grateful. "Young man," he said, "I can never thank you sufficiently for your heroic act. You incurred an awful risk in saving my only daughter." "None whatever, sir," replied the amateur life-saver; "I am already married."—Chicago "Daily News."

The Test of Respectability.

The New York "Evening Post" points out the fact that Carlyle's favorite definition of respectability, a "gigman," seems obsolete in the light of modern developments. In place of the old standard "he keeps a gig," we have substituted "he has a steam yacht." Most amusingly was this latter-day measure of wealth brought out in the letters from Paris of the promoter in search of an underwriter. Question arose as to the financial responsibility of one ready subscriber (apparently without ready cash), and the astute American applied himself to the task of rating the fellow. But how did he go to work? Did he go to the banks, the agencies, the Bourse? No, he simply observed the man's manner of life. When he discovered that the backward underwriter kept a yacht, his doubts were instantly relieved, and he cabled the joyful news to New York. Evidently, we say, in the lexicons of today we must look to see the entry: "Gigman; modern, yachtsman."

Privileged.

The Honorable Colonel William J. Bryan appears to believe that the constitutional provision regarding free speech was inserted for his especial benefit.

Fired.

"I understand Blankley was ejected from Jones's house, where he went to pay a visit."

"Yes, he was an old flame of Mrs. Jones, and Jones put him out."

He—So the engagement is broken off?

She—Yes. He told her he thought she should stop reading novels and read something more substantial, something that would improve her.

He—Well?

She—Well, the idea of a man intimating to his fiancee that she could be improved in any way!—Philadelphia Press.

"There is something," he said, "that I have wanted to tell you for a long time, but——"

"Oh, Bertie," she said, blushing sweetly, "not here in the car before all these people. Wait. Come this evening."

"It's merely that you have a streak of soot down the middle of your nose, but I couldn't for the life of me get a word in till just now."—Chicago Record-Herald.

THE STOCK OF THE
BRET HARTE GOLD MINING COMPANY
IS THE BEST MINING INVESTMENT TO-DAY

This is a strong statement, but facts substantiate it. The work on the mine has proven its value. The promoters have shown their confidence in it by using their own money for development work.

The Company's Property is Six Claims, Patented Land

Mine can be cheaply and economically worked.

Treasury Stock only for sale, and only sufficient stock will be sold to supply machinery.

The mine lacks but one thing—machinery, and to purchase this a small block of stock will be sold at 15 cents per share. When machinery is paid for no more stock will be sold.

PROSPECTUS INFORMATION FREELY GIVEN

This proposition is better than that of many companies selling stock at 50 cents a share, and will stand a thorough investigation.

The Company is capitalized at $2,000,000, consisting of 2,000,000 shares, par value one dollar per share. Seven hundred and fifty thousand shares of this amount is eight per cent. Preferred Treasury Stock.

The Property

Consists of nine patented, well developed mines and mill sites, situated in Gilpin County, Colorado. This county has already produced more than

$80,000,000 in Gold

The development of the property consists of many shafts sunk on ore to a depth of 100 to 450 feet, and a tunnel run a distance of 2,300 feet, not only to develop its own property, but also to unwater and furnish underground transportation for the Gregory, the Bob-Tail and other rich mines of the district.

No Strike Probable

Mr. D. Campbell, Canadian vice-president of the International Brotherhood of Railway Telegraphers, is in Chicago, conferring with President Perham and others of the Brotherhood officers regarding the Grand Trunk telegraphers' grievances. Owing to the absence of several Grand Trunk officials, it may be some time before the matter is finally settled. It is expected that President Perham will meet Mr. McGuigan and other railway officials here and confer with them on the situation. There is little probability of a strike.

A Big Contract

Canadian Trade Review—The largest gold dredge in Canada is being built at Lillooet, B.C. It will cost $80,000. No less than nine carloads of machinery are required in the construction of the dredge. It is being built by the Iowa Lillooet Gold Mining Company, Mr. Jas. A. Moss being manager. Mr. Moss has been dredging the Fraser for eight years. He states that lowest values he ever got in the river bed were eleven and a half per cent. for the cubic yard, while in the middle of the stream, twelve feet from the surface, the gravel averaged $1.57 per cubic yard, and the quantity of this character was unlimited. The dredge is being built by the William Hamilton Manufacturing Company, of Peterborough.

The Delineator for January

The January Delineator contains literary and art features of exceptional value and reliable fashion information, including a letter from Mrs. Osborne, the foremost modiste in America, who has become a regular contributor. The pictorial presentation of the season's styles is excellent. A number of pages are given to a description on Parsifal, Wagner's great music drama, and an interpretation of the theme by W. J. Henderson, with personal reminiscences of the first performance of the opera at Bayreuth, by Gustav Kobbe. The illustrations are from the only photographs ever made of the opera, and are now published for the first time. Mr. Kobbe also contributes an interesting paper describing the life of Mme. Schumann-Heink at Villa Tini, her home near Dresden, Germany. There are stories by Jack London whose book, "the Call of the Wild," is one of the most popular of the year, and Kathryn Jarboe, and the fourth installment of The Evolution of a Club Woman, by Agnes Surbridge. The first paper of "The Fountain of Youth" introduces a series of practical benefit to women who are in search of, or desirous of retaining, good looks, and an inspiring paper on The Joy of Living, by Lillie Hamilton French, will appeal to thoughtful persons. In addition, there are house building and house furnishing ideas; entertaining stories and pastimes for children, including serials by Albert Bigelow Paine and Gabrielle E. Jackson, and matter of interest to women of all ages.

OUR MUNICIPAL GOLD BRICK

The Street Railway Case Before the Toronto Courts

On Wednesday the action taken by the Otonabee Power Company to set aside the by-law in reference to street lighting and the street railway franchise came before Justice McMahon, in Single Court.

The matter was enlarged for one week, affidavits to be served Friday.

If the advice of The Times had been taken, a proper by-law would have been framed and submitted to the ratepayers for their approval when there would have been no question as to the legality of the proceedings raised. As the matter stands the only thing we are sure of is a big bill of costs.

ON THE BABY

Coffee Even the Babies Thrive On

The little daughter of a College President was saved by the use of Postum Food Coffee at a time when she could not take any solid food.

Baby's aunt says: "My sister and her husband (who is President of a College in Georgia) visited me last Christmas and their little baby two months old was very sick. I thought it was not properly nourished so I began feeding it on Postum which I used in my own home for years with such grand results.

"You would be surprised to know how that little thing improved. Sister had been feeding it on artificial food that did not agree with it. The baby continued to get stronger all the time we were feeding her on Postum, and when sister left here she took Postum with her for she feels certain that with Postum to feed the baby on she is sure of good healthy nourishing food drink." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Postum is made of the purest cereals with absolutely no medication whatever and when boiled according to directions it is heavy with food value and a great nourisher and rebuilder as well as delicious drink. It is also a specific for all of the dozens of different diseases caused by coffee. Trial proved this.

The duel in the dark was a favorite with duelists. Two men were locked in a dark room and crawled stealthily from corner to corner, until some false step made one of them the target for bullet or blade.

Life is a duel in the dark with disease. One false step, one mistake, and the attack comes swift and sudden. The mistake which commonly opens the way for an attack by disease is neglect of the symptoms of stomach trouble. When eating is followed by undue fullness, belchings, sour or bitter risings, etc., disease is attacking the stomach.

The best way to frustrate such an attack is to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition, and makes the body strong and healthy.

"I was suffering very much with my head and stomach," writes Mrs. W. C. Gill, of Weldon, Shelby Co., Ala., "head was so dizzy when I would raise up in bed would fall right back. Could eat but very little, in fact scarcely anything, there seemed to be a heavy weight in my stomach so I could not rest; I had to belch very often and would vomit up nearly everything I ate. I was in a bad condition. I took four bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and five of his 'Favorite Prescription' and am now well and hearty. I feel like a new woman and give Dr. Pierce's medicines credit for it all. I had taken medicine from physicians without any benefit as I could see."

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of customs and mailing only. Send 31 one-cent stamps for the paper covered book, or 50 stamps for the cloth-bound. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

PRESENTS FOR THE TEACHER

To the Editor of The Times

Sir,—In some places a ban has been laid on teachers receiving gifts from pupils. The child was not to attempt to buy favor from the teacher and the poor pupil was not to be put at disadvantage because he had no worthy offering as a substitute for good lessons or good conduct.

A practice that has grown to large proportions in some places in the last few years is almost or quite as reprehensible as giving presents to teachers. In many if not in most of our schools, it is the unwritten law that teachers shall furnish their pupils with Christmas gifts. It is true the cost of each gift is slight, but the aggregate amounts to quite a sum. In many cases the teacher can ill afford it. Her salary is none too large and the demands on her purse are many.

If one techer supplies the pupils with Christmas gifts the teacher in the next room refuses to do so at her peril. She is thought stingy by her pupils, and she relaks being thought indifferent by her principal. If the gifts are cheap they are sneered at by those pupils who come from wealthy families and are pampered at home with an excess of gifts. Discrimination cannot be made between rich and poor, and the humble child pleased with his simple present may be ridiculed by those accustomed to more pretentious gifts.

The whole plan is wrong and should be stopped. Christmas festivities should be celebrated at home, in the church and among friends. The public schools are not the place for gifts nor for celebrations other than those relating to the public welfare or in honor of those who have been a special blessing to the country.

The school has already encroached upon many of the duties and privileges of the home, and the disposition is to encroach still further. I think that the school boards everywhere should see that neither directly nor indirectly are teachers expected to furnish holiday gifts for their pupils or to arrange for festivities that properly belong to the home and church.

PREPARATIONS FOR GENERAL ELECTIONS

THE PRINTING OF THE BALLOT PAPERS

The Quebec Lists Do Not Come Into Legal Existence Till December 15.

Ottawa, December 11—The growing impression that there will be, in a very short time an appeal to the people suggests the questions, How are elections brought about? and What process of red tape is involved.

First of all, let it be understood that the dissolution of parliament is the undoubted privilege of the Premier, just as surely as his resignation carries with it the resignation of all the minor members of the Cabinet. Although it has been customary for the Prime Minister to announce to his colleagues his intention to dissolve the Parliament, that custom is merely one of courtesy, and not at all of constitutional necessity. The Premier may decide to dissolve the Parliament for many reasons. It may be because of the near approach of the end of the time for which the Parliament was elected, or because of a change in the constituencies brought about by a redistribution bill, or in order to receive a mandate direct from the people on some great question of policy, or on account of the succession to office of a new Prime Minister, or because of a defeat in the House. The Premier having decided upon his course of action, may or may not take his colleagues into his confidence, but at least he must petition His Excellency or the representative of His Majesty, for leave to dissolve Parliament. Under certain circumstances there would be no precedent for the refusal of such a request, under others there would be but small precedent for acceding to it.

GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S POWER.

In the case of a defeat in the House His Excellency would be guided by the circumstances surrounding the event. If the defeat were on a snap vote, or on a question of policy which has already been approved by the voters at the polls. His Excellency would be open to use his own judgment, but it would be probable that in accordance he would grant the request. If, on the other hand, the request was presented in consequence of defeat in the election of a Speaker, the request would undoubtedly be refused, though the refusal would be tantamount to asking the resignation of the Minister. His Excellency's permission to "go to the country" having been obtained, the Premier can no longer delay taking his colleagues into his confidence, as it becomes necessary to pass an order-in-council fixing the dates of the elections and naming the returning officers. This having been done, the King's representative again comes to the fore, as the prerogative of performing the act by which Parliament is dissolved belongs to him, just as does the right of proroguing Parliament. The announcement at the prorogation of Parliament is always "It is His Excellency's will and pleasure that Parliament be prorogued," whilst the formal prorogations are always made by him after having consulted with His Privy Council.

THE PROCLAMATION.

The proclamation having been authorized and the authority signed by His Excellency, the Secretary of State next comes into play and issues generally a special Gazette announcing the fact by means of a proclamation. The copy of the Order-in-Council regulating the time for nomination and polling is then sent by him to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, by whom the writs are prepared; that is, the dates and names of the constituencies are written in on the printed form and at once forwarded to the returning officers. Then the Clerk of the Crown makes up a number of parcels, each containing so many ballots, as many copies of the act, a number of envelopes for the enfolding in due time of the marked ballots, of the spoiled ballots and of any interesting documents, which an average general election may render necessary. Of course, where the Act provides that the ballots may be printed in the constituency there is no need of his placing with the other papers in the ballot box.

PREPARING THE LISTS.

At the Government printing bureau there is general activity in the department where the voters lists are handled. The demands for voters lists are not so heavy as might have been thought, very few people, outside the party heads, and official organizers, ever asking to purchase, or even asking the price of these articles. As a matter of fact they can be obtained from the Provincial authorities some weeks earlier than they can be at the printing bureau, and in a shape more easy to handle and mostly in a far more accurate condition. Also at the present time under the existing curiosity in the way of a Dominion Election Act, in almost every constituency large numbers of names are placed on the lists after they have left the King's Printers' hands and offices. Taking any election that could be held at the present time what would be the position of the Quebec voters lists? It is stated here by several Quebec lawyers that there are still some twelve or fourteen hundred petitions for being placed upon the lists to be heard, whilst it is also stated that the lists for the province do not come into legal existence until the 15th inst. The lists for three cities are all that are printed out of the whole province, but the lists have been printed by the provincial authorities for several weeks.

THE RETURNING OFFICER.

After the ballot boxes have been despatched, the Dominion authorities have little more to do for a time, except explain the act to a number of returning officers to whom it always appears to be absolutely inexplicable. The returning officer however, becomes busy. He it is who has to appoint and swear in deputy-returning officers, to select polling places and make all the thousand and one arrangements necessary to the properly compounding of legally qualified House of Commons. He is also supposed to go through the riding and see that the copies of the proclamation and the dates of nomination and polling are properly exhibited.

No one seems to take any interest in election proceedings after polling day. Who cares what becomes of the ballots or the other papers after they have been made up by the returning officers and forwarded back to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery? They all have to be gone through, however, and each envelope has to be be opened and its contents checked off and verified, in case the Committee on Elections should require to use them. This entails an immense amount of work upon the clerk and if one could only go through some of the packets safely stored away in the archives of the Commons, with a more perfect knowledge of the circumstances surrounding then than has been so far published, what interesting facts he would learn and what skeletons he would let out of the Parliamentary Family closet.

THE JAPANESE ARE BEYOND CONTROL

Irritated at Both Home and Foreign Policies---Ministers Impeached

London, Dec. 11.—The Times Tokio correspondent says that the opening of the Diet was attended by a remarkable incident. The Imperial speech, which was delivered personally, did not contain anything striking, but merely stated that the Ministers had been instructed carefully to conduct important negotiations for securing the peace of the east and maintaining the rights of the empire. Subsequently the House voted a reply to the speech containing the following clause;—

"The present is a time when the country's destiny has reached a point of unprecedented importance, and yet the Ministerial measures are inadequate to the situation, inasmuch as the Ministers pursue an opportunist policy at home and forfeit occasions abroad. Regarding these things with profound solicitude, we earnestly pray his Majesty to exercise his enlightened judgment thereon." It is the first time in Japanese Parliamentary annals that the representatives utilised the reply to the Imperial speech as a vehicle for impeaching the Cabinet. It is practically certain that the House of Representatives will be dissolved tomorrow.

BLAMED RUSSIA.

London, Dec. 11.—A Russian correspondent of the Times says that the Russian Government has sent a circular to Governors of provinces asking their opinion on the laws relating to Jews, and what alterations should be made. The greater number of replies were unfavorable to the Jews, some even asking that the Jews be expelled from their provinces. The minority of the Governors would abrogate all special aimed at Jews. This is the opinion of Prince Urusoff, now Governor of Bessarabia, in which is situated Kishineff. The Prince insists there is no real antagonism in his province between Jews and Christians, and attributes much of the prevailing prosperity to the industry of the Jews. It is only because oppressive laws weigh upon them too harshly that some Jews dabble in politics. A commission has been appointed to deal with the replies which codify to laws relating to Jews.

SPAIN AND SOUTH AMERICA.

London, Dec. 11.—The Times Madrid correspondent says that a movement towards Hispano-American unity is acquiring an importance which merits attention. The Ibero-American union is working hard in the interests of South American States, and reports from those States are said to show eagerness for union. Spain is receiving a lot of excellent advice with reference to reforms in her tariff and shipping laws, and business methods. The Presidents of many South American republics have sent letters expressing interest in any enterprise tending to develop the relations between those republics and Spain.

THE PERILS OF THE BATH

Chicago Physician Says Death is Caused by Cleanliness

Chicago, Dec. 10—"When people leave off bathing there will be little or nothing for the doctors to do. Pneumonia colds and a hundred other ills result from the foolish habit of washing the body. To bathe is to be dirty, for you thereby make a sewer of the skin. Blood attracted by the skin, gives up products that should be left to seek a natural outlet, and soils the skin."

The foregoing declarations made by Professor John Dill Robertson at the annual meeting of the Chicago Eclectic and Surgical Society at the Auditorium have aroused the interest of members.

Prof. Robertson asserts that the authority that the closing of the pores of the skin would result in death is false. He said that all physiologists who made such an assertion were wrong. The habit of taking "dry" baths was also denounced. The rubbing of a rough towel over the skin, according to Dr. Robertson removed the natural scales of the skin or "false skin." This, he said, conduced to the growth of bacteria on the skin.

The doctor concluded with a touching incident of a poor Eskimo brought from the northern regions who had never been ill in his life. He was given a bath, contracted pneumonia, and died in two days.

A LAWYER'S QUARREL

Mr. Hopkins Fined Twenty Cents for Kicking Steers

At the County Court and General Sessions on Thursday before Judge Harding, Gerand H. Hopkins was charged with an assault on William Steers, on October 30 last. The parties are barristers, and were engaged on opposite sides in a case before Police Magistrate Deacon. During Mr. Hopkins' examination of a witness an altercation arose between the two lawyers, in consequence of some interruptions Mr. Mr. Hopkins guilty of assault. His around close to Mr. Hopkins, and a few angry words passed. Mr. Steers then turned to go back, saying as he did so that Hopkins was a pup and a cur, whereupon Mr. Hopkins kicked him.

In his evidence Mr. Steers stated that his intention was to irritate Mr. Hopkins and provoke an assault, if possible. Both parties subsequently apologized to Colonel Deacon for the breach of peace in his court. The jury found Mr. Hopkins guilty of assault. His Honor, while censuring both parties, commented with especial severity upon Mr. Steers conduct, and said the provocation was so great that a fine of twenty cents only would be imposed upon Mr. Hopkins.

ARBITRATE LOCKOUT

Quebec, Dec. 10.—The shoemen have decided to refer the matter of the lockout of the shoe factories to the Board of Arbitration, and it is expected that the Board will order the opening of the factories before taking the matter up.

X RAYS WILL KILL

Leipsic, Dec. 10—Dr. Heincke has proved by experiments with animals that systematic exposure to X rays, already known to be harmful to the skin, is also very damaging to the internal organs, especially the spleen and brain, resulting in death after emaciation, fear, languor and prostration.

HON. MR. FOSTER SELECTED

Montreal, Dec. 10—The French-Canadian Conservatives of St. Antoine Division announced today that they would favor the nomination of Hon. George E. Foster in that division, and, together with the English committee, would offer it to him at the meeting on Monday next. The leaders claim that as it had been decided to offer Mr. Foster one of the Montreal divisions, St. Antoine should be chosen by preference.

ALMOST SAVED

Montreal, Dec. 10.—A despatch today from Thomas Drummond, Canadian representative of the reorganization of the Lake Superior Consolidated Company, states that the special meeting had been further adjourned till tomorrow afternoon, and that everything indicated a favorable arrangement with the Philadelphia interests in the Speyer syndicate to participate in the plan. Its success is now almost assured.

THE FAITH CURE

Stratford, Dec. 10.—Another daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elias Mehm, this city, is down with typhoid fever, and the parents refuse to call in a physician, contending that all that is necessary is faith and prayer. Mr. Mehm is now out on bail, awaiting his trial for manslaughter, for not calling in medical aid for his daughter, Martha, who died from typhoid fever. The authorities will endeavor to have the Mehms call in a doctor. Speaking of the situation the County Crown Attorney said that if the parents can be induced by quiet means to place the child under care the case will go no further. If they refuse another method will be adopted.

THREE REASONS

Each With 2 Legs and 10 Fingers.

A Boston woman who is a fond mother writes an amusing article about her experience feeding her boys.

Among other things, she says: "Three chubby, rosy-cheeked boys, Bob, Jack and Dick, aged 6, 4, and 2 years respectively, are three of our reasons for using and recommending the food, Grape-Nuts, for these youngsters have been fed on Grape-Nuts since infancy, and often between meals when other children would have been given candy.

"I gave a package of Grape-Nuts to a neighbor whose 3 year old child was a weasened little thing ill half the time. The little tot ate the Grape-Nuts and cream greedily and the mother continued the good work and it was not long before a truly wonderful change manifested itself in the child's face and body. The results were remarkable, even for Grape-Nuts.

"Both wife and I use Grape-Nuts every day and keep strong and well and have three of the finest, healthiest boys you can find in a day's march." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Many mothers instead of destroying the children's stomachs with candy and cake give the youngsters a handful of Grape-Nuts when they are begging for something in the way of sweets. The result is shown in greatly increased health, strength, and mental activity.

There's a reason.

OUR CITY COUNCIL.

The Times Invites Votes for the Best Men

WHO WILL BE THE MAYOR

Of Greater Peterborough?---Let the People Name Their Nominees

Following up our custom in previous years, this g.f.j. once more sets the municipal election ball rolling, and urges its readers to awaken to the fact that it is high time they were looking forward to a choice of representatives at the Civic Board. This cannot, in the best interests of Peterborough, be left over till the eleventh hour; time must be taken by the forelock, and no stone left unturned to secure the best possible nominees, from which to elect the Chief Magistrate and his twelve colleagues in the administration of this progressive corporation's affairs. Nomination day is no time to look around for candidates, the selection of which, under such circumstances, usually develops into a happy-go-naming of who ever is in sight, and willing to enter into the race. In order to create an interest in this important question, we furnish below a coupon containing blanks for our reader's choice for Mayor and twelve Aldermen. This coupon will appear each day, and we cordially invite one and all to avail themselves of this means of giving publicity to those ratepayers who are qualified to legislate in our city hall the next twelve months. Vote each day if you choose; the result of each day's count will be published from time to time.

Now that Peterborough has extended its limits across the river, and Ashburnham has ceased to be, by reason of Municipal Union, mutually agreed upon by the people of both municipalities, next year's Council will have increased responsibilities, city or no city. But one more Alderman will be permitted to sit at the Civic Board, which will be held responsible for the interests of rather more than eleven hundred additional citizens. It behoves the electorate, therefore, to have a care whom that one extra Alderman is. To say the least, he should be thoroughly conversant with the civic affairs of Ashburnham, to be designated at the elections as Ward 6. Then, the Village is demanding permanent improvements, especially in the way of granolithic walks and sewers; this will demand careful and economic administration, and a thorough knowledge of the subject on the part of some one or more Aldermen. Provide for this in your elections for nominees.

Who will be Mayor?

Is the question necessary? There is a sort of unwritten law that each Mayor should have two innings at the municipal hat without opposition; that he does not sufficiently warm the Chief Magistrate's chair in one year's occupancy; that a second term gives him a larger scope for demonstrating his executive ability, and consummating maybe a program of work too extensive for one term of office. And we see no reason why His Worship, Mayor Roger, should be an exception to the rule. However, let this not prevent you naming a candidate, should your judgment so dictate.

THE PRESENT COUNCIL.

RAILWAY UNDER LAKE

London, Dec. 10—A Russian correspondent of the Times says, "A curious thing has befallen the new Orenburg-Tashkend Railway, which, if completed would cut down the railway line between the heart of Russia and the Chinese frontier by 2,000 miles. The northern half of this railway has been submerged by a newly-formed lake stretching for fourteen miles. The lake is thirty miles wide and 16 feet deep.

WILL REACH SETTLEMENT AND SAVE JAPAN'S PRIDE

Tone of Russian Papers Continues Pacific in Spite of Alarming Reports

St. Petersburg, Dec. 10—The tone of the papers here continues pacific. The Novoe Vremya saying that in spite of the alarming reports from the east a settlement will be reached which will not hurt Japan's pride.

The despatch from Tokio yesterday announcing that a Russian squadron of eight ships had arrived off Chemulpo, Corea, to support Russia's opposition to the proposed opening of Yongampho, on the Yalu River, to the commerce of the world, and that the Russians threatened to land 3000 men and march on Seoul should Corea disregard their warning, is utterly discredited here. The Foreign Office has no confirmation of the report and is inclined to class it with other sensational rumors from the Far East.

THE QUEEN WAS IN GREAT DANGER

Her Bedroom on Fire While She Was Asleep--Narrow Escape

London, Dec. 10.—A fire occurred today at Sandringham, and Queen Alexandra and her secretary, Miss Knollys, had a narrow escape. It broke out at 6 o'clock this morning in Miss Knollys' bedroom in the chimney flue, where a beam is supposed to have been smouldering for some days, and spread to the bedroom of the Queen, who was asleep at the time. She was awakened by Miss Knollys, who raised an alarm. But the fire obtained a good hold of both rooms, and considerable damage was done before the flames were extinguished. The outbreak caused a great deal of excitement at Sandringham, where a number of guests are staying at present.

GIRL BRIDE ADMITS MURDER

Poisons Husband She Married at Behest of Parents

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 12.—Two more cases were added today to the poisoning affairs which are becoming frequent in Michigan. At Coldwater, Mrs. Katie Ludwick, aged 18, who was taken to jail from her home in Bronson on the charge of murdering her husband, John Ludwick, confessed to Father Hewitt, her pastor, and others, that she gave Ludwick poison last Thursday, and that he died Friday. The couple were married about three weeks ago, after the girl had seen Ludwick but four times. She was opposed to the marriage, but was forced into it by her parents. Her victim's body lay in the house sixteen hours and during that time the young widow attended a wedding.

A Joke Which was Not a Joke

—Lindsay Watchman-Warder— A joke that was not much of a joke, was perpetrated last week by Mrs. Robert Brown, of Massena, New York State. On Wednesday a telegram was received by a sister, in town, asking her "to come at once, as Mary was very ill." It was apparently from her brother-in-law, and Miss May Scott, with her brothers, Fred and Will, started by first train, reaching their destination in due season. While at the hotel in Massena on arrival a funeral passed by, and they were sure it was that of their sister Mary. So the amazement of the sad-hearted trio can be imagined when Mrs. Brown met them at the gate, in good health and spirits. She explained that she had become very lonesome to see some of them since her eight years absence from Lindsay, and had adopted the telegram

Chicago, Dec. 12—Mistaken for a strike breaker, as the police believe, Jno. Omachowski, a trunk maker, has been shot and killed. The crime is attributed by the police to union pickets of the striking tanners of the American Hyde and Leather Company. The district has been turbulent since the tanners strike began a month ago. One man was shot soon after the trouble began. The victim left eight children and a widow.

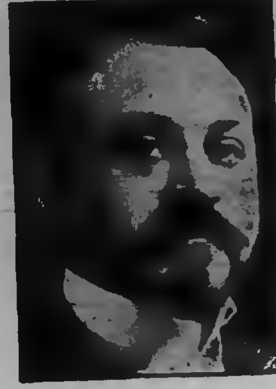
You Pay Only if Cured

Expects No Money Unless He Cures You—Method and Full Particulars Sent Free—Write For It This Very Day

A Detroit specialist who has 14 certificates and diplomas from medical colleges and boards, has perfected a startling method of curing the diseases of men in their own homes; so that there may be no doubt in the mind of any man that he has



DR. S. GOLDBERG,
The Possessor of 14 Diplomas and Certificates Who Wants No Money That He Does Not Earn.

both the method and the ability to do as he says, Dr. Goldberg, the discoverer, will send the method entirely free to all men who send him their name and address. He wants to hear from men who have stricture that they have been unable to get cured, prostatic trouble, sexual weakness, varicocele, lost manhood, blood poison, hydrocele, emaciation of parts, impotence, etc. His wonderful method not only cures the condition itself, but likewise all the complications, such as rheumatism, bladder or kidney trouble, heart disease, nervous debility, etc.

The doctor realizes that it is one thing to make claims and another thing to back them up, so he has made it a rule not to ask for money unless he cures you, and when you are cured he feels sure that you will willingly pay him a small fee. It would seem, therefore, that it is to the best interests of every man who suffers in this way to write the doctor confidentially and lay your case before him. He sends the method, as well as many booklets on the subject, including the one that contains the 14 diplomas and certificates, entirely free. Address him simply

Dr. S. Goldberg, 208 Woodward Ave., Room [illegible] Detroit, Mich., and it will all immediately be sent you free.

This is something entirely new and well worth knowing more about. Write at once.

PETERBOROUGH, DECEMBER 10, 1903

FEATURE OF ELECTIONS

Prof. Mavor, of the Political Economy Department of Toronto University, who spent some time last summer in visiting the American cities and in studying the principal systems, addressed the Political Science Club of the University some days ago. He referred to the different methods of electing representatives. The district or ward system, he said, had a tendency to put into office a lower class of representatives, in some cases even criminals and their confederates. He was speaking of American councils.

Fortunately Canada has been spared the scandals which have disgraced the American people and having their origin in the grafting of unprincipled men. The ward heeler, or the district leader, in some United States cities is a dangerous man. He is out for what he can make out of his position, and he bleeds, bullies and blackmails in the most shameless fashion. Prof. Mavor does not say this, but the Times realizes it and justifies the professor's opinion that sometimes criminals become legislators by the ward of district plan of election.

Election from the municipality at large, said Prof. Mavor, is more expensive—to the individual—and, though it brings forward a better class of candidates it puts in men less familiar with the needs of the constituency. That is the strongest argument against election by the whole people, that the alderman will not see all that they should see, and will not be as attentive to the larger constituency as he will be to the smaller one. As a matter of fact the average alderman cannot act as inspector of walks and roads. He can hear, however, of necessary work, and can have it reported on by the officials for the purpose.

The vigilance of aldermen is discounted by the fact that they are handicapped by ward antagonisms. The money of the city for streets and walks go under the direction of a committee of seven, and it can do pretty much as it likes. The other fourteen aldermen can complain, but what is the use? There are some wards which get more than their share of the expenditure, and some do not get their share. How this happens the people can imagine, but the common inference is that the strong hands and the knowing one get the better of their credulous colleagues.

MARRIAGES MADE IN AMERICA

New York ministers are organizing to fight the divorce-and-remarry habit of the United States. Leaders of almost all the Protestant denominations have pledged their support to a committee of the Protestant Episcopal Church, who would have all ministers forbidden to marry divorced persons, and who seek to secure more uniformity and severity in the divorce laws of the various States. The movement began none too soon. Already too many people in the United States regard the obligations of marriage with indifference, if not contempt. The country has citizens of both sexes with wedded and parted records which the Sultan of Turkey or the Shah of Persia might envy. New York, Chicago and South Dakota have established reputations as Meccas for matrimonial misfits. The practice has set its stamp upon the nation. Its consequences have not been good and the more the practice of breaking matrimonial bonds extends the worse will be the effect upon the general morality. Canada is interested in the moral status of the United States, for the lessons of corruption are easily learned. Fortunately the divorce habit has not yet taken hold on our side of the line. Our status and our religious organizations do not encourage it. In Canada marriage and divorce are still serious undertakings, and are likely to continue so. If the movement launched in New York to rehabilitate American matrimony meets with success all over the United States, there will be no greater rejoicing anywhere than on this side of the line.

A CLERGYMAN'S APPEAL.

The Rev. W. F. Brownlee, Ridgetown, Anglican minister, has written the following letter to the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives:—

Dear Sir,—I fell in with a case to-day in my parish, a young woman very ill with consumption and I promised I would write you regarding her entrance into the hospital for consumptives in Muskoka. The case is one of great necessity and charity. The applicant is about 18 years of age. She is practically without a home, staying at present with a relative. She is bright and amiable, and would like to live. As I understand, you reject none on account of poverty. I commend the case to you as one most needy, and if you can send me instructions or papers for application to the hospital, I will see to raising necessary means for her transportation and have her sent at once, as I imagine she is not beyond receiving benefit.

[Note by Editor.—Sir Wm. R. Meredith, Kt., Vice-President of the National Sanitarium Association, or Mr. W. J. Gage, Chairman of the Executive Committee, Toronto, will gladly receive contributions for this and several other equally piteous cases calling for help.]

FIRE IN TANNERY

Property at Kingston Had a Narrow Escape

Kingston, Dec. 10— The tannery of A. Davis and Son had a narrow escape last night from being burned. The stable, very close to the curing room, caught fire, and a gale from the northeast swept the flames over the tannery. The firemen reached the conflagration early, and with three streams kept the fire back and saved the tannery.

Only a few days ago the city contemplated putting in hydrants near the works. Hon. E. J. Davis, Toronto, is one of the big stockholders. The company is very pleased over the work of the firemen. The loss is small.

Constipation

Causes Headache, Abdominal, Pains, Piles and in Severe Cases Insanity and Apoplexy

It is a common mistake to conclude that Constipation is not a dangerous condition. Although at first it is only accompanied by slight inconvenience and pain, yet if not corrected, it will inevitably lead to very dire results.

Great care should be used in selecting a remedy for constipation because if a violent purgative is employed, it is sure to set up pain, irritation and congestion, and result finally in piles.

The experience of those who have tested all the cures for constipation, seems to prove that Ferrozone is the most agreeable and satisfactory treatment. It makes the bowels so well ordered that natural and unassisted action is established. Nothing can equal the immediate sense of comfort it produces, and pains in the head, and stomach and in the intestines, disappear almost at once.

Ferrozone is very mild and certain in its action, and never causes inconvenience or distress. Ferrozone can be taken early as long as required and in no way interferes with business or pleasure, and nothing may be feared from its use, however prolonged it may be.

For Constipation, Piles and Sick Headache, Ferrozone stands unrivalled. The driver of the City Express Company, who suffered from piles, says:— "Constant sitting on the wagon seat, produced a rectal irritation, which combined with constipated condition of the bowels, brought on a severe attack of piles. I used without benefit, different ointments, and other remedies; but got quick relief and most satisfactory results from Ferrozone. I can recommend Ferrozone to all who suffer from piles."

Ferrozone always cures, and can be purchased at any reliable drug store or 50 cts. a box or three boxes for $1.25. Sent to your address by mail if price is forwarded to N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

HOW SHALL WE LIVE.

Rev. Alfred W. H. Hadder, Sixteenth Baptist Church, New York.

Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God.—Matthew, iv., 4.

How shall we live? The tempter says, "By bread." Christ replies in the words of our text. Man lives by God's gifts only as God is behind them, and yet the real support is not in the gifts but in the giver. Life in its fullest sense is action from within, sustained with food from without. This is clearly illustrated by the power of steam generated within a boiler, but dependent upon water and fuel from without.

God has appointed under all ordinary circumstances that we should sustain life by the secondary means of earthly food, but placing this as the limit of God's directions we make our lives earth, earthy, and hold out little or no hope to the poor and needy of this world's goods.

The word "bread" covers a wide range of earthly supplies and is of primary interest to the people of all nations. It places an emphasis upon the saying "Self-preservation is the first law of nature." The world says, "By these things we live."

Moreover, we are not blind to the necessary anxiety about such things as the body's just claim, but rather accept the fact that food, raiment and shelter are part of God's economy of life. Christ says, "Your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things." In the Lord's Prayer we are taught to ask, "Give us this day our daily bread," and we are justified in a material interpretation of this human request as much as in a spiritual sense. But we are wrong if we place so small a horizon about our lives and give no attention to the words of Christ, "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." We place ourselves by the side of the Pharisees, of whom it was spoken, "Woe unto you, Pharisees; for ye tithe mint and rue and all manner of herbs, and pass over judgment and the love of God; these ye ought to have done, and not to leave the other undone."

First. We should live in love. If Paul were writing to-day he would have said, "Though I possess abundance of all things, and have not love, it profiteth me nothing." Iron in the soil is raised to a more useful sphere by the growing plant rooted in the earth; the plant then taken to nourish the body places the iron still higher and finds its largest usefulness in energy produced in the blood of man. So the seed of divine love, placed by God in the human heart, can raise it to a larger and nobler life. We need the food of culture, knowledge, affection, solitude, all of which are bread to nourish, sustain and develop our souls, for man is not wholly alive when his body is alive; for the soul lives by every word which proceeds from the mouth of God.

In a western city by the river a sick girl had been taken out of the street by a poor woman who kept a dining-room for sailors, with a kitchen behind it, and who made a little bed for the sick child under a stairway. It was thought the girl would be more comfortable in a hospital, and so she was taken there. But she missed the kind heart of the motherly old woman's love and so went back to die in the kitchen. No doubt there was surprise in heaven when these two met at God's throne, and the old woman, who had no earthly church, heard the words uttered which encircle Livingstone's tomb in Westminster Abbey. "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of these little ones, ye did it unto me."

Second. We may also live by every kind of truth which comes from God to make us more alive. It is ignorance, narrowness, bigotry and selfishness which make us cling to the letter and reject constant new revelation. The mind needs to be nourished with new thoughts or it will return to infancy long before the body comes to its three score and ten. Truth revealed in science, truth revealed in daily experience, truth revealed in common faith in man—these are some of the words proceeding out of the mouth of God. For men's souls are only nourished and strengthened in proportion to their minds' and hearts' working. High friendships, noble loves, solemn angles in grief and death, adversity and solitude—all special agencies to feed particular souls.

Third. We may also grow strong and live by every kind of service. This was Christ's teaching and practice. "I must be about my Father's business" are His words. God's service—an exalted sense of true life, a definite path of duty, a noble example of a blessed spirit. Though the body lacked the bread of this world and came to hunger, pain, tears, sorrow, insult and rejection, yet the one thought is, "My meat is to do the will of Him that sent me."

So may we readers of to-day's sermon resist the temptation of a concentrated thought and work for earthly bread, and feed upon that bread of which if a man eat he shall hunger no more.

Bulb Growing in Ireland.

Just now, says The London Daily Chronicle, millions of bulbs are being bought and sold, or given away, and it is good to know that Great Britain, even in the absence of a protective duty, is rapidly wresting the trade away from Holland. In that country bulb culture has been an hereditary pursuit for the past three centuries at least, and until a quite recent period the importation to England was immense. Now even the rarest and consequently most expensive varieties are grown on this side of the North Sea, and not the least successful bulb farms are to be found in Ireland. The experiment, which was begun eight years ago at Rush, county Dublin, where the ground was previously devoted to potatoes, has proved entirely successful, and both climate and soil have been found almost perfect for this industry. Irish-grown bulbs have not yet reached the eccentric prices—running to three figures—which a past generation sometimes paid for a single specimen, but even at Rush you may spend twelve guineas on a root.

Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives

FROM THE YUKON

—From Bishop of Selkirk, Caribou Crossing, Yukon: "The trifling remittance ($10.00) herewith enclosed, is intended to express our sympathy for the sufferers in other parts rather than imply a special need for your institution here."

CONFEDERATION LIFE ASSOCIATION

—J. K. Macdonald, Esq., Managing Director Confederation Life Association, in sending cheque for $500.00 from his Company, says: "I am pleased to be able to be the medium of helping on so good a work."

Funds Urgently Needed

The financial reports for the year just ending show that to keep the doors of the Free Hospital for Consumptives open, maintaining the number of patients for which accommodation has been provided, not less than $25,000 is required for the year now entered upon.

Since the Free Hospital was opened (18 months ago) 224 patients have been received. The help the institution has been to these people—all from the wage-earning and poorer ranks of life—cannot be estimated in human language.

—Edward D. Heddon, Solina, Ont., on leaving the Free Hospital, writes: "I cannot speak too highly of the institution from which I have received so much benefit. I can but tender my best thanks for the kindness shown."

—Minnie Linklater, Hamilton, writes: "I have spent over nine months at the Free Hospital for Consumptives. I believe I have been greatly helped, and shall never hesitate to use my influence to further that good cause."

There is no endowment, excepting the provision made by three life insurance companies for six beds for the current year. Only by the continued contributions of the Canadian public can the work be maintained.

Patients are accepted from every part of the Dominion, and there have been in residence during the past year patients from Prince Edward Island on the east to the Northwest Territories on the west.

Contributions may be sent to Sir W. R. Meredith, Kt., Vice-President National Sanitarium Association, or Mr. W. J. Gage, Chairman of the Executive Committee, Toronto, Can.

Marjorie—Did George ask your consent to our marriage this afternoon, papa?

Cobwigger—Yes, my dear.

Marjorie—And did you give it?

Cobwigger—Not exactly, you see, I told him I would have to consider it. I wasn't quite sure as to his financial affairs.

Marjorie—Didn't he say his income was $2,000?

Cobwigger—I believe those were the figures.

Marjorie—Isn't that enough to support a wife?

Cobwigger—Yes; unless she requires more.

Marjorie—Then why didn't you give your consent?

Cobwigger—Because I wished to make sure that he hadn't mistaken the amount.

Marjorie—Oh, I know George wouldn't tell a lie.

Cobwigger—You can never be sure in a case of this kind. I lied myself when I decided to marry.

Marjorie—But how are you going to find out?

Cobwigger—Wait till I see what kind of a present he gives you for Christmas.

Equitable Gold Mining Co.

R. C. LANE, President. G. F. NORTON, Secretary and Treasurer.

Over $300,000 of development work already done Main shaft 9 x 16 feet, down 700 feet. Over 3,000 feet of drifts, tunels and shafts showing immense ore body

Destined to become large and continuous dividend payer.

The Equitable Gold Mining Co.'s properties consist of three mines, known as the North Bonanza, Flowery and Kimbark. They are located in Six Mile Canon, less than four miles from Virginia City, Nevada, which is the nearest railroad station.

Years ago, over three hundred thousand dollars of development work was done upon the mines—so they are not mere "prospects" but actual mines. This work was done under the personal supervision of competent engineers, and was paid for by the owners of the mines themselves; thus giving double assurance that the work was well done and that the expenditure was justified.

The Main Shaft (triple compartment, 9x16 feet in the clear) is down seven hundred feet. From this shaft, running along the vein matter, east and west, are four drifts, at different levels, having a combined length (including the Rule winze and the tunnel) of 2,850 feet.

In addition to the above there are four small shafts, with a combined depth of about 300 feet; 535 feet of tunnels, and at least 500 feet of cross-cuts, upraises, etc.

All told, there is 4,850 feet of underground work—the most of which is in ore. Here is nearly one mile of openings in mineralized rock.

It is conservatively estimated by competent and reliable engineers and practical miners that there is developed an ore body of at least One Million Five Hundred Thousand Tons!

As a further evidence of the large amount of work done there is from 75,000 to 100,000 tons of ore on the dumps at the different surface openings—ore that, with modern cheapened processes, can be converted into gold bullion at a profit.

THE TITLE

Title to the Flowery and North Bonanza mines is by patent from the United States government, while the title of the Kimbark is by location and possession.

The Equitable Company obtained the Flowery and North Bonanza mines, both of which are patented, by purchase—the payments therefore to be made out of a share of the net proceeds of the mines. The Company has a written contract, duly recorded, for a deed, and is in possession of the properties, and is now operating them. The sum of $2,000 was paid on the contract, September 30th, 1902, and partial payments have since been made. The Company is entitled to $6.25 per ton as cost of mining and milling. One-half of all over and above this $6.25 per ton goes to the former owners till they receive the total sum of $105,000, without interest. There is no stipulation as to amount of work to be done within any specified time—and no proceeds, no pay. The Company can therefore pay it in one year or it can pay it in ten years. With this exception the Company is free from debt. Its policy is to pay as it goes. In this way it has no fear of financial embarrassments. The title to the Kimbark is by "location," under the mining laws of the United States. Work enough has already been done to entitle the Company to a patent, which in due time will be obtained.

Recent Development Work

Since the Company acquired the property, it has put up poles and wires for a distance of one mile for the transmission of electric power from the Truckee River Electric Power Plant. By this means unlimited power for mining, hoisting and milling is obtained.

It has built a dwelling house for the manager, a large boarding house for the miners, a barn, a power house and blacksmith shop.

It has put an electric hoist and skip into the 365-tunnel; has purchased ore cars and the necessary tools for mining purposes.

It has acquired the Kimbark ground, adjoining the Flowery and North Bonanza mines, and is now developing the property by driving a tunnel.

Dry Placer Miner, formerly of California.

This company has the right, without royalty payments, to use the new patent machine upon all the land it may own, acquire by lease, or operate, in Arizona. We invite special attention to the great commercial value and profit of this machine, and what can be accomplished by it.

What This Machine Will Do.

For the first time in the history of gold mining a machine has been invented which will handle the dry placer gold gravel without water, and in large quantities. This machine will save 98 per cent of all the gold in the gravel, and will do it at a lower working cost than by any existing process. It is operated by a small, compact engine, using crude oil as fuel. A complete plant, capable of handling 300 tons per day will weigh less than 1,200 pounds.

To secure this gold only those placer lands could be worked, which could command large supplies of water, hence the immense bodies of dry placer lands remote from water have never been worked.

Fifteen Hundred Millions in Gold

The United States has yielded nineteen hundred millions in gold, of which fifteen hundred millions—or more than 75 per cent.—were the product of its placers.

Ninety per cent. of the world's total gold supply has been taken from placers by processes which have admittedly lost the bulk of the values.

Simplicity of Machine — Its Method of Operation

The machine is so extremely simple in construction and operation that any intending investor can operate it instantly. He can take a peck or more of sand, either ordinary house of sea sand, or such as is found in the placer lands of Arizona and California, put into this sand ten or a hundred pieces of gold as small as the point of a toothpick, and from that to the head of an ordinary pin, mix the sand and the gold thoroughly, turn them into the hopper or feed of the machine, and in a few seconds the machine will separate the gold from the gravel and recover from 98 to 100 per cent of the gold. It is an absolute, infallible, ocular demonstration of the merits of the machine. It has solved the problem of handling sand or gravel containing gold in regions remote from water.

Cost of Handling Material

Each plant is portable, weighs less than 1,200 pounds and can be easily moved by a few laborers.

The two greatest authorities in the world on the moving of material are "Haswell" and "Trautwine." They say in their standard publications that a laborer can shovel horizontally, 12 feet, vertically 6 feet for 50 feet haul 17 cubic yards in 10 hours.

A well known engineer in his work for the U. S. Government at Sandy Hook, moved 18 cubic yards, 100 feet haul in 10 hours at a cost of 10 cents per cubic yard, paying laborers $1.75 per day.

The dry placer gold-bearing sands of California, Arizona and New Mexico are handled quite as easily as those of Sandy Hook.

Ten laborers can easily supply one machine with 204 cubic yards of gravel in 12 hours, working at the same speed as shown by Haswell, Trautwine or at Sandy Hook.

Placer work on above basis would cost about 11 1-2c. per cubic yard.

Do You Want Monthly Dividends?

We make a special offer of a limited number of shares of stock at this time, because the company requires immediately sufficient to build several machines to operate in the field.

Every machine at work will increase the intrinsic value of the stock.

Twenty machines in the field will increase the price and value of the stock more than double the present offering, and every additional machine means a further increase in price and value.

The Company intends to divide its net earnings every month, so that the stockholders may count absolutely on receiving monthly dividends in proportion to monthly earnings.

THE ROSE OF THE RING

heart grew heavy—so heavy, that she could not look into his face, lest he should read the brooding in her eyes.

He might still contemplate her as a child; she knew that something more than a child's heart throbbed in her breast; she had known it since that day when he had left Lilac Villa—when he had taken her in his arms, and kissed her bood-gye.

A shamed flush rushed over her face at the remembrance of that parting—of the awakening which had followed: and she bent her head low, glad to feel his gaze was not upon her.

They were cousins; he loved her perhaps as he would have loved her had she been his sister.

And yet, for him, she had a greater love than could be born of a sister's tenderness.

To be near him again was like entering a paradise—but he must never know—never understand how love for him had taken root in her heart, and twined round every fibre of her nature, becoming part of her life.

He glanced up and saw the flush quivering over the fair face before him—saw the shine of tears under the veiling lashes.

He got up from his chair, and taking both her hands, threw himself on the rug at her feet.

"Must I kiss those tears away?" he asked, his voice half tender, half teasing. "Why, Rose, what have I done that you will not look at me?"

The clasp of his hands had sent a sweet thrill through all her pulses, and she longed for him to gather her in his arms, and let her head rest on his breast in the old child-like way.

Yet it could not be.

He did not understand what was in her heart—or would he have uttered those light words?

She dragged her hands from his clasp and dashed the tears from her eyes.

"I was looking at the pictures in the fire," she said, "and what I saw made me unhappy."

"They are not such pictures as I would paint for you," he answered. "Were they of the past, or of the future?"

"Both."

"And all sad?"

"They seemed so."

"Then do not look into the fire any more to-night, Rose. Turn your eyes to me; I want to read what is in them."

"You would see nothing but what you have seen before," she answered, rising hastily, and commencing to pack the tea-things on to the tray. "I must go and see how Bess is getting on. I wish you had eaten more of her cakes. She will be so disappointed, when she sees them nearly all back again."

"Can't we smuggle a few under the sofa?" he said, hoping to win a smile.

"It would be better not to make the attempt," she answered, with only the slightest tremor at the corners of her mouth. "Gip might ferret them out at an unlucky moment."

"Gip! Where is he? Couldn't he help us out of the difficulty by stowing away a few on his own account?"

"He is not in the house. Gip preferred following his master to staying at home with me. Such an ungrateful dog does not deserve to be made use of—as we want to make use of him."

A smile had come to her lips now, and despite the sad reflections she had indulged in a few moments ago, there was a gleam of the old sunny mischief in her eyes.

As to its cause, he had not the remotest suspicion.

Rose had always been winsome and lovable—as sweet as her floral namesake—but ever as a child.

"What will you do when you are mistress of Drayton Court?" he asked, a momentary wonder coming over him as to what her future might be.

She looked up at him with a wild, startled glance, as though he had unconsciously dealt her a wound.

"I do not know," she said. "I shall be miserable—I shall wish myself dead."

Then, alarmed at her own words, she shrank from the earnest regard of the eyes fixed upon her, and, with a strange, forced laugh, hurried into the kitchen.

Marc stood where she had left him, his head bent, his eyes dark and thoughtful—and yet not understanding.

"She will be lonely in that dreary place," he muttered. "It is a pity she must go. If she is obliged to take her position there, I will see that she has a suitable companion."

The companion he chose for her a few weeks later, was a middle-aged lady who had lately become a widow, and was glad to fulfill the duties of chaperone to the new mistress of Drayton Court.

"You will come and see me—when you have time?" Rosalie said to Marc at parting. "It will be like a prison-life to me."

CHAPTER XX.

Nellie—the girl who would have been a wife, but for that tragic interruption to the wedding—found it hard to live down the disappointment which had come to her with the knowledge of Frank's deceit.

Too proud to let her suffering become a subject for daily comment amongst those nearest to her, she had gone about the house much as if nothing of importance had happened.

Never again did she want to look on those shimmering folds of white—the shroud in which lay buried her dead love, the ruined hopes that she herself had cast out from her life.

Twice Frank tried to see her, twice he was refused admittance to the house.

Then came a letter from him.

That letter found its home in the flames, with the seal unbroken, and Nellie watched the paper burn, with scorn and anger in her eyes.

Lady Rayne left her to herself, and did not allude to the tragedy that had been enacted in the church her daughter had entered as a bride.

"She was right in her judgment against him," was Lady Rayne's inward comment. "She could not have been happy as his wife, remembering what had happened."

She was not surprised when, one morning, at breakfast, Nellie expressed a desire to leave London.

"There is nothing going on just now," she said, "and we can come back for the season. What is the use of a place in the country, if we seldom go to it?"

They had come up for Nellie's wedding, and, considering the course events had taken, it was just as well the family should leave town.

"I have received a letter from your cousin Duke," Lord Rayne remarked, smiling as he handed the missive to Nellie. "He wants to spend a few weeks with us, before he goes back to India."

BRITAIN MUST GRAB THIBET

Austrian Says Failure to Seize will Cost England India

Vienna, Dec. 11.—Professor Vambery, in an article in Die Zeit, on the possibility that the British expedition to Thibet will lead to internal complications, declares that Great Britain must acquire Thibet unless it wishes to lose India.

STRONG RUSSIAN SQUADRON

Tokio, Dec. 11.—A strong Russian squadron, consisting of eight warships, including two battleships, has arrived at Chemulpo, the Port of Seoul, Capital of Corea, to support Russia's opposition to the proposed opening of Yongampho to the commerce of the world. The Russians threaten to land three thousand men and march on Seoul, should Corea disregard their warning.

PROGRESS.

Some time ago there was a notable automobile procession in the city of Buffalo, N. Y. It was notable for its size, and also for the fact that it was entirely composed of automobile wagons (like that in the cut above), built to distribute the advertising literature of the World's Dispensary Medical Association, proprietors and manufacturers of Dr. Pierce's medicines. In many a town and village Dr. Pierce's automobile has been the pioneer horseless vehicle. These wagons, sent to every important section of the country, are doing more than merely advertise Dr. Pierce's Remedies—they are pioneers of progress, heralds of the automobile age.

And this is in keeping with the record made by Dr. Pierce and his famous preparations, which have always kept in the front on their merits. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is still the leading medicine for disorders and diseases of the stomach and digestive and nutritive systems, for the purifying of the blood and healing of weak lungs.

Women place Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription in the front of all put-up medicines specially designed for women's use. The wide benefits this medicine has brought to women have been well summed up in the words "It makes weak women strong and sick women well."

The reputation of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets as a safe and effective laxative for family use is international.

It may be asserted without fear of contradiction that no other firm or company engaged in the vending of put-up medicines can rank with the World's Dispensary Medical Association, either in the opinion of the medical profession or of the intelligent public. The Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, which is connected with the "World's Dispensary," is alone sufficient to prove this supremacy. Here is a great modern hospital, always filled with patients, where every day successful operations are performed on men and women whose diseases demand the aid of surgery. No hospital in Buffalo is better equipped, with respect to its modern appliances, or the surgical ability of its staff. Dr. R. V. Pierce, the chief consulting physician of this great institution, has associated with himself nearly a score of physicians, each man being a picked man, chosen for his ability in the treatment and cure of some special form of disease.

The offer that Dr. Pierce makes to men and women suffering with chronic diseases of a free consultation by letter, is really without a parallel. It places without cost or charge the entire resources of a great medical institute at the service of the sick. Such an offer is not for one moment to be confounded with those offers of "free medical advice" which are made by people who are not physicians, cannot and do not practice medicine, and are only saved from prosecution by artfully wording their advertisements so that they give the impression that they are physicians without making the claim to be licensed.

Those who write to Dr. Pierce, chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., may do so with the assurance that they will receive not only the advice of a competent physician, but the advice of a physician whose wide experience in the treatment and cure of disease, and whose sympathy with human suffering leads him to take a deep, personal interest in all those who seek his help and that of his associate staff of specialists.

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser (in paper covers), 1008 pages, is sent free on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps, or 50 stamps for the cloth-bound volume, to pay expense of customs and mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Storm King Group of Mines

TO CANADIAN INVESTORS

The property comprising what is known as the STORM KING GROUP OF MINES offers an attractive and safe investment. The property is the richest in the country and we believe it would be difficult to secure an investment that promises better returns. The following is a description of the mines written by Capt. A. M. Paul, whose reputation as an expert in mining matters is known far and near.

These properties are situated in the Cable Cove Mining District, about fifteen miles north of Sumpter, Oregon, and about one mile northwest of the Baby McKee mine, about two miles northwest of the Last Chance, the Alpine, the Imperial and the California mines.

The properties in this report consist of seven claims. The names of the seven claims being as follows: The Eureka and the Honest Dollar. These two claims are on the same vein. Adjoining these two claims and paralleling them on the northwest is another vein upon which there are two claims known as the Jessie and Golden Rule, and paralleling them on the northwest there is another vein upon which there are two claims, known as the Storm King and the Ozone. The last claim of this group lies to the northwest of the last two named, and is adjoining them. This claim is the Shannon Bell.

In making my report I will commence with the two first named claims of the group, the Eureka and Honest Dollar. The development on these claims consists of a tunnel ninety-seven feet in length, running along the course of the vein, showing two feet ten inches of ore in the top of the tunnel and a little over three feet in the bottom, which assays giving values of from $9.68 to $70 per ton in gold. About four hundred feet in a southwesterly direction there is a shaft on the vein ten feet deep, showing the vein to be from one to two inches wide on the surface and about twelve inches wide in the bottom of the shaft, in which assays give values of from $9.76 to $40 per ton in free milling gold ore.

This vein is exposed by small shafts and open cuts for a distance of fifteen hundred feet, and the course of this vein is north, ten degrees east, and the vein cuts the formation, showing it to be a true fissure, and the formation is granite. This vein shows in places a width of from ten to fifteen feet of mineralized matter, commonly called vein matter, but which is caused by hot solutions from below.

I will now pass to the Jessie and Golden Rule. There has been very little work done upon these two claims, there being one discovery shaft ten feet deep, showing ore on all sides of the shaft, and running in value of from $4 upwards. It is my opinion that with development, this, too, will prove valuable property.

The work on the Storm King and Ozone consists of a tunnel near the point of discovery and is driven along the vein for a distance of one hundred and eighty feet, showing ore all the way from the surface to the face of the tunnel, and averaging in width from six to eighteen inches. Three assays give the following values: $18.50. This being a general sample taken from the dump. The other two assays are $63.68 and $79.08 respectively, thus being the assorted ore for shipment. The course of this tunnel and vein are north, ten degrees west, and the vein cuts the trend of the formation obliquely (which is granite) and by driving this tunnel five or six hundred feet further it the present course will intersect a quartzite reef (which is running north twenty degrees east) which would make this a contact vein between granite and quartzite, and should produce a large body of ore at the intersection of the contact.

The only work done upon the Shannon Bell, the last claim of this group, is the location work, and is not enough to allow of a report being made.

There is water for power purposes one mile from the property, and timber on the ground, of a very fine quality, sufficient to run the mine for many years to come.

All the assays mentioned in this report were made by the assayer of the Imperial mine at my request, and the ore was taken by me from the properties mentioned.

I will state that I have been a practical miner since 1870, and am now the manager and superintendent of the Imperial mine in this district.

(Signed) CAPTAIN A. M. PAUL.

Individualities.

Sir Frederick Treves, the famous English surgeon, who has just retired, established a record in performing one thousand consecutive operations for appendicitis without a death.

Great interest has been aroused in London by the announcement that the Marchese Karlo di Rudini, son of the former Italian Premier, is to marry Dora Labouchere, daughter of Henry Labouchere, the noted editor of "Truth."

During his lifetime Gordon McKay, the wealthy inventor of the machine that revolutionized shoemaking, who died at Newport lately, deeded all his property, valued at four millions of dollars, to Harvard University, retaining an income for life.

Mark Twain and his wife have leased the Villa Papiniano, which belonged originally to the sculptor Baccio Bandinelli, a contemporary and rival of Michael Angelo. The villa is pleasantly located about halfway between Florence and Fiesole, and connected with the modern town and the old Etruscan stronghold by a line of electric cars.

That much-quoted superstition, "three times a bridesmaid never a bride," seems to have no terrors for Alice Roosevelt, who has accepted an invitation to serve in this capacity at the approaching marriage of Miss Lilia McCauley and Mr. Wolcott Tuckerman, which will take place in Washington, D.C., November 25. Miss Roosevelt was a bridesmaid at the wedding of Miss Ruth Pruyn and Mr. David M. Goodrich, in Albany, last June, and also at the marriage of Miss Madeline Jackson to Mr. George C. Lee, jr., in Boston, several years ago.

Pope Pius has appointed Mgr. Merry del Val to be Papal secretary of state. It is reported that the nomination, however, will not be made officially until the next consistory, when the monsignor will also be made a cardinal. Mgr. Del Val is under forty years of age, and is descended from one of Spain's noblest families. His mother was an Englishwoman, and he was born in England, receiving his early education from the Jesuit fathers in Stonyhurst College. His higher education was received in the Academy of Nobles, in Rome, the institution of which he is president.

New York clubmen are going in for politics with a vengeance. It is evidently the intention of both Democratic and Republican parties to have representative men as aldermen. Eddie Crowninshield, who is a member of the Knickerbocker Club, one of the Rough Riders, and a leading spirit in a great many social and other enterprises, is to run on the Tammany ticket for alderman in the "kid-glove" district. In the Republican camp, there is Beverley R. Robinson, son of Dr. Beverley Robinson, who is to be the candidate in the twenty-ninth aldermanic district, which comprises the territory on Fifth avenue, between Fifty-second and Fifty-fourth streets.

Helen Keller has just begun her senior year at Radcliffe. Her studies this year will consist of Professor Kittredge's Shakespearian course, Dr. Neilson's English literature, Professor Moore's course in Plautus, Cicero and Lucretius, and Professor Morgan and Dr. Rand's course in Latin, which covers the annals of Tacitus, the satires and epistles of Horace, and selections from Catullus. Up to the present time Miss Keller has passed with credit all her college examinations. When she has completed this year's work, as outlined, she will have accomplished more in the way of scholarship than any other person who has been handicapped with the loss of sight, hearing and speech.

When Eleanor Calhoun, the California actress, was married, a few months ago, to Lazarovitch, the Servian leader, she announced to her friends that she might some day return to the stage. She has now, however, abandoned all such ambitions, and has thrown herself enthusiastically into assisting her husband with his political writings and into looking after his three children. It will be remembered that Lazarovitch, according to his own statement, was approached by certain Servians prior to the massacre of King Alexander and Queen Draga, and asked to accept the throne as next in line of succession should the plot prosper. Lazarovitch, however, having no desire to rule the kingdom, not only refused to be a candidate, but left the country. It was then he came to London, met the California actress, and married her.

When the Duke of Devonshire and the present Duke of Manchester's grandfather were young they loved Louisa, daughter of the Count d'Alten of Hanover. Devonshire, then known as Lord Hartington, was a laggard in his love affairs, as he has been in everything else, and so the lady became Duchess of Manchester in 1852, and duchess she remained for forty years. But, though she married the other man, her devotion to Lord Hartington and his devotion to her were famous. She counseled him in all the important affairs of his public life, spurred him on, and was his nearest friend. Nobody thought of inviting one without the other. At last Manchester died, Hartington himself shortly afterward succeeded to a dukedom, and in 1892 the widow, still one of the beautiful women of England, became a bride and a duchess again.

Inexcusable Stupidity.

"I noticed," said the druggist to his assistant, "that a gentleman came in with a prescription, and that you took it and gave him the stuff in about three minutes. What do you mean by that? When a prescription for salt and water or peppermint and cough syrup is handed to you, you must look at it doubtfully, as if it were very hard to make up. Then you must bring it to me, and we will both read it and shake our heads. After that you go back to the customer and ask him if he wants it to-day. When he says he does, you answer that you'll make a special effort. A patient appreciates a prescription that there has been so much trouble over, and when he takes it he derives some benefit from it. But don't you do any more of that three-minute prescription business, my boy, if you want to become a first-class druggist."

A Small Favor.

Farmer (to lady)—Have you seen my bull? Lady—Mercy no! Where is he? Farmer—He got loose. And if you should see him, will you please keep on that there red coat and run this way!—"Life."

CANNOT FIND TIME

Mr. Chamberlain Cannot Visit Canada at Present

Ottawa, Dec. 10.—A prominent resident of the city has received a letter from a member of Mr. Chamberlain's family, which contains the following statements:

"I fear my father will be too busy to come out to Canada in the next twelvemonth, or indeed, until this campaign has been fought to a finish. Great Britain is not unresponsive to the idea of Empire, as some would have you believe; on the contrary, the arguments of arguments which is winning over the people to a preferential tariff is that it will knit all parts the King's Dominions more closely together. The resolutions received from important bodies in Canada, and the speeches made by leading men have been most helpful. In short, we shall win, if not at the next election, then at the one following, and we shall respond to Canada's appeal while it is yet time. I hope it may be possible in the future for my father to bring the message to Canada himself."

AN ANCIENT ORDER

Charlottetown, P.E.I., Dec. 11—A couple of days after the post office had been removed to its present building a certain firm in this city received a post-card in their box from a well known merchant in the West, requesting them to send immediately, three barrels of tar. The order was filled and the tar sent. On looking over the post-card later the man who received the card noticed by the post-mark that it was just fifteen years old. The card had been loosened from some cranny by the workmen who are at present performing a surgical operation on the post office. A clerk picked it from the floor without examining it, and thus the incident occurred.

THE BANK OF OTTAWA.

We congratulate the General Manager of the Bank of Ottawa on the result of the year's operations, as set forth in the financial statement printed elsewhere. The showing is one that will be received with satisfaction by the public in general and the stockholders of the Bank in particular. The net profits, after providing for expenses of management, and making provision for interest due to depositors, unearned interest on current discounts, and for all bad and doubtful debts, amounted to $335,640.53. After paying dividends at the rate of 4 1-2 per cent, $19,836 in reduction of Bank premiums, and adding $100,000 to Rest Account, there remains the sum of $66,348.72, to be carried forward to Profit and Loss Account. The Rest Account, on Nov. 30, 1902 was $1,665,000 to which has been added premiums on new stock issued, $424,179.80, and transferred from Profit and Loss Account, $100,000, which makes the present balance $2,189,179.80.

Death of Mrs. English

It is with deep regret we record the death of Mrs. Mary English wife of Mr. John English, of Lakefield, which occurred at the residence of her son-in-law, Mr. George Manning, Water street, early yesterday morning. Deceased had been ailing for some time, but was thought to be improving, when heart failure suddenly caused her demise. The late Mrs. English was 49 years of age and was a constant member of the Anglican church. For a number of years she had resided at Lakefield. Besides her husband, Mrs. English leaves three children to mourn her loss. They are Mrs. J. Snelgrove and Mr. Robert English, of Carman, Man., and Mrs. George Manning, town. The funeral will take place from the family residence Lakefield.

OFFICERS WERE ELECTED

Womens Foreign Missionary Society Held Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society, of St. Paul's Church was held yesterday afternoon in the school room of the church, Miss Dickson, President, in the chair.

Miss Gregory, President of the Presbyterial Society of Toronto, was present, and delivered an interesting address on mission work.

Mrs. Magie, of town, read an excellent paper on "A Vision and a Message."

Reports from the Frazer Mission Band, and the Faithful Workers Mission Band. The following officers were elected:

President—Miss Dickson.

1st Vice-President—Mrs. Dennistoun.

2nd Vice-President—Mrs. McPherson.

Treasurer—Miss Kingan.

Secretary—Miss Alice Hall.

Leaflet Secretary—Mr. James Patterson.

Librarian—Miss Bertha Brown.

After benediction by Rev. Dr. Torrance the meeting terminated.

INCIDENTS OF THE DAY

—The Finance Committee of the council was booked to meet last night.

—The Dresden Sugar Company's factory may be moved to Peterborough.

—The statutary meeting of all municipal councils, except county, throughout Ontario, will take place on the 15th.

Wanted immediately—Furnished sitting room; two bedrooms (one single) with use of kitchen. Apply at the Times Office.

—To see Goods properly, you really must come during the morning hours —and it's worth while, too—so many really dainty and appropriate ideas for gifts. Times Bookstore.

It is said that both of the big Canadian Railways propose to forbid their employes from drinking, while on or off duty, on pain of instant dismissal.

—The Peterborough Sugar Company intend running an excursion to the beet sugar factories at Wallaceburg and Dresden on Tuesday next.

—The children's bazaar in behalf of the work of the Children's Aid Society was held yesterday afternoon at the residence of Mr. Robert Neill, Hunter st.

—Did you hear there was a rush Christmas sale of plants at Cobb's Aylmer street greenhouses, with prices reduced one-fourth?

—Hastings Star. A letter from Rice Lake district last week informed us that there were six inches of ice on that lake, and teams crossed on Nov. 28th. Last year there was no driving on the lake until the last week of December.

—The townships, which are pestered periodically by shamming prohibitionists, are refusing to entertain petitions for local option. Those people wouldn't vote for a temperance candidate under any circumstances. They are, and always have been, political humbugs.

—The Lakefield Curling Club will have one of the best open air curling rinks in Canada this season. The rink is being made in the Canal just south of the high level bridge. Mr. R. Alford has the work in hand and is making a good job of it. The ice will be lighted by electric light.

—Hastings Star—Colborne and Peterborough are organizing companies to establish cold storage buildings in these two places. A resident of Asphodel thinks that we should have a similar building in Hastings, as this is the shipping centre of this district. There is more farmer's produce shipped from Hastings station than from any other place on this branch of the G.T.R. We invite all interested in this project to discuss it through the Star.

—Mr H. D. Burnett of the Canadian General Electric Company, will give a lecture on Monday evening next in the School Room of the George street Church under the auspices of the Epworth League on the subject, "Ether Waves and Wireless Telegraphy." Mr. Burnett will have an apparatus arranged to demonstrate his subject and a most interesting event is assured. Preceding the lecture, a short musical programme will be given. The League would be glad to have a large number present to hear Mr. Burnett and all interested are cordially invited to attend.

—About two weeks ago Mr. Wm. Wilson, who lives near Fenelon Falls, found one of his best cows staggering about the barnyard in a somewhat hilarious condition, and inclined to have every cow in the barnyard take a "horn." A veterinary was called in, who on investigation decided that the animal was on a "corn jag." She had been given a liberal feed of dry corn in the morning, which fermented in the stomach, producing alcohol, and setting up all the symptoms that are said to go with a flask of "farmer's joy." Remedies were administered and the animal soon restored to a respectable condition, with no evil results, apart, perhaps, from the usual headache. As Mr. Wilson is a prohibitionist, his feelings can be better imagined than described.

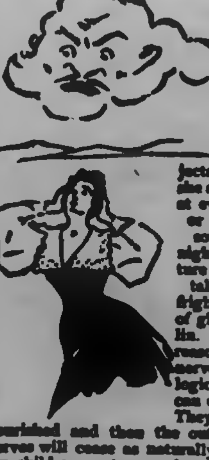
WEATHER NOTES

Friday—A little cooler.



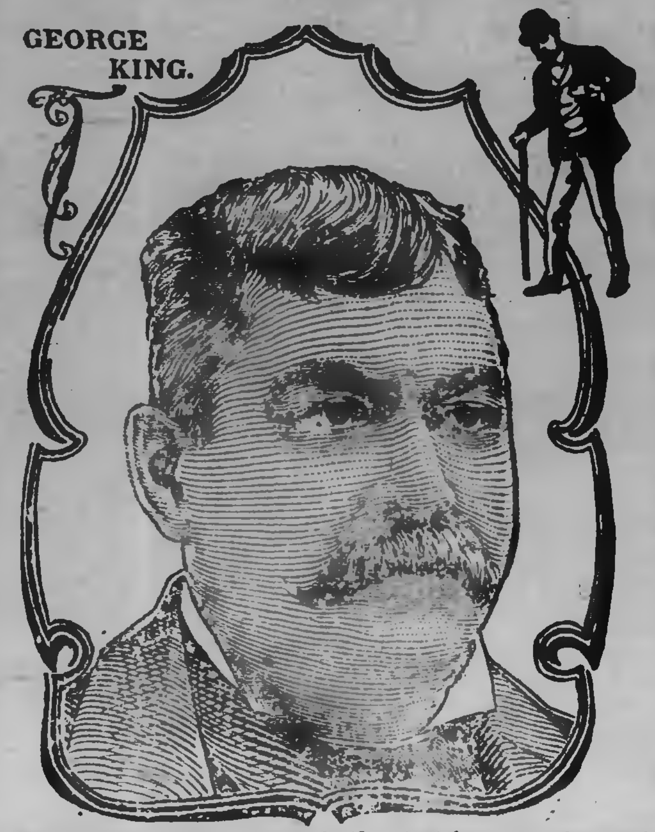
When a woman is nervous her imagination gives fantastic and threatening shapes to the most familiar objects. By day she starts in fear at every sudden or unfamiliar sound. By night the furniture of her room takes on affrighting forms of ghost or goblin. You can't reason with the nerves. Neither logic nor love can quiet them. They must be nourished and then the outcry of the nerves will cease as naturally as a hungry child ceases to cry when fed.

For nervous women there is no better tonic and nervine than Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It cures the diseases which produce nervousness in women, irregularity, debilitating drains, inflammation, ulceration and female weakness. It tranquilizes the nerves, encourages the appetite, and induces refreshing sleep.

"When I began taking your medicine I was not able to stand on my feet ten minutes at a time," writes Mrs. [illegible] [illegible], of [illegible] Spring Street, Nashville, Tenn. "Had [illegible] of uterus, and kidney and liver disease, and was so weak and nervous I could not keep still. Would take nervous spells and almost die at times. I had several different doctors attending, but they could not do me any good. The last one I had said I would never get up again. Told him that I was taking your 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and he said, 'Might just as well take that much water each day.' But I thought I would give the medicine a fair trial. Before I had finished the first two bottles I was able to get outside the house and walk around the yard. I kept on taking the medicines and they cured me."

Dr. Pierce's Pellets cure biliousness.

CATARRH DESTROYS THE KIDNEYS.



GEORGE KING.

MR. GEORGE KING, Deputy Sheriff of Rensellaer Co., N. Y., for years was a well known merchant of Troy. In a letter from No. 45 King St., Troy, N. Y., he writes:

"Peruna cured me from what the doctors were afraid would turn into Bright's Disease, after I had suffered with catarrh of the bladder and kidney trouble.

"Peruna is a blessing to a sick man. Eight bottles made me a well man and were worth more than a thousand dollars to me. I cannot speak too highly of it. It is now four years since I was troubled, and I have enjoyed perfect health since."—George King.

A Prominent Member of I. O. O. F. Threatened With Bright's Disease.—Pe-ru-na Restored Him to Health.

O. Fred Lindstrom, Past Grand Master Independent Order of Odd Fellows, writes from 1928 University Ave., St. Paul, Minn.:

"I contracted a severe cold several years ago, which from neglect developed into urinary trouble, and threatened Bright's disease. I used Peruna faithfully for three and one-half months, when my health was perfect once more. I have never had any trouble since."—O. Fred Lindstrom.

Catarrhal inflammation of the mucous lining of the kidneys, also called "Bright's disease," may be either acute or chronic. The acute form produces symptoms of such prominence that the serious nature of the disease is at once suspected, but the chronic variety may come on so gradually and insidiously that its presence is not suspected until after it has fastened itself thoroughly upon its victim.

GREAT BRITAIN'S FISCAL POLICY WILL LIKELY BE CHANGED

Hon. George E. Foster Arrives in Montreal From England.

UNITED EMPIRE IS A CERTAINTY

Canadian Statesman's Experience on British Platform.

Toronto, December 14.—Hon. George E. Foster has returned from England, where he has been assisting Hon. Joseph Chamberlain. Mr. Foster described his itinerary in England and Scotland, which covered the principal centres of population. Beginning on November 4, Mr. Foster spoke twenty times during the following thirty days. He roughly estimates the number of people who listened to him at about forty-five thousand.

Of course, he was thrown in close personal contact with Joseph Chamberlain. He dwelt for some time on the personality and characteristics of "The Great Missionary of the Empire." It is easy to see that Mr. Foster has a profound admiration for the plucky man from Birmingham.

In reply to the question, "What in your opinion are the most important results that will follow from the Chamberlain campaign?" Mr. Foster replied;

"One great result will be the thorough awakening of the British people to the importance and possibilities of the overseas dominions of the Empire. Though the knowledge of their existence has been long possessed in a dim sort of a way by the majority of the British people, it is only fair to say that with the exception of a very small number of the travelled, the commercial, and the official classes, no adequate conception of their resources, their capabilities, or their possibilities has been grasped by the mass of the intelligent people of the British isles.

"The discussion now going on brings all these points into relief, and impresses the insular Briton with the vastness of the colonial possessions, and throws into perspective their relative importance—great now, but greater far in coming years—when their rich resources are developed, and their wide territories more thickly populated. The conception of Empire is thus enlarged, and the absolute necessity of these possessions to Britain's future greatness and permanence becomes a conviction.

"Great Britain's area today is a mere dot on the map, compared with the area of her colonial possessions. Her population is more relatively large; a half century from this—and though the center of the Empire may remain the same—the body of it will be outside the islands in both resources and population.

"A second result will be a pretty complete and thorough commercial stock-taking, in which the old economic theories and new conditions, within and without Great Britain, will be thoroughly over-hauled. The challenge has never before been successfully given; now the people are laying aside all else comparatively, and devoting their energies to a searching examination of the fiscal problem, undeterred by the old shibboleths and the miscalled free trade theories in practice. Depend upon it, the whole matter will be threshed out to the last grain in the sheaf; and so far as I can see, the old system is doomed. Something new will succeed it.

"But, it may be asked, will the something new be the negation of free trade, and the substitution of Mr. Chamberlain's proposition, for moderate protection and imperial preference? The tendency is in that direction undoubtedly. How far it may carry and to what degree, puts one into the perilous field of conjecture, if not of prophecy. It it does carry, it will have far-reaching results.

WHAT WILL HAPPEN.

"It will give an immense impetus to the development and growth of the Colonies. They will have favored entrance into the greatest market of the world. Immigration will be stimulated towards the preferred countries, and production and trade will grow apace. The Mother Country will have preferred entrance into all the Colonial markets, which will tend to divert to her the trade now in part enjoyed by foreign countries. The home markets of the Empire will be largely kept for the members of the family. The community of interest and consequent co-operation of Britain and the colonies will be greatly enhanced. Consolidation and unity will result. In the scope of their great areas, everything that is necessary for manufacture, for living and for comfort and luxury can be produced, and the youth and energy of the Colonies, added to the skill and capital of Great Britain, will find the finest of fields for effort and progress."

Mr. Foster was asked if Mr. Chamberlain had a satisfactory measure of colonial support extended to him.

"Yes," he replied, "Mr. Chamberlain has the Colonies behind him, in his present effort. His eight years as Colonial Secretary gave him the intimate knowledge of their needs, their capabilities and their feelings. They have met the situation with promptness and definiteness. Canada, by statute, gives now a preference of one-third the duties on imports from the Mother Country; South Africa, of 25 per cent.; New Zealand, of from 20 to 50 per cent., and Australia has pledged herself to follow in the same line. This has been given without conditions, and more will be done if necessary, to seal the compact. So, at least, have the Colonial premiers, in conference, promised, and I have no doubt their people will support them."

"As to Mr. Chamberlain's chances of ultimate success I can only give an opinion. I believe them to be good. It may take some time; it may be speedily accomplished. To-day, the balance in support given by the London and Provincial papers, is largely in his favor. This in itself is a remarkable thing, considering that his campaign is not more than three months old. His appearances before the public resolve themselves into vast demonstrations which no building is large enough to contain; he has undoubtedly the sympathy and support of the majority of the Unionist party, and even Mr. Balfour's position of obtaining power to negotiate and, if necessary, to retaliate, is an endorsement of the principle of Mr. Chamberlain's proposals, though falling short in the extent of their application. Logically, it leads to the same goal. Everywhere the subject is discussed vigorously, other great questions are overshadowed by it, and as Lord Rosebery lately remarked, 'It seems impossible, or nearly so, to interest the public in any other question.'"

Mr. Foster was asked to outline in a general way something of the temper of the British audience; something of his personal experiences in coming in contact with great masses of people in the British islands.

"As to the British audiences," replied Mr. Foster, "I found them intelligent, quick to see points, responsive to arguments and appeal, and disposed to take a broad and serious view of their responsibilities in being asked to decide, as senior dominant partner, what the over-seas partners—juniors though they are—have cheerfully agreed to, and now leave 'up to them.'"

THE RUSSIAN SQUADRON IS AT A COREAN PORT

Its Presence There is Officially Admitted—The Troops Will Not be Housed

St. Petersburg, Dec. 11— The Government neither confirms nor denies the reports of the arrival of a Russian squadron at Chemulpo to coerce the Corean Government into refusing to open the port of Yongampho, but, inferentially, the report is true. On the other hand the Government denies that M. Pavloff, the Russian Minister at Seoul, has formally warned Corea against opening that port. It says, however, that the Minister asked the conditions under which it was proposed to open Yongampho, and received an evasive answer. The officials here profess ignorance of the alleged plan of the Russian admiral to land troops at Chemulpo. They do not believe that Admiral Alexieff, Viceroy of the Far East, despite the almost unlimited authority with which he is invested, would sanction such a serious measure without conferring with the central Government, and they accordingly dismiss the report as a sensational rumor. Diplomats likewise discredit it, remarking that such action would inflame the Japanese and force an issue which all are interested in avoiding.

CHINA'S CONFIDENCE SHAKEN

London, Saturday, Dec. 12 —A despatch to The Times from Pekin says that another St. Petersburg telegram has been circulated, announcing that Russia accepts Japan's demands regarding Corea, with certain modifications, the question of the evacuation of Manchuria being left in abeyance. The repetition of such a report and the delay are tending to shake China's confidence in Japan, and influential Chinese are becoming more favorable to the Russian demands regarding Manchuria.

[illegible], the only member of the Chinese Board of Foreign Affairs who speaks a foreign language, has entered into close relations with the Russian Legation.

CZAR'S PEACE COMMISSION.

Will Make a Final Reply to the Demands of Russia.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 11—The Imperial Commission which was formed recently for the purpose of examining into affairs in the Far East will meet on Dec. 20. The Czar will preside over the meetings. The commission will make a final reply to the demands of Russia.

THE DEMANDS AGREED TO?

London, Dec. 11—It was rumored on the Stock Exchange today that the Japanese demands on Russia in regard to Manchuria and Corea had been agreed to. The rumors were supported by buying orders from Berlin.

Boston After the Booksellers.

Boston Dec. 11—Three of the leading booksellers of the city were found guilty today in the Municipal Court of having sold or having had in their possession obscene literature, on complaints made by the Watch and Aid Society. A fine of $100 was imposed in each case.

DEVELOPMENT OF THE CANADIAN WEST

Mr. Wyte, of the C. P. R. Tells of Recent Progress.

100,000 MORE SETTLERS

Policy of Road is to Get As Much Land Quickly Settled as Possible.

Montreal, Dec. 11.—"The only way in which we can build up a great nation on this northern half of the American continent," said Mr. Whyte, of Winnipeg, the assistant in the West to the President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, "is by inducing a continued inflow of immigration. Both the Canadian Pacific Railway and the Dominion Government have done, and are still continuing to do, much in that direction. But much still remains to be accomplished. You have in the West an immense territory, sparsely populated, capable of sustaining many millions. Every settler brought in adds to the assets of the country. Each dollar earned or spent in the West adds to the wealth of the Dominion. The money must, however, be spent here. If the farmers buy their supplies from the United States, that does not benefit the Canadian manufacturer. If these supplies are delivered over the American railways, that is a distinct loss to Canadian lines.

The interests of the railways and the people as a whole are identical. It costs a railway between 60 and 70 cents to earn a dollar. All the money spent by the people on transportation over Canadian roads is, consequently, largely beneficial to the Dominion because at least 60 cents out of every dollar is returned to the people.

Mr Whyte says that business conditions in the West are as prosperous as ever. "The continued prosperity," he remarked, "is largely due to the continued influx of immigration, 100,000 of whom have been settled in Manitoba and the North-West Territories during the past year. That immigration is likely to continue. The development that has taken place during the past two years is only a short step in the progress that is sure to occur. Depend upon it the prosperity of the Eastern cities is almost entirely due to the settlement that has been witnessed in the West. And the part taken by the Canadian Pacific Railway in the attainment of these results has never been adequately recognized. British Columbia is also indebted to the North-West for the prosperity which is here. Every farmer who settles on the Western plains finds his first necessity the procuring of lumber to build his house and barns. All that lumber comes from British Columbia."

T. V. HOCKEY LEAGUE

Annual Meeting Held on Saturday Morning Last

The annual meeting of the Trent Valley Hockey League was held in the Oriental hotel on Saturday morning. The delegates present were—H. S. Garlick, W. Welsh, Bobcaygeon; J. McCabe, D. Devine Peterborough T.A.A.; C. S. Graham, Peterborough; J. F. Anderson, R. Pearse, Norwood; T. J. Wallis, Dr. McWilliams, Keene; G. C. Quackenbush, W. A Little, Warkworth; E. T. Rawson, R. D Keefe, Colborne; R. T. Scripture, D. W. Richardson, Brighton; B. H. Williams W. E. Pretz, Napanee; Belleville Bankers, represented by proxy; R. Bravender F. A. Gray, Lakefield.

Mr. W. Crowley occupied the chair in the absence of the President.

After the reading of the minutes, the Secretary's report was read and adopted.

The treasurer's report showed that the receipts during the last year were $262.15 and the expenditure was $228.35, leaving a balance of $33.80 to the credit of the league.

The question of admitting new teams to the league was then discussed. After some discussion on the subject Mr. Wallis moved, seconded by Mr. Welsh, that the new teams applying for admission be received. The motion was carried. The new teams are Napanee, Colborne, Brighton, Warkworth, Picton, Trenton, Belleville Bankers.

Mr Wallis said that several players of the Keene team of the past year had left town, and as Keene was only a small place, they felt that they could not put a team in the league. He asked that Keene be allowed to amalgamate with some other place and have a team under the name of two places.

Mr. Anderson said Norwood was in something the same position as Keene and thought they also desired to amalgamate with some other town.

Bobcaygeon and Lakefield representatives were heard from regarding their prospects.

Mr. Williams of Napanee, made a few remarks pertaining to hockey prospects in that town.

After some further discussion, the matter brought up by Mr. Wallis regarding amalgamation was left over to the executive. Both Keene and Norwood representatives stated that if it were at all possible, they would each put in a team.

The election of officers was then proceeded with and resulted as follows,

Hon Pres.—A. H. Stratton, Peterborough.

President—Mr. W. Crowley, Peterborough.

1st Vice-Pres.— C. Brown, Colborne.

Sec.-Treas.—R. S. Clarry.

Executive—W, H. Waller, Napanee; H. Phillips, Brighton J. F. Anderson, Norwood. J. R. McIntyre, Keene.

Before the vice-presidents were elected, it was moved by Dr. McWilliams, seconded by Dr. Bravender, that an additional office of second vice-president be added to the present list.—Carried.

The eastern districts were divided as follows: Picton, a bye; the winner of the Napanee, Deseronto and Belleville series to play Picton, and the winner of these two series to play the winner of the Trenton, Brighton and Colborne district.

The following board of referees was appointed—W. A. McIntyre, Bobcaygeon; J. F Anderson, Norwood; J. W. Redpath, Lakefield; J. T. Sutherland, Kingston; G. Quackenbush, Warkworth; J. R. McIntyre, Keene; J. E. Gardner, Brighton; 'Teddy' McMillan, Belleville. B. F. Rawson, Colborne, J. McCabe, Peterborough, G. Lynch, T.A.A, E. Deteau, Fenelon Falls.

NEXT YEAR'S CITY COUNCIL.

Our Readers are Invited to Name Their Candidates—Quite a Few Coupons Sent in Saturday afternoon and Evening.

For the second time this year our Municipal Voting Coupon appears below. The number of coupons left in our business office Saturday afternoon and evening clearly goes to show that The Times has made no mistake in again taking this step, and that we shall have the hearty co-operation of a host of Peterborough citizens in stirring up a lively interest in this year's elections. Of course it means considerable extra labor for us, but don't let that trouble you. The inherent characteristic of newspaper people is hard work in the public weal, and so long as our readers keep the ball a-rolling in the matter of sending in coupons and compiling a list of names for municipal honors which represent business ability, sterling worth, and a peculiar fitness for safeguarding the interests of so flourishing and progressive a community as the "City of Peterborough" to say nothing of our newborn Ward, we shall consider ourselves well-paid. And this brings us to another phase of the situation. Ashburnham has discarded her independence in controlling her own civic affairs, and will on the first Monday in January, 1904, blossom forth as "Ward No. 5, Peterborough." And as our electorate do not vote under the Ward System, the candidates from Ashburnham must abide the shock equally with those from Wards Nos. 1, 2, 3 and 4. Now as it is quite natural that Ashburnham electors would be anxious for one or more of their residents to sit on the first Council Board of greater Peterborough, would it not be a gracious act on the part of the citizens of Peterborough to so mark their ballots as to assure the election of one or two candidates from across the river. We think so, especially as in Ward, No. 5 there may be found men whose knowledge of civic government and executive ability, eminently fits them for public confidence.

More coupons, please, daily increasing interest in the coming fray, and a list of nominees, which will form the nucleus of a very desirable Council for 1904.

WONDER OF WORLD IN RAISING OF GALVESTON

Task of Establishing a New Grade and Lifting All Buildings

Galveston, Tex., Dec. 12—Bids for raising the grade of the city—a task which promises to take its place as one of the nine wonders of the world—were opened today by the board appointed by the governor. The lowest bid is from P. C. Goedhart and Linden W. Bates of New York, who offer to do the work for 18 1-2 cents per cubic yard.

There are approximately 11,000,000 cubic yards of filling to be placed in order to raise the grade on the city on a level with the sea wall. It will cost the county under this contract nearly $2,000,000 for which the city will issue bonds.

The plan proposed by Goedhart & Bates is to construct a canal about 20 feet deep from the bay side and about 300 feet from the sea wall. They are prepared to commence work in thirty days and finish in three years. Colonel C. S. Riche, United States engineer and Geo. W. Boschke, engineer for the sea wall, recommended the award.

JOHN T. CULVERWELL DEAD

Engaged in Real Estate Business in Toronto Since 1874

Toronto Mail and Empire—In the death of John T. Culverwell on Friday last at his residence in Toronto, in his [illegible] year, Toronto loses one of its old and respected residents. Mr. Culverwell's health was undermined through two long attacks of la grippe some five years ago, and the last six months he failed rapidly resulting in an attack of paralysis some ten weeks ago.

He had been engaged in the real estate business in Toronto since 1874, though not at all actively during the last five years. Previous to the real estate depression before 1890, Mr. Culverwell was one of the largest real estate operators in Toronto, both as owner and broker, and was also recognized as one of the leading valuators of Toronto real estate.

As a young man he made a success as a flour mill and water-power engineer. In 1866 he moved to Toronto, soon engaging in the wholesale grain business, one of his warehouses being on Colborne street on part of the site of the King Edward Hotel. During that time he was a member of the old Toronto Corn Exchange.

John T. Culverwell was born in 1836, in Devonshire, England, a son of the late James Culverwell, J.P., the family coming to Canada in 1841. He married, in 1859, Ellen, a daughter of the late Samuel Trent, J.P., formerly of Somerset, England. He leaves a widow, one son and five daughters, viz., John Alexander, of Peterborough, managing director of the Central Ontario Power Co.; Caroline, wife of Philip Dykes, of Toronto financial and insurance broker, formerly branch manager Merchants Bank; Lillie, wife of A. R. Blackburn, of Toronto, director and sales manager of Nordheimer Piano Company and organist in Holy Trinity Church; and three unmarried daughters, Isabella, Anna and Bessie, living at home.

Mr. Culverwell was a member of the Church of England, and a Freemason. The funeral will be private.

PASTOR CUTS HIS SALARY

Shares Misfortune With Flock Whose Wages Were Reduced

Fall River, Mass., Dec. 12—Rev. E. J. Bodman, pastor of the Vogle street Christian church, tonight announced he had voluntarily cut down his salary 10 per cent. to correspond with the reduction in wages of his mill hands who compose the bulk of his congregation. His salary is $360 a year. He has asked the trustees to deduct $36 for the coming year.

EX-DIPLOMAT'S SON TO HANG

Shoots Cousin who Loved Another and Must Suffer

Birmingham, Ala., Dec. 12—After a trial lasting three days, Ralph Armstrong, son of the late Colonel H. Clay Armstrong, who was United States Minister to Brazil under President Cleveland, was found guilty today of murder and sentenced to be hung. Young Armstrong shot his cousin, Alice Armstrong, Oct. 24, because she refused to break her engagement with an Atlanta man and marry him. Armstrong claimed to remember nothing about the fatal night, and his lawyers pleaded mental irresponsibility. The case was pushed to a trial to prevent a lynching. An appeal is probable.

FLORA FLOATED

Victoria, B.C., Dec. 11—H.M.S. cruiser Flora, which crashed into Village Point a week ago, was floated yesterday morning.

MUST PAY PREFERENCE

London, Dec. 11—Faithful Begg, ex-member of Parliament, speaking at the London Chamber of Commerce dinner, last night, said the basis of Mr Chamberlain's proposals was that Canada should contribute her share towards imperial defence, and if she did not absolutely nothing could be done in the way of a preference. Loud applause from the members greeted this statement.

AID BRITISH COTTON

London, Dec. 11—An imperial grant in aid of cotton growing in British West Africa will be proposed during the coming session of parliament. The recent excitement in Lancashire caused by the report of the Agriculture Department, at Washington of a shortage in the American crop is being utilized as a reason why every effort should be made to render the British cotton trade independent of shortages in the United States.

GREAT LOSS OF LIFE, MANY PERISH IN COLLISION

Patras, Dec. 11.—Very disastrous was the collision which took place in the harbor of Ithaca on Tuesday morning at 6 o'clock, about one and a half miles from land, between the competing Greek coasting steamers Pylarus and Assos, plying between the Piraeus and Kravassara.

It is alleged that both vessels were going at a high rate of speed in the very narrow neck or channel leading to the port of Vathy. The Assos pierced the side of the Pylarus in the second cabin, making an immense cavity, and the vessel began to go down by the stern almost immediately.

The large loss of life first reported—some thirty-five in number—has been materially reduced by the latest news, and it possibly does not exceed twenty, although it is difficult to obtain a correct list, as third-class passengers are not booked before going aboard.

Several bodies have been washed ashore, and it is thought that more will be found in the sunken ship. The harbormaster of St. Maura, Doncan, is among the lost. The reported suicide of the second officer who was in charge of the Assos is not yet confirmed.

The damage to the Pylarus is estimated to be about 500,000 drachmas, —$100,000—She was uninsured. The Assos escaped with small damage, and is expected in this port soon.

The Greek Government has sent divers, pumps, and other assistance to the ill-fated Pylarus, and the principal officers of both ships are being held for an investigation.

CURE FOR DUMPING AND NOT BY RETALIATING

Sir Wm. Harcourt Fears Colonial Invasion of Markets, How Would England Gain?

London, Saturday, Dec. 12—Sir William Vernon Harcourt asked a deputation from the steel works, Ebbwvale, yesterday, if protection prevented dumping by Germany and America, what guarantee was there that Canada and Australia would reciprocate on Mr. Chamberlain's lines? How were they to deal with Canadian dumping of iron? Dumping could not be cured by retaliation. There was nothing more destructive to many self-reliance than the insinuation that Canadians must be bribed to do their duty as citizens of the Empire.

Mr. Chamberlain's national tie was a tax of forty millions of people to benefit Canada, but there was no answer to the question what England would get in return. Instead of a corn tax, making the Empire self-supporting, it would raise a fresh competitor against the English farmer. The position of the colonies was that they were willing to raise the tax against foreigners, but not to taxation on British goods.

Quotes Former Speech.

Sir William drew a parallel between a speech delivered in Birmingham on 1886 by Joseph Chamberlain and the present policy of the former Colonial secretary. In 1886, said Sir William, Mr Chamberlain spoke as follows "It is improbable that the working classes of this country will ever again submit to the sufferings and misery enflicted by the corn laws. If this is the policy of the Tories, we have only to recall the history of the times when protection starved the poor and the country was brought to the brink of revolution.

Sir William said he would "leave Mr. Chamberlain with his present and historical conscience and dismiss that gentleman's immediate policy. He did not think it worth while to take up time with Mr. Balfour's plan. The Government this time was nothing that could really be called a Government It was, Sir William said, "only a derelict wreck of fortuitous atoms which had lost its best officers, and was being washed about by waves, over which it had no control.

Mr A. Jones, M.P., speaking under the auspices of the tramway Association yesterday, said that the proposed Chamberlain zollverein was untenable. In the case of Canada everything pointed to the United States, not to England, as her commercial associate.

Right Hon. W. H. Long, M.P., Glasgow, said that Canadian trade to England had doubled under the new preferential system. It was an indication of the success of the preferential policy.

The Standard, referring to the speeches of Sir Richard Cartwright and Mr. John Charlton, says that if Mr. Chamberlain has assumed that the imperial system can only be saved by drawing the links of trade closer, the answer he receives from representative Canadians is that the only advantage they anticipate from his proposal is better access to the markets of the United States.

Tokio, Dec. 12—The Diet has been dissolved. Hopes had been entertained in official circles that in view of the extraordinary nature of the step taken by the Lower House in its reply to the speech from the throne, the vote on the reply would be reversed. The allied parties, however, at meetings held outside the Diet, decided the action taken should not be reversed, and the dissolution followed.

PREPARING FOR WAR.

Ottawa, Dec. 12—Mr. S. Famura, of Kope. Japan, who arrived in Ottawa yesterday on a visit to the Minister of Agriculture, states that the Japanese nation are preparing for war. Japan wants Russia to answer the question, "Do you own Manchuria or does China?" If China is the owner Japan wants to know why Russia does not evacuate the territory. If Russia claims the territory it becomes a casus belli.

"Japan is prepared for any emergency," said Mr. Famura. "Our people have been preparing for eventualities for many years past and are now ready. Russia is not ready, and is seeking for delay. The announcement that the Japanese Diet will be dissolved means, I think, that the Emperor wishes to have behind him a unanimous Parliament.

CONSIDERABLE MODIFICATIONS.

London, Dec. 12—It is forecasted that the final proposals of Japan are considerable modifications of the claims made in the last note. The dissolution of the Diet leaves the Cabinet with a freer hand in the negotiations.

FRIENDLY WITH RUSSIA.

Pekin, Dec. 12—Prince Ching informed the Ministers in an audience yesterday that he was not negotiating with Russia, and that the Government was merely awaiting events. It is known, however, that Lienfang, First Secretary of the Board of Foreign Affairs, and who represented the Foreign Office during former negotiations, is paying frequent visits to Russian Minister Lessar.

THOMPSON ROASTED.

London, Dec. 12—The Daily News, referring to Phillips Thompson's letter on the state of the Canadian labor market, says it is remarkable that such a sustained effort should be made to diminish the flow of emigration to a rich and growing country and gives an extended reply to the letters by the Canadian Commissioner of Emigration.

Ottawa, Dec. 12—The Imperial Government have agreed to an extension of Canada's powers of autonomy. They have consented that Canada shall, if she chooses to do so, appoint a Canadian to take command of the militia of the Dominion. This most interesting piece of intelligence came yesterday in the form of a cable to the Prime Minister from Sir Frederick Borden.

It will be remembered that the Minister of Militia was called to England to discuss with the Secretary of State for the Colonies and the Secretary of State for War the provisions of the bill to amend the Militia Act which Sir Frederick Borden submitted to the House of Commons at the recent session. As the law now stands, none but an officer of the Imperial army can be given the command of our militia. Sir Frederick and his colleagues felt that this was a restriction or limitation which might well be done away with. This feeling was not prompted by any desire to get rid of an imperial tie, but it was thought that if in future a Canadian officer were found to have the experience and qualifications for the position, the Government might like to appoint him.

Jarring and Friction.

Certainly, with a Canadian if the office, thoroughly in touch with Canadian conditions and sentiment, there could not be a recurrence of the jarring and friction which have accompanied the regime of some Generals from England in the past.

Other provisions of the bill do away with the regulations under which imperial officers serving in Canada, of the same rank as Canadian, take precedence over the latter; even though the appointment of the former is of more recent date; and also enables the Dominion Government to confer the rank of Brigadier-General. At present the highest Canadian rank is Colonel. Sir Frederick Borden's message states that in every respect his visit to England has been most satisfactory. This evidence of the desire on the part of the Imperial Government to meet Canada's wishes gives great satisfaction here.

Washington, Dec. 12— Mr. McCreary, in the course of a speech in the Senate, on the Cuban Reciprocity bill, yesterday, referred at some length to the agitation for a protective policy in Great Britain, which he said had been induced by our own tariff policy. "If," he said, "under the able and accomplished Mr. Chamberlain a law should be enacted closing the markets of that country by as high a tariff rate as our own, and if Great Britain should allow free trade with her colonies, it is not difficult to see what the result would be."

Trinidad. Colo., Dec. 12 —The sheriff, with a posse and bloodhounds left at 8 o'clock to-night on a special engine, for Primero in response to a message that five nonunion miners going from Derwind Primero were ambushed on the trail this evening. One of the nonunion party was shot in the foot, but made his way to Primero and gave the alarm. He did not know whether or not the rest of the nonunion men had been killed or wounded, but they had not arrived at Primero at 9 o'clock tonight. The sheriff will be joined by fifty deputies at Primero.

Lima, Peru, Dec. 11,—The Peruvian Government has promulgated a law by which, after 120 days from date, boiler tubes, manometers, steel axes and all the principal pieces used in the construction of machinery will be admitted into Peru free of duty.

You Pay Only if Cured

A Detroit specialist who has 14 certificates and diplomas from medical colleges and boards, has perfected a startling method of curing the diseases of men in their own homes; so that there may be no doubt in the mind of any man that he has both the method and the ability to do as he says, Dr. Goldberg, the discoverer, will send the method entirely free to all men who send him their name and address. He wants to hear from men who have stricture that they have been unable to get cured, prostatic trouble, sexual weakness, varicocele, lost manhood, blood poison, hydrocele, emaciation of parts, impotence, etc. His wonderful method not only cures the condition itself, but likewise all the complications, such as rheumatism, bladder or kidney trouble, heart disease, nervous debility, etc.

The doctor realizes that it is one thing to make claims and another thing to back them up, so he has made it a rule not to ask for money unless he cures you, and when you are cured he feels sure that you will willingly pay him a small fee. It would seem, therefore, that it is to the best interests of every man who suffers in this way to write the doctor confidentially and lay your case before him. He sends the method, as well as many booklets on the subject, including the one that contains the 14 diplomas and certificates, entirely free. Address him simply

Dr. S. Goldberg, 208 Woodward Ave., Room [illegible] Detroit, Mich., and it will all immediately be sent you free.

PETERBOROUGH, DECEMBER 14, 1903

THE BATTLESHIP PURCHASE

One of the advantages Britain enjoys is that in the event of a sudden crisis she has the opportunity of recruiting her naval strength very considerably by taking over the warships always building in her various ports for foreign powers. The contracts made by shipbuilders provide for the British Government having this option. It will be an interesting point as to the view taken by the Cabinet of the immense crisis in the Far East to note what course the Admiralty takes regarding the two battleships building on the Clyde for the Chilian navy; they are not of the type preferred by the British constructors, and the importance of the uniformity in type and speed has been abundantly proven by the recent manoeuvres of the navies of Britain, the United States, France and Germany.

It may be also mentioned as a sign of the times that the plans of the latest type of battleship ordered by the British navy were suddenly altered a short time ago, the size being reduced so as to admit of their going through the Suez Canal. At the time of the previous crisis in Eastern affairs there was only one battleship on the Mediterranean station which could be hastily sent to reinforce Admiral Seymour's fleet in Chinese waters, on account of the great draught of water of the battleships of that day. One large boat went ashore off Port Said and had to be lightened before she could negotiate the little strip of water which connects the Mediterranean with the Red Sea.

It seems probable, in view of such considerations, that the action of the Government was taken with the object of preventing Russia and Japan from strengthening their present naval forces. Perhaps it is felt that they may thereby be kept from disturbing the peace.

WONDER OF WORLD IN RAISING OF GALVESTON

Task of Establishing a New Grade and Lifting All Buildings

Galveston, Tex., Dec. 13—Bids for raising the grade of the city—a task which promises to take its place as one of the nine wonders of the world—were opened today by the board appointed by the governor. The lowest bid is from P. C. Goedhart and Linden W. Bates of New York, who offer to do the work for 18 1-2 cents per cubic yard.

There are approximately 11,000,000 cubic yards of filling to be placed in order to raise the grade on the city on a level with the sea wall. It will cost the county under this contract nearly $2,000,000 for which the city will issue bonds.

The plan proposed by Goedhart & Bates is to construct a canal about 20 feet deep from the bay side and about 300 feet from the sea wall. They are prepared to commence work in thirty days and finish in three years. Colonel C. S. Riche, United States engineer and Geo. W. Boschke, engineer for the sea wall, recommended the award.

An Interesting Relic.

The Novelty, one of the three locomotives constructed over seventy years ago as the result of a competition promoted by the Liverpool & Manchester Railway Company, has just been discovered at Rainhill, Lancashire. The three engines which took part in the 1830 trials were the Rocket, constructed by Stephenson, the Sans Pareil, by Harkworth, and the Novelty by Messrs. Braithwaite & Ericsson. The Rocket obtained the premium of £500 as the most suitable locomotive to run on the line, having attained a speed of twenty-nine miles per hour. The greatest speed of the Sans Pareil was less than twenty-three miles, and the Novelty had only covered three miles, when the joints of the boiler gave way. At that time the Rainhill Gas & Water Company's premises, which adjoin the railway at Rainhill station, were occupied by Mr. Melling as engineering works, Ericsson & Melling being friends. The former left the Novelty there after its failure to gain the prize. The Rocket and the Sans Pareil are both in South Kensington Museum, but the whereabouts of the Novelty could not be traced until recently, when it was found still working as a stationary engine, the wheels having been removed. This interesting relic will, in all probability, be placed side by side with its contemporaries at South Kensington.

A New Experiment.

The hull of the old battleship Belleisle which has rested for five weeks on the mud in Portsmouth Harbor, was raised yesterday, says The Graphic of October 9, and taken into dock. Experiments were conducted on September 4 with the object of testing the resisting qualities of a new celluloid preparation against torpedo attack. A torpedo was attached to the hull and fired by electricity, inflicting such extensive injury that the vessel had to be run ashore on the mud immediately. Since then efforts have continuously been made to raise the Belleisle and bring her in for examination. It was, however, found to be almost impossible to deal with the mud that oozed through the rent in the vessel's side. Yesterday morning a new experiment was tried, compressed air being pumped between the ship's bottom and the mud on which the Belleisle lay. The experiment had the desired effect, and the vessel was raised and carefully towed into the dockyard, being placed in the south dock. Yesterday afternoon the water was run out of the dock, and it was seen that the torpedo explosion had done very considerable damage, many plates having been bodily torn away.

Billioius Dyspepsia

A DREADFUL COMPLAINT ACCOMPANIED BY HEADACHE, SICKNESS OF THE STOMACH, VOMITING THAT CAN BE PERMANENTLY AND QUICKLY CURED BY FERROZONE

Some persons have attacks of Billious Dyspepsia very frequently, and feel as if they were about to die. The whole system seems to collapse. The tongue becomes coated, the face a sallow pallor, and a bitter taste is always noticeable in the mouth. At times the bowels are very constipated, but occasional acute diarrhoea is caused by the accumulation of bile in the system.

It is highly dangerous to allow such a condition to imperil your life. It must be cured and the simplest and surest remedy is Ferrozone. It digests every particle of food eaten, and prevents the waste products from clogging up the system.

Ferrozone restores all deranged organs to a healthy, vigorous condition. It keeps the bowels well regulated, makes the kidneys eliminate all poisons from the blood, and supplies the necessary elements to build up and strengthen the entire body.

Mr. Louis Maslam, one of Peterborough's most enterprising and well known business men, during the past three years was an unceasing sufferer from Billious Dyspepsia. He was cured permanently by Ferrozone and is so anxious that all others may profit by his experience that he gives the following testimonial.

"About three years ago," says Mr. Maslam, "I had the Grippe which left me in a very run down condition that finally developed into Dyspepsia. I was unable to eat but a few things and had a craving for acid. I gave up treating with the doctors because they did not help me, and on the advice of a friend used Ferrozone. It not only cured by of Dyspepsia and Billiousness, but has built up my strength to what it was before I had the Grippe. I can recommend Ferrozone as an ideal restorative."

Ferrozone is capable of digesting all classes of food, and contains in a highly concentrated form the elements necessary for strengthening and reconstructing, and nourishing the stomach and other digestive organs. It is a builder of blood, muscle and fat, and makes sickly, weak, disheartened people strong and well. Ferrozone gives you force, energy, vim and spirit and cures every time. Sold by all druggists. Price 50c. per box or three boxes for $1.25. By mail from N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

A GRAIN TRADE CRISIS

(Winnipeg Commercial, Nov. 28.)

Another crisis has been reached in the grain trade of Manitoba and the West. The difficulty is the direct outcome of the unwarranted legislative interference with commercial conditions. The present demoralized situation in the western grain trade is not a surprise to those at all familiar with the conditions under which the trade is conducted. Indeed it is the inevitable which has happened. The Commercial long ago pointed out exactly what would be the result of an attempt to enforce the unreasonable restrictions which were then proposed, and which have since been put into effect. It will be simply impossible to handle the grain crop of Western Canada in anything like reasonable time, if the enforcement of recent legislation in regard to the distribution of cars is continued in effect. The law is unfair to the grain shippers, unfair to the railway companies, and unfair to the large majority of farmers, who are compelled by force of circumstances to ship their grain through or sell to the elevators. It is utterly unreasonable to expect any railway company to promptly supply cars for handling the crop while laboring under the disadvantages imposed by this legislation. It is unreasonable to expect dealers to continue buying grain when they have been deprived of the means of shipping the stuff by legislative interference with natural trade conditions. Under the existing legislation the elevator owner is in the same position as each individual farmer. The elevator owner may require a full train of cars, but he must wait till possible 100 farmers who have orders in are each served with one car before he can get a car.

It can be readily shown how this regulation is accountable for the car shortage. Under the old system a train load of cars would be sent out to Winnipeg say over one of the branch lines in the morning, and these cars would be distributed to the elevators along the line. By the time the locomotive had reached the end of the line these cars would be loaded with wheat. The engine could return almost immediately and pick up the loaded cars. Under the present system the cars would be distributed to individual farmers. Instead of having the cars loaded in a few minutes, as they could be if given to the elevators, the farmer is allowed 24 hours to load, after he is notified that the car is at his disposal. The railway company must notify the farmer that the car is ready for him, which is in itself an unreasonable obligation, and one which must cause great delays, as many of the farmers reside some distance from the shipping point. Then after this notification the farmer can wait 24 hours, and then perhaps decide that he will not load the car at all. The next applicant on the list is then entitled to the car, and the same routine of notification and waiting for the loading is repeated. To expect the railway companies to handle the grain trade of the west on this basis at all expeditiously is altogether unreasonable. The result is that the railway traffic has been greatly delayed, and the entire trade of the country made to suffer.

As regards the elevators, it seems unfair that the shipper who is prepared to handle expeditiously 5,000 or 10,000 or more bushels per day from each elevator, should be placed on the same basis as each individual farmer who decides to load a car and take on an average, say, two days to do it in. Taking into consideration the time lost in notifying the farmers, and the subsequent delays in loading, the average time occupied in loading cars in this way will probably be about two days.

The law works a hardship to the majority of farmers, who are naturally compelled to use the elevators. Many reside too far from the railway station to be in a position to load a car, or they have not sufficient of one grade to make a car lot. As the elevator is practically put out of business by the restrictive legislation, the farmers who are depending on the elevator are obliged to suffer inconvenience and loss.

It may sound very nice in theory, to say that the farmers who wish to load their grain direct should be given cars. But it is a condition and not a theory we have to face. The effect of trying to enforce this theory by legislation has been to compel 75 per cent. of the farmers, who wish to use the elevators, to wait, while 25 per cent. ship their grain by the slow process of direct loading. Meanwhile trade is demoralized and the commercial interests are compelled to suffer. Occasionally legislation may be necessary to correct abuses in trade, but as a rule the less legislative interference we have with normal trade conditions the better. In the case under discussion legislative interference has only resulted in bringing about a very serious situation.

The grain handling system of Western Canada is undoubtedly not equaled anywhere else in the world. It is a system which is admirably adapted to the requirements of the country, and which provides for the rapid handling of a vast quantity of grain during the short period between the harvesting of the crop and the close of navigation. Legislation which will cripple this system and retard its natural development cannot but be regarded as unwise.

Many of the most valued semi-precious stones have double lights. Thus the zircon shades from red or cinnamon brown to the brown that has tawny orange gleams. The peridot has tints of both straw color and the pale, yellow green of young garden plants.

Not all the charming colors of the topaz are the product of nature. The amber blue, white and yellow come easily to the jeweler's hands, but very few of the rose-pink are found, and chemical processes are resorted to to turn the ordinary yellow topaz to blushing pink. Even then the stone is apt to crack when subjected to heat. The results are uncertain, and so the rose-pink topaz, whether natural or artificial, is one of the costliest stones in the market.

One day, while Millais was engaged in painting his famous picture, "Chill October," among the reeds and rushes on the banks of the Tay, near Perth, a voice came over from the hedge:

"Man, did ye never try photography?"

"No, never," replied Millais, painting slowly.

A pause.

"It's a hantle quicker," said the voice.

"Yes, I suppose so."

Another pause.

"An' it's mair like the place."

It was in a Philadelphia public school, according to The Ledger, the other day, that a class in spelling was going on over a lesson in words of two syllables. One of the words was "mummy."

"Children," said the teacher, "how many of you know the meaning of the word 'mummy'?"

"Well, Maggie?"

"It means yer mother."

The teacher pointed out her mistake and explained fully the meaning of the word. Presently the word "poppy" had to be spelled.

"Who knows what 'poppy' means?" asked the teacher.

"Well, what's the answer, Maggie?"

"It means a man mummy," replied the child.

Kenneth is five years old, and attends kindergarten. He is very much interested in what he hears, as the following story will prove, says The Watchman:—

He went with his auntie to be fitted to a new pair of shoes. It was late in the afternoon, and as they waited for the salesman Kenneth noticed that the street lamps were being lighted outside.

"Why, Aunt Emily," he exclaimed, "is it dark?"

"Oh, not very," she replied.

"Oh, I see," said Kenneth, with a comprehending nod, "luke."

"What did you say?" asked Aunt Emily.

"Why, luke," repeated Kenneth, surprised that she had not understood.

"What do you mean by that?" inquired his aunt, still mystified.

"Why, you know what luke means; its middling, luke dark, you know, like luke warm, not real dark nor real light"

Dry Placer Miner, formerly of California.

This company has the right, without royalty payments, to use the new patent machine upon all the land it may own, acquire by lease, or operate, in Arizona. We invite special attention to the great commercial value and profit of this machine, and what can be accomplished by it.

What This Machine Will Do

For the first time in the history of gold mining a machine has been invented which will handle the dry placer gold gravel without water, and in large quantities. This machine will save 98 per cent of all the gold in the gravel, and will do it at a lower working cost than by any existing process. It is operated by a small, compact engine, using crude oil as fuel. A complete plant, capable of handling 200 tons per day will weigh less than 1,200 pounds.

To secure this gold only those placer lands could be worked, which could command large supplies of water, hence the immense bodies of dry placer lands remote from water have never been worked.

Fifteen Hundred Millions in Gold

The United States has yielded nineteen hundred millions in gold, of which fifteen hundred millions—or more than 75 per cent.—were the product of its placers.

Ninety per cent. of the world's total gold supply has been taken from placers by processes which have admittedly lost the bulk of the values.

Simplicity of Machine — Its Method of Operation

The machine is so extremely simple in construction and operation that any intending investor can operate it instantly. He can take a peck or more of sand, either ordinary house of sea sand, or such as is found in the placer lands of Arizona and California, put into this sand ten or a hundred pieces of gold as small as the point of a toothpick, and from that to the head of an ordinary pin, mix the sand and the gold thoroughly, turn them into the hopper or feed of the machine, and in a few seconds the machine will separate the gold from the gravel and recover from 98 to 100 per cent of the gold. It is an absolute, infallible, ocular demonstration of the merits of the machine. It has solved the problem of handling sand or gravel containing gold in regions remote from water.

Cost of Handling Material

Each plant is portable, weighs less than 1,200 pounds and can be easily moved by a few laborers.

The two greatest authorities in the world on the moving of material are "Haswell" and "Trantwine." They say in their standard publications that a laborer can shovel horizontally, 12 feet, vertically 6 feet for 50 feet haul 17 cubic yards in 10 hours.

A well known engineer in his work for the U. S. Government at Sandy Hook, moved 18 cubic yards, 100 feet haul in 10 hours at a cost of 10 cents per cubic yard, paying laborers $1.75 per day.

The dry placer gold-bearing sands of California, Arizona and New Mexico are handled quite as easily as those of Sandy Hook.

Ten laborers can easily supply one machine with 204 cubic yards of gravel in 12 hours, working at the same speed as shown by Haswell, Trantwine or at Sandy Hook.

Placer work on above basis would cost about 11 1-2c. per cubic yard.

Do You Want Monthly Dividends ?

We make a special offer of a limited number of shares of stock at this time, because the company requires immediately sufficient to build several machines to operate in the field.

Every machine at work will increase the intrinsic value of the stock.

Twenty machines in the field will increase the price and value of the stock more than double the present offering, and every additional machine means a further increase in price and value.

The Company intends to divide its net earnings every month, so that the stockholders may count absolutely on receiving monthly dividends in proportion to monthly earnings.

THE ROSE OF THE RING

"He won't like the country," Nellie said, a painful flush rising to her cheeks. "Duke will not care to stay with us, when he knows our movements."

"I shall write and tell him, my dear," Lord Rayne replied; "and if it will give him pleasure to make one of our party, he will be more than welcome."

Nellie was silent.

She rather dreaded this meeting with Duke.

They had been boy-and-girl sweethearts, and Duke had declared, a thousand times over, that nobody else should ever be his wife.

"As soon as I get my captainship, I shall claim my bride," he used to say to her, when he was fresh from Sandhurst, waiting for his commission. "I mean to be true to you, Nell, and, whatever happens, I shall never love any one but you."

She had not considered this a binding engagement, although she had shed some bitter tears on the day he set sail for India.

Time had softened down the childish grief.

Years passed, working manifold changes, and Captain Tremaine—Duke—returned, to find the girl he had hoped to win for his wife, the promised bride of another.

"She has forgotten," he had thought, bitterly. "She was only a child—and I—I loved her with a love that was to last a lifetime."

He had gone to her with cold words of greeting on his lips.

She should never know the love he had cherished for her all these years; she had forgotten, and he—well, perhaps, in time, he, too, might learn to forget.

A feeling of relief came over her when she was alone in her own room.

Flinging off her hat and cloak, she threw herself on her knees beside the bed and burying her face in her hands, thought of all that had transpired within the last few weeks.

How basely she had been deceived!

And she had believed his false words—listened to his earnest vows of love—vows only uttered to dupe her trusting ignorance.

The blow had struck her terribly, it was so hard to bear—it seemed as though all the gladness had gone out of her life, leaving only a dark void in its place.

Her brief dream was shattered already, and the hideous reality came with a dull shock; her pride was crushed in the bitterness of her humiliation, and her heart was broken.

For days she wandered about the old country house, taking no interest in what was passing around her—conscious only of her own blighted happiness.

The trees were bursting into bud when Captain Tremaine came and tried to win her away from her sorrow.

His cheery voice and bronzed, handsome face seemed to brighten up the old house, directly he entered within its walls.

Nellie was the only one who did not appear to notice the change his presence made.

She shrank from the half-concealed passion that lurked in his eyes, whenever they dwelt on her, and returned all the tender sympathy he bestowed upon her, with a chilling coldness.

Notwithstanding the coolness with which she checked all his advances, Duke hoped and waited, with a persistent patience that amused Lady Rayne.

As time went on, without bringing any change in Nellie's conduct, Duke lost some of his brightness; and, driven to desperation, he resolved, at last, to speak of his love to Nellie, and learn his fate from her, although he felt her answer would quench the faint hopes he still cherished.

"I will put an end to this uncertainty," he thought. "Things cannot go on like this forever. If she won't have me, I shall go away."

He walked moodily to the window, and looked out.

It was hard to have to give her up—harder than he had imagined it would be—and yet he felt, from her manner towards him, she would never care for him now.

"I wish I had never come back," he mused, gazing drearily out into the long garden. "I loved her before, but lately I feel as if I cannot live without her. "Good Heavens!" he added, suddenly, "Nellie is never going to ride that brute, Hunter!"

He left the room, and hurried into the grounds, where Nellie was preparing to mount a horse one of the grooms was holding with great difficulty; her own groom was already mounted, and waiting, looking half frightened but not daring to interfere with his young mistress.

Nellie guessed why Duke had come out, and fearing he might stop her, she sprang lightly into her saddle, and passed through the gates.

"You are not going to ride Hunter!" he cried. "Are you mad? I have told you before that the brute will throw you."

"And I found you have misjudged him," she replied, looking calmly down at him. "Please leave go of the bridle, Duke; surely I know best what I may do?"

"You shall not ride the horse," he said, his eyes flashing ominously.

She wrenched the reins from his clasp, and, before he had guessed her intention, had passed him like a flash, and Hunter was galloping down the road.

"Go on, I will follow you," Duke said to the groom, who lingered behind.

"There don't seem to be much the matter with Hunter," the man muttered, and he rode on until he had caught up to Nellie.

"You'd better wait a bit, miss," he said. "The captain's a-coming after you."

Nellie laughed a little, then urged her horse forward.

"Duke will have to catch me, if he wants me," she thought, glancing back over her shoulder, just as Duke and his horse appeared in sight. "He carries his authority a little too far; it is time I put an end to this persistent dogging of my footsteps. Why can he never understand the wide barrier that has been placed between us since we last met?"

She again glanced back presently, and saw that Duke was fast overtaking her—long afterwards she remembered how strong and full of vigor he looked at that moment.

She laughed defiantly, and even while her laugh rang on the clear air, Hunter, as if seized with a sudden frantic rage, tossed his head, threw back his ears, and darted off, at a mad uncontrollable speed.

The groom started in pursuit, but it was impossible for him to overtake the maddened horse.

"Wolf's Cave!" the man cried, huskily, as Duke dashed past him. "He's making straight for Wolf's Cave. You'll never save her now, sir."

It was true—Hunter was making straight for the precipice called Wolf's Cave.

Thread by Mouse Power.

Thrift is generally acknowledged to be one of the leading characteristics of the natives of Fifeshire, and it never was more forcibly exemplified than in the person of David Hatton, a native of Dunfermline, who actually proved that even mice, those acknowledged pests of mankind, could be made not only to earn their own living, but also to yield a respectable income to their owners, says "The Scotsman." About the year 1820 this gentleman actually erected a small mill at Dunfermline for the manufacture of thread—a mill worked entirely by mice. It was while visiting Perth prison in 1812 that Mr. Hatton first conceived this remarkable idea of utilising mouse power. In an old pamphlet of the time, "The Curiosity Coffee Room," he gave an account of the way in which the idea dawned on him. "In the summer of the year 1812," he wrote, "I had occasion to be in Perth, and when inspecting the toys and trinkets that were manufactured by the French prisoners in the depot there my attention was involuntarily attracted by a little toy house with a wheel in the gable of it that was running rapidly round, impelled by the insignificant gravity of a common house mouse. For a shilling I purchased house, mouse and wheel. Inclosing it in a handkerchief, on my journey homeward I was compelled to contemplate its favorite amusement. But how to apply half-ounce power, which is the weight of a mouse, to a useful purpose was the difficulty. At length the manufacturing of thread seemed the most practicable." Mr. Hatton had one mouse that ran the amazing distance of eighteen miles a day, but he proved that an ordinary mouse could run ten and one-half miles on an average. A halfpenny's worth of oatmeal was sufficient for its support for thirty-five days, during which it ran 730 half miles. He had actually two mice constantly employed in the making of sewing thread for more than a year. The mouse threadmill was so constructed that the common house mouse was enabled to make atonement to society for past offences by twisting and reeling from 100 to 120 threads a day, Sundays not excepted. To perform this task the little pedestrian had to run ten and one-half miles, and this journey it performed with ease every day. A halfpenny's worth of oatmeal served one of these threadmill culprits for the long period of five weeks. In that time it made 3,350 threads of twenty-five inches, and as a penny was paid to women for every hank made in the ordinary way, the mouse, at that rate, earned 9 pence every six weeks, just one farthing a day or 7 shillings and 6 pence a year. Taking 6 pence off for board and allowing 1 shilling for machinery, there was a clear yearly profit from each mouse of 6 shillings. Mr. Hatton firmly intended to apply for the loan of the old empty cathedral in Dunfermline, which would have held, he calculated, ten thousand mouse mills, sufficient room being left for keepers and some hundreds of spectators. Death, however, overtook the inventor before his marvellous project could be carried out.

Telegraphy Still Lives.

Every six months or so an inventor appears with a device that he is sure is going to put an end to the business of the telegraph operator and his old Morse sounder. Prof. Fleming, an expert associated with the Marconi Company, was lecturing before an audience at the Royal Institution in London. He illustrated his lecture with a message flashed directly from the Marconi station in Cornwall, through all intervening obstacles, to his table. He had taken pains to assure his audience that no one could possibly receive this message except with the instruments before it, which were the only set "in tune" with the sending instruments.

In the middle of the message as it came the word "rats" was interpolated. The audience was amused. Prof. Fleming was indignant. Rigid inquiry having proved that the senders in Cornwall were guiltless of the flippancy, Prof. Fleming wrote a wrathful letter to The Times, terming the interpolation "scientific hooliganism," and calling upon the perpetrators to reveal their identity.

In the next issue of The Times Mr. Nevil Maskelyne, a person whose business it is to amuse the public with scientific curiosities, confessed that he was the "hooligan." He also declared, as a fact of interest to the Marconi Company's shareholders, that the message had been practised for several hours, that fifty horse-power had been expended in getting it through, and that he had intercepted it and added to it with ordinary "untuned" instruments stationed in the neighborhood.

Would Not "Undress Ship."

The spirit of French officialism is illustrated by an incident told in the recently published life of Sir Henry Acland, says The Tablet. The latter, during a yachting trip to the coast of Brittany in [illegible], happened to be in port on the occasion of the blessing of the harbor and shipping by the priests. With natural good feeling, he dressed his yacht with all her bunting, with bouquets on bowsprit and counter, and a golden bunch of broom at her mast-head, so as to do honor to the ceremony by her gala turn-out. But this expression of sympathy with "clericalism" was not to the taste of the French authorities, and an official came on board with strict orders that the decorations should be removed. The curt order met with an absolute refusal, and the official withdrew, to return a quarter of an hour later with a still more peremptory demand for the hauling down of the obnoxious bunting. "In great indignation, Acland threatened to telegraph to Lord Lyons if another word was said on the subject, and the official withdrew to show himself no more. It appeared to be merely a display of spite on the part of the civil authorities, furious that any honor should be shown by strangers towards an ecclesiastical ceremony, and was a remarkable specimen of the unlovely bitterness of French sectarian strife." It was apparently a gratuitous piece of bullying on the part of the fonctionnaire, for it can scarcely be illegal for an Englishman to dress his own yacht with his own flags even in a French port.

The Girls of France.

Mr. H. B. Marriott Watson, the novelist, complains of the decadence of the "American girl," owing to idleness and lack of aim. Mrs. Philip Gilbert Hamerton brings the same indictment against the girls of France. Forty years ago, she writes, the French girl was modest, retiring, simple in dress, diffident in talk, and respectfully obedient to her parents—either from natural bent and the powerful influence of her surroundings, or through the discipline of education and the weight of public opinion in her own country. That some French girls were by nature coquettish, fond of finery and show, impatient of restraint and control, cannot be doubted, but when these tendencies did exist they had to be carefully hidden behind the outward appearance of a willing and contented self-effacement in all circumstances by every girl who wished to be thought "bien elevee." For the slightest deviation from this strict rule was sufficient to mark her as "mal elevee," and to banish her from the intimacy of all friends who wished to be "comme il faut." To-day, Mrs. Hamerton says, the modern French girl would be astonished were she told not to take the leading part in conversation, not to giggle loudly, not to set her arms akimbo, and never to talk privately with a young gentleman. "She would think," adds Mrs. Hamerton, "that such recommendations were perfectly ridiculous as preventing all possible flirtations, for the art of flirtation is never at its best unless practiced in private. But forty years ago, when parents deemed that marriage was not a proper subject for the thoughts of their daughters, 'flirtation—even as a word—was unknown in France. At that time simplicity in dress was the order of the day for young maidens, and even conferred a certain distinction, being carried as far as possible among the aristocracy. There were special light silks and inexpensive trinkets for jeunes filles, set with corals, enamels, and pearls, among which the tiniest of diamonds would never have been tolerated any more than costly laces, furs, or elaborate trimmings. At a glance it was easy to ascertain by the style of dress whether a young woman was married or not, whereas it is not by any means so easy now, the same satins, velvets, feathers, and jewels being worn alike in both cases. And it is not any easier to guess from the behavior in society, for it may happen that the conversation is taken up and carried on by the girls in their desire to shine and to attract attention—the married ladies being silenced and ignored in the midst of the excitement and amusement artfully created by free sallies, unrestrained laughter, and much attitudinizing. No doubt the conventional restrictions of forty years ago were somewhat excessive, and kept French girls till after marriage in a state of prolonged childhood; nevertheless, it remains to be seen whether the rapid change which has supervened is a real gain, for if it has remedied some evils of the old system, it has also engendered new ones, and on that account many thoughtful French parents are now seriously disquieted about the future of their daughters."

London to Have a Gay Winter.

The social outlook for the winter season in London is most promising now that the English royal family is out of mourning, and King Edward and Queen Alexandra have begun to entertain lavishly. The sisters of the King are also throwing off the mantle of sorrow. The papers comment enthusiastically on the recent brilliant dinner-party, followed by a ball, given on the Isle of Wight by Princess Beatrice, the widow of Prince Henry of Battenberg, the handsomest of all the "handsome Battenbergs." Her mourning for Prince Henry has been long and sorrowful, but she would have emerged sooner from the gloom that enshrouded her life for so many years had she been less the principal companion of Queen Victoria, and been allowed to follow the natural bent of her years, for of all the children of the late Queen there are none that seemingly love the pleasant things of this world more than her eldest son, King Edward, and her youngest daughter, Beatrice. According to the London correspondent of the New York "Herald," she is far more attractive than some of the younger members of the royal family in manner and appearance, although prone to stoutness, like Princess Christian, her eldest sister now living, and of late also the dispenser of considerable hospitality at her new, beautiful town house in Pall Mall. The most attractive of the King's sisters is Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll, whose London residence is Kensington Palace where her youngest sister, Princess Beatrice, has also had willed to her for life a suite of spacious apartments. Princess Louise has never acted as hostess to any great extent, and even since the accession of her husband as the sixth Duke of Argyll (who has nearly a dozen other hereditary titles in addition, and innumerable posts that increase his income), the expenditure of Princess Louise for purely social hospitality is very limited, both in London and at her Scottish seats.

Power of a Remark Overheard.

A man waiting patiently at the glove counter of a New York department store heard one young shopwoman say to another, as she handed down a box of gloves: "Maria told him downright she'd have nothing more to do with him; and she called him a poison-faced adder, he gripped her in the waltz that scandalous." This was all! Customers clamored for attention, and the confidence ceased at this point. But the force and richness of the language, the liveliness of the allusion, captivated the hearer's soul. He confessed that, for years afterwards, when he was waltzing with decorous reluctance under the compelling eye of his hostess, memories of Maria's partner would assail him, and he would find himself envying the adder the mysterious nature of his enthusiasm.—New York "Life."

Wasted Indignation.

"Let me see," said the minister, as he was making out the baptismal certificate, "this is the thirteenth, isn't it?"

"The thirteenth," exclaimed the indignant mother, "indeed, but it's only the seventh, and would have been the sixth, only two of 'em were twins."

"The thirteenth—of September," said the minister, mildly, and peace was restored.—Ex.

CONFEDERATION LIFE ASSOCIATION

—J. K. Macdonald, Esq., Managing Director Confederation Life Association, in sending cheque for $500.00 from his Company, says: "I am pleased to be able to be the medium of helping on so good a work."

Funds Urgently Needed

The financial reports for the year just ending show that to keep the doors of the Free Hospital for Consumptives open, maintaining the number of patients for which accommodation has been provided, not less than $25,000 is required for the year now entered upon.

Since the Free Hospital was opened (18 months ago) 224 patients have been received. The help the institution has been to these people—all from the wage-earning and poorer ranks of life—cannot be estimated in human language.

—Edward D. Heddon, Solina, Ont., on leaving the Free Hospital, writes: "I cannot speak too highly of the institution from which I have received so much benefit. I can but tender my best thanks for the kindness shown."

—Minnie Linklater, Hamilton, writes: "I have spent over nine months at the Free Hospital for Consumptives. I believe I have been greatly helped, and shall never hesitate to use my influence to further that good cause."

There is no endowment, excepting the provision made by three life insurance companies for six beds for the current year. Only by the continued contributions of the Canadian public can the work be maintained.

Patients are accepted from every part of the Dominion, and there have been in residence during the past year patients from Prince Edward Island on the east to the Northwest Territories on the west.

Contributions may be sent to SIR W. R. MEREDITH, KT., Vice-President National Sanitarium Association, or MR. W. J. GAGE, Chairman of the Executive Committee, Toronto, Can.

ST. NICHOLAS DAY.

CHRISTMAS tide has already long been ushered in, properly speaking, by St. Andrew's day (November 1), the introductory festival of Advent season. But all of them except Christmas day itself have faded into comparative insignificance, and gradually the St. Nicholas, Kriss Kringle, and Santa Claus myths, with the story of the Christ child, have gathered around the 25th of December in such "sweet confusion" that in it are concentrated the essence and beauty of all, and the former special gift-giving of other days of this season is mostly done away with, says the New York Evening Post. Even St. Nicholas day, December 6, is little celebrated. It seems a pity that the knowledge of American children should be so limited concerning their own patron saint, at least so canonized by the Greek, and Roman churches centuries ago. He lived during the fourth century in Patara, a city of Lycia, in Asia Minor, but his history proves his cosmopolitan, "popular" qualities, for he became patron saint of Russia; in England there are 372 churches named for him, and his tomb at Bari, in Italy, is a shrine for thousands of pilgrims every year. He became the protector of boys and girls, and even found his way to the hearts of sailors and robbers, and was adopted by them.

Gift giving on this day had its origin in the story of a nobleman of Patara who was too poor to dower his daughters, and they were thus forced to remain unmarried. St. Nicholas heard of this state of affairs, and one night stole unobserved to the house of the nobleman, seeking a way to give him of his own store of gold. The moonlight revealed an open window, and through this the good man flung a bag of money. This provided a marriage portion for the eldest daughter, while a similarly mysterious present the second night dowered the next daughter. The third night Nicholas was discovered by the nobleman, but the saint begged that his gifts might remain unknown to any others. Since that time it has been generally understood that sweetmeats and other trifles found in shoes or stockings set outside the door on St. Nicholas eve have been placed there by the jolly old gentleman himself.

In some parts of Germany Knecht Ruprecht, a modernized form of St. Nicholas, goes to houses on Christmas eve, taking gifts for good children and rods for the disobedient. He is sometimes called "Pelsnichol," or Nicholas with the fur. Some of the

A Wierd Gathering.

Midnight on a recent Saturday witnessed a weird and, in many respects, pathetic gathering in Cloudesley square, Islington. A mission had been announced in connection with the Holy Trinity Church, and the invitation was addressed to "the homeless, destitute, despairing and sorrowful," and they came in their scores. If there was a slight infusion of some others who had sought a palliative to their despair and sorrow, and hence made their way into the mission hall somewhat unsteady of gait, says The London Express, it was tactfully permitted to pass unnoticed. Most of the midnight comers were men, but there were some women, too—pale and haggard women who seemed eligible under all four heads of the invitation. On entering the hall each visitor was handed a cup of coffee and some cake, to an accompaniment of Moody and Sankey's hymns, sung by a party of ladies. Hymn books were then given out, and the guests were asked to call for any hymn they wanted to hear. The vicar, the Rev. T. Lancaster, rose to sing a solo, and they all wanted to help him. "What's the number, guv'nor?" they shouted. "Never mind the number," said the cheery vicar, "you'll know it when I come to the chorus." It was "Meet Me There," and they sang it with refreshing enthusiasm. At one in the morning the vicar gave them a short address, homely, cheerful and earnest, and when he had finished the early morning air echoed with shouts of "Bravo, guv'nor, bravo!" Half an hour later the strange party broke up, and each visitor was given a little nosegay as a memento. Mr. Robert Graham, the missioner, is hopeful of great results from these midnight meetings.

Wide Predictions.

Public Opinion (New York) views the question in this manner:—Russia and Japan are now face to face in the disputed regions of Manchuria and Corea. One has a wide choice of predictions as to what is going to happen next. London's opinion is that war between the two powers is merely a question of a few weeks; from Port Arthur comes a despatch saying that Japan is making no preparations for a war with Russia, while the continental opinion is that Russia will continue to nag Japan until she is forced to appear to be the aggressor. Of course, Russia did not evacuate Manchuria on the scheduled date, October 8. It was not expected that she would do so, and all the powers are grieved over this new evidence of Russian duplicity. No one proposes to do anything, however, except the United States, which has secured the opening of two ports to American trade. That these ports can only be entered by rowboats detracts a trifle from this latest diplomatic triumph of our State Department.

Equitable Gold Mining Co.

R. C. LANE, President. G. F. NORTON, Secretary and Treasurer.

Over $300,000 of development work already done. Main shaft 9 x 16 feet, down 700 feet. Over 3,000 feet of drifts, tunels and shafts showing immense ore body

Destined to become large and continuous dividend payer.

The Equitable Gold Mining Co.'s properties consist of three mines, known as the North Bonanza, Flowery and Kimbark. They are located in Six Mile Cañon, less than four miles from Virginia City, Nevada, which is the nearest railroad station.

Years ago, over three hundred thousand dollars of development work was done upon the mines—so they are not mere "prospects" but actual mines. This work was done under the personal supervision of competent engineers, and was paid for by the owners of the mines themselves; thus giving double assurance that the work was well done and that the expenditure was justified.

The Main Shaft (triple compartment, 9x16 feet in the clear) is down seven hundred feet. From this shaft, running along the vein matter, east and west, are four drifts, at different levels, having a combined length (including the little winze and the tunnel) of 2,850 feet.

In addition to the above there are four small shafts, with a combined depth of about 300 feet; 535 feet of tunnels, and at least 500 feet of crosscuts, upraises, etc.

All told, there is 4,650 feet of underground work—the most of which is in ore. Here is nearly one mile of openings in mineralized rock.

It is conservatively estimated by competent and reliable engineers and practical miners that there is developed an ore body of at least One Million Five Hundred Thousand Tons!

As a further evidence of the large amount of work done there is from 75,000 to 100,000 tons of ore on the dumps at the different surface openings—ore that, with modern cheapened processes, can be converted into gold bullion at a profit.

THE TITLE

Title to the Flowery and North Bonanza mines is by patent from the United States government, while the title of the Kimbark is by location and possession.

The Equitable Company obtained the Flowery and North Bonanza mines, both of which are patented, by purchase—the payments therefore to be made out of a share of the net proceeds of the mines. The Company has a written contract, duly recorded, for a deed, and is in possession of the properties, and is now operating them. The sum of $2,000 was paid on the contract, September 30th, 1902, and partial payments have since been made. The Company is entitled to $6.25 per ton as cost of mining and milling. One-half of all over and above this $6.25 per ton goes to the former owners till they receive the total sum of $106,000, without interest. There is no stipulation as to amount of work to be done within any specified time—and no proceeds, no pay. The Company can therefore pay it in one year or it can pay it in ten years. With this exception the Company is free from debt. Its policy is to pay as it goes. In this way it has no fear of financial embarrassments. The title to the Kimbark is by "location," under the mining laws of the United States. Work enough has already been done to entitle the Company to a patent, which in due time will be obtained.

Recent Development Work

Since the Company acquired the property, it has put up poles and wires for a distance of one mile for the transmission of electric power from the Truckee River Electric Power Plant. By this means unlimited power for mining, hoisting and milling is obtained.

It has built a dwelling house for the manager, a large boarding house for the miners, a barn, a power house and blacksmith shop.

It has put an electric hoist and skip into the 365-tunnell; has purchased ore cars and the necessary tools for mining purposes.

It has acquired the Kimbark ground, adjoining the Flowery and North Bonanza mines, and is now developing the property by driving a tunnel.

Storm King Group of Mines

TO CANADIAN INVESTORS

The property comprising what is known as the STORM KING GROUP OF MINES offers an attractive and safe investment. The property is the richest in the country and we believe it would be difficult to secure an investment that promises better returns. The following is a description of the mines written by Capt. A. M. Paul, whose reputation as an expert in mining matters is known far and near.

These properties are situated in the Cable Cove Mining District, about fifteen miles north of Sumpter, Oregon, and about one mile northwest of the Baby McKee mine, about two miles northwest of the Last Chance, the Alpine, the Imperial and the California mines.

The properties in this report consist of seven claims. The names of the seven claims being as follows: The Eureka and the Honest Dollar. These two claims are on the same vein. Adjoining these two claims and paralleling them on the northwest is another vein upon which there are two claims known as the Jessie and Golden Rule, and paralleling them on the northwest there is another vein upon which there are two claims, known as the Storm King and the Ozone. The last claim of this group lies to the northwest of the last two named, and is adjoining them. This claim is the Shannon Bell.

In making my report I will commence with the two first named claims of the group, the Eureka and Honest Dollar. The development on these claims consists of a tunnel ninety-seven feet in length, running along the course of the vein, showing two feet ten inches of ore in the top of the tunnel and a little over three feet in the bottom, which assays giving values of from $9.63 to $70 per ton in gold. About four hundred feet in a southwesterly direction there is a shaft on the vein ten feet deep, showing the vein to be from one to two inches wide on the surface and about twelve inches wide in the bottom of the shaft, in which assays give values of from $9.76 to $40 per ton in free milling gold ore.

This vein is exposed by small shafts and open cuts for a distance of fifteen hundred feet, and the course of this vein is north, ten degrees east, and the vein cuts the formation, showing it to be a true fissure, and the formation is granite. This vein shows in places a width of from ten to fifteen feet of mineralized matter, commonly called vein matter, but which is caused by hot solutions from below.

I will now pass to the Jessie and Golden Rule. There has been very little work done upon these two claims, there being one discovery shaft ten feet deep, showing crevice all sides of the shaft, and running in value of from $4 upwards. It is my opinion that with development, these, too, will prove valuable property.

The work on the Storm King and Ozone consists of a tunnel near the point of discovery and is driven along the vein for a distance of one hundred and eighty feet, showing ore all the way from the surface to the face of the tunnel, and averaging in width from six to eighteen inches. Three assays give the following values, $12.30. This being a general sample taken from the dump. The other two assays are $62.63 and $79.06 respectively, this being the assorted ore for shipment. The course of this tunnel and vein are north, ten degrees west, and the vein cuts the trend of the formation obliquely (which is granite) and by driving this tunnel five or six hundred feet on the present course it will intersect a quartzite reef (which is running north, twenty degrees east) which would make this a contact vein between granite and quartzite, and should produce a large body of ore, at the intersection of the contact.

The only work done upon the Shannon Bell, the last claim of this group, is the location work, and is not enough to allow of a report being made.

There is water for power purposes one mile from the property, and timber on the ground, of a very fine quality, sufficient to run the mine for many years to come.

All the assays mentioned in this report were made by the assayer of the Imperial mine at my request, and the ore was taken by me from the properties mentioned.

I will state that I have been a practical miner since 1870, and am now the manager and superintendent of the Imperial mine in this district.

(Signed) CAPTAIN A. M. PAUL.

For Stockmen.

Sawdust is one of the best substances that can be used in the pig-pen, and it is also excellent in the stalls. While sawdust does not quickly decompose, yet it is an excellent absorbent, and in time is reduced to its original elements. It is clean, easily handled, and is not bulky, while its odor is not disagreeable. It also serves to keep the manure in a finely-divided condition.

Every farmer sometimes has a good cow—one above the average—in his herd, and he does not fail to notice her superiority. When such is the case the cow should be a standard by which to gauge all the others. The object should be to have no cows that do not equal the best one. Sell off the inferior ones as fast as calves from the superior cow will replace them. Use pure-bred sires, and do not attempt to improve the herds by buying elsewhere.

Ventilation of stables in winter is a matter which requires judgment. When a stable is ventilated it means that the cold air comes in. How to ventilate is a problem, both for dwelling houses and stables. A window left open, or a top flue to admit air, may serve the purpose as long as the wind is blowing from a certain direction, but when the wind changes the result will be a direct cold draught on the animals that may cause pneumonia. Cracks and crevices in the walls are more dangerous than open windows.

Coupling the Flock.

J. A. McDonald, Hermonville, P. E. I., writes:—The season is near when the ewes must be coupled if full profit is to be made from the flock. The early lamb is worth twice as much as the late one, and is more safely reared. Thus the choice of the ram and its introduction to the flock is a timely matter for consideration at the present moment. As to breed, it does not matter very much, unless this is a main point in keeping the sheep. If the flock is pure bred, of course, the breed is to be kept up, but even then it is good policy always to get a ram from another flock than from your own. This is an axiom which pertains to all classes of live stock—that is, get a pure bred male from some other flock or herd once every two years, and, if circumstances permit, get an imported male rather than a home-bred one. The ordinary farmer breeder will not, however, probably need to get an imported animal. He can get something good enough from those who make a business of supplying first-class males for breeding purposes. Close breeding is more disastrous to sheep than to cattle or hogs.

The best results are obtained by choosing a sound, well-formed, vigorous animal, rather than a bigger one without these qualities. This is an axiom which also works with other classes of live stock besides sheep.

The fleece is to be studied, for the lambs will take after the ram in respect to wool mostly, if the animal is from a good flock. Choose a well-formed, solid-bodied ram, with short legs and small, well-shaped head. The age of the ram is of great importance, for upon this to a very great extent will depend the sex of the forthcoming lambs.

There are many supposed laws of breeding. One of them is a wise provision of nature for the preservation of the species. When any race is in danger of extermination for any cause this law will operate to secure the extension of its existence in some way. When food is abundant and the race is vigorous we expect it to increase most rapidly. Then the younger males, active and full of energy, monopolize the females and drive off the old males. The result is a much greater proportion of female births than of male, even to the extent of three to one. On the other hand, ewes served by an old ram produce an equal proportion of male births. The breeder, then, who wants his flock to increase will choose young, vigorous rams, and will feed the flock liberally, so as to preserve the conditions suitable for rapid increase of the stock. The breeder, on the other hand, who makes his profit from young rams which he sells, will follow the opposite course, and so increase his income from a surplus of those to be disposed of.

Probably the months of March and April will be the periods when most people want the lambs to come, while there are not a few in the north and east who consider May early enough. This is a matter, of course, for individual consideration. The period of gestation in the ewe is five months. November coupling, therefore, means April lambs; December, May lambs, etc.

Good feeding of both ewes and ram from this time on is a desideratum, and the presence in the flock of a sturdy young ram, under two years of age. It is essential that he be well grown and matured. A ram eight months old may be used, if it be growthy and vigorous; but one twice as old is greatly to be preferred.

Feed oats and wheat bran in preference to corn, for nitrogeneous food will be the best stimulant for the ewes, and there is no grain that so stimulates the sexual system as oats. Fat is not desirable at the breeding season. The aim should be in both ram and ewes to get flesh and a strong nervous condition. The ewes should receive a half pint of oats and the same of bran every day from now on, while a pint of whole oats and as much bran a day will not be too much for a vigorous young ram. If the ewes are not in breeding condition, on account of neglect or poor pasture, or undue exposure, one or two grains of cantharides given to the ewes will usually bring them into condition for prompt breeding, provided it is observed they are lax in this respect. With intelligent feeding, largely of oats, it will seldom be necessary to resort to drugs. But the breeder of pure bred sheep who may want his lambs to come promptly on time, to sell for early breeders next fall, or for show purposes, or those in the winter lamb business, occasionally find it necessary to resort to drugs. Plenty of good, sound oats, however, are the best thing I know of to stimulate tardy breeding, of not only sheep, but all other of the domestic animals on the farm.—New York Tribune Farmer.

Purchase the Treasury Stock of The Drake
Mining Drainage and Tunnel Transportation Co.
OF COLORADO

The Company is capitalized at $2,000,000, consisting of 2,000,000 shares, par value one dollar per share. Seven hundred and fifty thousand shares of this amount is eight per cent. Preferred Treasury Stock.

The Property

Consists of nine patented, well developed mines and mill sites, situated in Gilpin County, Colorado. This county has already produced more than

The development of the property consists of many shafts sunk on ore to a depth of 150 to 600 feet, and a tunnel run a distance of 2,300 feet, not only to develop its own property, but also to unwater and furnish underground transportation for the Gregory, the Bob-Tail and other rich mines of the district.

Transportation

The Colorado & Southern Railroad passes directly in front of the mouth of the tunnel. All ore can be dumped therefrom directly into the cars, giving quick and cheap transportation to the mills. Large returns have been paid from the product of these mines.

Sale of Preferred Stock!

The company desires to not only push its development work and complete its tunnel at an early day, but also erect on its own mill site at the mouth of the tunnel, proper reduction works for the treatment of its ores. For that purpose it now offers for sale [illegible] shares of its Preferred Treasury Stock at [illegible] cents per share, reserving the right to increase the price of all unsold shares [illegible] at any time without notice.

The Company pledges the whole net product of its mines to pay an eight per cent. annual dividend on the sum paid for such stock, before any other stock receives any dividends whatever. MONEY NO OBJECT

It is a fact that not less than a million is spent every year by people seeking a satisfactory cure for Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma and Consumption.

Probably the best and most highly recommended preparation is Catarrhozone, which treats the local symptoms very effectually by means of medicated air supplied through a convenient hard rubber inhaler. The poisons in the blood are driven off by Ferrozone Tablets, which are taken after each meal. They promote appetite, aid digestion, and make the blood rich and pure, so that it will nourish all parts of the body.

This combined local and constitutional treatment in catarrhal diseases has met with wonderful success and can be relied upon to cure every time. The inhaler stops sneezing, coughing, droppings in the throat, and brings quick relief and cure to all the disagreeable symptoms of catarrh.

Mrs. James Tweedie, of Jay Bridge says: "For years my daughter doctored unsuccessfully for Catarrh. She had droppings in the throat, hawkings, nausea, and could not sleep at night. The first day's use of Catarrhozone benefitted and ultimately cured my daughter so that Catarrh has never returned. I can recommend Catarrhozone as a grand remedy for Catarrh."

Thousands of strong letters could be given like the above if necessary, but all that is required to prove the merit of Catarrhozone is a fair trial. It is sure as death to cure and if it fails your money will be refunded. Catarrhozone cured lots of cases worse than yours and can do it again.

A Great Success

The Children's Bazaar, which took place last week at the residence of Mr. Robert Neill, was a great success, considering that it was gotten up entirely by the little folks. The proceeds amounted to $22, which was devoted to that most worthy object, the Children's Aid Society.

Obituary

On Friday evening the death of Mrs. Agnes Howdon occurred at the residence of her son-in-law, Waterford street. Deceased had been in poor health for some months, and her demise was not unexpected. The funeral will take place from the residence of Mr. on Monday morning at ten o'clock and proceed to Emily Cemetery.

An Opera House

There is no need for people to harp about the need of an opera house. Everybody knows one is badly required. The Times made the only practical suggestion regarding this matter, and it is altogether probable that one will be built next summer along the lines spoken of. We understand the offer of a certain Toronto capitalist is still open, to build an opera house if a free site and exemption is secured. The Board of Trade should take the matter up after the new year.

The Winter Race Circuit

Mr. Geo. Powell, the well known horseman of Orillia, was in town last week. When seen by our representative, Mr. Powell said he had made a half mile regulation ice track on Lake Couchiching and is working out several of his horses in view of getting the animals in condition for the winter race circuit, which commences in January. The circuit comprises the following towns: Peterborough, Port Perry, Belleville Ottawa, Napanee and Brockville.

Manufacturers May Use Welsh Coal

A proposal to bring Welsh coal to Canada for manufacturing purposes was considered at a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Toronto Branch of the Canadian Manufacturers Association yesterday. The matter was introduced by a letter from Mr. P. B. Ball, Canadian Commercial Agent at Birmingham, who stated that he had made arrangements with Cardiff and Chesterfield collieries to send out sample lots of the coal in 200-pound bags, so that it could be tested here in comparison with Sydney and American coal. The main difficulty to importing Welsh coal would be the freight charges, but the committee thought that vessels of light enough draft to come through the canals might be procured, which would equalize the cost of freight. They will look into the matter further.

A Labor Slate

In Toronto the Labor unions are running a full labor ticket for the Council. In Peterborough no action looking to municipal favor has been made, although "labor" candidates will doubtless appear in due course. The labor platform in Toronto includes: Municipal ownership of gas and electric plants, telephones and all street railroads, eight-hour service; all municipal work to be performed by the municipality without intervention of contractors; payment of wages weekly, revision and simplification of the municipal code; revision and equalization of salaries; free use of halls in municipal buildings for the discussion of public questions; abolition of all property qualifications; municipal funds to be supplied at the lowest rates of interest to workingmen for the purpose of building homes for themselves; the $700 exemption on buildings and contract agitation.

The New Idea in Journalism

A new and pleasing innovation in the great metropolitan Sunday newspapers has been introduced by the Chicago Record-Herald in giving away with its Sunday edition The Chicago Record-Herald Sunday Magazine. In The Sunday Record-Herald Magazine readers of The Sunday Record-Herald will recognize the event of a new epoch in journalism. On December 6th The Sunday Record-Herald began furnishing its readers without extra cost a magazine that surpasses the best illustrated weeklies in the execution of its color pages and equals them in every other particular. The magazine having a minimum size of sixteen pages will be printed on heavy enameled paper. At the present time eight pages will be in colors, four of which will be suitable for framing. The beautiful highly illustrated pages in colors must be seen to be appreciated. Any newspaper handling Chicago Sunday papers will be glad to show you a sample of the magazine, and the advance paper for next Sunday if you will give him an opportunity to do so.

MR. FLAVELLE FOR LEADER

Former Child's May Become Conservative Head in Ontario

In a Hamilton paper it is said that there is a movement on foot to make Mr. J. W. Flavelle, of Toronto, leader of the Ontario Opposition. There is no reason to suppose that Mr. Flavelle could be induced to take up with politics as an occupant, but the publication of such rumors, even when groundless, reveals a popular state of mind that it cannot be very pleasant for Mr. J. P. Whitney to reflect upon. , says the Toronto Star. When rumor directs its attention to Hon. G. W. Ross it suggests his promotion to the larger field of Dominion politics; but whenever rumor takes liberties with Mr. Whitney, it suggests his disappearance from the stage or his supercession by some leading Conservative from the ranks of private life. When it was rumored that Mr. Ross would be called to Sir Wilfrid Laurier's elbow, the story was only doubted because of the unlikelihood that the Ontario Premier would quit so spirited a game as that in which he was engaged. When it is rumored that Mr. Whitney is to be succeeded by Mr. Flavelle, the doubt that arises at once is whether Mr. Flavelle would undertake so difficult a leadership.

A DOG STORY

Watch Shows That Dogs at Times Are Not Safe

The following was handed The Times yesterday for publication: A well known business man on Hunter street advertised for a dog. In reply to the ad. a man called at the office with an intelligent looking animal that he immediately took a fancy to, though he deemed it advisable to first enquire into something of his characteristics.

"What can he do?" he asked.

"Oh, sir, he can do anything. If you've lost anything he'll go direct to the place where you lost it. He'll—"

"By the way," interrupted our friend, "I just missed my glove. Do you s'pose he could find it?"

"Certainly, sir. Just let him sniff at your hand."

The business man held his hand to the dog's nose and the animal trotted serenely off. Presently he returned, and with a joyous wagging of the tail deposited his offering at the business man's feet.

At the same moment the click of the typewriter in the next room ceased. A girlish form appeared in the doorway.

"My sash ribbon," cried a high, sweet voice ;"My sash ribbon! The dog has my sash ribbon!"

"I guess the dog I'll do," he said, quietly.

The Present State of Literature.

Carlyle once man an "Enquiry into the State of German Literature," and others have investigated the state of letters in other lands. As it is not essential to be bilious, nor prerequisite to be alien, an enquiry into the state of politic and other literature in America is in order, writes the humorist, Joseph Smith. That it may be well done, and not half-baked, I do it myself, for, though modest, I am Literary and Authoritative, if not well read; almost shrinking enough for a reviewer.

Literature is in a bad way; it has no friends except mercenary publishers and impecunious writers; even critics, who know literature when it bites them, speak harshly of it. Literature has been going down hill for years; it has now been stranded in the department stores, where Shakespeare and Laura Jean Libbey battle for recognition with Indiana poets and Battle Creek breakfast foods. Poetry, which is viewed with alarm by alienists, is a goner. When the twenty-five-cent table d'hote was strangled by the Beef Trust, the Poets' Union succumbed; and to-day poets are not raised except in captivity and suburban Boston. History has been decaying since it became wedded to that robust form of fiction called the New England Family History; genealogy, gossip, gush and gab have ruined it. Ida Tar Ball has dropped Napoleon and Lincoln for Kerosene and Rockefeller. . . . Only the Spanish War heroes, whose pens are mightier than their swords, are left to stagger humanity with their memoirs and amaze empires with their exploits.

The historical novel, which is seldom historical and never novel, is the only dangerous rival which Reformed Oats and Jagless Rye encounter in a free press next to pure reading matter. All depend on robustuous loquacity for reputation and sturdy credulity for consumption; but the oats and rye have some value. The Swashbuckler novel—the cousin of the H. N.—has waned since its heroes have been translated to the stage. An imported syndicate hero in red boots, abbreviated blue breeches, green shirt waist, blonde curls, brown Arizona hat, yellow feathers and a secret society sword, is not calculated to make literature respected and popular. The Frohmanized Swashbuckler has added a new horror to the drama, another terror to literature.

Literary translations make countless thousands yawn; they lack even their native attraction—indecency. D'Annunzio done into English is dullness and dirt; Ibsen suffers from Norse-algia; and the genius of France, Germany and Russia is Englished to congest junk stores and feed furnaces.

Plainly the Literary Outlook is alarming. R. H. Davis has quit; Bangs swings between post-mortem persiflage and historical grave robbery; Kipling has taken to golf, politics and epithets; James is foggy in several languages; Dooley is married; Roosevelt is strenuous in every thing but literature; Howells has ceased to Howell; Lochinvar has gone West again; and I am not feeling very well myself. It looks as if the reading public would have to go back to such "Has Beens" as Tennyson, Thackeray, Dickens, Emerson, Cooper, Hawthorne, and such. . . . It is as profitless to seek for a sane, healthy, robust literature in such surroundings as to look for motherhood and domesticity in a divorce court.

TRAINS COLLIDE

Winnipeg, Man., Dec. 11—A collision occurred on the Canadian Pacific Railway near Scovill bridge yesterday afternoon between two freight trains, in which a bridgeman of Rat Portage named McPherson, suffered injuries which may prove fatal.

The Dinner Pail

Of the American working man is generally well filled. In some cases it is too well filled. It contains too many kinds of food, and very often the food is of the wrong kind—hard to digest and containing little nutrition. As a consequence many a working man develops some form of stomach trouble which interferes with his health and reduces his working capacity.

Where there is indigestion or any other indication of disease of the stomach and its allied organs of digestion and nutrition, the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will almost invariably produce a perfect and permanent cure.

Mr. Thomas A. Swarts, of Sub Station C, Columbus, O., Box 103, writes: "I was taken with severe headache, then cramps in the stomach, and my food would not digest, then kidney and liver trouble and my back got weak so I could scarcely get around. At last I had all the complaints at once, the more I doctored the worse I got until six years passed. I had become so poorly I could only walk in the house by the aid of a chair, and I got so thin I had given up to die, thinking that I could not be cured. Then one of my neighbors said, 'Take my advice and take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and make a new man out of yourself.' The first bottle helped me so I thought I would get another, and after I had taken eight bottles in about six weeks, I was weighed, and found I had gained twenty-seven (27) pounds. I am as stout and healthy to-day, I think, as I ever was."

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, paper covers, is sent free on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps to pay expense of customs and mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

BRITAIN HELPS JAPAN BY PURCHASE OF SHIPS

The Chilian Battleships Would Have Been Secured by Russia Had Britain Not Purchased Them

London, December 15.—The purchase of the Libertad and Constitution by the Admiralty is an interesting departure from British precedent. Not since the war scare of 1878, when the navy was very weak, has such a thing been done. The reason for the purchase probably is not so much anxiety to strengthen the navy as a desire to test in the British service a ship built in a British yard by a private British designer. The purchase of these war ships has an underlying importance much greater than that indicated. Very little doubt exists that Russia and Japan are on the eve of hostilities, whether the crisis develops soon or later. The one handicap under which Russia suffers is the fact that her fleet in the east is inferior to that of Japan and she cannot reinforce it without seriously weakening her fleets in the Baltic or Black sea. It is believed that Russia contemplated purchasing these two Chilian warships which would have placed her more nearly on an equal footing with Japan, which has only eight battleships but of the very latest class. In stepping in at the critical moment and out-bidding Russia for these two Chilian battleships, Great Britain killed two birds with one stone by reinforcing her own fleet and depriving Russia of a reinforcement which would probably have encouraged her to declare war against Japan at once.

While the shutting up of Russia's fleet in a fortified harbor would not materially defeat her plans in the Orient, the command of the sea by Japan would permanently prevent any offensive movement by Russia against the island empire, and would limit the war to one of invasion by Japan on the one hand and defence by Russia on the other. If Russia could secure command of the sea in the East she would do so by any means in her power as it would enable her to take the offensive and pour her troops into Japan. While she is desirous of purchasing means to accomplish this, she is hampered by the fact that her exchequer is depleted and in this particular instance Britain's long purse has been able to do a remarkably good turn for her plucky little ally, the Jap.

It is said that Russia has now about 300,000 troops in Manchuria, which is as large an army as Japan could muster for invasion, and while the Japs are much better fighting men than the Russians, still the latter have an army of over 3,000,000 men to draw on for reinforcements so that the prospect of Japan being permanently successful in any land operations is not very bright. But Japan is overcrowded with population and needs more territory in north China and she sees little prospect of securing it unless the rapacity of the Bear can be checked. But Russia would have gladly forced on a war if she saw her way to dominate Japan on the sea and it is likely that the failure to secure these two battleships will do more to incline the Russian heart to peace than anything else that could happen. At the same time it may encourage the Japs to strike before another such opportunity occurs. When once war is declared Russia cannot reinforce her eastern fleet because she has no coaling stations en-route. This is why she has been so anxious to secure a port in the Persian gulf.

A LARGE PROJECT OF LAND IRRIGATION

C.P.R. Has Scheme Embracing Area of About 3,000,000 Acres

MAIN LINE INTERSECTS IT

Agriculture in This District will be Greatly Benefited by Proposed Works

Montreal, Dec. 15.—The irrigation project which the Canadian Pacific Railway Company now has in hand in Alberta, is one of the large undertakings among the many large schemes for developing the West, that we read of almost daily, and ranked with the largest undertakings of this kind on the continent.

Mr. J. S. Dennis, of Calgary, the Canadian Pacific Railway's Superintendent of Irrigation and British Columbia Land Commissioner, who is in the city, today outlined the chief features of the undertaking to a newspaper reporter.

The scheme embraces an area of about three million acres lying east of Calgary being bounded on the south by the Bow river, and on the north by the Red Deer river. This large tract is intersected by the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway, but at present is practically unoccupied except by a scattered ranchmen. The soil throughout the area is good, and it comprises one of the best unoccupied areas for ranching in Southern Alberta. Agriculture in the district has not, however, proved a success, because during the dry years to which that portion of the Territories is subject there is not sufficient moisture to mature the crops, and during dry years there is also a scarcity of surface water for stock. When the land grant in aid of the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway was set aside, it was provided that the company should take the odd-numbered sections in each township in a belt of 24 miles wide on each side of the railway line, the even sections being reserved for homestead entry. The company, however, was not to take any lands which were not fairly fit for settlement, and had originally declined to take the odd sections now embraced in the irrigation scheme, as they were not fit for settlement without irrigation. Both the odd and even sections have, therefore, remained unoccupied, while the rest of the country has been settling up, and it was finally agreed with the Government that the company should take both the odd and even sections comprising a block of about three million acres, in settlement of the balance due on the land grant, and this is the immense block, which the company is now going to transform by the construction of the irrigation canals to provide water for the irrigation of a large portion of the block.

A PRETTY ROMANCE

Wingham, Dec. 15—A local paper says: A short time ago it was reported that Miss M. Campbell, of Brussels formerly of Wingham, had ben left a large legacy by a Mr. Coldosco, of Mexico, a comparative stranger. We noted also that Miss Campbell had received $100 to pay her expenses to Mexico, whither she was called to receive papers entitling her to the amount of the bequest. When Mr. Coldosco died he left Miss Campbell $1,000,000 invested in a mine. For three years she receives the accumulation of this million dollars, which is payable to her yearly on Aug. 1st. At the end of three years she can command the principal, $1,000,000. The story of this immense legacy is a pretty piece of romance, a strange feature of it being that Mr. Colddosco seven years ago was a poor man, but the discovery of a rich mine made him wealthy. A letter, a brief call, and then no more, until receipt of the letter informing Miss Campbell that she was legatee of the rich estate, are the links in the chain of events that has made Miss Campbell a millionaire.

The tender was made by members of the church "as a tribute of loving loyalty and gratitude." I deeply appreciate it, but I must decline to receive that for which you have sacrificed so much and labored so long."

FRANCE OFFENDED

Duke of of Orleans Expelled From Belgium

London, December 15. — The Duke of Orleans has been expelled from Belgium. He had determined to establish his home at Brussels and live in future there, surrounded by a little court of his own. King Leopold, who is his near relative, had given consent to the plan. The Duke, however, made his residence the headquarters of such an amount of active political intrigue against the French Government that the latter presented a strongly worded protest to the Belgian authorities, and the Belgian Government ordered the Duke to quit Belgian territory immediately on the ground of having abused the hospitality of the nation.

Uncle Sam Has Troubles of His Own

London, Dec. 15.—The American Government is rapidly gathering its handful of trouble by becoming a world-power. In Turkey natives get naturalized as American citizens for their own purposes, and on getting into trouble with the "home guard" appeal to Washington to pull them out. This is the reason of the Moslem outbreak in Alexandretta, in Asia Minor. The U. S. Consul Davis was insulted and assaulted and his national flag hauled down for trying to protect an Armenian. This man Attarian, had been in the county jail for two months, but was liberated through the Consul's efforts. Mr. Davis was accompanying Attarian on board a departing steamer when the police intercepted the party, assaulted Mr. Davis, and, in spite of the resistance of the Consul and his attendant guards, rearrested Attarian and took him back to prison. They say Mr. Davis struck first. The Turks say that American naturalization is not recognized in Turkey. It causes trouble. The question is, what is Johnathan going to do about it?

FRENCH DESTROY SETTLERS' NETS.

Serious Fisheries Dispute Has Arisen on Treaty Shore of Newfoundland

St. John's Nfld., Dec. 14—A serious fishery dispute has arisen here owing to the action of the French fishermen in refusing to leave the treaty shore of Newfoundland. Since the British warships stationed here have gone south the Frenchmen have destroyed the nets of the settlers and defy the local authorities to take any steps in the matter. The Colonial Government has appealed to the Admiralty, and the gunboat Fantome may be ordered back to drive off the Frenchmen.

BIRTH OF THE REPUBLIC OF PANAMA

Subject of a Warm Debate in United States House

Washington, Dec. 12—The birth of the republic of Panama and its recognition by the United States Government was the subject of a spirited debate in the United State House of Representatives on Friday.

Mr. Dinsmore (Dem. Ark) during consideration of the Pensions Appropriation bill, severely criticized the administration in connection with the canal, and Mr. Hitt. (Rep., Ill.) chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee, replied in a vigorous defence of the President and his Central American policy.

Mr. Williams (Miss), the minority leader replied to Mr. Hitt, declaring that the minority did not condone the part taken by the United States Government in connection with the Panama affair.

Mr. Hitt said there was nothing hasty or unique in the recognition of the new republic, as it occurred five days after the promulgation of the independence of the Republic. The President, Mr. Hitt said, had not been precipitate but had waited a reasonable time. "But," he added, "he did not waste time, he never does."

"Ordinarily," Mr. Hitt went on, "when a ship is in port and a disturbance or insurrection occurs, we land troops to protect Americans from being killed or robbed. We have done that in France and we would do it anywhere."

SITUATION WAS DIFFERENT.

"In the case of Panama, our situation was different from that of any spot on earth. We had a solemn and binding engagement which had been impressed upon us by all these years. Often we were called upon by the Colombian Government, oftener by events to enforce the obligation to keep the paths open; and when we landed to aid nor suppress rebellion, but to keep the path open; and when we landed troops at Colon their duty under the treaty was plain to let no armed men or cause of any kind disturb the open, free course of commerce or of movement in the pathway across the isthmus.

"Now it so happened in the course of human events, which we do not guide, but which, it is believed by many, an allwise Providence watches and directs, that in this case our duty in good faith under the treaty to keep that highway open, fell in with and brought out a consequence which was grave to Colombia. She has invoked that interference before, but it so happened that always heretofore, it inured to her benefit. In this case that which we have done we did for a motive of the highest obligation of national faith.

"It was done cautiously and carefully but it did result in making it very difficult from troops to come from Bogota. Our Government will not permit anybody on the line of that railway or the crossing of the Isthmus, who would disturb free transit, and it is because the two things coincide that men who do not look on the matter calmly and fairly will say that we did what we did to injure Bogota, when, in fact, we did it to keep good faith, though it has injured Bogota."

COLOMBIANS GIVE UP.

Washington, December 12—The American State Department yesterday received a cablegram from Consul-General Gudger, at Panama, announcing that the Colombian expedition to Panama, according to his information, has been abandoned.

RAILROAD WILL BE BUILT

Winnipeg Yankton & Gulf Railroad is a Sure Thing

Lincoln, Neb. Dec. 15—In a letter received today from H. L. Miller, of Oak, Neb., he makes the positive statement that the Winnipeg, Yankton, & Gulf railroad will be built, and that the application to Congress for a Missouri river charter is bona fide. Mr. Miller says: "The company that has asked for this charter did not do so until they had sufficient money back of the enterprise to build this road from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico, and we will show those who are interested in this matter that as soon as spring weather permits we will convince the people without a question that this road is an assured fact."

PLANNING TO RETALIATE ON THE LABOR UNIONS

Building Contracts Favor a Suggestion Made by T. D. Hamilton of Pittsburg

Chicago, Dec. 15.—Building contractors from nearly every large city in the United States, met in conference here to form a national association. The labor unions were the principal topic of discussion. Much enthusiasm was in evidence, and the conference promises to produce an organization formed on strict lines for the welfare of the building industry. Denials of reports of a prospective pool in which wage earners and contractors would unite were made by representatives from all sections of the east and west.

A suggestion that met with general approval was made by T. D. Hamilton, treasurer of the Pittsburg Builders and member of the Builders league of the same city. His idea is that contractors everywhere, should agree not to hire men from other cities where strikes or lockouts are in progress. Many delegates expressed themselves favorable to the plan, pointing out that it was along the course pursued by labor organizations.

STARVE IN QUARANTINED TOWN

Eight Die for Want of Food in Smallpox Stricken Community

Laurel, Del., Dec. 15.—Woodland, a village six miles from here, is suffering from a smallpox epidemic, and so strictly is it quarantined that eight deaths are said to have been due to starvation. The population is 100, and there are thirty-five smallpox patients. Surrounding towns maintain a shotgun quarantine, and Woodland people are utterly unable to get supplied.

Elgin, Ill., Dec. 15.—The public schools of Geneva were closed today on account of an epidemic of scarlet fever. The principal of the school is ill, and thirty-five other cases have been placed under quarantine.

Butler, Pa., Dec. 15.—Thirteen new cases of typhoid fever were reported today. There is evidently a reduction in the number of cases developing. The deaths since last night number four.

Elmira, N.Y., Dec. 15.—Two more cases of typhoid developed at the reformatory tonight, making nineteen cases of the disease in the institution at present.

THE TOWN ARMED

Burglars Cause Sudden Panic Near Boston

Boston, Dec. 12— Judge Emmons' reported statements that women who travel the streets after dark should go armed and shoot to kill when assaulted excited considerable comment in Brookline, in view of the large number of burglaries in that town of late. The record of five successful diamond robberies within a short time has startled the Brookline police into activity. The citizens in town have been startled and have determined to protect themselves. The sale of revolvers in the down-town stores have almost doubled since Oct. 1, many of the purchasers being Brookline people.

EVERYBODY READS THE TIMES.

COLOMBIAN TROOPS LAND FOR ADVANCE ON PANAMA

Yankee Cruisers Hot After Them, But Failed to Get Accurate Information

Colon, Dec. 13—Through the examination of the San Blas coast, made by the United States cruiser Atlanta and the converted cruiser Mayflower, both of which vessels have returned here, it has been clearly established that the Colombian cruisers, General Pinzon and Cartagena, appeared in the Gulf of Darien about 30 hours after they were reported having left Cartagena. No reliable evidence, however, could be obtained to show how many troops carried by the cruisers had been landed, either on the gulf coast or northwest thereof.

The Atlanta and the Mayflower made a thorough inspection of the entire vicinity. It was learned that at one coast point the Cartagena embarked a small quantity of naval stores, a few bullocks, some corn and 50 pieces of zinc roofing, but no information could be obtained as to the direction taken by the cruiser thereafter. It has been reported that Colombian troops were landed on a certain point on the Panama coast, and the Atlanta was present at this place at the time. according to the report, the troops should have been landed, and said nothing.

The naval officers found the attitude of the Indians to be indifferent and even repellant. The traditions of the Indians for centuries have been against permitting aliens to land in other territory, and these traditions they still maintain. They often declined to answer the questions of the interpreters, and on several occasions their information was found to be misleading.

It would be impossible for the Cartagena and the General Pinzon to enter the Atrato River, because of the mouth of the river has a six foot bar. No small boats are obtainable thereabouts and no considerable number of troops could be transported up the river. The only boats to be had consist of a few canoes.

The information obtained by the Atlanta and Mayflower points to two probabilities—either that the Colombian troops have been returned to Cartagena or that they have been landed at some point on the coast between Cartagena and the Gulf of Darien, and may be proceeding thence towards Caucas.

The Atlanta sailed again towards the Gulf of Darion this afternoon and will continue a careful patrol of the coast.

The remainder of the marines on board the auxiliary cruiser Dixie will be landed Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday next, satisfactory arrangements having been completed to obtain good water for the camp at Culebra, on the line of the Panama Railroad.

ENVOY TO REPUBLICS.

Caracas, Dec. 13—According to advices just received here the Colombian government has decided to send Gen Rafael Uribe-Uribe, as a special envoy to' the South American Republics. He is expected soon to arrive at Caracas.

DEERING PLANT MAY CLOSE

Workers Hear That a Shutdown will Make 7,000 Men Idle

Chicago, Dec. 15.—Employes of the Deering division of the International Harvester Company were agitated yesterday by a report that the company intended to close down its shops for a month, beginning Dec. 23, and throw 7,000 men out of work. The report, the truth of which was practically admitted by officials of the company, was circulated in every department of the big plant.

It resulted in a hasty meeting of the union employes at noon and the appointment of committees to demand an explanation. The committees were unable to secure answers to their questions, however, and are now discussing the advisability of more radical action on their part. Union men claim the shutdown has been decided on to break up the unions.

Unions have always been regarded with hostility by the management and the men fear it has been decided to follow the example set by Beloit manufacturers, who closed their plants for ten days and took back only non-union workmen. Officials of the company denied fighting the unions, although they admitted the plant might be closed.

CHRISTMAS IN ITALY

Venetians Present Candies and Custards to Their Friends

Christmas in the Catholic countries of Southern Europe is very different from Christmas in these Northern lands. In Rome it is a quiet and solemn day, and the chief interest is in religious service. The celebration goes on from December 25, when the sacred Bambino (the Christ-child) is brought out, till January 6, when it is put away again. The churches are, of course, brilliantly lighted with innumerable candles, and the solemn and impressive service is everywhere attended. There are family reunions, but the social festivities of the time, in spite of the usually mild Indian summer weather, are held quietly indoors. Every Venetian, rich or poor, makes a present of a box of peculiar candy, made of honey and nuts (called mandorlato), and of a glass of fruits and mustard (called mustardo).

In Italy, instead of the Christmas tree, you will find (especially in Florence) a straw basket made to hold gifts decorated with green things, arranged in the form of a tree. The commonest gift to children is a plaster toy, representing the Nativity.

A GERMAN BARON PREDICTS A REVOLUTION

Berlin, December 12—In the Reichstag Herr Richter criticized the maintenance of the East Asiatic brigade, and of a fleet station with fourteen vessels, and said: "They cost us more than our entire export trade in East Asia amounts to German trade never suffered from lack of naval protection, as our navy has always been more promptly on the ground than the navies of other nations German tradesmen abroad have much less to complain of from the policy of the Empire than the tradesmen at home, from the agrarian policy of the Government. I recommend that we present German South-west Africa to the Boers, with whom we have so much sympathy.

The Baron then discussed the enormous increase in the Socialist vote. He said he would not assert that the army had grown untrustworthy, but he declared that its ranks were filled with Socialists, who were increasing in numbers with the growth of their party.

"My opinion," said Baron von Kardoff, "is that we are an express train which is rolling with the wind velocity and the socialized state of the future.

"At any rate something must be done to prevent the growth of social democracy, and the most effective means to this end would be to withdraw the suffrage for five years from Socialists who profess to be revolutionists or to be republicans."

This statement was greeted with Socialist laughter. Continuing, the Baron said "The Government must do everything in its power, for if nothing happens, a revolution is coming with certainty." He pointed out that it would be impossible to suppress socialism with intellectual weapons, and he urged Catholics and Protestants to conclude a truce in order that they might jointly combat this new danger. "It will then," said, "be easy to lead a struggle against Socialism to a victorious end."

GERMAN WAR MINISTER DISCUSSES ARMY ABUSES

Berlin, December 12—In the Reichstag War Minister Von Binem entered earnestly into the charges of brutality and immorality brought against German army officers without attempting to exculpate them. He admitted that there had been abuses and declared the army administration was determined to correct them so far as possible. Nobody regretted the evils more than Emperor William, who never lost an opportunity to impress the seriousness of the offences that were brought to light. Referring to Lieut. Bilsen's book, "A Little Garrison," (telling of alleged actions discreditable to officers, for writing which the lieutenant was sentenced to six months' imprisonment and to dismissal from the army) the War Minister said it contained a certain amount of truth, but it was not true that every lieutenant in the small garrisons lived as Bilsen had described. The Minister did not deny the possibility of corrupt relations between officers and women in a few cases, but the assertion that such were the rule was a slander against German womanhood.

Regarding the brutalities, the Minister declared that such incidents were not wholly inexplicable. There was the bad private soldier as well as the bad sergeant, and the bad private soldier was largely responsible for the whole difficulty. During the year ending in June, the War Minister continued, fifty officers and 517 non-commissioned officers and good service men were published for mistreatment of privates. The army administration had determined to stop it altogether. Even one hundred cases a year would be intolerable.

You Pay Only if Cured

Expects No Money Unless He Cures You—Method and Full Particulars Sent Free—Write For It This Very Day

A Detroit specialist who has 14 certificates and diplomas from medical colleges and boards, has perfected a startling method of curing the diseases of men in their own homes; so that there may be no doubt in the mind of any man that he has

DR. S. GOLDBERG,

The Possessor of 14 Diplomas and Certificates Who Wants No Money That He Does Not Earn.

both the method and the ability to do as he says, Dr. Goldberg, the discoverer, will send the method entirely free to all men who send him their name and address. He wants to hear from men who have stricture that they have been unable to get cured, prostatic trouble, sexual weakness, varicocele, lost manhood, blood poison, hydrocele, emaciation of parts, impotence, etc. His wonderful method not only cures the condition itself, but likewise all the complications, such as rheumatism, bladder or kidney trouble, heart disease, nervous debility, etc.

The doctor realizes that it is one thing to make claims and another thing to back them up, so he has made it a rule not to ask for money unless he cures you, and when you are cured he feels sure that you will willingly pay him a small fee. It would seem, therefore, that it is to the best interests of every man who suffers in this way to write the doctor confidentially and lay your case before him. He sends the method, as well as many booklets on the subject, including the one that contains the 14 diplomas and certificates, entirely free. Address him simply Dr. S. Goldberg, 208 Woodward Ave., Room [illegible] Detroit, Mich., and it will all immediately be sent you free.

PETERBOROUGH, DECEMBER 11, 1903

CHRISTMAS GIVING

Already thousands of people in Peterborough are considering the problem of Christmas giving. The very important questions, What shall we buy? How much shall we pay for gifts? Will our tokens be appreciated? are being discussed nightly at fireside councils.

Before even thinking of selecting the persons who are usually remembered at Christmastide, the giver should carefully decide upon the amount of money he or she can afford to spend for gifts. It seems to me that outside the immediate members of one's family, the question of gifts should receive slight attention. If one has been fortunate and has saved a competence, beautiful presents should be given to those who are near and dear to the giver.

The children should be uppermost in the minds of parents and relatives. Toys, of course, have the chief attraction for the little folk. Useful wearing apparel is also appreciated. For grown people, the gifts should be useful, when given by a person in moderate circumstances. If the present is selected by a well-to-do man or woman, it should be beautiful but not extremely expensive.

Whoever runs into debt in order to remember a friend is hardly deserving of sympathy. Christmas giving should be guided by common sense. The tastes of the person who may be selected as the beneficiary of your bounty should be considered. An expensive present very often gives less pleasure than some inexpensive little token which appeals to the reason of the recipient.

TO BATHE OR NOT TO BATHE

The theory of Dr. J. D. Robertson, expressed before a Chicago medical society, to the effect that the bathing habit is injurious, and as he said a "dirty habit," an opinion which has made the other doctors gasp, but which they admitted they could not sufficiently refute, reminds an observant man of many things that seem queer. He is reminded that the mountain and plains Indians, who never bathe except by accident, are rarely ill and, barring war or accident, live to good old age, displaying aggressive virility and force all their lives.

On the other hand, the natives of the Pacific islands, who are half their time or more in the water, are weak, effeminate, disease inclined and short lived. He will recall also, that in civilization the children who from any cause, either poverty or inclination, wallow in the dirt in city, town and country, are generally vigorous, while the pampered children, rich or poor, who are scrubbed to shining are the reverse. Their vitality seems to shrivel up like the skin of a washerwoman's hands.

He may recall, also, a curious New York experience. Some years ago the authorities, desiring to convince the slum dwellers of the hygienic value of bathing and cleanliness in general and the disease-breeding power of filth, divided the city into districts, so adjusted as to contrast as sharply as possible the districts where overcrowding and dirt prevailed with those wherein the people bathed frequently and wore clean clothes.

One district included the territory east of Broadway, south of Fourteenth street, where the population is denser than anywhere else in the country and quite as grimy. Another was the adjacent and less odorous but still fusty region west of Broadway, and then the districts ran back by degrees into the high, airy, cleanly residence regions above and to the west of Central park. They then took a hygienic or disease census by district lines, perfectly confident that the showing would be of appalling prevalence of zymotic and probably other diseases in the slum districts as compared with the others.

When the returns were all in and tabulated the zealous workers for the soap and water habit were appalled indeed, but it was by the fact that the figures showed by far the lowest disease and death rate in the crowded district east of Broadway and south of Fourteenth, where they had expected the highest, and that the rate grew, through all the other divisions, until it rose to really alarming height in the breezy regions of uptown. The east side was never held up itself as an object lesson. The reformers took the whole matter under advisement and pigeon-holed the census.

After all, is not this matter of frequent or infrequent bathing like so many other human habits and tastes, a matter of the individual? "One man's meat is another man's poison," says the old saw, and any kind of crank would die if fed wholly on good common sense.

Splitting Headaches

CAN BE STOPPED AND THE CONDITIONS WHICH CAUSE THEM CURED BY FERROZONE

Poisons accumulate in the blood and spread with it every movement to all parts of the body. The brain becomes congested, the nerves irritated, and the result is that awful headache so well known to the female sex.

Most of these poisons are absorbed into the blood from the waste matter that has accumulated in the intestines resulting from indigestion. Matter which should be promptly passed from the system through natural channels.

Ferrozone cleanses the entire intestinal tract, and the liver and kidneys as well. It cures constipation and its many attendant evils. It makes the body strong and the blood pure, induces natural sleep and enables one to eat and drink anything at any time without risk of headache, nervousness or skin eruptions.

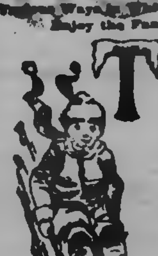
Ferrozone is nature's own remedy for headaches. It is a lasting potent tonic and the greatest health maker the world has ever seen. It masters all female derangements and restores weak, sickly women to a healthy vigorous condition of mind and body.

Every woman and growing girl can derive marvellous benefit from its regular use, and if you suffer from Chlorosis, Anaemia, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Poor Appetite, Nervousness or female disorders of any kind, you can make no mistake in selecting Ferrozone for a cure.

Every reliable druggist recommends and sells Ferrozone for 50 cents a box. Be sure you get the genuine article, and refuse a substitute. Remember the name and insist on only Ferrozone. Sent to your address if price is forwarded to N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

CHRISTMAS GAMES.

Various Ways in Which Young Folks May Enjoy the Famous Holiday.



THE happiness of children can be greatly promoted on Christmas by the introduction of games. Perhaps the Christmas presents may include enough of these to fully occupy the attention if the little folks. If not, some of the following may answer:

Coasting. — For outdoor sport nothing surpasses coasting in the estimation of young people. The game of "coasting" consists simply in seeing which boy can drive his sled farthest from the starting point at the top of a convenient hill. A running start is allowed. The hill should have a level stretch at the bottom, and the course should be as smooth as possible.

Bubble Blowing.—This game requires a long, narrow table, which may be simply a board five feet long and eighteen inches wide. The board must be covered with woollen cloth; an old shawl will do. Two stakes, twelve inches high and eight inches apart, must be set up one foot from the end of the board. Bubble blowing can be played by any number of children, and they may divide into two equal parties. Each player is armed with a pipe, and a bowl of soapsuds is placed handy. Each player in turn blows a bubble, tosses it on the table, and tries to blow it between the stakes at the other end. Three trials are allowed each player. Bubbles that break before the bowler has started them do not count. When a bubble is sent through the goal the player scores one. For single players the game is three, but it may be increased to any number desired. Generally the score is three times the number of players.

Comic Historical Tableaux. — The company must divide into two parties. One party decides what event in history they will represent, and then forms a tableau to illustrate the event, making it as ridiculous as possible. The other party must try to guess what the tableau is. If they fail, they take their turn in producing a tableau.

Blind Man's Buff.—This favorite old game needs no description. But it may be varied for a Christmas evening. The person blinded is designated as "Santa Claus." A small sack, stuffed with cotton, wool or paper, is provided. One of the players strikes "Santa Claus" with this saying: "Santa Claus can't find his sack." Santa Claus pursues, and the sack is passed from hand to hand, each player in turn striking Santa and repeating the phrase. The object is for Santa to grab the sack or bag, when the player who holds it becomes Santa Claus in turn.

The Fairy Hunt.—This game is much the same as hunt the slipper. Various articles, such as nuts, candy, fruit, toys, or other suitable gifts, are wrapped in tissue paper and hidden in all parts of the house. The game is one that all children will delight in, and, introduced at a Christmas party, will cause no end of merriment.

The Annunciation.

From the Celebrated Painting by Gabriel Rossetti

CHRISTMAS DON'T.

Don't forget the poor.

Don't make the Christmas feast the cause of a doctor's visit.

Don't make rich gifts when simple ones will answer the purpose.

Don't forget that it is wrong to send costly gifts which may invite an expensive return from those unable to afford it.

Don't set punch or wine on your table. Christmas is particularly a children's holiday, and their appetites should not be tempted with alcoholic drinks.

FOR A BACHELOR.

"A Christmas gift for a bachelor bold,
One not too young and not too old,
What would you give?" I asked sweet May.
She blushed and pouted—the charming elf—
"I'd give—I'd give—I hardly dare say:—
But if you won't tell
I'll confess that—well,
Were he rich and handsome, I'd give him—myself!"

AN APPEAL TO THE FASHIONABLE SET IN CANADA.

"Lally Bernard," the Well-known Toronto Journalist, Writes from England of the Battle Against Consumption in Muskoka.

Lally Bernard, of the editorial staff of the Toronto Globe, writing to that paper from London, England, where she is now a resident, shows most clearly that the battle against the great white plague is one that should interest all classes of the community. It will be remembered that this writer entered incog. as a patient in the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives, and afterwards in the Globe told of real life in that institution. In her present article she says:

"To-day I have found a letter at the club which nearly missed me, having been addressed 'Lally Bernard.' May I express to my unknown correspondent my warmest thanks for the kindly appreciation for the little I have been able to do in the battle being waged against tuberculosis in Canada. The need of sympathy and interest is a tremendous one, and I am always puzzled when I find really well educated and intelligent people in Canada so criminally ignorant of the extent of the danger, and the means which are being taken to combat it.

"It may be of some interest to those who feel as I do in regard to the responsibility which rests upon each and all to aid in this fight against a most insidious foe, when I tell them, that here in London, where I have been for only a few days, I have already come across the dread enemy four times. First of all, in the back garden of our humble quarters in Kensington I espied, when morning dawned, a tent with two beds in it. I enquired of our landlord why the tent was there, and was told a long story about the coronation and quarters for some boys coming up from the country, and that he, the landlord, had subsequently found it more agreeable to sleep in the tent than in the basement bedroom he had formerly occupied. A little later, in conversation with the lady who secured the lodgings, I learned that the landlord's son was obliged to sleep in a tent! Comment was needless.

"In looking for quarters I found a charming home of a young doctor and his wife, where extraordinarily moderate terms were asked for really exceptionally good accommodation. The doctor in question had been 'ordered south,' and his wife had to keep the house going by accepting 'paying guests.'

"Yet again, in the third place, I found that the lady who was at the head of the establishment had not only lost her husband from the dread disease, but had managed one of the most fashionable sanitariums in England, and her knowledge of the treatment and the extent of the problem in England showed me how tremendous was the need for care and watchfulness in our own country.

"May I ask my correspondent to use all possible influence to make the question of combating tuberculosis one of interest in the 'fashionable set' to which she evidently belongs. I know full well, from the little experience I have had, how tremendously a little genuine interest and help might lighten the burden now resting on the shoulders of the authorities of the Free Hospital for Consumptives at Gravenhurst. It is, of course, far away from wealthy centres, and out of sight is to be out of mind.

"I can quite understand that until people have seen forty or fifty patients together in different stages of consumption they do not realise what an immense amount of aid might be given by those who are fortunate enough to be free from the disease and by those who have little else to do than to invent or learn some new form of recreation.

"Mrs. Torrington has kindly promised me to try and get musical societies and people interested in music to provide a pianola for the Hospital, and I feel sure it will be of immense benefit to the patients. Surely my correspondent who evinces such sympathy with the cause could make that sympathy take a practical form and organise a hospital library where books worth reading might be supplied, with some system similar to that of the Aberdeen Association, which has done such excellent work."

[Note.—Readers—and may their number be many—who desire to assist in the work of the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives may send their gifts to Sir Wm. R. Meredith, Kt., Vice-President, National Sanitarium Association, Toronto, or Mr. W. J. Gage, Chairman of the Executive Committee.]

The Uncommercial Travelers Trunk.

Once upon a time a trunk was a trunk, and all trunks loked more or less alike to everyone. Now a trunk may be a bureau or a wardrobe or a hat-box, according to its owner's wishes and the amount she pays for it.

The wardrobe trunk sets on one end and the gowns are hung in it on hangers. This serves a double purpose, for the frocks are kept free from wrinkles by this method, and they are also much easier to get at than they were by the old way, when the "box" had to be unpacked every time another gown was got out.

You see, the hangers are so arranged that they may be pulled out, much as an accordion is, and then pushed back again.

The bureau trunk is better known. It has drawers which may be pulled out, just as those in the bureau are, and so the necessity of lifting heavy trays is obviated.

But these inventions are not very well known on the other side of the water, and, consequently, they puzzle the customs inspectors not a little.

One of the bureau trunks owned by an American woman, the French authorities at Boulogne insisted upon opening simply because they saw it fastened differently from the ordinary trunk. Once opened, they would not permit the owner to pull out the trays or drawers for their inspection, but insisted on lifting them out themselves and searching every hole and crevice for contraband goods. When they were at last convinced that there was nothing of the sort inside, they permitted the owner to replace the drawers, but the moment these were pushed in and the lock snapped, the peculiarity of the thing seemed to overcome them again, and once more they demanded the keys. The second search revealed no more than the first, of course, but it was with the keenest regret, apparently, that the inspectors saw the trunk finally borne away—there was something mysterious about it that they did not understand, and they were sure it meant there was tobacco concealed in a secret compartment or a false bottom.

Dry Placer Miner, formerly of California.

This company has the right, without royalty payments, to use the new patent machine upon all the land it may own, acquire by lease, or operate, in Arizona. We invite special attention to the great commercial value and profit of this machine, and what can be accomplished by it.

What This Machine Will Do

For the first time in the history of gold mining a machine has been invented which will handle the dry placer gold gravel without water, and in large quantities. This machine will save 98 per cent of all the gold in the gravel, and will do it at a lower working cost than by any existing process. It is operated by a small, compact engine, using crude oil as fuel. A complete plant, capable of handling 300 tons per day will weigh less than 1,200 pounds.

To secure this gold only those placer lands could be worked, which could command large supplies of water, hence the immense bodies of dry placer lands remote from water have never been worked.

Fifteen Hundred Millions in Gold

The United States has yielded nineteen hundred millions in gold, of which fifteen hundred millions—or more than 75 per cent.—were the product of its placers.

Ninety per cent. of the world's total gold supply has been taken from placers by processes which have admittedly lost the bulk of the values.

Simplicity of Machine — Its Method of Operation

The machine is so extremely simple in construction and operation that any intending investor can operate it instantly. He can take a peck or more of sand, either ordinary house or sea sand, or such as is found in the placer lands of Arizona and California, put into this sand ten or a hundred pieces of gold as small as the point of a toothpick, and from that to the head of an ordinary pin, mix the sand and the gold thoroughly, turn them into the hopper or feed of the machine, and in a few seconds the machine will separate the gold from the gravel and recover from 98 to 100 per cent of the gold. It is an absolute, infallible, ocular demonstration of the merits of the machine. It has solved the problem of handling sand or gravel containing gold in regions remote from water.

Cost of Handling Material

Each plant is portable, weighs less than 1,200 pounds and can be easily moved by a few laborers.

The two greatest authorities in the world on the moving of material are "Haswell" and "Trautwine." They say in their standard publications that a laborer can shovel horizontally, 12 feet, vertically 6 feet for 50 feet haul 17 cubic yards in 10 hours.

A well known engineer in his work for the U. S. Government at Sandy Hook, moved 18 cubic yards, 100 feet haul in 10 hours at a cost of 10 cents per cubic yard, paying laborers $1.75 per day.

The dry placer gold-bearing sands of California, Arizona and New Mexico are handled quite as easily as those of Sandy Hook.

Ten laborers can easily supply one machine with 204 cubic yards of gravel in 12 hours, working at the same speed as shown by Haswell, Trautwine or at Sandy Hook.

Placer work on above basis would cost about 11 1-2c. per cubic yard.

Do You Want Monthly Dividends?

We make a special offer of a limited number of shares of stock at this time, because the company requires immediately sufficient to build several machines to operate in the field.

Every machine at work will increase the intrinsic value of the stock.

Twenty machines in the field will increase the price and value of this stock more than double the present offering, and every additional machine means a further increase in price and value.

The Company intends to divide its net earnings every month, so that the stockholders may count absolutely on receiving monthly dividends in proportion to monthly earnings.

THE ROSE OF THE RING

Nellie saw her danger, and felt how powerless she was to cope with the maddened beast that unless stopped, would soon hurl himself, as well as his rider, into the chasm.

She heard the sound of a horse galloping after her, and prayed that her rescuer might arrive in time.

Cold drops of terror gathered on her brow, as she saw the brink, with its frail border of bushes and grass, a few instants, and she would lie, a crushed and bleeding mass, at the bottom of the cave.

It was horrible to die like this, to have her life snatched away, with such cruel suddenness.

At that moment, Duke reached her side, and threw his horse right in Hunter's path.

This checked his mad career for an instant; the next, he reared, as if to leap over both horse and rider in front of him.

The movement made the horse stagger backwards, but he dragged Duke with him, and with a wild shriek, Nellie saw him fall beneath the hoofs of the struggling beasts.

She slipped from her saddle, and, ghastly with fear, crept round to where her preserver was lying, motionless, with closed eyes, while a crimson stream dyed the grass beside him:.

She knelt, uttering a piteous call for help, as she held her handkerchief over a gash on Duke's head, whence blood was flowing.

"Duke!" she moaned. "Oh, Duke, speak to me!"

He did not move, or utter a sound, and an awful dread took possession of her.

"He is dead!" she wailed. "Dead, and I have killed him!"

In her remorse, she felt she would give her life to hear one word from his lips—to see him safe and strong, as she had seen him but a few moments ago.

"I did not mean to hurt you, Duke," she said, and, with a sudden impulse, bent and pressed her lips, again and again, to his pale cheek. "I would die for you, if I could undo what I have done. Cannot you hear me, Duke?"

Her passionate, remorseful words were lost on him—he was insensible to the loving clasp of her arms about him.

A strange feeling stole over her, as she gazed down upon his helpless form.

She had never pictured him in any other light than as a strong man, with a will of iron—now, while he lay stretched motionless on the ground, she had a new feeling for him.

What would her life be, if he never woke to consciousness again?

What if she should never again hear his voice, or meet the glance of his frank truthful eyes?

She shuddered. Without him, she knew her life would be more lonely than ever—his strength, his love, that she had scorned, had taken much of the desolation out of her heart—until that hour, she had never dreamt how much he was to her.

As she bent over him waiting for the groom, who had started off at once for help, to return, she thought of all the kind attentions Duke had paid her.

Every word of love that had escaped his lips, when the restraint he placed upon his feelings had become too difficult for him to keep back what was in his heart, came to her mind now.

She shivered, as if from cold, and, with a strange tightening at her heart, she clasped her arms more closely about the unconscious and bleeding man, and waited.

With eyes wide with fear and pity, she watched the groom, who came up with some laborers, made a rude hurdle, and placed Duke's inanimate form upon it.

She walked beside the sad procession in silence—her face white as death—her gaze never once turned from the wounded man.

"Will he never speak, or open his eyes again?" she asked, after a long silence, during which the solemn tread of the men seemed to freeze her blood with a foreboding horror. "Cannot you make him speak?"

"He'll be all right soon, miss," the groom replied—her pallid face showed him how much she suffered, and he pitied her.

A doctor was sent for as soon as Duke had been carried into the Rayne Hurst.

The wounds were not so grave as they had at first, appeared, and there was no danger for the invalid.

No one knew the joy the doctor's words gave Nellie—it seemed to her as though a heavy weight had been lifted from her heart.

Yet her gladness was dimmed by Duke's first message, that she was not to go near him while he was ill.

To Lady Rayne's intense surprise, Nellie burst into tears when she heard what he had said.

"Don't take it to heart, my darling," Lady Rayne said. "He will forgive you when he feels better. Of course he thinks it is through you he is lying there, helpless, and, in pain; later he will judge you less harshly."

"It is all through my mad folly," Nellie exclaimed, wringing her hands, "Duke will never forgive me for this—never!"

CHAPTER XXI.

The room in which Sir Felix had breathed his last, had been cleared of most of the cumbersome furniture; new hangings took the place of faded, old ones, and there was nothing left that could call to mind what had transpired between those walls.

The suite of rooms set aside for Lady Errol had also undergone a change.

Everything that had belonged to her had been taken away.

It was removed to a dark corner of the gallery, where the light seldom penetrated, and a curtain was hung over the canvas.

It could rest there, until Lady Errol's shadowed life had faded from the memory of man.

Rose had refrained from giving the order for its destruction.

It was Marc's work; hours of labor had been spent upon it, and every touch showed the skill of the artist.

Rose would have felt unutterably wretched in her new home, had there not been so much for her to do.

Her love of sunshine and bright surroundings prevailed over the gloom that had at first oppressed her.

There should be no more cobwebs at Drayton Court: the rafters should no longer be a refuge for the bat and the screech-owl.

Her home should be as befitted her rank; not an abode of shadows, but a palace no princess would shame to enter.

Mr. Monckton smiled approval at the plans she laid before him.

Worse than the Man in the Well.

The escape from death of Captain Engellandt of the German iron sailing vessel "Erndte," news of which is reported from Dantzic, will hardly find its equal in the annals of life-saving. The "Erndte" left Memel with a cargo of timber on April 16. During the next two days the vessel was exposed to a very rough sea, which kept the crew of four men at work day and night. On April 18, just as the captain had retired to his cabin, the storm suddenly became so violent that the vessel capsized. The crew were swept away and drowned, and the captain was imprisoned in the ship's hull, the hatches having been closed tightly by the sudden pressure of the water. The wreck drifted along, keel uppermost, until April 30, when it was sighted by the Norwegian steamship "Aurora" off the fishing village of Rixhoeft. The steamship immediately proceeded to secure the wreck, and while thus engaged the crew heard repeated knocks from the inside against the iron bottom. They also noticed a noise resembling a human voice crying "Help." A hole was drilled in the iron plates, and this was hardly accomplished, when a human finger appeared in the opening. Then Captain Engellandt announced himself to the astonished sailors as safe and sound within the ship's hull. He said he had food enough for three days, but during the last 24 hours had been compelled to drink sea water because the tanks were empty. The Norwegian steamship's artificers were not prepared to make the hole in the iron bottom large enough to permit of the imprisoned man's liberation, and therefore the wreck was towed to Dantzic. Here the vessel was raised, and thus ended Captain Engellandt's captivity, which lasted twelve weary days and eleven nights. The hardy seaman is none the worse for the fatigues he underwent. During the day he worked hard to make his presence inside the vessel known to passing ships, but at night he slept peacefully with the water underneath and the iron roof above.

Where Perfumes Come From.

William E. Curtis declares that ninety per cent. of the perfumery used in the world comes from what is known as the Department of Sea Alps in France, the strip of mountainous country which lies along the Mediterranean east of Marseilles. The soil, the climate, and the sloping hillsides facing the southern sun, make this a most favorable location for the cultivation of flowers, and the annual harvest is about 6,000,000 pounds of roses, 5,000,000 pounds of orange blossoms, 3,000,000 pounds of carnations, 1,000,000 pounds of violets, 9,000,000 pounds of lilies, 600,000 pounds of tube roses, and other flowers in proportion. These flowers are mostly raised by peasants, who own small farms and do their own work. They sell their crop of flowers to the agents of Paris perfumery manufacturers, and train-loads are shipped to that city every night during the season, just as milk from the Western farms is shipped to the creameries. When there is an abundant harvest, the buyers will pay six cents a pound for rose leaves, seven cents for orange blossoms, twenty-five cents for jasmines, fifty cents for violets, and similar rates for other flowers. After the day's harvest is done, the flowers are dumped upon tables or benches and the stems are nipped close, but the leaves that protect the blossoms are allowed to remain, because otherwise they wilt quickly, and freshness is desirable. Each leaf contains only a particle of oil, and it takes a great many particles to make an ounce. It requires 32,000 pounds of rose leaves, or 5,000,000 single blossoms, to make one pound of rose oil, and 40,000 pounds of violets, or 12,000,000 flowers, to make a pound of the oil; and one may judge of the enormous amount of flowers that are gathered annually for this purpose when it is known that the perfumers of Paris consume nearly a million pounds of the oil of flowers every year.

The court of Amsterdam has a strange lawsuit before it. As far back as February last year a newly-born child was taken from the mother's care to be reared in an incubator. In accordance with medical advice the infant was packed in wadding and hurried to the hospital, where the incubators stand ready to receive weakly babies. Meanwhile, in compliance with Dutch law, the father had the birth of a son registered and the child was given the name of Franciscus Gerardus, there and then. At the hospital a receipt was taken for the baby boy, and he was put into one of the incubators. Some weeks passed, and the parents received notice that their child was well enough to be taken away. Imagine the father's surprise when he went to fetch his son to have a baby girl thrust into his arms! The hospital nurse declared some mistake had been made by the parents. The parents, nurse and other witnesses declared the mistake was on the part of the hospital authorities. The baby girl was not wanted by the parents of the missing baby boy, and nobody else owned her. The father took proceedings against the mayor of the city, and claimed two hundred and forty pounds damage for his lost son. During the time the child was in the incubator the outside of the machine was painted, and according to the plaintiff's advocate, the cards on which are written the particulars regarding the inmates were mixed up.

Engaging Frankness.

Commenting upon the performance of the new United States battleship Missouri which on her test before being taken over by the Government, developed 18¼ knots an hour, and was forthwith heralded throughout the republic as "the naval wonder of the world," "a record-breaker," "the Queen of the Seas," "Pride of the Ocean," "the Incomparable Missouri," and "the Gem of the Navy," and other things besides, The New York Tribune dares to say editorially: "To obtain a correct idea of the merits of the Missouri, which has just had her speed trial, a few comparisons are necessary. When it is announced that she is the best battleship of her class in the world it needs to be remembered that there are a good many other classes, and that the one which the Missouri represents contains only three vessels. . . . . . Great Britain, too, has several classes of heavily-armored vessels, and none of them exactly corresponds in either size or armament to those of this country. During the last few months at least four battleships of an entirely new group have been launched. The Commonwealth was set afloat in May, the King Edward VII. in July, and the Dominion and the Hindustan each at later dates. These are monsters, displacing no less than 16,350 tons, and are expected to develop eighteen and a half knots. None of them having been tried as yet, it is not possible to say how nearly the expectations of their designers will be realised, but there is little reason for entertaining doubt on that point. Moreover, the British Government already has in commission much faster battleships than these. Vessels of the class to which the Russell, now, or recently, in the Mediterranean, belongs displace 14,-000 tons, and achieve no less than nineteen and a half knots! It is pleasant, when contemplating these figures, to think of the friendly relations which exist between this country and England."

Such engaging frankness, even in so generally fair a paper as The New York Tribune, is about enough to warrant the people of the United States in demanding that The Tribune immediately cease publication, on the ground that it is unpatriotic.

Our Apples in England.

Under the title "Apples from Canada" The London Grocer has the following appreciative note concerning the influence of the fruit marks act on the quality of Canadian appples exported to Great Britain.

"The great development in the Canadian apple trade is one of the features in the recent history of the empire's progress, and it is safe to prophesy that as the twentieth century grows older far vaster quantities of lucious fruit of many kinds will be drawn hither from the kindly slopes of southern Canada—a sunny region, where to our personal knowledge, 'Our Lady of the Snows' is a ludicrous misnomer. In the present issue we note an announcement by Mesrs George Vipond & Co., of Montreal, an old established firm of packers, who start the season with 20-000 barrels of the finest shipping apples, Canadian Government Standard XXX. Many of our readers are aware that Professor Robertson and his energetic colleagues of the Canadian Department of Agriculture, and the heads of the Government itself, have been giving special attention to the apple trade as one of Canada's staples for export business. This is most satisfactory to distributors here, and the strict regard now paid to grading and selecting the fruit so far as to ensure honesty in the trade, and the proper transport by rail and steamer according to the most scientific methods cannot but have as a result the rapid development of a most satisfactory trade."

Ping-pong on the Decline.

The London Daily Express declares that ping-pong is on the decline, and even suburban champions are becoming weary of it. To take its place a new parlor game, called "hocker-ball," has been invented. Hocker-ball is distinctly a sociable game, inasmuch as it can be played by four, six or eight people seated comfortably around the family dining-table.

There are goals and goalkeepers at the end of the table, which is divided into courts marked out by tapes on a green cloth. The miniature hockey clubs, painted red and blue, are held between the thumb and forefinger, and the cork-and rubber ball is driven into the goals as in hockey.

Many other parlor games have been invented. As a variation of bridge, a game of cards entitled "varique" is now on the market. "Ascot" is a new racing game, which suggests the "petite chevaux" of the continental casinos. The new "automaton" cricket board is an indoor game so constructed that the various strokes in cricket are reproduced. "Snakes and ladders," an Oriental game, has become a popular drawing-room amusement. "Kalipha," or the game of the forty thieves, is listed as "the coming craze." The other new parlor games are "Hook-it," "Aunt Sally," "Tournament," "Devil on Two Sticks," "Pliffkins," "Flitterkins," "Wheeling" and "Enfield Skittles."

An Accomplished Resolution.

Half-starved and clad in rags, a boy of seven one day wandered about the lowest quarters of Glasgow. He saw that other urchins were in the same plight as himself, and he vowed in after life to brighten the lives of such children. That vow was fulfilled. The boy, says The London Daily Mail, was William Quarrier, the founder of the Scottish Orphan Homes, who died on Oct. 16. His career was a long record of noble unselfishness and broad-minded philanthropy. Thirty years ago he inaugurated a scheme of orphan homes, and since then nearly 11,000 destitute children have received free board and education and have been taught trades. Mr. Quarrier also sent about 5,000 children to Canada, and was instrumental in erecting the first consumptive sanatorium in Scotland. Mr. Quarrier's early struggles form a grim chapter in his life. He was born at Greenock in 1829, and at the age of five his father died leaving a widow to keep a family of three. William brought in a shilling a week by punching heads upon pins, and later was apprenticed to a shoemaker. At twelve he qualified as a "journeyman," and found employment with a Mrs. Hunter, of Glasgow. He was twenty-three when he started business on his own account, and at twenty-seven he married the daughter of his late employer. Within a few years his business was thriving and extensive. Then he began to put into practice the philanthropic ambitions of his boyhood, and, aided by the donations of others, he eminently succeeded. Since 1872 he had in all the stewardship of over £447,000.

An apple shipper calls the attention of the fruit division, Ottawa, to the desirability of having apple barrels clean and in nice condition. Some farmers, he says, would as soon roll them through a mud puddle as not. This is one of the minor points which many people are inclined to overlook, but which are well worthy of attention. All our food products will prove more salable and fetch higher prices if put up in neat, clean, attractive packages.

Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives

Not a single patient has ever been refused admittance because of his or her poverty.

FROM THE YUKON

—From Bishop of Selkirk, Caribou Crossing, Yukon: "The trifling remittance ($10.00) herewith enclosed, is intended to express our sympathy for the sufferers in other parts rather than imply a special need for your institution here."

CONFEDERATION LIFE ASSOCIATION

—J. K. Macdonald, Esq., Managing Director Confederation Life Association, in sending cheque for $500.00 from his Company, says: "I am pleased to be able to be the medium of helping on so good a work."

Funds Urgently Needed

The financial reports for the year just ending show that to keep the doors of the Free Hospital for Consumptives open, maintaining the number of patients for which accommodation has been provided, not less than $25,000 is required for the year now entered upon.

Since the Free Hospital was opened (18 months ago) 224 patients have been received. The help the institution has been to these people—all from the wage-earning and poorer ranks of life—cannot be estimated in human language.

—Edward D. Heddon, Solina, Ont., on leaving the Free Hospital, writes: "I cannot speak too highly of the institution from which I have received so much benefit. I can but tender my best thanks for the kindness shown."

—Minnie Linklater, Hamilton, writes: "I have spent over nine months at the Free Hospital for Consumptives. I believe I have been greatly helped, and shall never hesitate to use my influence to further that good cause."

There is no endowment, excepting the provision made by three life insurance companies for six beds for the current year. Only by the continued contributions of the Canadian public can the work be maintained.

Patients are accepted from every part of the Dominion, and there have been in residence during the past year patients from Prince Edward Island on the east to the Northwest Territories on the west.

Contributions may be sent to Sir W. R. Meredith, Kt., Vice-President National Sanitarium Association, or Mr. W. J. Gage, Chairman of the Executive Committee, Toronto, Can.

Who Are the Battenbergs?

Of the many millions of people ruled by King Edward it is very doubtful whether more than one or two hundred have a clear idea of the size of England's royal family, taking into account the descendants of King George III.'s three sons, the Dukes of Kent, Cumberland and Cambridge. To the great majority of people it is a complete puzzle. Even in Victorian times there were numbers of persons in this country absorbed to such an extent in minding their own business and that of their near neighbors that, though instinctively loyal to their good Queen, and well content to be her subjects, they could never remember the names of Her Majesty's children beyond the first three—the Princess Royal, the Prince of Wales and Prince Alfred.

As for Queen Victoria's grandchildren, especially those whose fathers were foreign princes, the average Briton "gave it up" if asked where the Hessians or Christians came from, and whether any one of them had a chance of the English crown. As regards the young Battenbergs, a disposition prevails to-day to class all of them as belonging to Princess Beatrice, whom many benighted creatures imagine to be the mother of Princess Alice, lately betrothed to Prince Andrew of Greece.

In reality there are two Battenberg sets—three sons and one daughter, the children of the late Prince Henry and our late Queen's youngest daughter; and two sons and two daughters, the children of Prince Louis and Princess Victoria of Hesse, the latter being one of Queen Victoria's foreign granddaughters. To this second group does Princess Alice of Battenberg belong; and Princess Beatrice, instead of being her mamma, is her great-aunt and aunt-in-law combined. The interesting young people included in the two families are really German Highnesses of but minor degree; but the great affection felt for them by our late Queen seems to class them among "the rest of the royal family" prayed for in England's Established Church, and most people wish them well, even though hazy over their real names and titles.

So far, only one of Queen Victoria's great-granddaughters is married — Princess Feodora of Saxe-Meiningen, who became Princess Henry XXX. of Reuss in 1898, when she was nineteen years of age. Her mother, Princess Charlotte of Prussia, was younger—aged seventeen years and seven months—when she married the hereditary Prince of Saxe-Meiningen, being anxious, so it was said, to escape from the arbitrary control of her maternal parent, the then German Crown Princess, afterwards the Empress Frederick—who, in her turn, had become a bride about two months after her seventeenth birthday.

The first of the Victorian "Four Generations" pictures represented our late Queen with these descendants, the eldest daughter, granddaughter and great-granddaughter; and sentimental folk to whom this group appealed were somewhat disappointed that the venerable sovereign passed away without figuring in a five-generation tableau.

Princess Alice of England, Queen Victoria's second daughter, was not hurried to the hymeneal altar so early as her elder sister, being more than nineteen years of age when she became Princess Louis of Hesse. Her eldest daughter Victoria, was twenty-one at the time she married Prince Louis of Battenberg; and Princess Alice of Battenberg is now eighteen, and may have to wait a while before becoming a bride, her fiance being a king's younger son, with no definite income of his own.

No photograph could be taken of these four generations—Queen Victoria, Alice Grand Duchess of Hesse, Victoria Princess Louis of Battenberg and Princess Alice of Battenberg—for our late sovereign's second daughter died before her eldest child was sixteen, and saw none of her family settled in life. England would probably have seen little or nothing of any Battenbergs had not the death of the Grand Duchess Alice obliged Queen Victoria to take special interest in the motherless grandchildren at Darmstadt and their German relations, with the result that this morganatic branch of the Hessian line obtained her Majesty's favorable notice and a good place in her match-making books.

Overcoming the Obstacle.

"Yes," said the young man who was taking the young woman for an auto ride, "the auto has its advantages; but still there is a great difference between it and the good old horse."

"Oh, yes; I suppose there is," answered the young woman.

"For instance," went on the young man, "with the horse, when one was driving with the pretty girl, he could hold the lines in one hand, or wrap them about the whip, and—and—and hug the girl."

"Oh-h-h-h! you awful thing!" exclaimed the blushing young woman.

They sped along in silence for several miles. At last the timid young thing said:

"But I should think that difficulty could be easily overcome."

"What difficulty?" asked the young man.

"Why, that—what you said about the times when the men took the girls driving behind a horse, and—and when they wrapped the lines about the whip, and when they—they—oh, when they did what you say they did."

"I don't see how it could be overcome," said the youth. "If you stop the auto it's liable to start up of itself and upset you in the ditch, and a fellow simply has to keep both hands busy while it is in motion."

"I know," faltered the girl; "but—but it seems to me there would be a way."

"I'd like to know what it is."

"Well, couldn't the girl—couldn't she hug—hug the man?"

Equitable Gold Mining Co.

R. C. LANE, President. S. F. NORTON, Secretary and Treasurer.

Over $300,000 of development work already done. Main shaft 9 x 16 feet, down 700 feet. Over 3,000 feet of drifts, tunels and shafts showing immense ore body

Destined to become large and continuous dividend payer.

The Equitable Gold Mining Co.'s properties consist of three mines, known as the North Bonanza, Flowery and Kimbark. They are located in Six Mile Canyon, less than four miles from Virginia City, Nevada, which is the nearest railroad station.

Years ago, over three hundred thousand dollars of development work was done upon the mines—as they are not mere "prospects" but actual mines. This work was done under the personal supervision of competent engineers, and was paid for by the owners of the mines themselves; thus giving double assurance that the work was well done and that the expenditure was justified.

The Main Shaft (triple compartment, 9x16 feet in the clear) is down seven hundred feet. From this shaft, running along the vein matter, east and west, are four drifts, at different levels, having a combined length (including the little winze and the tunnel) of 2,800 feet.

In addition to the above there are four small shafts, with a combined depth of about 300 feet; 855 feet of tunnels, and at least 500 feet of cross-cuts, upraises, etc.

All told, there is 4,650 feet of underground work—the most of which is in ore. Here is nearly one mile of openings in mineralized rock.

It is conservatively estimated by competent and reliable engineers and practical miners that there is developed an ore body of at least One Million Five Hundred Thousand Tons!

As a further evidence of the large amount of work done there is from 75,000 to 100,000 tons of ore on the dumps at the different surface openings—ore that, with modern cheapened processes, can be converted into gold bullion at a profit.

THE TITLE

Title to the Flowery and North Bonanza mines is by patent from the United States government, while the title of the Kimbark is by location and possession.

The Equitable Company obtained the Flowery and North Bonanza mines, both of which are patented, by purchase—the payments therefore to be made out of a share of the net proceeds of the mines. The Company has a written contract, duly recorded, for a deed and is in possession of the properties, and is now operating them. The sum of $2,000 was paid on the contract, September 30th, 1903, and partial payments have since been made.. The Company is entitled to $6.25 per ton as cost of mining and milling. One-half of all over and above this $6.25 per ton goes to the former owners till they receive the total sum of $105,000, without interest. There is no stipulation as to amount of work to be done within any specified time—and no proceeds, no pay. The Company can therefore pay it in one year or it can pay it in ten years. With this exception the Company is free from debt. Its policy is to pay as it goes. In this way it has no fear of financial embarrassments. The title to the Kimbark is by "location," under the mining laws of the United States. Work enough has already been done to entitle the Company to a patent, which in due time will be obtained.

Recent Development Work

Since the Company acquired the property, it has put up poles and wires for a distance of one mile for the transmission of electric power from the Truckee River Electric Power Plant. By this means unlimited power for mining, hoisting and milling is obtained.

It has built a dwelling house for the manager, a large boarding house for the miners, a barn, a power house and blacksmith shop..

It has put an electric hoist and skip into the 265-tunnell; has purchased ore cars and the necessary tools for mining purposes.

It has acquired the Kimbark ground, adjoining the Flowery and North Bonanza mines, and is now developing the property by driving a tunnel.

Storm King Group of Mines

TO CANADIAN INVESTORS

The property comprising what is known as the STORM KING GROUP OF MINES offers an attractive and safe investment. The property is the richest in the country and we believe it would be difficult to secure an investment that promises better returns. The following is a description of the mines written by Capt. A. M. Paul, whose reputation as an expert in mining matters is known far and near.

These properties are situated in the Cable Cove Mining District, about fifteen miles north of Sumpter, Oregon, and about one mile northwest of the Baby McKee mine, about two miles northwest of the Last Chance, the Alpine, the Imperial and the California mines.

The properties in this report consist of seven claims. The names of the seven claims being as follows: The Eureka and the Honest Dollar. These two claims are on the same vein. Adjoining these two claims and paralleling them on the northwest is another vein upon which there are two claims known as the Jessie and Golden Rule, and paralleling them on the northwest there is another vein upon which there are two claims, known as the Storm King and the Ozone. The last claim of this group lies to the northwest of the last two named, and is adjoining them. This claim is the Shannon Bell.

In making my report I will commence with the two first named claims of the group, the Eureka and Honest Dollar. The development on these claims consists of a tunnel ninety-seven feet in length, running along the course of the vein, showing two feet ten inches of ore in the top of the tunnel and a little over three feet in the bottom, which assays giving values of from $9.66 to $79 per ton in gold. About four hundred feet in a southwesterly direction there is a shaft on the vein ten feet deep, showing the vein to be from one to two inches wide on the surface and about twelve inches wide in the bottom of the shaft, in which assays give values of from $9.76 to $40 per ton in free milling gold ore.

This vein is exposed by small shafts and open cuts for a distance of fifteen hundred feet, and the course of this vein is north, ten degrees east, and the vein cuts the formation, showing it to be a true fissure, and the formation is granite. This vein shows in places a width of from ten to fifteen feet of mineralized matter, commonly called vein matter, but which is caused by hot solutions from below.

I will now pass to the Jessie and Golden Rule. There has been very little work done upon these two claims, there being one discovery shaft ten feet deep, showing ore on all sides of the shaft, and running in value of from $4 upwards. It is my opinion that with development this, too, will prove valuable property.

The work on the Storm King and Ozone consists of a tunnel near the point of discovery and is driven along the vein for a distance of one hundred and eighty feet, showing ore all the way from the surface to the face of the tunnel, and averaging in width from six to eighteen inches. Three assays gave the following values, $12.50. This being a general sample taken from the dump. The other two assays are $42.65 and $79.66 respectively, this being the assorted ore for shipment. The course of this tunnel and vein are north, ten degrees west, and the vein cuts the trend of the formation obliquely (which is granite) and by driving this tunnel five or six hundred feet further it will on the present course it will meet a quartzite reef (which is running north, twenty degrees east) which would make this a contact vein between granite and quartzite, and should produce a large body of ore, at the intersection of the contact.

The only work done upon the Shannon Bell, the last claim of this group is the location work, and is not enough to allow of a report being made.

There is water for power purposes one mile from the property, and timber on the ground, of a very fine quality, sufficient to run the mine for many years to come.

All the assays mentioned in this report were made by the assayer, of the Imperial mine at my request, and the ore was taken by me from the properties mentioned.

I will state that I have been a practical miner since 1870, and am now the manager and superintendent of the Imperial mine in this district.

(Signed) CAPTAIN A. M. PAUL.

One mill completed ready for operation and another being built. One and one-half miles from the main line of the Southern Railroad, cheap labor, cheap fuel. Plenty of water and a climate allowing operations 365 days per annum, are a few of the advantages that go to make this one of the most valuable mining properties today in the country.

New Zealand's Man-Killing Geyser.

The Australian "Review of Reviews" for September, just to hand, contains a vivid account of a remarkable disaster which occurred recently in New Zealand:

Waimangu geyser, Rotorua, New Zealand, is one of the most remarkable geysers in the world: a lake of boiling water, black and threatening, that, at irregular intervals, shoots up into space a vast column of water, mud and stones to a height sometimes of over 1,000 feet. It is simply one of the wonders of the world. It is situated on a crater chain, which was formed by the great Tarawera eruption rift. One photograph taken while it was playing shows liquid mud rising to a height estimated at 1,800 feet. The immense stone, shot up hundreds of feet, as shown on the photograph, was afterwards found to measure 12 feet by 8 feet. The steam cloud from the geyser can be seen thirty miles away. One feature is the echelon discharge of many of the shots. The first might send stones and mud perpendicularly, so that they all fall back into the crater. The second might come at an angle, and bombard the bank where the victims stood. On Sunday afternoon, August 30, a group of tourists were waiting to secure a snapshot of the next eruption, when a dreadful discharge of boiling water and mud took place, and four persons—two of them young ladies, and one of them a well-known guide—were caught in the watery cyclone, swept away in a moment and destroyed; the mother of the two girls, only a few feet distant, being a shrieking spectator of the tragedy. Here is a description of the incident by an eye-witness:

"My sister and myself had been staying at Rotorua since Monday last. Our first view of the giant geyser at Waimangu was obtained on Tuesday. There was then not a ripple on it. We made up our minds that we would visit it again, and we did so on Sunday, accompanying a fairly large party, consisting for the most part of tourists. The geyser was then playing gently. We took up a position near the shelter shed and watched the jets of water shoot upwards. About 12.30 a shot went up to a height of 400 feet or thereabouts. After crossing to the far side and inspecting the display from numerous positions, we came back, passed over the bridge, and stood on a slight projection. Looking over the edge of the geyser, we were rewarded by seeing an outburst from the geyser reach a height of 800 feet. Other shots went higher still. It was a stupendous spectacle. About 3 p.m. I noticed a party of ladies and gentlemen, who had arrived at Waimangu about 2.30 or 2.45. They included the Misses Nicholls, Joseph Warbrick and Mr. McNaughton. The ladies and gentlemen took up a position some forty or fifty yards in front of where I was standing. They had cameras with them, and were evidently bent on getting snapshots of Waimangu in action.

"At twenty minutes past three the geyser sent up a huge column of boiling mud and scalding water that spread out over a wide area. For perhaps rather more than a minute the entire scene was enveloped in darkness, made all the more terrifying by reverberations as of thunder and a vibration that filled the atmosphere and caused the ground under our feet to tremble. I called out to my sister to run for her life, and I fled after her. Fortunately, we had a clear path in front of us, and we got away just in time, a huge fragment of rock falling within a yard of us. The eruption lasted for about two minutes.

"The disappearance of Misses Nicholls, Mr. J. Warbrick and Mr. McNaughton caused the utmost consternation. They had apparently attempted to reach the path, but without success, the boiling torrent sweeping them into the seething cauldron below. Search was at once made for the victims. Warbrick, the guide, assisted by a number of others, including myself, took part in this painful task. The first body recovered was that of Mr. McNaughton. This was found about half a mile from the bridge in about twelve feet of water. It was terribly disfigured, the head in particular being badly cut. Some distance further on the body of Joseph Warbrick was found, also shockingly distorted. The bodies of the ladies were recovered at a distance of about a mile from the spot where they were standing when the eruption took place. Their jackets and shoes had been washed off them, and they were greatly disfigured. Mrs. Nicholls, mother of the unfortunate young ladies, was dazed and heart-broken. It was pitiable to witness her grief.

"You will form some idea of the force of the explosion when I tell you that a stone weighing not less than a hundredweight was projected through the air for well nigh a mile, and ere it buried itself almost out of sight in the earth split a huge rock into fragments. Hundreds of tons of mud and stones were thrown up from the mouth of the geyser."

German Anti-Tipping League.

A movement has just been started in Berlin to abate, if possible, the practice of tipping in cafes and restaurants. An anti-tipping league has been founded in Berlin, with branches in the principal cities of Germany. The members of the league sign a pledge to frequent only those restaurants and cafes in which tipping is strictly prohibited. The proprietors of the establishments which abolish the tipping will be supplied gratis with a big sign bearing the letters "O. T." (Ohne trinkgerd) meaning "no tips," printed in large type. The waiters themselves profess to be in favor of the innovation as long as their employers pay them a wage sufficiently large to enable them to dispense with tips. It would be a great relief to the traveling public, and particularly to American tourists, who at home are not accustomed to be taxed at every turn, if the league should become a success.

The Unpopularity of Whiskers.

Commenting on the fact that Governor Alexander Monroe Dockery has just divested his countenance of a celebrated and almost immortal set of whiskers, the New York "Sun" says: "The twentieth century is beginning somewhat as the nineteenth century began, though, of course, not so strictly and universally smooth, but it is doubtful if it will run parallel through all its quarters with its predecessor. There were no mustaches, no beards, when the nineteenth century dawned. Side whiskers began to curl and sprout before it had run far in its course, and they grew bolder after a time and encircled the throat and chin, leaving bare the upper lip. The lip was submerged about 1860, and in the later years of destruction was last to yield to the assaults of the barber. The human countenance began to exhibit itself again not long after the war, and from that time down to the very recent past the unsupported mustache was the prevailing mode. Now fashion is changing again, so that the young men are commonly completely shaved, and their fathers have covered lips. The youth of to-day have the weight of civilized precedent with them. An examination of the family albums of the last four centuries will demonstrate that the unwhiskered have had by far the better of it. For nearly two hundred years of that time the beard was not permitted to sprout. A great deal of encouragement for the shaven but ambitious young man may be found in the Presidency of the United States. From the beginning with Washington down to Lincoln's time whiskers found lodgment in the White House only three times, and in every case they were of the remote variety known as sideboards, which offered no considerable obstruction to the observation of the faces to which they were linked. John Quincy Adams presented a stubborn pair, Martin Van Buren's were amiable in their moods, and Zachary Taylor's were evidently the unobtrusive expression of a fancy for trimmings. Lincoln inaugurated the bearded era, which was carried on by Grant, Hayes, Garfield, Arthur (with Dundrearys), and Harrison, though Harrison yielded not a little of his expanse before he retired from office. Cleveland was the first mustached President and Roosevelt the second, while McKinley preserved the tradition of the smooth face.

Already Provided.

A certain small village, far removed from the noise and bustle of commerce, boasts a female preacher, and the lady's duties are many. One day she may visit the sick, another attend a funeral, and the next baptize a baby. One afternoon she was preparing the sermon for the following Sabbath when she heard a timid knock at the parsonage door. Answering the summons she found a bashful young German standing on the step and twirling his straw hat in his hands.

"Good afternoon!" the preacheress remarked. "What do you wish?"

"Dey say der minister lifed in dis house, hey?"

"Yes, sir."

"Yoss! Vell, I vant me to kit merriet."

"All right; I can marry you," she said. The lady's hair is beginning to silver, and the German glanced at it. Then he jammed his hat on his head and hurried down the path. "What's the matter?" she called after him.

"You gits no chance mit me," he called back. "I don't vant you; I haf got me girl already."—"Modern Society."

A Lesson in Tact.

A few weeks ago, says James MacArthur in "Harper's Weekly," I quote some passages in these columns from a correspondence between the Brownings in the days of their early acquaintance on Carlyle's strong dislike of poetry. I have just heard of a new story on the same theme which is told by Professor Goldwin Smith. It appears that Professor Smith was once a visitor with Carlyle at Lady Ashburton's house when Tennyson was one of the circle at "The Grange." Tennyson was asked to read one of his own poems aloud, but, to the surprise and disappointment of his gentle hostess and her company, he refused—a thing he was never apt to do. Looking across the room, Professor Smith saw the cause of the difficulty. Close to Tennyson sat Carlyle, who was wont to make a universal sweep of poetry in its relation to common sense when aroused by the proximity of the Muse. Professor Smith, devoting himself to the public good, and, we may add, in courteous consideration of his hostess, crossed the room, and invited Carlyle to take a stroll in the grounds. The Sage accepted the invitation, and, during the stroll, the poet brought off his reading.

A CASE IN POINT

Mr. Ulric Barault, a young gentleman who lived for years in Sweetsburg, Quebec, inharited Catarrh from his mother. The disease spread through his system till he was a physical wreck.

"As a child," said Mr. Barault, "I was prone to an ulceration of the mucous lining of the throat and nasal passages.

"I grew pale and emaciated, lost all desire for food, and got into such a dreadful condition that my friends said that Catarrh was fairly eating me up.

Every organ of my body seemed affected and the doctor said it was the first stage of consumption. He advised Catarrhozone, and I inhaled it ten minutes at a time every few hours, and was rewarded in a few days by a wonderful improvement.

Catarrhozone pleased me and the doctor so well that I used it continually, and took Ferrozone Tablets after each meal to build up my strength. In about three weeks I was quite recovered, and the doctor says no remedy but Catarrhozone could work such a miracle.

"Every one in town knows I was just about dead with Catarrh, and my cure is an evidence of what Catarrhozone can do. It is a pleasure to recommend Catarrhozone."

(Signed) Ulric Barault."

Catarrhozone beyond question is the proper remedy for catarrhal and bronchial troubles. The medicated air goes all through the air passages of the head, throat and lungs. It kills the germs, heals the sore spots, allays irritation and keeps the breath pure.

Headache, tired feelings across the eyes, nausea, all these well-known disagreeable symptoms are overcome by the medicated air of Catarrhozone.

Ferrozone Tablets which are used in conjunction with Catarrhozone Inhaler drive all the poisonous secretions of catarrh from the blood. One taken after each meal creates new appetite and digestion, strengthens the stomach, revitalizes and invigorates the entire system.

Catarrhozone is quite unsurpassed as a cure for Catarrh in any part of the system. It is highly recommended for Bronchitis and Asthma.

Complete outfit, sufficient for two months' treatment, price $1.00; trial size 25 cts. Druggists or N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

THE CHRISTMAS SHOPPING

Why Christmas Shopping Should Not be Left Until Last Day

Christmas is now less than two weeks distant. In nearly every household in Peterborough presents will be given and received. Nearly every individual expects to make some gift.

If all left their purchasing until the last few days what an awful rush there would be! In the human family there are many who do delay until almost the last moment, so that Christmas shopping in a few days before the holidays means crowds and excitement that the masses may well dread.

As every day rolls around the crowds of Christmas shoppers will increase. Don't delay, don't procrastinate. You can shop now with comfort, and have the chance of a careful inspection of what you buy. In a week this privilege will be practically taken from you—the crowds will be so great and the salespeople so busy.

In making purchases remember that those who push for trade have the largest stocks, and generally the lowest prices. You will find the cards of progressive storekeepers in The Times. In the small, classified advertising you'll find the announcements of some shrewd and progressive business people, who have special facilities for trade and low prices. From this class many Christmas bargains can be picked up.

THE ELEMENTS OF SUCCESS

Essential to a Business Life Discussed by Young Men at St. John's

A very profitable and pleasant evening was spent at the Young Mens' Guild of St. Johns Chruch last night. The subject being the different elements essential for a successful business life.

Some of the elements discussed were punctuality by Mr. J. F. Brown; judgment, by Mr. Cluxton; tact, by Mr. Littledale, and perseverance by Mr. Joe. S Bell; Messrs. Chris Graham, J. F. Sutcliffe and others also contributed short speeches on the subject.

The arguments brought out by the discussion proved very stimulating to the business life and will no doubt be very effective in the business transactions of many present.

Mr. Harold Cluxton made a very efficient chairman for the occasion.

WHO CANNOT BE CURED.

So uniformly successful has Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription proven in all forms of Female Weakness, Prolapsus, or Falling of Womb, and Leucorrhea, that, after over a third of a century's experience in curing the worst cases of these distressing and debilitating ailments, Dr. Pierce now feels fully warranted in offering to pay $500 in cash for any case of these diseases which he cannot cure.

It Stands Alone.—The "Favorite Prescription" stands alone, as the one and only remedy for these distressingly common forms of weakness, possessed of such positively specific curative properties as to warrant its makers in proposing, and binding themselves to forfeit, as the proprietors of that wonderful remedy hereby do, to pay the sum of $500 in legal money of the United States in any case of the above diseases in which after a fair and reasonable trial of our treatment, we fail to cure. No other medicine for the cure of woman's peculiar ailments is backed by such a remarkable guarantee; no other medicine for woman's ills is possessed of the unparalleled curative properties that would warrant its manufacturers in making such an offer; no other remedy has such a record of cures on which to base such a remarkable offer.

$1,299.77 IS THE TOWN'S SURPLUS FOR THIS YEAR

As Estimated By Town Treasurer Brownscombe In His Annual Financial Statement

The Town Council met in statutory session last night, when there were present His Worship, Mayor G. M. Roger, in the chair, and Aldermen Rush, O'Connell, Finnie, McWilliams, Edgcumbe and Best.

The minutes of the preceding meeting were confirmed as type-written and distributed.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From J. M. Walton, seeking remission of dog tax, he having been unduly assessed.—Referred to the Court of Revision.

From the Canadian Cordage Co., saying that with respect to their request for fire hose, and key to hydrant in the vicinity of their factory, the suggestion would simply mean making their factory a branch of the Fire Department, and not intended for sole use only. Should their request be granted the company would undertake to see that the hose is perfectly protected in every respect, and if damaged in any way outside of usual wear and tear they would expect to be responsible for same while in their custody. The communication concluded by pointing out that the company's proposition seemed to them such a logical one that they considered it strange so much delay should have taken place in acting upon it.—Referred to the Fire, Water & Light Committee.

ACCOUNTS.

A number of accounts were referred to the Finance Committee with power to order payment if found correct.

A CORRECTION.

A by-law passed at last meeting fixed the remuneration of Mr. Dan Belleghem for care and service of the Dan Spence Ambulance at $150 a year. This was an error, as the amount agreed upon with Mr. Belleghem for such service was $175, and a by-law in amendment to this effect passed its several readings.

Council then adjourned.

GREAT BRITAIN FOOLED FOR VERY MANY YEARS

"Rule Britannia" Shouts Andrew Patullo Speaking on Fiscal Question

London, Dec. 15—Lord Strathcona is confirming the corrections being made by the Board of Education in the geographies used extensively as text books in the Board Schools and for matriculation examinations throughout England. The following are some quotations taken from the text book which the Canadians in London desire to have corrected: "In Canada the haymakers are at times frozen to death in their tents. The Indians are now quiet and tame. There are some places where hay-making has all to be done during the night time because the men dare not face the swarms of flies in the hay fields in the hot days of the summer. Milk is delivered in solid cakes to customers, when once the winter sets in, and the people are frozen up till the spring.

WILL DINE LYTTLETON.

Canadian Club of London Does Honor to Colonial Secretary.

London, Dec. 15—The Canada Club will dine Colonial Secretary Alfred Lyttleton on Janaruy 16 next. Lord Strathcona will be the chairman.

London, Dec. 15—Lord Brassey speaking at a special meeting of the London Chamber of Commerce yesterday dwelt on Sir Wilfrid Laurier's declaration to the Chambers of Commerce maintaining the fiscal independence of Canada and Mr. Ellis' statement at the Manufacturer's Association that Canada had given preference enough. As a follower of the Duke of Devonshire and Lord Rosebery, he said there was no course more practical than an interchange of opinions as to the best way to help each other. Any financial discussions with the colonies in regard to imperial defence should be avoided. The best way to strengthen the defences of the empire would be found in urging the colonial Government to see that their local forces were efficient. Canada might give effective aid to the imperial navy by providing men, and the Admiralty should provide drill-ships, with adequate pay for retainer. It was paltry on the part of the home Government, with an appropriation of £35,000,000, to wrangle with Newfoundland over the cost of a drill-shed. An extended system of British emigration was needed which the London Chamber of Commerce should devise. There should be a liberal subsidy from the imperial funds for a fast ocean service to Canada, the crews of which service by training in time of peace could act on these vessels, as the eyes of the fleet in war time. He was strongly in favor of Lord Strathcona's proposal for encouraging university students to travel to Canada. Mr. Brooks said he wanted the best postal arrangements with Canada for British newspapers. He believed Canadian manufacturers would eventually close the market against British manufacturers.

Some See Danger.

Mr. B. Irving, of Vancouver, held that unless Britain forestalled the Americans the agitation for closer commercial union would mean danger ahead. Sir Albert Rollit spoke of the marked loyalty of the French-Canadians. Mr. Fraser said the danger was that British emigration to Canada was hopelessly outdone by that of the Americans.

London, Dec. 15— Mr. Andrew Pattullo, M.P.P., for North Oxford, Ont., speaking yesterday at Leyton, told an enthusiastic audience that he had taken to the platform in Britain owing to his amazement at the views expressed by the Duke of Devonshire and other Liberal leaders regarding Canada.

Before the fiscal question was settled Canada was going to be heard in these islands. When he heard British statesmen cautioning the people against irritating the Americans, he wondered how Englishmen could sing, "Rule Britannia." The United States had humbugged Britain for years, and the only way to fight her was as Canada has done. (Cheers.)

Canadian Views.

Sir Christopher Furness, M.P., speaking at West Hartlepool yesterday, said that Mr. Chamberlain had arrived at his figures regarding the decadence of the Empire's shipping by deducting the decrease of Canada's old sailing fleet.

DISSATISFIED FEW.

Parties Who Tried to Bring Welshmen to Canada Censured.

London, Dec. 15—At a meeting of the Royal Geographical Society yesterday, Col. Sir Edward Holdich, a member of the British Commission upon the Chili boundary litigation, speaking regarding the Welsh colony in Argentine, said the deputation that endeavored to take the colony to Canada had not represented the views of the colony.

TWENTY CITIZENS THERE.

London, Dec. 15—A Moscow correspondent says the existence of a well-organized Armenian revolutionary body in the Caucasus is officially recognized by M. Plehve. There is every reason to believe that the that the Armenian revolutionary party is about to turn from a propaganda of their views in armed opposition to Russian administration. M. Plehve's confiscation of the Armenian church property possibly will prove not the least fortunate of his measures of repression.

Reports from Baku state that the Armenians and Jews are in mourning and refuse to visit the theatres or other places of amusement. This is done as a demonstration of protest against the high-handed methods of the Government.

Though the Kishineff trial has been in progress for twenty-two days, the case against the first batch of twenty-seven persons has not been concluded.

London, Dec. 15—Few bye-elections of recent years have evoked a tithe of the interest shown in today's contests in the Dulwich Division of Camberwell and at Lewisham, both represented by Conservatives for many years. F. Rutherford Harris (Conservative) and C. F. G. Masterman (Liberal) are contesting Dulwich, while Major Coates and J. W. Cleland represent the Conservatives and Liberals respectively in the Lewisham contest.

The fiscal question has been prominent throughout the campaigns, and Joseph Chamberlain intervened with letters in support of the Conservative candidates. The question of the importation of Chinese labor into South Africa has been used by the Liberals at Dulwich as an anti-Harris slogan, while the Conservatives dragged in the King's name, attaching the words "Edwardus Rex" to posters in such a way as to create the impression that his Majesty was a supporter of Mr. Chamberlain's fiscal proposals. The Liberals telegraphed the King on the subject, and promptly came a reply, authorizing the statement that no permission had been given to use the King's name in any way.

Montreal, Dec. 15— "Without the slightest solicitation I have received twenty-two applications from all parts of Canada, from Canadians who are anxious to be allowed to enlist in the Japanese army should war be declared between Japan and Russia. It is the greatest mark of sympathy that Canada has ever given Japan, and Japan is sure to reciprocate."

Such was the official statement made today on behalf of the Japanese Government by Mr. A. Nosse, Consul-General for Japan in Canada, on his arrival in the city from Chicago.

"While applications have been received from all parts of Canada," continued Mr. Nosse, "the greatest number are from Ontario. This includes three from Toronto, three from London, one from Belleville, one from Strathroy, one from Bloomfield, and three from Ottawa. Others are from Montreal, Winnipeg, Halifax, and other cities. The applications are from all classes of soldiers, from Lieutenant-colonels to private. The Toronto applications are from veterans of the Canadian mounted rifles, two of whom are now in the 48th Highlanders. Two of the applications from London are for positions to act as scouts.

"Some of the applications, explaining why they are anxious to enlist in the Far East is that of all Britishers that Japan should keep Russia out of Corea, just as England should keep Russia out of India.

The applications have been forwarded to the Japanese Government.

Cleveland, Dec. 15—The police yesterday arrested Miss Evaline Bryler of Milwaukee, who has, for several weeks past, been boarding at a small hotel on Bank street, dressed in male attire under the name of John White, and employed as office boy in a manufacturing establishment. According to the girl's confession she eloped from Milwaukee with Michael Hassenfratz, and came to this city about Sept. 1. She donned boys' clothing and was introduced at the hotel as Hassenfratz's chum. A quarrel between the couple resulted in Miss Bryler's sex becoming known. She will be sent back to Milwaukee at once.

TO PROTECT FISHERIES

Ottawa, Dec. 15.—The new addition to the Atlantic fisheries fleet will be constructed in England. It will be a war vessel pure and simple. Although not intended to be very large, it will be swift and will be equipped with modern rapid fire guns. It is not improbable that naval instructors may be asked for it from England. The Polson firm, of Toronto, will build the new fishery cruiser for the Great Lakes.

—To see Goods properly, you really must come during the morning hours—and it's worth while, too—so many really dainty and appropriate ideas for gifts. Times Bookstore.

PASSENGERS PAY BY WEIGHT

New Colorado Road will Have Scales at Ticket Offices

Pueblo, Col., Dec. 16.—Passengers will pay fares according to weight of the new Pueblo and Beulah Valley Electric Railway. When the road is completed each person will be required to step on an automatic registering scale at the ticket office, and the clerk will assess transportation charges at the rate of a cent and a half a pound. The fat man and the lean man paying the same price for being hauled about the country is declared unjust.

AVENGING QUEEN'S DEATH

Former Minister of Corea was Killed by Hired Assassins

Victoria, B.C., Dec. 15—The steamer Empress of India, from Yokohama, brought news from Kobe of the assassination of a notable Corean political refugee, U. Pan Chong, ex-Minister of Foreign Affairs, by two Coreans at Kure on November 24. The victim had been living in Japan since 1897. The assassins who were later arrested, stabbed the victim during an entertainment he gave them. They are said to have been commissioned in Corea to kill the former minister for the part he is alleged to have taken in the murder of the late Queen of Corea.

DID SHOOTING

Alfonso Said to Have Missed Game and Shot the Gamekeeper

Madrid, Dec. 16.—The official story of the shooting of a royal gamekeeper during the royal hunt at Casa de Campo several days ago has it that the gamekeeper accidentally shot himself. The first story had it that a shepherd had been shot by a gamekeeper, who fired in self defence.

The agitation of the King, on his return to the palace, however, has given rise to a belief, however, that the truth of the matter is that King Alfonso was responsible for the death of the gamekeeper, having shot at game and accidentally hit the keeper in the breast, killing him instantly.

A PECULIAR CASE

A Man Who Had $50,000 and Yet Starved to Death

Derby, Conn., Dec. 16.—Possessed of $50,000, all in money, Eugene Crofutt, sixty-two years old, a recluse of Huntingdon, died yesterday from starvation.

The old man had been failing for several years from not eating sufficient food, and a month ago after a fainting fit, his condition became serious. The town Selectman tried to provide for him and send him to a hospital, but he refused all aid. His brother, Somers Crofutt, Jr., of Westport, came here, and, with Dr. F. I. Fidelton, entreated him to take food and medicine, but their efforts were unavailing, and he gradually wasted away. The dying man's plea was that it would be a waste of money and that he could not afford it.

Crofutt's eccentricity dated from his parent's deaths, ten years ago. Of late he had thought his house haunted, and on one occasion he climbed to a tree top and remained there all night because he feared to enter the dilapidated building.

SHERIFF HELD UP

Galena, Kas., Dec. 15—Charles Rail, sheriff of Cherokee County, was held up and robbed today in the depot at Baxter Springs, Kas., by Clarence Cunningham, an escaped prisoner from the Columbia, Mo., jail. Cunningham had been arrested by the sheriff, when a confederate pulled a revolver and covered Rail. The sheriff was relieved of his watch, revolver and money. Cunningham and his partner then robbed the station agent and escaped.

JAPAN'S MOMENTOUS CRISIS IS NOW ON

Believed That War May Yet be Avoided if the Czar Will Yield a Little

London, Dec. 17.—The Post says: If it is true that Russia and Japan have reached an agreement, we have not the least doubt that Russia has scored another of those diplomatic victories by which far more than war, her marvelous expansion has been made. If it is true that this agreement has been brought about by the personal influence of the Czar, we have very little doubt that the mighty administrative machine of the Russian Government has once more made the noble sentiments of its charming young sovereign the convenient cover for its own ambitious designs.

We can hardly believe that Russia has made any real concession to Japan. It is not even pretended that anything has been given up in Manchuria. It is significantly said that the acknowledgment of Japan's predominance in Korea is made with certain reservations regarding the coast defences or stations. We suspect the full agreement will show that Russia has absorbed Manchuria, and only postponed the absorption of Korea until she is stronger.

The Japanese must be assumed to know what they are about; but it is impossible to stifle a wondering doubt if, in their swift adoption of Western civilization, they have not absorbed more than is good for them of the civilized shrinking from the burdens and sacrifices of war. It seems to be the destiny of Japan and North China to be swallowed up by Russia, as so many peoples in Europe and Asia have been swallowed up, unless the forces of a higher civilization can be rallied to save her.

If anything could do this, it would be a gallant fight for her life. This would be a fight also against the commercial locking up of China, which threatens the commerce and industry of the most progressive nations. Japan cannot think that she will ever be better prepared for this death struggle than now, before Russia's naval and military strength on the Pacific has been consolidated. If she will not fight, it must be that her despondent rulers have deliberately chosen to make the best of slow extinction.

TO CHANGE THE EARTH'S FACE IS NOW PROPOSED

Some Wonderful Schemes Proposed by Men of Science in Europe

London, Dec. 16.—French engineers have declared that it is perfectly feasible to convert the Desert of Sahara into a vast lake, thus opening to commerce great regions of the interior of Africa which can now only be reached by long, tedious and caravan journeys. A company is being formed for this purpose. They say that a large proportion of the desert lies below the level of the Atlantic and that by digging a canal to let in the waters of the ocean the great change could be effected easily and at a cost which would be small compared to the benefits which would accrue. If the whole desert lay below the level of the Atlantic the flooding of it would create a sea more than four times as big as the Mediterranean; but as the Sahara is composed of elevated plateaus, mountain ranges and depressions, only a part would be covered with water when the waves of the ocean were let in, and the new sea thus formed would be an irregular body of water probably about the same size as the Mediterranean. Great commercial cities would at once spring up on its shores and trade and civilization at once strike at the heart of Africa.

ANOTHER BIG SCHEME.

The Russians propose, not to make a new sea, but to improve an old one. The Sea of Azov, which lies back of the Crimea, is a body of water 230 miles long and 80 miles wide. It opens into the Baltic Sea, and would be an important center of trade were it not for the fact that it is so extremely shallow that no ocean-going steamers can enter it. Even small boats have difficulty in navigating its waters. Now the Russian Government proposes to bring wealth and business to the shores of the Sea of Azov by building a dam across the strait by which it communicates with the Black Sea of Azov, letting the rivers which empty into the shallow body of water fill it practicable for large steamers. It is thought with a heavy dam about two miles long, with a great lock capable of taking in ocean steamers, would accomplish the desired result. Where the shores of the sea are high naturally they would be all right when the waters rose, but where there are low artificial shores would have to be constructed, otherwise the Azov might only be increased in area, instead of being deepened. It is a big undertaking, but the Russian Government is seriously considering the work, and detailed plans have been prepared.

REMARKABLE CONTRACT

Agreement Made by Louis XV and his Brother

Paris, Dec. 15—Under the authority of M. Delcasse, Minister of Foreign Affairs, E. Spencer Pratt, former United States Minister to Persia, who is now residing here, is making extensive searches in the archives of the Foreign Office relative to the transfer of the Province of Louisiana by France to the United States. The investigation has brought to light all the circumstantial details of the transaction, including the confidential letters of the French Minister at Washington, advising his government as to the various stages of the negotiations and the letters and documents signed by President Jefferson and Secretary of State Madison. Many of these have hitherto been unavailable, owing to the rules of the Foreign Office, which have prevented the copying of documents in the archives.

Relative to his investigations Mr. Pratt said "One of the most curious document found is an autograph letter of Louis XV, giving away the vast Louisiana territory to his cousin, then King of Spain, as a present. The fact of this gift has heretofore been known only in a general way, but the text of the letter discloses the casual nature of the gift and also the fact that Louis XV. previously offered Louisiana to Great Britain, who refused to accept it. The text of the letter relating to the gift is as follows.

"I have caused the Marquis de Grimaldi, subject to Your Majesty's pleasure, to sign a cession of New Orleans and Louisiana to Spain. I had offered it to the English in place of Florida, but they refused it. I would have ceded them other possessions to have spared Spain having to cede this latter one, but I fear that any cession in the Gulf of Mexico might lead to serious consequences. I feel that Louisiana but poorly compensates Your Majesty for the losses you have sustained, but in ceding this colony I consider less its value than the good accomplished in uniting the Spanish and the French nations. Union is alike necessary for our subjects and our house."

The letter of the King of Spain accepting the present refers to the further strengthening of the union of the two nations by a number of royal inter-marriages. Later documents show the re-cession of Louisiana by Spain to France, and give minute details of the sale by Napoleon of the province to the United States.

New York, Dec. 14—The World says:—It is announced that Chili has sold to Great Britain two big battleships which were being built on the Clyde. PLAN TO REACH THE POLE

W. Wellman Explorer Offers it to the Arct Club

New York, Dec. 12—The annual dinner of the Arctic Club, composed of men who have had experience in the Arctic regions, was held to-night. The guest of honor was Walter Wellman, the explorer, of Washington. Mr. Wellman aroused enthusiasm by proposing that the Arctic Club itself fit out an expedition to reach the North Pole. He said that if an American citizen of wealth who wished that America should have the honor of being the first to reach the Pole, would come forward with the necessary funds, he would turn over to the club, his plan for attaining the pole.

"From actual experience in the field, and study and experiment," said the speaker, "I have evolved a plan which is morally certain of securing the trophy for the expedition which uses it. An expedition employing this plan is as sure to reach the pole as a sailing ship is to reach port on a long voyage. That is, barring shipwreck, or other unlooked for disaster."

Mr. Wellman added that he had no wish to go again to the Arctic regions himself.

RADIUM CURE FOR CANCER

German Factory Unable to Fill Orders at $2,000 Per Grain

Washington, Dec. 16.—A radium factory started in Germany has several hundred grain orders on its books, reports the United States Consul General Guenther, to the Department of Commerce and Labor. The company receives $2,000 a grain for this strange product, and although its furnaces are working night and day, it is unable to meet the demand.

"It has been demonstrated," Mr. Guenther's report says, "that a small glass tube, not larger than a goose quill containing a little more than a thousandth part of a gram is as effective and as expensive as a complicated electric apparatus for the treatment of cancer, surpassing the best effects of the Roetgen rays. The ease with which radium can be administered locally for instance in the nose or throat, is an invaluable advantage.

"The fact that radium exerts a very peculiar influence upon light-emitting bodies has given rise to the hope that it may eventually play an important role in the industry of light. A minute quantity of radium is sufficient to produce a strong light from a layer of zinc pyrites and as this light produces no heat, some loss of energy is avoided.

You Pay Only if Cured

Expects No Money Unless He Cures You—Method and Full Particulars Sent Free—Write For It This Very Day

A Detroit specialist who has 14 certificates and diplomas from medical colleges and boards, has perfected a startling method of curing the diseases of men in their own homes; so that there may be no doubt in the mind of any man that he has

DR. S. GOLDBERG,
The Possessor of 14 Diplomas and Certificates Who Wants No Money That He Does Not Earn.

both the method and the ability to do as he says, Dr. Goldberg, the discoverer, will send the method entirely free to all men who send him their name and address. He wants to hear from men who have stricture that they have been unable to get cured, prostatic trouble, sexual weakness, varicocele, lost manhood, blood poison, hydrocele, emaciation of parts, impotence, etc. His wonderful method not only cures the condition itself, but likewise all the complications, such as rheumatism, bladder or kidney trouble, heart disease, nervous debility, etc.

The doctor realizes that it is one thing to make claims and another thing to back them up, so he has made it a rule not to ask for money unless he cures you, and when you are cured he feels sure that you will willingly pay him a small fee. It would seem, therefore, that it is to the best interests of every man who suffers in this way to write the doctor confidentially and lay your case before him. He sends the method, as well as many booklets on the subject, including the one that contains the 14 diplomas and certificates, entirely free. Address him simply Dr. S. Goldberg, 208 Woodward Ave., Room Detroit, Mich., and it will all immediately be sent you free.

PETERBOROUGH, DECEMBER 11, 1903

AN ABSURD RESTRICTION

Until recently, voting in the Separate school elections was open—that is, by ballot. This caused the voting to be arranged for specially, and apart from the ordinary municipal and Public school elections, and of course necessitated therefore a considerable special expense to the Separate school board.

Voting by ballot having been decided on here in the Separate school elections, an amendment to the school act provided for the nominations and election to take place upon the same dates as the nominations and election of aldermen and Public school trustees. But the act, while permitting the same dates, refuses the right to have the election in the same polling booths. The Separate school board here must, therefore, continue to pay the expense of separate polling places and returning officers, etc.

It seems an absurd sort of business as well as a waste of public money. The protest against it is coming from the best possible place, namely, the Separate school board itself, and the Ontario Government ought to attend to it.

CHRISTMAS SHOPPING

There may be those who will discover the propriety of a discussion of Christmas gift buying offered as Sunday reading. But Christmas is a holiday whose benignant influence opens the heart, encourages a benevolent spirit of self sacrifice, and tends to the spread of peace and good will on earth, and everything connected with it is dignified by the association.

Christmas day will soon be here, and the giving of gifts, while not all of Christmas, nor even the most important manifestation of the Christmas spirit, has yet become so intimately associated with it, that the kindly remembrance and cheery good will of the day find expression largely in keepsakes that make childhood happy and that recall childhood's happiness to those to whom childhood has long since become a memory. Christmas shopping and Christmas have become synonymous terms, and the annual tour of the shops and stores, as much a feature of the holiday as the Yule log and the evergreen tree.

The thoughtful Christmas shopper buys early. This is not wholly because a sordid shrewdness suggests that the best selection is afforded to the first comer. It is because thoughtfulness, though evanescent and impalpable, is one of the most attractive qualities of any gift, and thoughtfulness suggests care in selection. No money value can take the place of loving thoughtfulness in the selection of a gift. Some simple thing, oft handled and considered, may outweigh in the kindly remembrance of the recipient the costliest jewel hurriedly and carelessly bought in the perfunctory rush of the last days of the Christmas season.

There is only one practical suggestion that we would add, while on the subject of Christmas buying. And that refers to the wonderful change that has taken place in recent years in the quality of the holiday displays of the large cities. It was not long ago that Peterborough people having money and artistic tastes felt that they must go at least to Chicago to buy anything rare or desirable. They know better now, they have learned that our stores are not excelled in any city in the quality of what they show, and in the most important lines not in quantity. The rarest of imported goods and wares are on their shelves in such profusion that they suggest the remark of Tiny Tim, that the stores hold everything—and then some. No resident of Peterborough need pass the borders of the city.

To buy early and to buy at home are the two injunctions that every Christmas shopper should heed. Those who buy first not only buy best, but buy most thoughtfully. And those who buy at home pay tribute to the enterprise and liberality of our storekeepers—in the end an invaluable holiday gift to Peterborough.

The Standard Oil dividend is $12 for the last quarter, or $44,000,000 for the year upon a capital of $100,000,000. And still the trust was so fair that it lately advances the price of coal oil. Mr. Rockefeller's share of the plunder is $15,000,000 for the year.

CANNIBALISM IN SOMALI

Mad Mullah's Followers Eat Human Flesh

London, Dec. 13—Advices from Somaliland, East Africa, say that the Mad Mullah's camp followers have taken to cannibalism, owing to shortage of supplies. The body of a captive recently executed by the Mullah was immediately carried off and eaten. The food was shared with women, whom the Mullah subsequently ordered to be executed. These were in turn cooked and eaten by their former comrades.

According to deserters, the Mullah is not suffering from an actual scarcity of food, but is husbanding his resources and restricting the distribution of food strictly to the fighting men, leaving the camp followers to shift for themselves.

ENGINES OVERTURNED DESCENDING GRADE

Five Train Hands Killed and Many Killed on B. & O.

Piedmont, W. Va., Dec. 13—Five men were killed and several severely injured by the overturning of two engines, attached to a heavy Baltimore and Ohio freight train on the "17-mile grade," near this city.

The dead—Engineer Ernest D. Ervin, 39 years old, Cumberland, Md., Engineer Emery Ervn, 56, of Tunnelton, W. Va., Fireman Walter B. Nine, 22, Terra Alta, W. Va. Fireman J. V. Carter, 28, North Carolina, Brakeman John Hays, 23, Staunton, Va.

While descending the "17 mile grade" the train to which were attached two engines, left the track. The engines and nearly all of the 24 loaded cars tumbled into a deep ravine, carrying the trainmen with them.

TRAIN DERAILED.

Ottumwa, Iowa, Dec. 13—Three persons were killed and ten were injured today in a wreck on the C. B. & O. Railroad, three miles west of Albia. The westbound passenger train was derailed while running on to the Cedar Creek Bridge, and five cars were wrecked by collision with the bridge girders. The wreckage immediately took fire, and several of the victims were badly burned.

The dead—Mrs. W. E. Mitchen, Albia, Ia., burned to death; Mildred Mitche, 3 years old, burned to death; Thomas Beatty, killed in wreck of smoking car.

None of the injured persons will die.

To what the derailing was due is a mystery. As soon as the engineer noticed there was something wrong he applied the airbrakes, but was unable to stop the train. Five cars were completely burned. The work of rescue was carried on with difficulty.

Poisoning Milk.

Cleanliness is the only milk preservative any farmer need to use, and the only one he is justified in using. Preservatives are always a menace to the health of the consumer of dairy or other products in which they are used, And it maters not what name the preserving substance goes under, or what form it is in—whether a liquid, as the solutions of formaldehyde or a powder as the preparations of borax. This assertion is sufficiently proved by medical records, and circumstances arising out of the general use of milk preservatives is compelling the prosecution of dairymen in all the cities where milk is sold.

A sample of what is of too frequent occurrence in cities is given from a Seattle, Wash., paper: "Coroner Hoye yesterday stopped the funeral of a ten-months-old child on the way to the cemetery and held an autopsy over the body at the morgue, which resulted in finding that the child died from drinking milk containing formaldehyde. The milk was purchased from a local dairy, which is not yet named by the officers, but arrests will probably be made. The proprietors will be charged with murder. The parents of the child are Greeks, speaking little English. Dr. Ludlow, city health officer, attended the child, and refused to sign a certificate that the infant died from natural causes. He communicated his suspicions to the coroner, who at once took steps to investigate."

Half the evils of the use of milk preservatives is not confined to the milk on sale in cities, for it is an unfortunate fact that the use of milk preservatives is becoming so common that farmers' wives think nothing of "doping" in hot weather the milk kept for family use. Hence, in addition to the excesive amount of preservatives taken by the family in bought canned foods, especially in canned vegetables and fish, and in bought meats, the farmers' family is given a double dose of embalming substances.

And the situation is more serious also because of the fact that on the farm preserving compounds are carelessly used. In larger manufactories, such as canning factories, preserving compounds are used by rule, and where they must be bought by the hundredweight the careful use of the preserver becomes a matter of economy. But not so on the farm. Here the quantity of milk to be "embalmed" being small, the amount of preserver and its cost are trifling. The person using the "embalming fluid" then soon comes to disregard waste in the case, and when a pinch of the "powder or a few drops of the dope" would be enough for the purpose, ten times as much as is necessary for the purpose is often used. It is, in fact, a wonder of the times that immediate deaths from the use of "preservatives" are not of more frequent occurrence under this reign of common and careless use of "preservatives" derived from such a poisonous substance as wood alcohol, which is the base of most of the milk preservatives on the market.

All the risks of immediate illness or permanent injury through gradual impairment of the digestive system by the use of milk preserving compounds may be avoided by the liberal use of hot water, soap and sunshine on the dairy utensils and fixtures. Por to keep milk clean is to keep it sweet. A striking example of the preserving power of cleanliness was given in 1900 when milk from an Illinois dairy was put on exhibition in sweet and wholesome condition at the Paris, France, Exposition, twelve days after the milk came from the cow. It was merely kept clean and cool. No preservative was used, and no trick or sleight of hand used in the case. The milk was not even pasteurized. It was merely the milk of a clean cow, drawn by a clean man into a clean pail, and stored in a clean glass jar for shipment. And cleanliness, not preservatives, should characterize the dairy products of American farmers.—H. F. McIntosh in Nebraska Farmer.

AN APPEAL TO THE FASHIONABLE SET IN CANADA.

Lally Bernard, of the editorial staff of the Toronto Globe, writing to that paper from London, England, where she is now a resident, shows most clearly that the battle against the great white plague is one that should interest all classes of the community. It will be remembered that this writer entered incog. as a patient in the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives, and afterwards in the Globe told of real life in that institution. In her present article she says:

"To-day I have found a letter at the club which nearly missed me, having been addressed 'Lally Bernard.' May I express to my unknown correspondent my warmest thanks for the kindly appreciation for the little I have been able to do in the battle being waged against tuberculosis in Canada. The need of sympathy and interest is a tremendous one, and I am always puzzled when I find really well educated and intelligent people in Canada so criminally ignorant of the extent of the danger, and the means which are being taken to combat it.

"It may be of some interest to those who feel as I do in regard to the responsibility which rests upon each and all to aid in this fight against a most insidious foe, when I tell them, that here in London, where I have been for only a few days, I have already come across the dread enemy four times. First of all, in the back garden of our humble quarters in Kensington I espied, when morning dawned, a tent with two beds in it. I enquired of our landlord why the tent was there, and was told a long story about the coronation and quarters for some boys coming up from the country, and that he, the landlord, had subsequently found it more agreeable to sleep in the tent than in the basement bedroom he had formerly occupied. A little later, in conversation with the lady who secured the lodgings, I learned that the landlord's son was obliged to sleep in a tent! Comment was needless.

"In looking for quarters I found a charming home of a young doctor and his wife, where extraordinarily moderate terms were asked for really exceptionally good accommodation. The doctor in question had been 'ordered south,' and his wife had to keep the house going by accepting 'paying guests.'

"Yet again, in the third place, I found that the lady who was at the head of the establishment had not only lost her husband from the dread disease, but had managed one of the most fashionable sanitariums in England, and her knowledge of the treatment and the extent of the problem in England showed me how tremendous was the need for care and watchfulness in our own country.

"May I ask my correspondent to use all possible influence to make the question of combating tuberculosis one of interest in the 'fashionable set' to which she evidently belongs. I know full well, from the little experience I have had, how tremendously a little genuine interest and help might lighten the burden now resting on the shoulders of the authorities of the Free Hospital for Consumptives at Gravenhurst. It is, of course, far away from wealthy centres, and out of sight is to be out of mind.

"I can quite understand that until people have seen forty or fifty patients together in different stages of consumption they do not realize what an immense amount of aid might be given by those who are fortunate enough to be free from the disease and by those who have little else to do than to invent or learn some new form of recreation.

"Mrs. Torrington has kindly promised me to try and get musical societies and people interested in music to provide a pianola for the Hospital, and I feel sure it will be of immense benefit to the patients. Surely my correspondent who evinces such sympathy with the cause could make that sympathy take a practical form and organize a hospital library where books worth reading might be supplied, with some system similar to that of the Aberdeen Association, which has done such excellent work."

[Note.—Readers—and may their number be many—who desire to assist in the work of the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives may send their gifts to Sir Wm. R. Meredith, Kt., Vice-President, National Sanitarium Association, Toronto, or Mr. W. J. Gage, Chairman of the Executive Committee.]

This company has the right, without royalty payments, to use the new patent machine upon all the land it may own, acquire by lease, or operate, in Arizona. We invite special attention to the great commercial value and profit of this machine, and what can be accomplished by it.

What This Machine Will Do

For the first time in the history of gold mining a machine has been invented which will handle the dry placer gold gravel without water, and in large quantities. This machine will save 98 per cent of all the gold in the gravel, and will do it at a lower working cost than by any existing process. It is operated by a small, compact engine, using crude oil as fuel. A complete plant, capable of handling 200 tons per day will weigh less than 1,200 pounds.

To secure this gold only those placer lands could be worked, which could command large supplies of water, hence the immense bodies of dry placer lands remote from water have never been worked.

Fifteen Hundred Millions in Gold

The United States has yielded nineteen hundred millions in gold, of which fifteen hundred millions—or more than 75 per cent.—were the product of its placers.

Ninety per cent. of the world's total gold supply has been taken from placers by processes which have admittedly lost the bulk of the values.

Simplicity of Machine—Its Method of Operation

The machine is so extremely simple in construction and operation that any intending investor can operate it instantly. He can take a peck or more of sand, either ordinary house of sea sand, or such as is found in the placer lands of Arizona and California, put into this sand ten or a hundred pieces of gold as small as the point of a toothpick, and from that to the head of an ordinary pin, mix the sand and the gold thoroughly, turn them into the hopper or feed of the machine, and in a few seconds the machine will separate the gold from the gravel and recover from 98 to 100 per cent of the gold. It is an absolute, infallible, ocular demonstration of the merits of the machine. It has solved the problem of handling sand or gravel containing gold in regions remote from water.

Cost of Handling Material

Each plant is portable, weighs less than 1,200 pounds and can be easily moved by a few laborers.

The two greatest authorities in the world on the moving of material are "Haswell" and "Trautwine." They say in their standard publications that a laborer can shovel horizontally, 12 feet, vertically 6 feet for 50 feet haul 17 cubic yards in 10 hours.

A well known engineer in his work for the U. S. Government at Sandy Hook, moved 18 cubic yards, 100 feet haul in 10 hours at a cost of 10 cents per cubic yard, paying laborers $1.75 per day.

The dry placer gold-bearing sands of California, Arizona and New Mexico are handled quite as easily as those of Sandy Hook.

Ten laborers can easily supply one machine with 204 cubic yards of gravel in 12 hours, working at the same speed as shown by Haswell, Trautwine or at Sandy Hook.

Placer work on above basis would cost about 11 1-2c. per cubic yard.

Do You Want Monthly Dividends?

We make a special offer of a limited number of shares of stock at this time, because the company requires immediately sufficient to build several machines to operate in the field.

Every machine at work will increase the intrinsic value of the stock.

Twenty machines in the field will increase the price and value of the stock more than double the present offering, and every additional machine means a further increase in price and value.

The Company intends to divide its net earnings every month, so that the stockholders may count absolutely on receiving monthly dividends in proportion to monthly earnings.

THE ROSE OF THE RING

It pleased him to see her taking this interest in her home, and, as he sagely remarked—

"The old place has sadly needed some enlivening influence."

"I hope you do not think me extravagant?" she said, when he called one day, and found her in a conservatory filled with exotics, their rich bloom diffusing a heavy fragrance about her. 'I thought it best to get the expenses over at once—and I found everything in such a neglected state."

"I will let you know, when I find you are running beyond limits," he answered, laughing, as he looked into her eager face. "How do you get on with your companion—Mrs. Netherby?"

"Very well, indeed. She is so kind, and takes so much interest in everything. I do not know what I should have done without her."

"I thought so," the solicitor said, as though congratulating himself upon something. "I heard from Mr. Wilberforce, that he had known her nearly all his life. What does he say of all these improvements?"

"My cousin thinks I was right to fill the hot-house; and he likes the blue-satin suite I chose for the drawing-room. He has only been to see me once—the journey is so long for him."

She spoke in a very matter-of-fact tone of voice, not wishing that Mr. Monckton should get an inkling as to what her feelings were towards Marc.

"I am the bearer of a message from him," the solicitor remarked. "He begged me tell you to expect to see him to-morrow. He is coming down to finish some sketches, and intends putting up at one of the neighboring inns for a few days."

"Would not he prefer staying here?" she asked, slowly. "This is as much his home as mine. He has been here so often, and everything is strange to me."

"He will be pleased to have your invitation," Mr. Monckton replied; "but I cannot say whether he will think it advisable to accept it. In any case, you will see a good deal of him, while he remains in this quarter."

Rose bent over the flowers, gathering one here and there, and lifting up some of the buds, that seemed weighed down with their own fragrance.

She did not want Mr. Monckton to see the happiness she felt, in the anticipation of meeting Marc—of having him near for several days—perhaps weeks.

"I hope there [illegible] pictures," she thought burrying her face in a bunch of coral-tinted blossoms, "and that they are only in the first outline."

She glanced up, and saw Mr. Monckton watching her, with a smile.

Had he read what was passing through her mind?

Did he guess how the news he had brought had set her heart beating with a sweet delight?

She threw down the flowers, and moved towards a glass door, that opened on to a terrace, from which there was a flight of steps leading into the grounds.

"You must come and see my latest acquisition," she said, opening the door, and leading the way down the steps. "I wonder if you can guess what it is."

With a feeling of misgiving he followed her.

Rose led Mr. Monckton to the stable, and he there saw a pair of splendid chestnuts, their glossy necks arched, their hoofs impatiently pawing the ground.

"I got Mr. West to choose them for me," she said. "They arrived yesterday."

"They are magnificient creatures!" he exclaimed. "West knew what he was about, when he chose them."

"Yes," she said, turning away with a sigh; "but any old hack would have done as well for these rough roads. I was out driving all this morning with Mrs Netherby, and we only passed one individual on our way. It is like being buried alive. I shall never be really happy, while I have to live in the country."

"We will see that you do not have too much or rural life," he answered, in his kindest tones. "Mrs. Netherby holds a good position in society, notwithstanding the heavy losses she has sustained, and in a month or two, there will be plenty of opportunities for these thoroughbreds to be shown off."

"You mean that I shall not always have to stay in this dull old place?"

"That is the idea I am trying to convey," he answered, following her from the stable, back to the terrace. "In a short time, you will not be so anxious to leave Drayton Court; it will all look very different when the trees are covered with foliage and the hedges full of blossoms."

Mrs. Netherby was waiting for them in the room that led from the conservatory—a luxurious room, with tiger-skin rugs covered the floor, and pine-logs blazing cheerfully on the hearth.

She was seated in a lounge-chair, working a delicate piece of embroidery, and there was a look of refinement about her, that made Mr. Monckton think Marc had done well in getting her established at Drayton Court.

"You should not have gone out into the grounds, without putting on a wrap, Rose," she said, glancing up from her work. "Come near the fire, and warm yourself. Have you been showing Mr. Monckton the new fountain, or the sun-dial?"

"Neither," the girl answered, kneeling down on the hearthrug, and holding her hands out to the blaze. "We have just left the stables.

Mr. Monckton agrees with us that the chestnuts are perfect.

"I do," he said. "It has given me pleasure to see the improvements made in the place. I had no idea the new mistress of Drayton Court would so soon understand her duties."

He did not make his visit very long.

He had urgent business in town, and had only been able to spare a few hours, in which to assure himself of Rosalie's well-being.

"You will have the pheaton to take you to the station," Rose said, when he was ready to depart. "I have told Martin to get it ready—and you will be able to test the powers of my new favorites."

"I cannot boast of being much of a whip, Miss Errol," he answered; "but I may just be able to manage them, and your groom can bring them safely back."

She watched him drive away, waving her hand from one of the quaint, mullioned windows—her face looking as fair and sweet as a rose against the casement.

Taking no account of the hours that followed, she wandered from room to room altering the position of some of the ornaments, and putting a few hot-house flowers in some of the vases.

Sunshine seemed to follow wherever she went, and she left stray gleams of light in the lofty chambers her presence had transformed.

She wanted everything to look at its best—when Marc arrived, for who could be so welcome as he?

"I hope it will be fine, to-morrow," she thought, going to one of the windows, and taking a long look at the sky. "Rain gives the country such a dreary appearance, and the roads have not yet recovered from the last flood."

Curious Bits of News

Paris's Eiffel Tower will stand for only a few years longer. A commission appointed to decide on the uses to which the Champ de Mars shall be put has ordered that the tower be torn down at the end of the concession, which expires in 1910.

Carrie Nation, following the example of John L. Sullivan, James J. Corbett and others of her predecessors in the strenuous life, is going on the stage. She is to appear in a new version of "Ten Nights in a Barroom," and one of the scenes will represent her using her famous hatchet to advantage.

The De Pierrecourt's fortune of $600,000 left to the city of Rouen for the propagation of a race of giants, is to be diverted from this purpose, and $160,000 will be retained by the Rouen foundation for a philanthropic institution, the rest to go to the natural heirs, who contested the will on the ground of immorality.

What is said to be a new world's record in long-distance train running has just been made on the Baltimore and Ohio road out in Ohio and Indiana, where 128 miles were covered without stops in 125 minutes. In the course of the run a speed of 85 miles an hour was reached, and much of the distance was run at the rate of 70 and 75 miles an hour.

Shortly after he was elected President of France, M. Loubet offered a large sum for the Castle of Mezenc, which once belonged to Diana of Poitiers, the favorite of Henry II. His offer was refused at the time, but recently he succeeded in getting the chateau, which is most picturesquely situated, near Montelimar, and has a waterfall, three ponds filled with trout, and a large park with plenty of game. The price paid was one hundred and seventy thousand francs. From his tower the President can now see his birthplace, Marsanne, where his mother still lives.

When the North German Lloyd steamship "Kaiser Wilhelm II." reached New York recently and disembarked her cabin passengers at Hoboken, one of them, a United States citizen, addressing himself to a policeman on the pier, caused him to arrest a fellow-traveler, also a United States citizen, on a charge of swindling, the fraud, according to the accusation, having been perpetrated by means of unfair play at cards during the voyage across the Atlantic. The officer, after having conveyed his prisoner to police headquarters, subsequently arraigned him before the acting recorder. The latter informed both the plaintiff and the police that his court had no jurisdiction in the matter, and referred him to the United States commissioner, who also declined to deal with the case, on the ground that it was beyond the competence of the federal authorities. The Hoboken police thereupon communicated with the German consul-general at the port of New York, and on receiving from him an intimation that he knew of no law under which they could hold the prisoner, were obliged to set the latter at liberty, much to the disgust of the plaintiff, who complained that he and some of his friends had been victimized to the tune of some ten thousand dollars.

A Story of Pius X.

In Tombola an amusing story is told of the present Pope and the mourners candles. A wealthy resident of Tombola died, and his funeral ceremonies were the most elaborate ever known in that humble village. A great many mourners were hired, whose office was to bear the lighted candles beside the catafalque in its progress to the cemetery. The candles were of the clearest wax and immense in size, having been specially brought from Venice for the occasion. The like had never been seen in Tombola, their size exceeding even the large candles on the church altar. During the solemn procession the Don Giuseppe, now Pius X., noted how often the candles were extinguished. He could not account for it, as the day was a still one. He watched an old woman nearest to him and saw her furtively blow out the candle which her right arm could scarce carry. "How did you come to put out that candle, Giaccoma?" he queried sternly. The crone turned a properly sorrowful face to him, replying: "My tears have put it out—they fell so freely." The excuse caught Don Giuseppe's sense of humor. "Well," said he, relighting the fine taper, "see that your tears fall to the left of you after this." The old woman's light held out to the grave, though no doubt it seemed a pity not to save as much of the candle as she could use in her home.

ELOPER DRESSED AS BOY

Cleveland, Dec. 13—The police yesterday arrested Miss Evaline Bryler of Milwaukee, who has, for several weeks past, been boarding at a small hotel on Bank street, dressed in male attire under the name of John Wiite, and employed as office boy in a manufacturing establishment. According to the girl's confession she eloped from Milwaukee with Michael Hassenfratz, and came to this city about Sept. 1. She donned boys' clothing and was introduced at the hotel as Hassenfratz's chum. A quarrel between the couple resulted in Miss Bryler's sex becoming known. She will be sent back to Milwaukee at once.

Mainly About People.

As the coffin containing the affectionate wife of a sorrowing husband was being conveyed to the churchyard in a certain country parish in the South of Scotland it accidentally struck against the corner of a wall, in consequence of which circumstance the deceased was aroused from a trance and lived for several years. When the poor woman really died a few years afterward, in the act of passing the same spot the husband anxiously exclaimed to the bearers of the coffin, "Tak' tent (care) of the corner this time."

Labouchere and King Edward (as Prince of Wales) were for years fast friends. Apropos of this friendship, Labby was once asked what he called the Prince when he dined at Marlborough House. "Well," said the famous radical, "when the soup comes on I address him as 'Your Royal Highness.' The fish softens the reserve and I get a little chummier and often as not call him 'Wales,' while during the entrees and joints I get quite familiar and he becomes 'Eddie,' while he slaps me on the back and dubs me 'Labby.'"

An Englishman was traveling not long ago in a compartment of a London train. At one of the stations a German entered the carriage and took the seat opposite the Englishman. When the train had started, the German, seeing the other's cigar, boldly asked for one. Although astonished at the request, the Englishman nevertheless pulled out his case and handed it to the stranger. The German lighted the cigar, took a few puffs, and, beaming affably through his spectacles, said: "I vould not haf droubled you, but I had a match in mine boggit, and I did not know vat to do mit him."

In a mining town in the mountains of Virginia lived two little chaps aged eight and nine years, neighbors and good friends, who passed most of their leisure time together in boyish sports, but, like all healthy boys, they sometimes "scrapped." On one of these occasions the younger one, who was built on the lines of the proverbial man who could not stop a pig in an alley, was being twitted by his companion on his bow legs. He stood it manfully for a while, but finally, losing patience, he blurted out: "Well, I may be bow-legged, but when the Lord made you He made you as ugly as He could and then hit you in the face."

At a Scottish town, the other day, a Londoner on his way to a hotel addressed the porter who led the way: "Not a large place this?" "Na verra," was the answer. "Has it a corporation?" "A what, sir?" enquired the baggage-bearer. "I mean, who rules it?" "Rules it? Jist the provost." "Ah, the provost. Like our lord mayor? Has he got any insignia?" remarked the cockney. "Insignia! What d'ye mean?" asked the puzzled Scotsman. "Yes, insignia; that is to say, has he a chain?" the polite visitor hinted. Whereupon the almost dumbfounded native gasped out: "A chain, sir? The provost chained? Na, na! He gangs loose; but dinna be feared, he's quite harmless."

Dr. Daniel M. Stimson, the family physician and life-long friend of the late poet, Richard Henry Stoddard, relates an anecdote to the effect that the poet, while endeavoring to procure an impromptu luncheon for a number of friends after Mrs. Stoddard and the servants had retired, found a box of sardines. His somewhat vigorous remarks, inspired by a sardine-can's objections to the "open sesame" of a dull jack-knife, attracted the attention of Mrs. Stoddard on the floor above. "What are you doing?" she called down. "Opening a can of sardines." "With what?" "A dashed old jack-knife," cried the exasperated poet. "What did you think I was opening it with?" "Well, dear," she said, dryly, "I didn't exactly think you were opening it with prayer!"

Salvatore Cortesi, in a very readable article in the "World's Work" on King Victor Emmanuel of Italy, says that after the assassination of his father, Queen Margherita was very anxious that King Humbert should be buried at the Superga at Turin, where all the rest of the House of Savoy lie, with the exception of the great Victor Emmanuel. Moreover, her Majesty did not wish to wound the susceptibilities of the papal party by a state funeral in Rome. King Victor, pale and tired, entered the room where the Queen was, exclaiming: "Well, that is arranged—my father will have a fitting burial in the Pantheon." "Victor," cried his mother, "I see you want to break my heart. You offend my religion as well as my affections." "I am sorry, mother," he said gently, and then added sternly; "the religion which is offended at a martyr being buried in his own capital and lying beside his own father needs radical changes."

A story is told of Labouchere at the very beginning of his editorial career. A friend came in one day, and, seeing a quantity of books around, which had been sent in for review, offered to bet Labouchere that there was one book he had not got in the office. Labouchere enquired the name of the book, and his friend promptly answered, "A Bible." With a laugh, Labouchere offered to bet ten pounds that he had even that book. Turning the conversation in another direction, he furtively sent a note out into the clerk's office, telling the boy to go downstairs and ask the booksellers underneath for the loan of a Bible. Presently he returned to the subject of the bet, and, calling his assistant in, asked him whether he had a Bible in the office. The clerk produced the book, which Labouchere handed over to his friend, giving himself away, however, as he did so by saying sotto voce to the clerk: "I hope to goodness you didn't forget to cut the leaves!" Of course the English Bible does not require its leaves to be cut.

"The missus can't see you, sir; she's expecting company." "Go back and say that I have a valuable present for her—something brand-new. And by the way, mention my name again—Stork." "Oh, Stork, is it? Sure you're the very party she's expecting."—"Town Topics."

Pallette—You'd be surprised if you knew the amount of time spent on that canvas. Pallette—Yes; I understand men have stood in front of it for hours trying to make out what it is.—Yonkers "Statesman."

"I understand your son has decided to go in for literature." "Yes, and he's made a splendid start already." "You don't say?" "Yes; he went to auction this morning and bought a second-hand writing-desk for only four dollars and ninety-eight cents."—"Catholic Standard and Times."

Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives

☞ Not a single patient has ever been refused admittance because of his or her poverty.

FROM THE YUKON

—From Bishop of Selkirk, Caribou Crossing, Yukon: "The trifling remittance ($10.00) herewith enclosed, is intended to express our sympathy for the sufferers in other parts rather than imply a special need for your institution here."

CONFEDERATION LIFE ASSOCIATION

—J. K. Macdonald, Esq., Managing Director Confederation Life Association, in sending cheque for $500.00 from his Company, says: "I am pleased to be able to be the medium of helping on so good a work."

Funds Urgently Needed

The financial reports for the year just ending show that to keep the doors of the Free Hospital for Consumptives open, maintaining the number of patients for which accommodation has been provided, not less than $25,000 is required for the year now entered upon.

Since the Free Hospital was opened (18 months ago) 224 patients have been received. The help the institution has been to these people—all from the wage-earning and poorer ranks of life—cannot be estimated in human language.

—Edward D. Heddon, Solina, Ont., on leaving the Free Hospital, writes: "I cannot speak too highly of the institution from which I have received so much benefit. I can but tender my best thanks for the kindness shown."

—Minnie Linklater, Hamilton, writes: "I have spent over nine months at the Free Hospital for Consumptives. I believe I have been greatly helped, and shall never hesitate to use my influence to further that good cause."

There is no endowment, excepting the provision made by three life insurance companies for six beds for the current year. Only by the continued contributions of the Canadian public can the work be maintained.

Patients are accepted from every part of the Dominion, and there have been in residence during the past year patients from Prince Edward Island on the east to the Northwest Territories on the west.

Contributions may be sent to SIR W. R. MEREDITH, KT., Vice-President National Sanitarium Association, or MR. W. J. GAGE, Chairman of the Executive Committee, Toronto, Can.

A Bedouin Wedding.

The Arab wedding at Earl's Court, says The London Chronicle in describing a recent event there, was quite a popular event, as no doubt it was meant to be. It was also as picturesque as the Arabs, following their own customs, could make it amid the surroundings of a London exhibition. The bridegroom was Hamdun Salach, tall and twenty-one; the bride, Halima Muhamel, a girl of fourteen. Both were members of the little community from Assouan, Egypt, who form the Assouan village at Earl's Court. The bride wore a dress of blue velvet, trimmed with gold lace of an old Egyptian pattern. She had a white tulle veil, roses in her hair, and jewelled ornaments. Four bridesmaids, in robes of a soft Oriental cloth, kept her company. Like her, they were brown of face—brown as a berry—and a little embarrassed by the crowd.

The wedding began with a procession from the central part of the exhibition to the Assouan village. Hamdun rode in front on a horse, which was neither pure white nor an Arab, as it should have been, but which did very well. Its hoofs had been painted green and red and other colors patronized by the Bischari tribe to which the bride and bridegroom belong. Halima drove in a little carriage with an escort of Arabs, variously picturesque, and to the sound of weird music. So the procession got to the Assouan village, where so many visitors, at sixpence a head, had gathered that most of them saw little of the actual marriage ceremony. Hamdun got down from his horse, and with a rifle hanging from his shoulder strode towards a tent, decorated with flowers, and which represented his home. In fact, he had, as it were, been to the tent of the bride's parents for her and had brought her to his own.

A Bischari priest now took matters in hand and set the fathers of bride and bridegroom to the task of arranging the marriage settlement. Among the Arabs—as perhaps elsewhere—this is really done by the mothers. All the fathers had to do was to look important and confirm what their wives had agreed upon. They did so with many words and gesticulations, to which bride and bridegroom seemed to be entirely indifferent. It was explained casually that the father of the former was in the Soudan skin trade—when he is at home—and the father of the latter a hunter.

All being arranged, the Bischari priest read some verses from the Koran, and the Arabs gathered about him intoned them. This was the formal marriage, and the high contracting parties had then each to face an allocution from their respective fathers. Hamdun's sire bade him be a good husband and a good hunter, like his father. Halima's father counselled her to be a dutiful, hard-working wife. "The bride, the bride," cried curious people, who in the crush could see nothing of her. Hamdun lifted Halima in his arms, and she got a genial cheer, but there was disappointment when he did not also kiss her. She blushed furiously under her brown skin, and was no doubt glad to be nearly done with a rather trying ceremony.

It only remained for light-footed Arabs to scurry about with trays of dates and raisins, bananas and cakes—souan village to entertain the marriage tokens of another hospitable home set up, and for the dancing dervishes and the other wonder workers of the Ascompany.

True Love.

An American lady has risen to defend the national dignity by asserting that her countrywomen do not marry European noblemen for their titles alone. It seems that the European is more skilled in the art of making love, and the titles become only one of the many attractions that endear him to the wealthy heiress. There is probably a good deal to be said in favor of this point. In a land where a man's social status is almost entirely governed by his bank account, the universal grab for dollars occupies all the available leisure of the average Yankee, and he hasn't the time to waste on a mere girl who may refuse him after two or three months' courting, and a sacrifice of precious moments that might have been used in besting a brother man out of a quarter's salary.

Can it Be?

"And there is Roslekoff Dimitriskowatchiskoboolieskevitch," says the first girl. "I think she is such a sweet thing! And don't you think her name is beautiful?"

"Oh, yes," concedes the second. "But I have heard—now don't you whisper this to a soul—I have heard that her name isn't all her own."

"Mercy! What do you mean?"

"It is hinted that she wears an artificial skevitch."

Kind fates preserve us! If the ladies in other parts of the world begin amplifying their names as they do their hair, we never shall know whether a lady is really possessed of the aristocratic cognomen engraved upon her cards, or is simply a plain Smith, Jones or Brown.

Equitable Gold Mining Co.

R. C. LANE, President. S. F. NORTON, Secretary and Treasurer.

Over $330,000 of development work already done. Main shaft 9 x 16 feet, down 700 feet. Over 3,000 feet of drifts, tunels and shafts showing immense ore body

Destined to become large and continuous dividend payer.

The Equitable Gold Mining Co.'s properties consist of three mines, known as the North Bonanza, Flowery and Kimbark. They are located in Six Mile canon, less than four miles from Virginia City, Nevada, which is the nearest railroad station.

Years ago, over three hundred thousand dollars of development work was done upon the mines—so they are not mere "prospects" but actual mines. This work was done under the personal supervision of competent engineers, and was paid for by the owners of the mines themselves; thus giving double assurance that the work was well done and that the expenditure was justified.

The Main Shaft (triple compartment, 9x16 feet in the clear) is down seven hundred feet. From this shaft, running along the vein matter, east and west, are four drifts, at different levels, having a combined length (including the Rule winze and the tunnel) of 2,850 feet.

In addition to the above there are four small shafts, with a combined depth of about 300 feet; 585 feet of tunnels, and at least 600 feet of cross-cuts, upraises, etc.

All told, there is 4,650 feet of underground work—the most of which is in ore. Here is nearly one mile of openings in mineralized rock.

It is conservatively estimated by competent and reliable engineers and practical miners that there is developed an ore body of at least One Million Five Hundred Thousand Tons!

As a further evidence of the large amount of work done there is from 75,000 to 100,000 tons of ore on the dumps at the different surface openings—ore that, with modern cheapened processes, can be converted into gold bullion at a profit.

THE TITLE

Title to the Flowery and North Bonanza mines is by patent from the United States government, while the title of the Kimbark is by location and possession.

The Equitable Company obtained the Flowery and North Bonanza mines, both of which are patented, by purchase—the payments therefore to be made out of a share of the net proceeds of the mines. The Company has a written contract, duly recorded, for a deed, and is in possession of the properties, and is now operating them. The sum of $2,000 was paid on the contract, September 30th, 1902, and partial payments have since been made. The Company is entitled to $4.25 per ton as cost of mining and milling. One-half of all over and above this $4.25 per ton goes to the former owners till they receive the total sum of $105,000, without interest. There is no stipulation as to amount of work to be done within any specified time—and no proceeds, no pay. The Company can therefore pay it in one year or it can pay it in ten years. With this exception the Company is free from debt; its policy is to pay as it goes. In this way it has no fear of financial embarrassments. The title to the Kimbark is by "location," under the mining laws of the United States. Work enough has already been done to entitle the Company to a patent, which in due time will be obtained.

Recent Development Work

Since the Company acquired the property, it has put up poles and wires for a distance of one mile for the transmission of electric power from the Truckee River Electric Power Plant. By this means unlimited power for mining, hoisting and milling is obtained.

It has built a dwelling house for the manager, a large boarding house for the miners, a barn, a power house and blacksmith shop.

It has put an electric hoist and skip into the 285-tunnell; has purchased ore cars and the necessary tools for mining purposes.

It has acquired the Kimbark ground, adjoining the Flowery and North Bonanza mines, and is now developing the property by driving a tunnel.

Storm King Group of Mines

TO CANADIAN INVESTORS

The property comprising what is known as the STORM KING GROUP OF MINES offers an attractive and safe investment. The property is the richest in the country and we believe it would be difficult to secure an investment that promises better returns. The following is a description of the mines written by Capt. A. M. Paul, whose reputation as an expert in mining matters is known far and near.

These properties are situated in the Cable Cove Mining District, about fifteen miles north of Sumpter, Oregon, and about one mile northwest of the Baby McKee mine, about two miles northwest of the Last Chance, the Alpine, the Imperial and the California mines.

The properties in this report consist of seven claims. The names of the seven claims being as follows: The Eureka and the Honest Dollar. These two claims are on the same vein. Adjoining these two claims and paralleling them on the northwest is another vein upon which there are two claims known as the Jessie and Golden Rule, and paralleling them on the northwest there is another vein upon which there are two claims, known as the Storm King and the Ozone. The last claim of this group lies to the northwest of the last two named, and is adjoining them. This claim is the Shannon Bell.

In making my report I will commence with the two first named claims of the group, the Eureka and Honest Dollar. The development on these claims consists of a tunnel ninety-seven feet in length, running along the course of the vein, showing two feet ten inches of ore in the top of the tunnel and a little over three feet in the bottom, which assays giving values of from $9.68 to $70 per ton in gold. About four hundred feet in a southwesterly direction there is a shaft on the vein ten feet deep, showing the vein to be from one to two inches wide on the surface and about twelve inches wide in the bottom of the shaft, in which assays give values of from $9.70 to $40 per ton in free milling gold ore.

This vein is exposed by small shafts and open cuts for a distance of fifteen hundred feet, and the course of this vein is north, ten degrees east, and the vein cuts the formation, showing it to be a true fissure, and the formation is granite. This vein shows in places a width of from ten to fifteen feet of mineralized matter, commonly called vein matter, but which is caused by hot solutions from below.

I will now pass to the Jessie and Golden Rule. There has been very little work done upon these two claims, there being one discovery shaft ten feet deep, showing crevice all sides of the shaft, and running in value of from $4 upwards. It is my opinion that with development, this, too, will prove valuable property.

The work on the Storm King and Ozone consists of a tunnel near the point of discovery and is driven along the vein for a distance of one hundred and eighty feet, showing ore all the way from the surface to the face of the tunnel, and averaging in width from six to eighteen inches. Three assays give the following values, $12.50. This being a general sample taken from the dump. The other two assays are $42.68 and $72.40 respectively, this being the assorted ore for shipment. The course of this tunnel and vein are north, ten degrees west, and the vein cuts the trend of the formation obliquely (which is granite) and by driving this tunnel five or six hundred feet it should intersect a quartzite reef (which is running north, twenty degrees east) which would make this a contact vein between granite and quartzite, and should produce a large body of ore at the intersection of the contact.

The only work done upon the Shannon Bell, the last claim of this group is the location work, and is not enough to allow of a report being made.

There is water for power purposes one mile from the property, and timber on the ground, of a very fine quality, sufficient to run the mine for many years to come.

All the assays mentioned in this report were made by the assayer, of the Imperial mine at my request, and the ore was taken by me from the properties mentioned.

I will state that I have been a practical miner since 1870, and am now the manager and superintendent of the Imperial mine in this district.

(Signed) CAPTAIN A. M. PAUL.

The Science of Flowers.

It is to be feared that among the embellishments of life, writes Sir Edwin Arnold in The London Telegraph, flowers too often afford an example of how people will turn pleasures into toils. I noticed lately a tender little wail which arose from a lady who found herself overburdened with the too frequent task of arranging buds and blossoms for the passages and apartments of her London house. A lover of flowers, as everybody of good taste must be, she confessed to feeling something not unlike what the prisoner experiences when his day's allowance of oakum to be picked has just been served out, to see her butler climb the staircase, holding at arm's length on a vast tray the confused heap of blooms and foliage; behind him at the same time would come the parlormaid, staggering under a load of glasses and vases and what not, destined to hold the costly plunder of the morning. At first a delightful labor and always a graceful and sweet-scented one, it had come, said the fair complainant, to be a heavy and time-consuming task, growing more and more burdensome as the fashion of floral display extended, and the country every morning sent up to town such tempting wealth of roses and lilies and the rest.

It is not the fault of the flowers, of course, except because, being so fragrant, so delicate, and so beautiful, they make slaves of all who serve them. On the contrary, it would decidedly tend to shock the mind of many a fair arranger of flowers if science went to the unkind pains of explaining to her how entirely free from any wish or intention to give pleasure are those exquisite roses and all those dainty blossoms. If there were, indeed, a language of flowers, and the products of the parterre could speak, they would say, "Madam (or Miss), do not flatter yourself that one petal of us has been tinted, one bud expanded, one green leaf spread to the sunshine, or one single calyx among us has opened its wonderful apparatus of stamen and pistil to nestle in your silken tresses or to repose in not unequal rivalry above your rosy cheeks or upon your lily-white necks and bosoms. Not for you, however much the poets have lied to you, were we created, and never for you have we grown up to the glory and the grace for which we have become to-day your unwilling victims. We were made so lovely, so delicate and variously tinted, perfumed so divinely, and loaded with little chalices of nectar distilled from earth and sky by such chemistry as your Royal Society never knew, wholly and solely to please a beetle, to attract a bee, to woo into our secret service the painted butterfly or fluttering moth.

"Your great and learned Mr. Darwin, if you will only read him, can show you why we wear these colors and display these stains and patches and lines of scarlet and gold, of purple and amber. They are simply traps and baits to lure the wandering insects, who thus become the marriage-makers of almost all our families, because the law stands that it is best for plants and trees to wed abroad instead of to wed at home."

The Japanese are perhaps the only people on the earth who have understood all this, and who do not allow the flowers to embarrass or overwhelm them. Sensitive in every nerve to the glory of line and splendor of color in nature, they economize their admiration and confine it to a profound enjoyment of a few, instead of the wholesale collections indulged in by western people. They would no more regard one of our vast bouquets or bowpots as a proper mode of arranging flowers than we should call the motley crowd of spectators in the pit of a theatre an evening party. Their leading idea, entirely opposed to ours, is to get the full delight of shape and outline of natural balance and contrast from one or two floral specimens, and by no means to mass and thereby confuse them, so that even the truest eye and most subtle nostrils become bewildered in the tumult of beauty, like the ass of Buridanus between his equal bundles of hay.

Ruskin has somewhere expressed the opinion that flowers ought never to be plucked from their stalk, but left to grow, because their chief charm is their life, which is forfeited when the blossom is broken off. But, although a flower is never so charming as where it is seen alive and fulfilling its floral purpose, that would sadly limit popular enjoyment of it. Perhaps this enjoyment is keenest among those who least comprehend the magic and the mystery of their being, and I am half afraid that the country girl who puts a flower in her hair, or the little ones who fill their small fingers with bluebells and May blossoms, have a pleasure in that glory of theirs which our Lord declared to be greater than Solomon's, untasted by mighty Darwin, when counting the seeds in a single capsule of an orchid, and showing how, but for a preventive law, that single the whole globe with orchis maculata. plant in four generations could cover

Benefit of Spraying Apple Orchards.

The experimental spraying operations carried on during the spring and summer by the Fruit Division, Ottawa, in the Woodstock and Ingersoll districts have been satisfactory beyond expectations. Mr. W. A. MacKinnon, chief of the Fruit Division, says that they furnish the best illustration of the necessity of spraying that he has ever seen. Aside from the opportunities for comparison between sprayed and unsprayed orchards, chance has provided some remarkable proofs of the value of the operations. In every case where a single tree, or part of a tree, in one of the sprayed orchards was neglected the fruit on such tree or part of tree is to-day hardly worth the trouble of picking, while on all sprayed portions scab is hardly to be found.

ARE NOT BEAUTIFUL

London, Dec. 15— A correspondent writes to a society weekly in angry criticism of the custom of calling American women beautiful.

"Really,' he, or most likely she, writes, "I am, as the Yankees say, tired of reading the gush in the British newspapers about the beauty of American women. I have had a large experience of the sex in America, and though I grant that many of them are charming in many respects, I have never yet seen one that I should call actually beautiful. I have seen beautiful women in England—never in America.

"Even in Canada," continues this terrible critic, "where one would expect to find color and distinction, the women are not much better, though, perhaps, healthier looking than their sisters from the States. The genuine Yankee has a shrivelled appearance beside a fresh complexioned Englishwoman, while too many of the Canadians are of the hard-featured type. The French-Canadian is no better.

Their Great Sorrow.

"I am so worried about baby," says the fond young mother to the proud young father. "What's the matter? He isn't sick, is he?" asked the husband, with some natural alarm showing itself on his countenance. "No, but he is beginning to talk, and——" "And what? Does he have an impediment in his speech?" "No. Worse than that. He says things that don't sound any more sensible than the choruses to the popular songs!" That night, with strained, tearless eyes, a man and woman sat by a little crib, wondering why this great sorrow should come upon them.—Chicago "Tribune."

Poet (with emotion)—All people seem to scorn my poetry—but I suppose when I die everyone will go into raptures. Editor—Oh, yes!—at least, all the editors will, I should think.

Good, Safe Investment

THE STOCK OF THE
BRET HARTE GOLD MINING COMPANY
IS THE BEST MINING INVESTMENT TO-DAY

This is a strong statement, but facts substantiate it. The work on the mine has proven its value. The promoters have shown their confidence in it by using their own money for development work.

The Company's Property is Six Claims, Patented Land

Mine can be cheaply and economically worked.

Treasury Stock only for sale, and only sufficient stock will be sold to supply machinery.

The mine lacks but one thing—machinery, and to purchase this a small block of stock will be sold at 15 cents per share. When machinery is paid for no more stock will be sold

PROSPECTUS INFORMATION FREELY GIVEN

This proposition is better than that of many companies selling stock at 50 cents a share, and will stand a thorough investigation

Purchase the Treasury Stock of The Drake
Mining Drainage and Tunnel Transportation Co.
OF COLORADO

The Company is capitalized at $2,000,000, consisting of 2,000,000 shares, par value one dollar per share. Seven hundred and fifty thousand shares of this amount is eight per cent. Preferred Treasury Stock.

The Property

Consists of nine patented, well developed mines and mill sites, situated in Gilpin County, Colorado. This county has already produced more than

$80,000,000 in Gold

The development of the property consists of many shafts sunk on ore to a depth of [illegible] to [illegible] feet, and a tunnel run a distance of [illegible] feet, not only to develop its own property, but also to unwater and furnish underground transportation for the Gregory, the Bob-Tail and other rich mines of the district.

Transportation

The Colorado & Southern Railroad passes directly in front of the mouth of the tunnel. All ore can be dumped therefrom directly into the cars, giving quick and cheap transportation to the mills. Large returns have been paid from the product of these mines.

Sale of Preferred Stock

The company desires to not only push its development work and complete its tunnel at an early day, but also erect on its own mill site at the mouth of the tunnel, proper reduction works for the treatment of its ores. For that purpose it now offers for sale [illegible] shares of the Preferred Treasury Stock at [illegible] cents per share, reserving the right to increase the price of all unsold shares thereof at any time without notice.

The Company pledges the whole net product of its mines to pay an eight per cent annual dividend on the sum paid for such stock, before any other stock receives any dividends whatever. After such dividends has been paid, the common stock shall receive a like dividend, when the surplus fund remaining shall be distributed among the common and preferred stock, share and share alike. All stock will be issued full paid and non-assessable.

Active and experienced agents wanted to sell said Preferred Treasury stock on commission.

Prospectus can be had on application. Persons desirous of purchasing stock can do so by remitting to the Company by Draft, P. O. or Express Money Order, payable to the order of

Lung Trouble

Promptly relieved and permanently cured by inhaling Catarrhozone

Mrs. B[illegible] Brown of Te[illegible], N.S., was cured by Catarrhozone of lung trouble and catarrh after hundreds of other remedies failed

If your lungs are weak, if there is consumption in your family; if Colds, Catarrh and Bronchitis bother you, be sure to use Catarrhozone. It is especially adapted for these diseases and cures every [illegible]

Mrs. Brown took cough mixtures, but they made her sick. Then she used an atomiser, but, after resorting without benefit to poultices and numerous other remedies, she tried Catarrhozone.

"I used Catarrhozone Inhaler," writes Mrs. Brown, five minutes every hour, and soon recognized that it was going to cure me. I could feel the soothing medicated air spreading through the air passages of the throat, and it touched the sore spots in the lungs that other remedies failed to reach. Catarrhozone seemed to go just where it was needed most, and soon put a stop to my cough. It restored me to perfect health, and I am convinced that no cough, cold or catarrh can exist if Catarrhozone is used."

No treatment is so clean, so pleasant, so certain to cure as Catarrhozone. By means of the Inhaler the local symptoms such as coughing, inflammation and congestion are speedily corrected. Ferrozone tablets which are taken after each meal purify and cleanse the blood of all poisons and build up and strengthen the system.

This local and constitutional treatment is always effective, and cures cases that have been given up as hopeless. Money can't buy or produce anything better, and to get cured it is absolutely necessary to use Catarrhozone.

Where the Wicked Fall

There is a lot of talk nowadays about the march of progress. We have been marched by Progress from the regime of the good old pine board sidewalk to the era of granolithic. Given a slight snowfall, or a rain succeeded by a frost, and the modern but limb-fracturing cement walk is able to make gray with apprehension the managers of every accident insurance company in the town. Ordinary leather heels will keep no man erect on that glassy surface.

NEW COLD STORAGE COMPANY INCORPORATED

The Peterborough Cold Storage and Provision company

The last issue of the Ontario Gazette contains notice that under the Ontario Companies' Act, His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council, has granted a charter constituting Geo. Carton, Michael Carton, John Wesley Miller, and Joseph Harris McClellan, merchants; James Middleton, farmer, and William Henry Jeffs, physician, and William Anderson, of the Township of Otonabee, a corporation to carry on the business of a warehousing and cold storage company in all its branches, to acquire and take over the pork packing factory now owned by George Carton, in the Township of North Monaghan, with the land and premises used in connection therewith, and also the business and good will appertaining thereto, and all the plant and machinery thereof. The corporate name of the company to be the Peterborough Cold Storage and Provision Company, Limited, the share capital of the Company to be three hundred thousand dollars, the head office to be at Peterborough, and the Provisional Directors to be Michael Carton, James Middleton, William Henry Jeffs, William Anderson, and John Wesley Miller.

COURT OF APPEAL

On Monday, His Honor, Judge Weller, heard several appeals from the Court of Revision.

The appeal of the G. N. W. telegraph Co was withdrawn.

The appeal of Mrs. A. S. Hamilton was withdrawn.

The appeal of Mr. W. F. Hilliard was not pressed and therefore was not considered.

Mr. R. M. Dennistoun appeared in behalf of Mr. J. J. Lundy, who appealed against assessment of income. The assessment was confirmed.

The Kingan Hardware Co. appealed against an over-assessment. It was reduced by $1,000.

An Important Invention

Galt Reporter, Messrs. Richard J. Chowen and William Hartley, the former master mechanic and the latter boss warper of the Auburn Woolen Mills, have just been granted United States patents of a most important invention and one which has been in very successful use in the mills here for some time. The invention is an improvement on warping reels, and Mr. Hartley will in a few days leave to complete arrangements with the Davis Furber Company of North Andover, Mass., who are anxious to secure the right to manufacture the machines for the United States. Negotiations are in progress with a New York firm for the patent rights for France, Great Britain, Belgium, and Sweden. The inventors have been working for years on this machine, which weavers say will revolutionize the weaving of woolen goods.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

—Miss Vieva Hunter, Peterborough, who has been visiting Mrs. W. Claude Fox, returned home this afternoon.—Toronto News.

—Mr. Murray Anderson, of Cordova, and Rev Mr. Camp, of Havelock, were in town yesterday. They were on their way to Port Hope to attend the Presbytery meeting.

—Miss S. M. Coleman, Lady Superintendent of Nicholls Hospital, and Miss Helen, Assistant Superintendent, have been called to Port Hope on account of the death of their father, Mr. V. A. Coleman.

INCIDENTS OF THE DAY

—Buy your Christmas goods early.

—There was no police court yesterday.

—New pictures of the Lift Lock—Just the Xmas present to mail friends at a distance. Times Bookstore.

—The Peterborough Cold Storage and Provision Company, has been incorporated under the Companies' Act, with headquarters at Peterborough.

—Do not promise your vote to any aldermanic candidate who does not pledge himself to reduce the tax rate to 17 mills.

Wanted immediately—Furnished sitting room; two bedrooms (one single) with use of kitchen. Apply at the Times Office

—A Lindsay barrister has been fined 30 cents for kicking a confrere. If the penalty is to stand as a precedent a good use will at last be found for the troublesome twenty-cent piece.

—Ald. Best's foot must have slipped or he would surely not have had both an engineer and a street commissioner whose salaries pretty nearly amount to one-fifth of the total expenditure on streets.

—The editors who are advising people to buy their Christmas presents early and avoid the rush will be seen just before midnight on Christmas eve making a panicky effort to accomplish the Christmas shopping.

—The advanced pupils of Mrs. Morrow will give a recital in the Y.M.C.A. on Thursday evening, Dec. 17th, at eight o'clock. All pupils and members of the chorus classes are requested to be present.

—The Bank of Hamilton lost a package containing $10,000 the other day. This g. f. j. at once counted his change to see it it had got into his pocket by accident.

—Those who have expressed a wish to sell tickets for the dramatic entertainment for the benefit of the Children's Aid Society, may procure them from Mr. K. Eardley-Wilmot, at the Bank of Montreal.

—The excursion to Wallaceburg and Dresden, under the auspices of the Peterborough Sugar Company yesterday was well patronized. Quite a number of gentlemen from town took it in and report a very interesting time at the beet sugar factories at the above places.

—A subscriber writes The Times, suggesting as the law provides for women school trustees, that Peterborough should give the ladies a call. This great family journal holds up both hands for this proposition, notwithstanding the fact that a feeling exists amongst the ratepayers that there are too many old ladies of the male sex on the Board now.

General Sports

At a meeting of the executive of the Hockey Club on Monday night, Harry Morgan was elected team captain for the season. In choosing Harry to represent them the team could not have made a better choice. He understands the game well, is cool headed and cautious, and everything is to the point. He is a playing member of the team, and is very popular with the other players and the general public.

The boys will start to get into shape at once, and the practices will be conducted in a systematic way. A referee will officiate each night in order that the players may be held down to profitable work.

Efforts are being made to have a senior team play a practice match here during the week, between Christmas and New Year's, and it is hoped that the Winnipeg Stanley Cup team will be prevailed upon to remain off at Peterborough on their way home. The juniors and seniors had a good practice last night, the line-up being as follows;

Goal.

Mercer ...... Vanevery

Point.

Howell ...... Craig

Cover-point.

Cavanah ...... R. Parker

Forwards.

R. Hall ...... R. Armstrong

Ferguson ...... Morgan

Macfarlane ...... H. Armstrong

H. Kennedy ...... Whitcroft

Following is the schedule for practices;

Monday—5 to 6, Colts; 7 to 8.10 juniors and intermediates.

Tuesday—7 to 8.10, seniors and juniors.

Thursday—8 to 9.10, seniors; 9.10 to 10, intermediate and juniors.

Friday—7 to 8.10, seniors and juniors.

And an intermediate practice one night a week from 10 to 11.

All Saints' hockey team are arranging a game with Campbellford to take place in the near future.

MISCELLANEOUS.

D. Belland accepts the challenge issued by William Armstrong for a fifteen round boxing contest, providing his hand, which is badly cut, is in shape on Saturday. He will meet Mr. Armstrong at the Examiner office at eight o'clock on Saturday night next, when a supporter will deposit $25, the contest to take place at the next smoker held by the Cordage Hockey team. Mr. Belland will meet the challenger at 125 pounds, and give or take two pounds.

The Canadian Cordage Co.'s tug of war team hereby challenge the Quaker team for the Sykes trophy, to be pulled off at the next Cordage Co. Hockey Club concert.

Mr. Leo Clancy has been instructed by Nick Collins of Ottawa to match him against any 110 lb. boxer or wrestler in Canada for the championship cup.

Geo. Gauthier declines to meet Mr. McDonough at present as he has a return match with Farmer Burns inside of thirty days, and as he has already secured a decision over Mr. McDonough as he proposes that he meet Eugene Hurtubise, and he will meet the winner for the local championship.

The Most Popular Viceroy.

Lord Dudley, who is considered the most popular Viceroy Ireland has ever had, is a remarkable man in many ways. He is one of the richest peers in Great Britain. He has no need of his salary of $100,000 a year as Lord Lieutenant of Ireland. Indeed, the cost of maintaining his vice-regal office far exceeds that sum. His collieries in the "Black Country" alone return him over $200,000 a year, and he also owns deposits of minerals in Staffordshire and Worcestershire, iron works, agricultural estates in various parts of England, and plantations in Jamaica and other West Indian islands. Shortly after Lord Dudley was made Viceroy he toured Ireland in his automobile with Lady Dudley, and when they returned to Dublin he had made hosts of friends everywhere, and there was hardly a phase of Irish life with which he was unfamiliar.

True Enough.

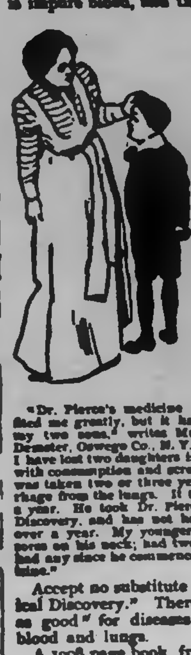
Knowles—No; I seldom go to the barber's without having to wait while some other fellow's hair is being cut.—"Town Topics."

It's Impure Blood.

"What is it?" asks the mother as she notices the smooth skin of her child marred by a red or pimply eruption. It is impure blood, and the child needs at once to begin the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the best and surest remedy for impurity of the blood. It entirely eradicates the poisons which corrupt the blood and cause disease. It cures scrofula, boils, pimples, eczema, salt-rheum and other eruptive diseases which are the direct result of impure blood. It enriches as well as purifies the blood.



"Dr. Pierce's medicine has not only benefited me greatly, but it has done wonders for my two sons," writes Mrs. M. Hartrick, of Demster, Oswego Co., N. Y. "Both had scrofula. I have lost two daughters in less than five years with consumption and scrofula. My eldest son was taken two or three years ago with hemorrhage from the lungs. It troubled him for over a year. He took Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and has not had a hemorrhage in over a year. My younger son had scrofulous sores on his neck; had two lanced, but has not had any since he commenced to take your medicine."

Accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery." There is nothing "just as good" for diseases of the stomach, blood and lungs.

DIRECT LEGISLATION

Stirring Address on the Subject by Mr. Walter Roebuck

A very lengthy and interesting lecture was delivered by Mr. Walter Roebuck, Assistant Secretary of the Direct Legislation League of Ontario.

Mr. Roebuck gave a brief sketch of the mode of government in early times, dating from the beginning of English history.

Direct legislation, according to Mr. Roebuck, is to be the government of the future, and instead of giving the affairs of the country into the hands of a few persons, many of whom are grasping and unscrupulous, every item would be submitted to the people and dealt with in a way to the interests of the electors.

Every class will be on the same footing under Direct Legislation and instead of measures being dealth with by irresponsible representatives, the people will have a say in how their affairs shall be managed, and their property rights look ed after in a just and reasonable way. The Initiative Rererendum has been in force in many cities and municipalities throughout the country, and has given perfect satisfaction.

A local federation was formed, and Mr. W. S. Robertson elected secretary. Mr. Robertson will be at work at once to push the movement forward. It was decided to hold another meeting shortly, and elect any other officers that might be deemed necessary.

The wise housewife uses a pure cream of tartar baking powder like Cleveland's. The result,—good, wholesome, digestible cake every time.

RUSSIA IS THE ADVANCING POWER BRITAIN AND JAPAN RETREATING

Japanese Sentiment is Strongly in Favor of War With Russia

GREAT BRITAIN MUST FIGHT FOR JAPAN

This is the Growing Feeling in England on Account of Russia's Eastern Policy

London, Dec. 17.—There is a growing feeling throughout Britain that war is bound to come between Russia and Japan, and that England must help Japan in the struggle. Russia's grasping methods is jeopordizing not only Britain's sphere of influence in China, but endangers the Indian empire. The Morning Post says that should Russian-Japanese war break out, as is now exceedingly probable, Britain will see that no outside help is given the great northren power. Should Japan get the worst of it, as is also likely, there is no knowing what the end will be, as the British people will at once clamor for a declaration of war against Russia. Indeed, it is difficult to see how Britain could permit Russia to reap the fruits of victory from a struggle with Japan. The knowledge of this fact is the restraining influence now holding the Czar in check.

In the opinion of those who know Japan, the popular feeling there against Russia is overwhelming. The rendition of Manchuria has been repeatedly promised, but instead we hear of towns, railway stations, barracks, and fortresses being built, the rivers crowded with steamers, and the province overrun with soldiers and officials—in a word, practical sovereignty assumed over a land of promise.

It is difficult to resist the conviction forces upon one by the ever increasing evidences of Russia's prestige which confront one in the Far East that, to use Lord Curzon's words, "She is the advancing, and we are the retreating Power." It is little use to recall the various steps that have combined to produce this calamitous impression, but it is worth while wondering whether, even now, at the eleventh hour, some resolute effort might not be made to restore the tottering balance of power in Northern China.

Niu-Chwang may yet be saved, and Tien Tsin, we may take it for granted is bound to be preserved for many a long year. But it is fighting against odds, for the Powers to content themselves with more or less feeble endeavors to preserve the status quo, while their northern rival is incessantly pressing forward. In the East, as elsewhere, to stand still is too often to lose ground. Though the distance between Northern China and India may be great, the object-lesson of our continued reluctance to strengthen our position round the Gulf of Pechili is producing comments in the native press which it is not our interests to encourage.

Chamberlain's Policy

Some one objects that it is Imperialism that Mr. Chamberlain is advancing. Now don't put it quite that way. It is Imperial preferential trade, which the Colonies so far as they can have put into actual operation, and to which they are trying to convert the senior partner of this great firm. But some one says it is a scheme for suppressing the smaller nationalities in the British Colonies. All you have to do my friends is to consider the history of Great Britain for the last 800 years; to read the history of the great nation, and you will come to the conclusion that nowhere is there greater freedom for the smaller nationalities than within this free Empire." Hon. Geo. E. Foster's speech in Montreal.

THE SUGAR INDUSTRY.

CITIZENS VISIT DRESDEN AND WALLACEBURG

Over One Hundred Take in the Trip—Everybody Greatly Impressed with the Importance of the Beet Sugar Industry

About one hundred persons from this district visited Dresden and Wallaceburg on Tuesday last on the invitation of the Peterborough Sugar Company. A special G.T.R. train had been chartered, and the party started at 1 o'clock on their journey. It was a long trip, but, on account of the attention paid the party by Mr. W. Bunton, the genial city agent of the Grand Trunk, who personally conducted the excursion, it was most enjoyable. Mr. Garvin and directors and officers of the Sugar Company left nothing undone which would add to the comfort of their guests. A dining car was put on which was in charge of Mr. Harry Long. It is needless to say that no one went hungry. At Toronto, Mr. J. C. McDonald, the popular and efficient district passenger agent of the G.T.R. joined the party.

The distance to Wallaceburg is in the neighborhood of 375 miles, making the total run about 750 miles. Passing through Toronto, Hamilton, London, Chatham, the party arrived at Dresden about 5 o'clock in the afternoon. An hour was spent inspecting the splendid factory of the Dresden Sugar Company, at this place, said to be one of the finest on the continent. Everything about the factory was of the best, the building being erected on cut stone foundations, and the interior of steel and cement floors, &c. Unfortunately the works were not in operation, having finished the stock of beets, after 25 days run, using up about 12,000 tons of beets. One of the features of the factory is a gigantic dryer which makes the chief by-product, pulp, immediately marketable. The apparatus cost about $80,000. This pulp is an excellent cattle food, and sells for $10 per ton.

Leaving Dresden at 5.30 the party arrived at Wallaceburg 30 minutes later. The Wallaceburg factory was in full operation, being brilliantly lighted with electric lights. The capacity of this factory is 700 tons of beets per 24 hours. It is here that the beets of the Peterborough Sugar Company were shipped this year. The Times' representative was handed a sample package of sugar made from the Peterborough beets. The visitors were shown through the factory by the officers of the Company, and were well pleased with what they saw.

After an hour spent in looking through the factory a start was made for home During the journey the following resolution was carried unanimously.

"Mr Sam. Armstrong moved, seconded by Mr. S. Stenson, that the thanks o the guests of the company are due to the officers and directors for the opportunity offered of making the excursion, and visiting the plants that had proved to be of such general and practical interest. That the feeling was shared by all that if the farmers in general could be brought into contact with the operations now going on at Wallaceburg they would realize the importance of the industry being established at Peterborough and that it afforded commercial possibilities of great value that would, it was hoped, benefit the promoters, farmers, and business men at large. That favorable results must flow from the establishment of such an enterprise.

The train arrived home at 5.30 a.m. every member of the party feeling that the day spent with the Peterborough Sugar Company's officers was one that will long be remembered with pleasure.

FRANCE IS FRIENDLY

Montreal, Dec. 16 — Mr. A. Kleczkowski, Consul-General of France in Canada, who returned today from a three months trip home, says that the feeling that seems to prevail now in France is that any negotiations with Canada will be conducted in a most friendly spirit. The last visit of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Hon. Mr. Fielding to France, he says, resulted in much greater interest being taken in Canadian affairs. The recent visit of Sir Louis Jette created a most favorable impression, and he had far more invitations than he could possibly accept.

THE SEA OF AZOF IS DISAPPEARING

Remarkable Natural Phenomenon in Southern Russia

St. Petersburg, Dec. 16— The Sea of Azof is disappearing, and remarkable scenes are in course of enaction. At Taganrog the waters have receded to The firm propose to cut about 3,000 such an extent during the past five days that the bed of the sea is visible for a distance of several versts (a verst is 3,500 feet.)

High winds hurled clouds of sand shoreward, covering the town. Vessels are lying high and dry and the greatest confusion prevails in the harbor.

Work in the factories has had to be reduced to a minimum, owing to the lack of water.

The Sea of Azov or Azof, is an inland sea of Southern Russia, lying between latitude 45 deg. 30 min. and 47 deg. 30 min. north, and longitude 35 deg. and 39 deg. east. The Turks call it Balik-Denghis, or Fish Sea, from the abundance of fish in its waters. Its extreme length, from northeast to southwest is about 235 miles; breadth about 110 miles; area, 14,000 square miles. The waters are nearly fresh very shallow, encumbered with sandbanks, and navigable only by vessels of small draught. The sea is properly a gulf of the Black Sea, with which it is connected on the south by the Strait of Yenikale or of Kertch, about thirty miles long. For four months (says the American Encylopaedia) it is frozen over, the navigation opening early in April and closing late in November. The Siwash, or Putrid Sea, a western continuation of the Sea of Azov, is cut off by a long narrow slip of land called the tongue of Arabat, and entered by the Strait of Genitchi, at the north of the tongue. It is separated from the Black Sea by the Isthmus of Perekop; The Putrid Sea is little more than a long reach of swamps. The Don is the largest river emptying into the Sea of Azov.

Will Methodists Allow Dancing?

New York, Dec. 16 —Agitation in some quarters in Methodism for changing or enforcing the famous Paragraph 248 of the Methodist Book of Discipline, directed against cards, gambling, theaters, dancing, circuses, and horse-racing has become so prevalent that whenever the subject is brought up to a lively discussion follows. The Methodist preachers' meeting had it hot and heavy yesterday over a paper read by the Rev. J. A. Hensey, pastor of Trinity Church, Paterson N.J., who said among other things:

"The clause is a dead letter. There isn't sentiment large enough in the Church to enforce it; it isn't being enforced and should be repealed. Our people are violating it daily, and it cannot be stopped. It is useless to try. None and most of us do not privately. Nevertheless, Methodists will dance and Methodists will play cards and Methodists will go to circuses. It is hard—nay, it is almost impossible—to pretend to loyal church members concerning these apparent derelictions. Let us, therefore, find it not necessary longer to preach a rule which does not work out in practice."

Protest to this was immediately made by the Rev. Dr. A. E. Ballard, one of the trustees of the Ocean Grove camp meeting, who introduced the clause to the General Conference of 1872. Dr. Ballard is now 83 years old. In a voice shaking with emotion he told the history of the movement resulting in the passage of the clause, and urged that effort be made to retain it. Other laws on statute books, null in the letter, he said, of us approves of these things publicly have in spirit a far-reaching effect.

It was voted to talk about the card playing and dancing clause again in a week or two.

The punishment for infractions of Clause 248, the Book of Discipline says, shall be "First, private reproof by the pastor or leader, and if proper acknowledgment of the fault and proper humiliation is made the person may be borne with. On the second offence the pastor and leader may be accompanied by one or two discreet members of the church. On the third offence let him be brought to trial, and if found guilty, with no sign of real humiliation, then he [illegible]

THE CAVAN BLAZERS

An Authentic History of the Celebrated Organization Should be Written

The following letter appears in the Millbrook Reporter, written by a citizen of Cobourg. It will be of interest to many of our readers. The writer says,

In your issue of Nov. 19th you copied from the Peterborough Times a letter signed "One who was There," which was called forth by a brief sketch of a most fragmentary nature of mine, which was originally published in the Cobourg World, was reprinted by you in your issue of Oct. 22nd, and appears to have found its way into the Peterborough paper. "One who was There" seems to have about the same opinion of me as a certain woman had of her husband, she fancying his acquaintanceship with veracity was such that she could not believe him when he talked in his sleep. We examine the correspondent's letter, and we find that he has been valentining, and what he writes will, consequently, have to be taken with a full degree of allowance. It appears to be the case of the pot calling the kettle black, of Satan reproving sin.

"One who was There" says for instance that the "Cavan Blazers" originated in 1846, and continued until 1848. A few lines further on he denies point blank my statement that they were at the zenith of their power about 1859 Now Mr Hayter in an installment of his reminiscences, which was published in the Millbrook Reporter of May 4th, 1899, tells how the Cavan Blazers prevented Geo. Brown, the famous Libral leader and founder of The Globe, from addressing a nomination meeting at Millbrook in the last week of December, 1857. But we are told that the Cavan Blazers had ceased to be in 1850, forsooth Mr. Hayter fixes the date from the fact that the nomination meeting was held shortly after he had founded the Millbrook Messenger, and that he printed bills for the Cavan Blazers, calling them and their friends to attend the meeting. With the exception of a few typographical errors I must claim absolute accuracy for my sketch, my date came from reliable sources, and may be verified by old residents of Cavan township. It is true that the Cavan Blazers were in existence long after 1850, that they had a retreat in a swamp, that they enjoyed banquets that in the parlance of today would be called "high teas" and were known by nick-names, "Sugar Son" had its origin in a fond mother calling her little son "my sweet sugar son."

"One who was There" says that the Cavan Blazers never were an association or organization of any kind."

What I originally wrote was "they might have been styled a great secret organization," but the printer dropped the word "might." In conclusion, Mr. Editor, I would say by all odds let us have a correct history of the Cavan Blazers written, not by cowardly anonymous correspondents, but by men possessed of the courage of their convictions, who can tell "the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth," and are not afraid to enhance the value of their communications by appending their signature.

AN ICE-CLAD STEAMSHIP ON A PERILOUS JOURNEY

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 15—The propellor J. T. Hutchinson came into Detroit River yesterday coated from stem to stern with ice many inches thick. She looked like a steam-driven iceberg. Her voyage down the lakes is one of the most remarkable in the history of inland navigation, and it is not ended yet. The navigation, and is not ended yet. This morning she left for Buffalo.

The Hutchinson struck on the rocks off Eagle River, Lake Superior, on the night of November 29th, and so certain were her owners that she would be a total loss that they abandoned her to the underwriters.

Agents of the underwriters took charge and induced the crew to return to the boat by promising extra wages, and a bonus. The steamer was released from the rocks, and under her own steam she started down the lakes with five of her six safety compartments filled with water and a cargo of soaked flax in her hold.

As she slowly steamed down the river thousands gathered to see her. Tons of ice were on her decks. The pilot house was sheathed with ice to the top of the weather cloth and one of the windows had to be chopped out that the helmsman could see.

On top of the pilot-house behind the weather cloth, which was a scant protection against the wintry blasts, Captain John H. Smith had his post.

When the steamer got into the river Captain Smith had the hot water hose rigged and set the crew chopping off some of the ice.

The Hutchinson is drawing about 20 feet of water, and enough of her cargo will be lightened to allow her to cross the limekilns. The centrifugal pump was working at the forward hatch all the way down.

The Hutchinson has trouble ahead of her in Lake Erie, say the old lakemen. Some of the old fellows, who have had experience in bucking the ice in Lake Erie, say she will never get through to Buffalo. Captain Smith says she will.

"They have lots of nerve to send that boat out to Buffalo," said William Livingston, president of the Lake Carriers Association, as he looked at the big pumps working on the ice-covered boat.

A Splendid Christmas Gift

From The Globe, Saturday, December 12th: "But of all the holiday publications for girls none equals in wealth of entertainment and general excellence the annual of 'The Girls' Realm' for 1903. (London; S. H. Bousfield & Co., Norfolk House, Norfolk street, W.C.) It is skilfully edited. The annual at hand contains interesting serials, amusing and other verse, articles on how to make things, on sports for girls, on all sorts of topics and nearly a thousand illustrations, many drawn by well-known artists, and equal to any being done by American illustrators. Sybil Reid has found an original line in her adventures of 'Bad Anna,' a most amusing series, and Hilda Cowham shows clever work in black and white in 'The Hockey Match' and other topical pieces. There is a year's entertainment between these handsome covers. One is particularly struck by the marked differentiation of type in the faces of the English girls from these Canadian and American, a difference not wholly attributable to difference in mode of hair-dressing and apparel." FREE TRADERS ROUTED IN TWO TYPICAL DISTRICTS

London Voters Stand by Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, "Joe" is Delighted

London, Dec. 16—The two bye-elections yesterday were carried by the Conservative candidates. In the Borough of Lewisham, Major Coates has been elected by a majority of 2,012. In the Dulwich division of Camberwell F. Rutherford Harris has been elected by a majority of 1,437.

Since 1885 both constituencies have been Conservative. Lewisham has not been contested by the Liberals since 18[illegible] when the Conservative majority was 2,414. In Dulwich the Conservative majority in 1895 was 2,062, and to-day's result shows a reduction of 1,615.

Varying Views.

The Telegraph, referring to the Conservative victories at Lewisham and Dulwich, says Mr. Chamberlain should now go to the colonies to ascertain what practical arrangements can be made to secure complete commercial union with in the Empire.

The Standard says both victors are against the taxation of food.

Mr. Chaplin, M.P., speaking at Ware yesterday, said the soil of the colonies was unfitted for the growth of barley, and was likely to be for years to come.

British Farmer's Cause.

Mr. Malcolm, M.P., refused to attend the Ipswich tariff reform demonstration alleging that preferential treatment of Canadian and Australian corn would afford the British farmers no escape from their present burden.

London, Dec. 16— A reliable city informant says an arrangement has been concluded between the Hamburg-American and Canadian Pacific steamship lines whereby the former company will manage the latter company's Continental traffic. If the Canadian Pacific Company runs a line from Antwerp, as it has been announced they will, emigrants will use this route, otherwise the Hamburg-American line will run their steamers to a Canadian port.

Prospects of Increasing Business For Montreal-Avonmouth Route.

London, Dec. 16— Canadian Pacific and chief dock officials at the Avonmouth conference, in view of the development of the Montreal-Avonmouth steamship service during the season of 1904, believe that the Canadian Pacific officials, if the local railway companies co-operate, can reckon on a much larger traffic next season than was secured in the past.

THE IRISH ARE ASKING AID FROM AMERICA

John Redmond Says His Party is United and That Home Rule is Within Grasp

London, Dec. 16—The Times correspondent at Dublin says the organizers of the Irish party are impressed with the necessity of removing the suspicion created in the United States by the resignation of Mr. William O'Brien. Accordingly, Mr. J. Redmond has sent a letter to Mr Finnerty, president of the United Irish League of America, stating that there is no dissention in the Irish party and that the organization is unbroken. Home rule, he says, is the most urgent of the Irish demands. "I honestly believe that it will now be comparatively easy to achieve home rule by taking advantage of the divisions in the English parties." Mr. Redmond asks for continued and greater support for the cause from America.

Canadian Manufacturers Association Held Responsible for Chamberlain Campaign.

London, Dec 16—In his report the Secretary of the Burnley Chamber of Commerce, who was a delegate to the Montreal Congress, says that the Canadian Manufacturers Association is the instigator of the whole movement for preferentia trade. The members are saturated with protection, he says, and they believed that in a fair, straight competition in the open market with the manufactures of England and the United States they would all be ruined.

THE ROSS RIFLE.

London, December 17—Lord Mountstephen makes to-day one of his rare interventions in Canadian affairs. In a letter to The Times he acclaims Sir Richard Cartwright's accession to the ranks of Chamberlain's supporters. Sir Richard Cartwright's adhesion is regarded as of high importance by Chamberlainites generally, who see in his action overwhelming proof of Canada's sympathy with Mr. Chamberlain's general objects.

It is an interesting circumstance that Lord Mountstephen's letter was written from Brocket Hall the same day as the one which the Prince and Princess of Wales were visiting Lord and Lady Mountstephen there. The royal visit ends on Thursday.

The Possessor of 14 Diplomas and Certificates Who Wants No Money That He Does Not Earn.

both the method and the ability to do as he says, Dr. Goldberg, the discoverer, will send the method entirely free to all men who send him their name and address. He wants to hear from men who have stricture that they have been unable to get cured, prostatic trouble, sexual weakness, varicocele, lost manhood, blood poison, hydrocele, emaciation of parts, impotence, etc. His wonderful method not only cures the condition itself, but likewise all the complications, such as rheumatism, bladder or kidney trouble, heart disease, nervous debility, etc.

The doctor realizes that it is one thing to make claims and another thing to back them up, so he has made it a rule not to ask for money unless he cures you, and when you are cured he feels sure that you will willingly pay him a small fee. It would seem, therefore, that it is to the best interests of every man who suffers in this way to write the doctor confidentially and lay your case before him. PETERBOROUGH, DECEMBER 17, 1903

HIS NEW ROLE

If the average citizen of the great British Empire was asked who was the man unlikely of King Edward's subjects to come publicly forward as a patriotic Imperialist, he would probably, after paying due deference to the claims of Mr. W. T. Stead and Professor Goldwin Smith, give an easy third place in the category to Mr. Henry Labouchere. The descendant of ancestors who owed their very lives to Britain's protecting arms in the cruel times of the drawn sword of religious persecution, Mr. Labouchere has rarely, in his diversified and vivacious public career, let slip an opportunity of vilifying the land which sheltered his foregathers, or jeering at its aims, belittling its greatness and magnifying its foibles. A disgusted public has not yet forgotten his unjustifiable and violent attacks on the British army in the last Egyptian campaigns. As Little Englander and Pro-Boer he occupied a position of unsavory eminence. Nor did he spare the immediate surroundings of more strictly home affairs. He would turn in the twinkling of an eye from scathing denunciation of the bayonet of the Empire to vitriolic criticism of the antiquated pattern of the town pump. "Whatever is, is bad," appeared to be his motto in dealing with all things British, both great and small. But, as Mr. Labouchere would himself say, being something of a dabbler in the classics, 'Tempora mutantur, et nos mutamur in illis.' And certainly in the changing times Henry Labouchere has changed. In last week's London 'Truth,' he sounds a note the astonishing novelty of which must have made his readers blink. He asks plaintively why London smart society runs after American and South African women and ignores Canadians and Australians. Warming to his work, he then remarks with severity that London has become a colony of Americans, and demands that a Ladies Empire League should immediately be formed to remedy the grievance. Probably, after recovering from the first shock of surprise, most people, pondering upon this suggestion, so remarkable as coming from such a quarter, would be reminded of the ancient foreboding concerning the exceeding harmfulness of the Greeks when bringing gifts. Can the leopard change his spots, or the Little Englander become an Imperialist? Yet, except for the well-known personality of the man, in the change would be by no means without a parallel in these our days. Disraeli did not begin his public career as a Tory—and Gladstone did. Even the Right honorable Joseph Chamberlain cherished, within the memory of very young students of politics, ideals diametrically opposite to those of which he is today so ardent and able an exponent. We are inclined to plead for a lenient view of the motives inspiring Mr. Labouchere's newly adopted role. Who is he to remain immutable, when his betters have seen the error of their ways? And his idea appeals to us as full of beneficient potentialities. The influence of women in public life is a factor by no means to be despised, whether by the student of contemporaneous or ancient history. Indeed, did women look for the triumphs of their sex with half the diligence with which they seek for its grievances, they would be forced to the conclusion that, at almost every stage of the world's history, they have wielded a power greater by far than any privilege of the ballot-box could ever give them. Yes, we are inclined to wish Mr. Labouchere all good luck in his new movement. A Ladies' Empire League, with the fairest daughters of Canadian Dominion and Australian Commonwealth grouped under its banner, would be something more than a fashionable fad for London society. It would be made a very valuable and potent factor in that new and greater Imperialism which in spite of mistakes, faults and misunderstandings, is daily welding in a closer bond Great and Greater Britain.

AN ASTONISHING REVELATION

That is astonishing talk which is made by Mr. Garvan, assistant district attorney of New York, concerning insurance swindles in that city. Mr. Garvan asserts that at least 90 per cent. of the claims of fire losses settled in New York by public insurance adjusters are fraudulent in some form or another. By these frauds, dishonest adjusters have been able to retain at least 50 per cent. of the amounts collected from the insurance companies, and have been reaping a harvest of about $800,000 annually. This estimate is credited by the president of a large company, who says that the companies have been paying out about $6,000,000 annually for New York city losses, and it is safe to say at least 30 per cent. of the money paid to adjusters for their clients has been retained by them on one excuse or another. A confession by one Kornfield, who has been convicted, shows how the "rake off" system worked. On a claim of $310 paid by the insurance companies, Kornfield kept $160; out of $460 he kept $250; out of $76 he kept $38, and others in the same general way. Adjusters made up claims for much more than was right, so that the persons suffering fire losses were satisfied, and in some cases there was practically no loss whatever.

TO LYNCH THE MARSHAL

An Unsuccessful Attempt Made at Brazil Indiana

Brazil, Ind., Dec. 14 — An unsuccessful effort has been made to take Town Marshal Harmon from the jail here for the purpose, it is believed, of lynching him. Harmon, while trying to quell a fight at Diamond, a mining town, Thursday night, accidentally shot Francis McCann, a miner of Darlington. McCann died Friday. Harmon voluntarily surrendered to the authorities here. Last night four Darlington men arrived at the jail and represented themselves as officers come to take Harmon to Rockville for trial. Harmon recognized them as friends of McCann, who had sworn to take his life, and the Sheriff refused to give him up. The men returned to Darlington, wrecked the home of his son, Shelby Harmon, and drove his family into the street. They have not been arrested. Harmon was taken today to Rockville and placed in jail there.

WAR ON COLOMBIA

United States Marines to be Sent to the Border Line

Colon, Dec. 14—A company of marines from the United States ship Prairie was landed here this morning under the command of Captain Smedley D. Butler, and entrained for Panama. This step was in consequence of the receipt of information that Colombian troops had landed in that direction with the object of marching on Panama. If this is confirmed it will mean the beginning of a long campaign of guerilla warfare on the isthmus. The destination of the marines is said to be Yaviza, up the San Miguel Gulf and Tuira River.

Make Yourself a New Being;—Renew, Revitalize, Reinvigorate Your Lost Strength.

You're a discouraged, weak, miserable wreck—old before your time. Instead of a place of happiness the world is full of strife, worry and distress.

You are sick and not aware of it, just able to drag yourself around, but totally incapable of exertion or hard work.

Your stomach is crying out for assistance. Hadn't you better give it some Ferrozone?

Your nerves require a good bracing tonic, and the best thing for them is Ferrozone. Why don't you use this sovereign remedy? It is intended for cases just like yours.

Ferrozone is superior for the blood and nerves to any curative agent the world has ever known. Its recuperative powers are beyond description as a trial will demonstrate.

With the use of Ferrozone comes strength to overcome the difficulties and battles of life. Digestion and assimilation will improve, appetite soundly, and presto—before long you will be healthy, strong and well.

These blessings are all obtained by the regular use of Ferrozone, and can be purchased at any reliable drug store for 50c., or three boxes $1.25. Sent by mail to your address if price is forwarded to N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

EQUITABLE GOLD MINING CO.

A Proposition Now Before the People of This Country

Elsewhere appears the announcement of the Equitable Gold Mining Company, to which we direct the especial attention of investors. This company enters the Canadian field under favorable auspices, and should find a substantial business awaiting them. It is splendidly officered, and those who put up their money are sure of a square deal.

S. F. Norton, Chicago, Ill.

Dear Sir,—Being a stockholder in the Equitable Gold Mining Company, I visited the mines during last April, in order to see for myself the character of the property and the amount of development work done; as well as to obtain some idea of the future prospects of the enterprise. I found the value of the property and amount of development work far ahead of your representations. There is no question about the mineral deposits of the mines, and no end to the future ore product. My recent additional purchase of stock was made after seeing Mr. Lane's management of the property. I see nothing to prevent the enterprise becoming a great dividend payer.

Truly yours,
C. E. IRWIN.

Full information may be obtained from the company's agents here, or S. F. Norton, Secretary-Treasurer, 36 Dearborn street, Chicago, Ill.

NURSE WAS ASLEEP

Charges of Abuse and Negligence Against Hospital

New York, Dec. 15—Inspector McClusky, chief of the detective bureau is today looking into the death in Bellevue Hospital Thursday of last week of Adolphus Drucker, who was at one time a member of the British Parliament. Mr Drucker was a wealthy mine owner, his interests being in British Columbia.

Drucker was placed in the prison ward of the hospital, while suffering from alcoholism, and died there. The present investigation was brought about by a letter written to Attorney Eugene Robinson, Drucker's lawyer. It was written by James Murphy, now a prisoner in the Tombs, but who had occupied a cot next to Drucker in the hospital. Briefly Murphy charges that the attendants dosed the patient with frequent and heavy hypodermic injections of morphine, besides an internal dose of a narcotic known as "snige," and also beat him about the head frequently and unnecessarily.

Was Nurse Asleep?

When Drucker died Murphy declares the attending nurse was asleep. Afterwards the body was hastily taken to the morgue, and it is charged that no hour of death was misstated. Another charge is that though friends of Mr. Drucker had several times telephoned to the hospital asking if Mr. Drucker was there the answer was always that no such person was among the patients. It is also averred that when he was brought to Bellevue Hospital, he had valuable jewelry about him, and that this has disappeared.

Dry Placer Miner, formerly of California.

This company has the right, without royalty payments, to use the new patent machine upon all the land it may own, acquire by lease, or operate, in Arizona. We invite special attention to the great commercial value and profit of this machine, and what can be accomplished by it.

What This Machine Will Do.

For the first time in the history of gold mining a machine has been invented which will handle the dry placer gold gravel without water, and in large quantities. This machine will save 98 per cent of all the gold in the gravel, and will do it at a lower working cost than by any existing process. It is operated by a small, compact engine, using crude oil as fuel. A complete plant, capable of handling 200 tons per day will weigh less than 1,200 pounds.

To secure this gold only those placer lands could be worked, which could command large supplies of water, hence the immense bodies of dry placer lands remote from water have never been worked.

Fifteen Hundred Millions in Gold

The United States has yielded nineteen hundred millions in gold, of which fifteen hundred millions—or more than 75 per cent.—were the product of its placers.

Ninety per cent. of the world's total gold supply has been taken from placers by processes which have admittedly lost the bulk of the values.

Simplicity of Machine—Its Method of Operation

The machine is so extremely simple in construction and operation that any intending investor can operate it instantly. He can take a peck or more of sand, either ordinary house or sea sand, or such as is found in the placer lands of Arizona and California, put into this sand ten or a hundred pieces of gold as small as the point of a toothpick, and from that to the head of an ordinary pin, mix the sand and the gold thoroughly, turn them into the hopper or feed of the machine, and in a few seconds the machine will separate the gold from the gravel and recover from 98 to 100 per cent of the gold. It is an absolute, infallible, ocular demonstration of the merits of the machine. It has solved the problem of handling sand or gravel containing gold in regions remote from water.

Cost of Handling Material

Each plant is portable, weighs less than 1,200 pounds and can be easily moved by a few laborers.

The two greatest authorities in the world on the moving of material are "Haswell" and "Trautwine." They say in their standard publications that a laborer can shovel horizontally, 12 feet, vertically 6 feet for 50 feet haul 17 cubic yards in 10 hours.

A well known engineer in his work for the U. S. Government at Sandy Hook, moved 18 cubic yards, 100 feet haul in 10 hours at a cost of 10 cents per cubic yard, paying laborers $1.75 per day.

The dry placer gold-bearing sands of California, Arizona and New Mexico are handled quite as easily as those of Sandy Hook.

Ten laborers can easily supply one machine with 204 cubic yards of gravel in 12 hours, working at the same speed as shown by Haswell, Trautwine or at Sandy Hook.

Placer work on above basis would cost about 11 1-2c. per cubic yard.

Do You Want Monthly Dividends?

We make a special offer of a limited number of shares of stock at this time, because the company requires immediately sufficient to build several machines to operate in the field.

Every machine at work will increase the intrinsic value of the stock.

Twenty machines in the field will increase the price and value of this stock more than double the present offering, and every additional machine means a further increase in price and value.

The Company intends to divide its net earnings every month, so that the stockholders may count absolutely on receiving monthly dividends in proportion to monthly earnings.

THE ROSE OF THE RING

It was not such an unpromising scene—that which met her gaze as she stood thinking of Marc.

The window was high enough for her to command a wide view of the surrounding landscape—of hill and valley, forest and fen.

The winter was passing, and spring was at hand.

The trees were already tipped with green; the slender fronds of the ferns were shooting up from the dead leafage of the past year, and, just where the sun was glinting through the branches, she could see a mass of daffodils stretching like a field of gold amid the meadowland.

The sight gladened her.

A bird perched itself on a bough close to the window, and its little throat trembled with a burst of sweet song.

From the frozen bosom of winter spring had leaped to birth.

The wild flower was already in the woods, and the valley-lilies were budding under their tender leaves.

She stood there until the bird had finished its song, and had flown away to its nest.

Then, her heart light with the thought of what the morrow would bring forth, she ran downstairs, singing as she went, her voice as full of sweetness as the notes of the bird had been.

On the following morning, Marc arrived earlier than she had anticipated.

She had donned her riding-habit, thinking to enjoy a canter across the country, Mrs. Netherby not being well enough for the usual drive.

Rose was standing in the hall, with the entrance door open, watching the groom bring round the horses, when a well known footstep fell on her ears, making her heart beat with quick throbs.

In another moment, she had gone out to meet Marc, extending both her hands to him, her face rosy-red in the morning sunshine.

"You are very early!" she exclaimed; "I did not expect you so soon."

He took her hands in a warm clasp, and kissed her cheek.

"I came down last night," he said, "and put up at the in. How well you look, Rose! This place seems to agree with you."

"I am glad you think so," she replied lifting a pair of sweet, bright eyes to his gaze. "Do you know, Marc, I, only yesterday, made the discovery that winter is past."

"No wonder," he responded, glancing at the blue sky, over which the white clouds were floating. "This is almost the first glimpse of sunshine we have had."

"It is the more welcome, because it is so rare," she said, raising her face to the warm rays that made her hair shine like gold. "I was just going for a ride. Would you care to go with me—or shall I send the horses back to the stable?"

"I should be delighted," he answered "that is, if you can provide me with a mount."

"Of course," she said, with one of her sunniest smiles. "You must come in and see Mrs. Netherby, first. I believe she contrived to get a headache, so as not to leave the house—in case you might arrive, and find nobody at home."

He laughed—a deep mellow laugh—and taking her hand, ran lightly up the steps by her side.

"Mrs. Netherby was one of my mother's earliest friends," he remarked, still keeping possession of the little gloved hand, although they had reached the hall; "and, in addition to that, I have the privilege of being her godson."

"I shall ask her to be my godmother, as well," Rose said, ready to worship Mrs. Netherby, because he was fond of her. "You will not be jealous, and want her all to yourself, will you Marc?"

"I want you to have the biggest share in her affection," he answered, smiling. "She shall by fairy-godmother to us both."

Mrs. Netherby heard his voice, and had hurried from one of the rooms, her gentle eyes resting with affection on her godson.

He took a step forward, and throwing off his hat, placed one arm around her shoulders, and kissed her forehead.

"I hope I find you well, godmother," he said. "What do you think of Rose for a daughter?"

She smiled as she pressed her lips to his bronzed cheek.

"She is the sweetest little maiden in the whole world," was the answer he received, "and I would give much to be able to call her my own daughter."

"You have your wish," he answered, with a laugh. "She already looks upon you as sort of fairy-godmother—just as I do, in fact."

"I should like to call you 'godmother,'" Rose said, "if I may?"

"My darling child, nothing would give me greater pleasure," Mrs. Netherby replied; then, with a tremor of emotion in her voice, she added: "I had a daughter once, but she is dead. I also had a son; he, too, is dead; he was a soldier, and fell in his country's service."

"You have the love of both son and daughter," Rose said, kissing her. "I have often wished that you would tell me something of your life—and yet I was afraid to question you, lest there was more sadness in your past than had come to my knowledge."

"You shall know everything some day," Mrs. Netherby replied, with one of those tender smiles that characterized her face. "Do not let me detain you any longer; the horses are getting impatient, and a gallop before lunch will do you both good."

Rose felt more than half inclined to give up the ride, and to let Mrs. Netherby have her godson with her.

The good lady seemed to divine the girl's thoughts, and turned to Marc, telling him to hurry out into the sunshine, before Rose had time to change her mind.

"Is she so capricious then?" he asked, his gaze dwelling admiringly on the fair young face. "What would happen if she gave some body her heart, and afterwards changed her mind, and took back her love?"

"This could not be," Rose murmured. "To love once, with me, is to love for ever."

CHAPTER XXII.

Many days passed before Duke recovered from the effects of his accident, and, during that period, Nellie had dragged out the hours in restless solitude, her heart filled with pain and bitterness.

Too late she understood the worth of the love she had let slip away from her life, and she realized now that the love she had given Frank had no place beside the old, sweet tenderness Duke had again awakened in her heart.

When Duke was well enough to walk about again, Nellie shrank from him with a new, strange shyness, remembering the message he had sent her on the night of his accident.

He was colder to her, she thought, miserably colder and sterner, although his manner showed no resentment.

The Creed of a College Class.

President William DeWitt Hyde, of Bowdoin College, U.S.A., asked a class of 60 students, most of them seniors, to write out their individual creeds. "In these individual creeds," he writes, "I asked each man to state as exactly as possible both his belief and his unbelief; and to define, as far as possible, the sense in which he held the things in which he believed and the sense in which he rejected the things he did not believe." President Hyde then reduced these sixty creeds to a composite creed. As he puts it:

"Into this composite creed I put everything which any student had affirmed, except what some one of them had denied; aiming in this way to get a class creed to which each individual member would assent. I distributed copies of this composite creed to each member of the class, and invited criticism and amendment. We then spent two hours together in discussing the articles of the creed one by one; making such modifications and concessions at each point as were necessary to secure their unanimous acceptance by the class. At the end of the second hour the creed was adopted by a unanimous vote."

"I believe in one God, present in nature as law, in science as truth, in art as beauty, in history as justice, in society as sympathy, in conscience as duty, and supremely in Christ as our highest ideal.

"I believe in the Bible as the expression of God's will through man; in prayer as the devotion of man's will to God; and in the Church as the fellowship of those who try to do God's will in the world

"I believe in worship as the highest inspiration to work; in sacrifice as the price we must pay to make right what is wrong; in salvation as growth out of selfishness into service; in eternal life as the survival of what loves and is lovable in each individual; and in judgment as the obvious fact that the condition of the gentle, the generous, the modest, the pure, and the true is always and everywhere preferable to that of the cruel, the sensual, the mean, the proud, and the false."

Strenuous Miss Roosevelt.

When a London journal ventured the information that Miss Alice Roosevelt had invited herself to attend the coronation of King Edward and Queen Alexandra, and even designated the Westminster Abbey position she would be pleased to occupy as the "American monarch's" daughter, there was sincere resentment felt throughout the States, and the slur was attributed to English pique in return for the American criticism of the British-Boer War, says "The 400." There was not believed to be the least foundation for the amazing London insinuation. But the conspicuity and ubiquity of Miss Roosevelt the past year has caused American society to pause and ponder a little, principally sotto voce, of course, although the Newporters in August wagged their tongues vigorously and made no attempt to veil their opinions when the President's pretty, if vain, daughter appeared there with a train of trunks prepared to enter energetically into the gayeties of the season. Although she was a guest of the Cuttings, one of the leaders of the german at Mrs. Astor's dinner-dance, dancing with John Jacob Astor, and returned as the guest of the Baroness O'Brien-Selliere for the Thayer-Brooks wedding and the Horse Show, the Newporters generally did not manifest a disposition to do any special entertaining for the President's daughter this season.

Miss Roosevelt seems to be possessed of a passionate penchant for society and its limelight, not only that of the Washington court, but everywhere that it especially glitters and attracts. She is unquestionably pretty and stylish, as well as strenuous, albeit young and frail; but her record for 1903 is most extraordinary and probably unprecedented in the list of the world's princesses. It includes the exacting Washington season from the holidays to Lent; the New Orleans Mardi Gras festival and round of balls; a voyage to and circuit of Porto Rico; a week at Biltmore, the Vanderbiltian chateau at Asheville; the post-Lenten Washington season; a fortnight in Boston; August at Newport; the New York international yacht races; and September in the Adirondacks. Whence the proposition originated to star Miss Roosevelt at the Veiled Prophets' ball in St. Louis this month the chivalrous press of our sister of the Mississippi has not vouchsafed the intelligence, but that it was speedily and emphatically rejected is significant. The most charitable view of the situation is that the accidental Presidency and the suddenness of the bewildering social position have dazed or turned Miss Roosevelt's youthful head, and his Strenuous Majesty has not exercised his paternal prerogative and tautened the reins upon his deliriously dashing progeny.

Anecdotal.

Mrs. Disraeli once said to an astonished circle in an English country house: "Dizzy has the most wonderful moral and political courage, but he has no physical courage. I always have to pull the string of his shower bath."

It is related that a woman, who visited the British Museum recently, said to an attendant: "I have been looking about for a skull of Oliver Cromwell. Have you no skull of Cromwell here?" "No, madam," the attendant answered. "How very odd," she exclaimed; "they have a fine one in the museum at Oxford."

In the "Memoir" of Robert Chambers by his brother William, is a delightful allusion to Peebles, their birthplace, and a spot ever warm in the loving memory of Scotch residents. One of these, a man who had lived there all his life, was enabled by some uplift of fortune to visit Paris. When he came back his townsmen gravely gathered about him. "Noo," said one, while the others listened, "tell us aboot it." "Paris," he began, "a' things considered, is a wonderfu' place. But still, Peebles for pleasure."

"Ollie" James, the giant from Kentucky, who is now a member of Congress was making a political speech. "I want to ask you a question," shouted a man in the rear of the hall. "Well, my friend," asked Mr. James, blandly, "what is it?" "I want you to tell this gathering what is the difference between Grover Cleveland and Theodore Roosevelt?" "Nothing simpler," replied Mr. James "Mr. Cleveland is too sedate to hunt and Mr. Roosevelt is too restless to fish."

Walking home from school the other day some children were discussing the perfection and usefulness of their respective fathers. "My father's the best man in the world," said one little girl; "he is a minister. He makes people go to church." "Mine is the best," piped up another; "he's a doctor. He makes sick people well so they can go to church." Three or four more enlarged upon the benefit the world derived from their fathers, when finally a sweet, blue-eyed little girl said: "My papa's the best of all. He's a poet." "A poet," said another, in sympathetic surprise; "why, a poet isn't a profession! It's a disease!"

One evening, during his recent visit to England, Rear-Admiral Charles S. Cotton was entertained at dinner. Among the other guests were the Bishop of Durham, a clergyman noted for his wit, and a millionaire manufacturer, a stout man with a loud, coarse laugh, who ate and drank a good deal, and who cracked every little while a stupid joke. He did not know the bishop from Adam, but seeing his clerical garb, he decided he must be a parson, and that here was a chance for him to poke a little fun at the parson's trade. "I have three sons," he began, in a loud tone, nudging his neighbor and winking toward the bishop —"three fine lads. They are in trade. I had always said that if I ever had a stupid son I'd make a parson of him." The millionaire roared out his discordant laugh, and the Bishop of Durham said to him, with a quiet smile: "Your father thought differently from you, eh?"

It is the custom in Abyssinia for all foreign missions to bring presents to King Menelik. The French, some years ago, brought a lot of Parisian mechanical toys—sheep that squeaked, pigs that ran about on their hind legs, and dolls that talked. They thought such things would be certain to tickle the fancy of a dusky king. Menelik looked at them for a moment with disgust and rage, then he thrust them aside. "Do you think," he asked, "that I am a child or a savage, that I should delight in toys?" The Russian and English emissaries showed a truer insight into his character. They brought him Mauser pistols, revolvers, and the latest and best rifles they could buy. He was delighted. "These are gifts worthy to be received by a warrior and a king," he declared. The influence of the Russians and English over Menelik dates from that lucky incident, but the French have always been badly represented at his court. After Kitchener's victory at Omdurman, the French at Addis Abeba assured Menelik that the English had been beaten, with the loss of 16,000 men. When he heard the truth later, that Kitchener had crushed the dervishes with the loss of only 323 of his soldiers, he exclaimed in disgust: "What liars they are!" Since then he has never believed a word the French envoys have told him, and he always speaks of them with contempt.

At one of his lectures, just after his return from the Klondike, Joaquin Miller told the following story: "One night I was invited to a dance in a miner's cabin, and while Bill Dalton scraped away on his fiddle we just hoed it down. But the miners tramped in and out so much between dances that before midnight the ladies declared the floor was so slippery they couldn't dance another step unless something was done. Then something was done that never was possible in mining days in California. Each miner gallantly opened his buckskin powder pouch and sprinkled gold dust on the floor! And this was repeated throughout the night. And in the morning, ladies and gentlemen, those miners never troubled themselves about sweeping up that gold dust. They just hitched up their dog sleds and rode away." At this point of Miller's narrative there was a slight agitation in the audience, an ominous sign of incredulity, but Miller was equal to it. With a wave of his hand toward one of the boxes, he said: "And my old friend up there in the box, Captain John Healy, will substantiate what I say." It was a master stroke of the poet, for the house burst into applause, and greatly embarrassed the modest millionaire mining and railroad promoter of Alaska, who unsuspectingly had accepted Miller's invitation to attend the lecture in the afternoon.

Woman's Privilege.

W. T. Stead says that there are only three privileges of the female sex, namely, that in going in or out of a room the woman goes first, that she is served before man at a meal (a statement which is quite wrong, by the way, only one woman at table having that distinction, the one on the host's right; the other guests, whether male or female, in every household above mere middle class being served in regular rotation), and that in a tram a man gives up his seat to her. I could give Mr. Stead many more. Our bills are paid for us—when our male belongings have any money to pay them with; we are made love to, which may be despicable but is distinctly enjoyable; we are admired, which is no doubt foolish but none the less gratifying to us.—The Countess in London "Outlook."

☞ Not a single patient has ever been refused admittance because of his or her poverty.

FROM THE YUKON

—From Bishop of Selkirk, Caribou Crossing, Yukon: "The trifling remittance ($10.00) herewith enclosed, is intended to express our sympathy for the sufferers in other parts rather than imply a special need for your institution here."

CONFEDERATION LIFE ASSOCIATION

—J. K. Macdonald, Esq., Managing Director Confederation Life Association, in sending cheque for $500.00 from his Company, says: "I am pleased to be able to be the medium of helping on so good a work."

Funds Urgently Needed

The financial reports for the year just ending show that to keep the doors of the Free Hospital for Consumptives open, maintaining the number of patients for which accommodation has been provided, not less than $25,000 is required for the year now entered upon.

Since the Free Hospital was opened (18 months ago) 224 patients have been received. The help the institution has been to these people—all from the wage-earning and poorer ranks of life—cannot be estimated in human language.

—Edward D. Heddon, Solina, Ont., on leaving the Free Hospital, writes: "I cannot speak too highly of the institution from which I have received so much benefit. I can but tender my best thanks for the kindness shown."

—Minnie Linklater, Hamilton, writes: "I have spent over nine months at the Free Hospital for Consumptives. I believe I have been greatly helped, and shall never hesitate to use my influence to further that good cause."

There is no endowment, excepting the provision made by three life insurance companies for six beds for the current year. Only by the continued contributions of the Canadian public can the work be maintained.

Patients are accepted from every part of the Dominion, and there have been in residence during the past year patients from Prince Edward Island on the east to the Northwest Territories on the west.

Contributions may be sent to SIR W. R. MEREDITH, KT., Vice-President National Sanitarium Association, or MR. W. J. GAGE, Chairman of the Executive Committee, Toronto, Can.

Farming as a Business.

We often hear men say that they are going to stop farming and go into business. They do not know what they say. This expression is very common, and can be heard every day. Why is farming not a business, and why should it not be classed as such? I go further and say that farming should be classed as a profession, and one of the highest and most honorable in the professional line.

Some time ago I told some of my friends and neighbors that I was going to an agricultural college, and you know what followed. You know how I was laughed at and how they ridiculed the idea. But I was not discouraged at this; for all good things have been strongly talked against. If I can leave I will take a short course this winter. I would like to know more of my business. This country needs farmers who are more highly educated and prepared for the work.

Farming as a business is the highest occupation that a man can fill, and every farmer should think so. He should know that farming is the most independent of all trades. The farmer feeds the whole population of the globe, and so all are depending upon him for food; and if agriculture supplies food for all the vast number of people in the large cities, is it not worthy of being called a business?

Many times the farmers themselves give their business a low name, and then the people of the city are not going to praise it when the farmers are running it down. We farmers should know that we are engaged in the most important work and business on the earth, and while we are farming we should not say, "We have no business, we are only farming." By this some might be led to believe that farming is a sort of slavery, as it is when done as many farmers manage it. When done in an up-to-date way and by the latest methods and improved machinery it is a pleasure. Why do we consider ourselves so low? Let us look a little higher and know that we have a business which is worthy of the highest honor. Above all, let us consider our work as a business. It is a business, and we should know and realize it.—E. J. Waterstripe in N. Y. Tribune.

Molasses for Cattle Fatting.

In a translation from the French of a brochure on the use of molasses for cattle feeding the following particulars are given of an experiment carried out at Guhrau Sugar Works, Silesia, in 1895-96:—

The value of cake molasses having been proved, 1 kilogramme (2.2 lbs.) per head of molassine meal was fed to the working cattle daily, gradually increased to 2.50 kilogrammes (5.50 lbs.); but this quantity did not agree with them, and had to be reduced to 2 kilogrammes (4.40 lbs.). The animals, which were then at work both at the plough and harrow did well on it, and their skins greatly improved in condition.

Young stock—Young animals from two to three years old that were fattening were profitably fed on 1.50 kilogrammes (3.30 lbs.) per diem of molassine meal. The use of crude molasses with beetroot leaves is not advisable on account of the large quantity of salts contained, but the admixture of peat-moss decreases cases of diarrhoea. The quantity of from 250 to 350 grammes (1-2 lb. to 3-4 lb.) can be given to young stock with profit.

Milch cows—Since November cows that have calved have been kept separate, and, in addition to their ordinary food, have for the last two years been getting 2 kilogrammes (4.40 lbs.) of molassine meal. The quantity of the milk was increased, and the quality improved, and the animals were in perfect health and condition.

M. P. Hoppe has made an exhaustive series of experiments at the University of Leipsic into the value of molasses in feeding milking cows. Those used for the purpose were fed 2.50 kilogrammes (5.50 lbs.) per head per diem. It was found to increase the quantity of milk, but if 2.50 kilogrammes were exceeded the quantity of butter was diminished, but not the percentage of casein, and the taste of both milk and butter was not affected in any way.

Equitable Gold Mining Co.

R. C. LANE, President. S. F. NORTON, Secretary and Treasurer.

Over $300,000 of development work already done. Main shaft 9 x 16 feet, down 700 feet. Over 3,000 feet of drifts, tunnels and shafts showing immense ore body

Destined to become large and continuous dividend payer.

The Equitable Gold Mining Co.'s properties consist of three mines, known as the North Bonanza, Flowery and Kimbark. They are located in Six Mile Canon, less than four miles from Virginia City, Nevada, which is the nearest railroad station.

Years ago, over three hundred thousand dollars of development work was done upon the mines—so they are not mere "prospects" but actual mines. This work was done under the personal supervision of competent engineers, and was paid for by the owners of the mines themselves; thus giving double assurance that the work was well done and that the expenditure was justified.

The Main Shaft (triple compartment, 9x16 feet in the clear) is down seven hundred feet. From this shaft, running along the vein matter, east and west, are four drifts, at different levels, having a combined length (including the Rule winze and the tunnel) of 2,850 feet.

In addition to the above there are four small shafts, with a combined depth of about 800 feet; 535 feet of tunnels, and at least 500 feet of cross-cuts, uprises, etc.

All told, there is 4,650 feet of underground work—the most of which is in ore. Here is nearly one mile of openings in mineralized rock.

It is conservatively estimated by competent and reliable engineers and practical miners that there is developed an ore body of at least One Million Five Hundred Thousand Tons!

As a further evidence of the large amount of work done there is from 75,000 to 100,000 tons of ore on the dumps at the different surface openings—ore that, with modern cheapened processes, can be converted into gold bullion at a profit.

THE TITLE

Title to the Flowery and North Bonanza mines is by patent from the United States government, while the title of the Kimbark is by location and possession.

The Equitable Company obtained the Flowery and North Bonanza mines, both of which are patented, by purchase—the payments therefore to be made out of a share of the net proceeds of the mines. The Company has a written contract, duly recorded, for a deed, and is in possession of the properties, and is now operating them. The sum of $2,000 was paid on the contract, September 30th, 1902, and partial payments have since been made. The Company is entitled to $4.25 per ton as cost of mining and milling. One-half of all over and above this $4.25 per ton goes to the former owners till they receive the total sum of $165,000, without interest. There is no stipulation as to amount of work to be done within any specified time—and no proceeds, no pay. The Company can therefore pay it in one year or it can pay it in ten years. With this exception the Company is free from debt. Its policy is to pay as it goes. In this way it has no fear of financial embarrassments. The title to the Kimbark is by "location," under the mining laws of the United States. Work enough has already been done to entitle the Company to a patent, which in due time will be obtained.

Recent Development Work

Since the Company acquired the property, it has put up poles and wires for a distance of one mile for the transmission of electric power from the Truckee River Electric Power Plant. By this means unlimited power for mining, hoisting and milling is obtained.

It has built a dwelling house for the manager, a large boarding house for the miners, a barn, a power house and blacksmith shop.

It has put an electric hoist and skip into the 265-tunnel; has purchased ore cars and the necessary tools for mining purposes.

It has acquired the Kimbark ground, adjoining the Flowery and North Bonanza mines, and is now developing the property by driving a tunnel.

Storm King Group of Mines

TO CANADIAN INVESTORS

The property comprising what is known as the STORM KING GROUP OF MINES offers an attractive and safe investment. The property is the richest in the country and we believe it would be difficult to secure an investment that promises better returns. The following is a description of the mines written by Capt. A. M. Paul, whose reputation as an expert in mining matters is known far and near.

These properties are situated in the Cable Cove Mining District, about fifteen miles north of Sumpter, Oregon, and about one mile northwest of the Baby McKee mine, about two miles northwest of the Last Chance, the Alpine, the Imperial and the California mines.

The properties in this report consist of seven claims. The names of the seven claims being as follows: The Eureka and the Honest Dollar. These two claims are on the same vein. Adjoining these two claims and paralleling them on the northwest is another vein upon which there are two claims known as the Jessie and Golden Rule, and paralleling them on the northwest there is another vein upon which there are two claims, known as the Storm King and the Ozone. The last claim of this group lies to the northwest of the last two named, and is adjoining them. This claim is the Shannon Bell.

In making my report I will commence with the two first named claims of the group, the Eureka and Honest Dollar. The development on these claims consists of a tunnel ninety-seven feet in length, running along the course of the vein, showing two feet ten inches of ore in the top of the tunnel and a little over three feet in the bottom, which assays giving values of from $9.64 to $70 per ton in gold. About four hundred feet in a southwesterly direction there is a shaft on the vein ten feet deep, showing the vein to be from one to two inches wide on the surface and about twelve inches wide in the bottom of the shaft, in which assays give values of from $9.76 to $40 per ton in free milling gold ore.

This vein is exposed by small shafts and open cuts for a distance of fifteen hundred feet, and the course of this vein is north, ten degrees east, and the vein cuts the formation, showing it to be a true fissure, and the formation is granite. This vein shows in places a width of from ten to fifteen feet of mineralized matter, commonly called vein matter, but which is caused by hot solutions from below.

I will now pass to the Jessie and Golden Rule. There has been very little work done upon these two claims, there being one discovery shaft ten feet deep, showing cropping all sides of the shaft, and running in value of from $1 upwards. It is my opinion that with development, this, too, will prove valuable property.

The work on the Storm King and Ozone consists of a tunnel near the point of discovery and is driven along the vein for a distance of one hundred and eighty feet, showing ore all the way from the surface to the face of the tunnel, and averaging in width from six to eighteen inches. Three assays give the following values. $12.50. This being a general sample taken from the dump. The other two assays are $62.68 and $73.06 respectively, this being the assorted ore for shipment. The course of this tunnel and vein are north, ten degrees west, and the vein cuts the trend of the formation obliquely (which is granite) and by driving this tunnel five or six hundred feet it should intersect a quartzite reef (which is running north, twenty degrees east) which would make this a contact vein between granite and quartzite, and should produce a large body of ore, at the intersection of the contact.

The only work done upon the Shannon Bell, the last claim of this group is the location work, and is not enough to allow of a report being made.

There is water for power purposes one mile from the property, and timber on the ground, of a very fine quality, sufficient to run the mine for many years to come.

All the assays mentioned in this report were made by the assayer, of the Imperial mine at my request, and the ore was taken by me from the properties mentioned.

I will state that I have been a practical miner since 1870, and am now the manager and superintendent of the Imperial mine in this district.

(Signed) CAPTAIN A. M. PAUL.

The Brother as a Chaperon.

A chaperon is a luxury not within the reach of all girls, and the only real substitute of value is a brother. But when a brother accepts this most useful office he is looked upon as a "makeshift," and as a person undesirable and incompetent. Therefore, a mother takes pains to secure for her daughter the companionship of almost anyone of her own sex rather than a brother.

This is a gross injustice to brothers. Any girl who has been chaperoned by her brother will tell you that he is the best possible person for the office. Any man who has enjoyed the society of a young lady under the "chaperonage" of her brother will say the same. Brothers who have acted as chaperons say that a man takes to the work quite naturally and with plenty of confidence. In addition to this evidence, it is common knowledge that the chaperon dislikes her office, is disliked by the young lady she chaperons, and by the men who would know the young lady.

A man is liked best as a chaperon because he is broad-minded and generous. He does not want to lead his sister into the most crowded parts of the flower-show and talk inanities to old bores; he doesn't reprove her if she dares to say something funny. He doesn't preserve a countenance of prim severity, and pose as the goddess of propriety. Neither does he take his sister into the company of undesirable men, as lady chaperons often do; he gives such persons a wide berth, and introduces his little sister only to those men who are good, honest, whole-hearted fellows.

The brother chaperon can give his sister much advice that will be of more use to her than etiquette books. He can point out the men she should not know, and he can unhesitatingly expose their worthlessness. He can tell her a dozen little things that stamp the good man as a good man, and a dozen others that mark the bad one for what he is.

There is no fear of a brother leading his sister into indiscretions. That is the last thing he would do. He takes at the same time a lively interest in a love affair, and does his best to leave the young couple alone together for five minutes at intervals.

The brother chaperon is rare, because the only one available is he who has a greater fondness for his own sister than somebody else's.—"Modern Society."

One of Bangs' Political Experiences.

At a recent fraternity dinner John Kendrick Bangs told this story as one of his political experiences, says the New York "Times":

"At the time I was running for mayor of Yonkers I saw a laborer digging in a trench, and I thought I would try to capture his vote. I went up to him and said:

"'Hello, Pat!'

"He looked at me without recognizing me, and said: 'Good mornin', sor.'

"I said it was a fine day and asked him if he had made up his mind how he would vote at the election.

"'Oi don't know, sor; but wan thing is sure, Oi'll not vote for that dahm fule Bangs.'

"'Why not?'

"'Well,' said he, 'he's a swell and a roostercrat and a dood.'

"I explained to him as best I could that Mr. Bangs was none of these things, and, even if he was, it was because he couldn't help it. I invited him to come and have a drink with me; he accepted, and, after having taken two or three drinks, we became very friendly. While he was in a seemingly affable mood I confessed that I was Bangs.

"I had a cigar in my pocket, and as it was the last of a box that Robert Louis Stevenson had sent me from Samoa, I prized it highly. But much as I prized it, I thought it well spent if I could clinch Pat's vote with it.

"I asked Pat if he would smoke, and he said he would. He took the cigar, bit off the end, put it in his mouth, and lit it. Then suddenly he grasped the cigar and threw it violently to the ground.

"In astonishment I asked him: 'Isn't it a good cigar?'

"'Yes, sor,' he said, 'the seegar is good enough, but in me excitement in meetin' you Oi forgot Oi nivir smoke.'"

On the Road.

Sweet, we must never meet and part again.
'Twere too much pain;
We needs must go our journey through this life
Without much grief or strife for fear we walk too slow
And we have far to go.

Sweet, you and I must never meet and kiss.
'Twere too much bliss;
We have to go our journey soberly
Without much ecstasy for fear we walk too fast
And miss the way at last.

Sweet, you and I must follow separate ways
And pass our days
And not too much remember nor forget
Too utterly, for yet remains the unknown inn
Wherein
(All our wayfaring being past and done)
At set of sun
After the shine and rain
We take our ease, and maybe meet again
—Ford M. Hueffer, in "Outlook."

The Female Barber.

"Most fellows have a fancy barmaid," says "David Harum" in the "Sydney Bulletin." "My fancy is a pretty little lady barber, who has to pat every common Johnny in creation under the chin, and soap him with both tongue and brush at the same time. It makes me jealous. I visit her three times a week, generally at slack times, and as she scrapes my face she tells me her troubles and sometimes allows a big tear to drop on my nose.

"She works from 8.30 to 8 on weekdays and till 10 on Saturdays, and gets fifteen shillings per week. There are two other women in the shop—the proprietress and a slave, like my little woman, who does the same and gets the same—viz., fifteen shillings per week. My girl reckons the hawk-eyed proprietress is a devil to get on with, and clears £10 a week. She fines the girls sixpence every time they cut a man. My girl loses on an average four shillings a week at this. 'Unless you soon earn enough to marry me, I'll be cutting someone's throat,' she said yesterday. Poor little beggar! She's miserable. Took her out last Sunday afternoon. Passed two Johnnies; heard one of them say, 'There's the little girl from the barber's shop!' Felt mad, and would have jumped on him—only it was Sunday. I'm only a struggling journalist, and as soon as I am able to dig my hand deeper into the pocket where 'The Bulletin' keeps its money, my 'lady barber fancy' and I will be wedded. Oh, happy day!"

A PECULIAR CASE

A Man Who Had $50,000 and Yet Starved to Death

Derby, Conn., Dec. 15.—Possessed of $50,000, all in money, Eugene Crofutt, sixty-two years old, a recluse of Huntingdon, died yesterday from starvation.

The old man had been failing for several years from not eating sufficient food, and a month ago after a fainting fit, his condition became serious. The town Selectman tried to provide for him and send him to a hospital, but he refused all aid. His brother, Somers Crofutt, Jr., of Westport, came here, and, with Dr. F. I. Fidelton, entreated him to take food and medicine, but their efforts were unavailing, and he gradually wasted away. The dying man's plea was that it would be a waste of money and that he could not afford it.

Crofutt's eccentricity dated from his parent's deaths, ten years ago. Of late he had thought his house haunted, and on one occasion he climbed to a tree top and remained there all night because he feared to enter the dilipidated building.

PASSENGERS PAY BY WEIGHT

New Colorado Road will Have Scales at Ticket Offices

Pueblo, Colo., Dec. 16.—Passengers will pay fares according to weight of the new Pueblo and Beulah Valley Electric Railway. When the road is completed each person will be required to step on an automatic registering scale at the ticket office, and the clerk will assess transportation charges at the rate of a cent and a half a pound. The fat man and the lean man paying the same price for being hauled about the country is declared unjust.

AVENGING QUEEN'S DEATH

Former Minister of Corea was Killed by Hired Assassins

Victoria, B.C., Dec. 16.—The steamer Empress of India, from Yokohama, brought news from Kobe of the assassination of a notable Corean political refugee, U. Pan Chong, ex-Minister of Foreign Affairs, by two Coreans at Kure on November 24. The victim had been living in Japan since 1897. The assassins, who were later arrested, stabbed the victim during an entertainment he gave them. They are said to have been commissioned in Corea to kill the former minister for the part he is alleged to have taken in the murder of the late Queen of Corea.

DID SHOOTING

Alfonso Said to Have Missed Game and Shot the Gamekeeper

Madrid, Dec. 16.—The official story of the shooting of a royal gamekeeper during the royal hunt at Casa de Campo several days ago has it that the gamekeeper accidentally shot himself. The first story had it that a shepherd had been shot by a gamekeeper, who fired in self defence.

The agitation of the King, on his return to the palace, however, has given rise to a belief, however, that the truth of the matter is that King Alfonso was responsible for the death of the gamekeeper, having shot at game and accidentally hit the keeper in the breast, killing him instantly.

THE BY-LAW QUASHED

THE STREET LIGHTNING CONTRACT SET ASIDE

The Street Railway By-Law Not Yet Decided—A Big Bill of Costs Against the Town

The action brought to set aside the street lighting contract, has been successful. Yesterday argument was heard and the by-law was quashed. The other by-law regarding the street railway franchise has not yet been dealt with.

The result was not unexpected, and was predicted by The Times. Had the advice given by this journal been followed the town would have saved a big bill of costs. As the matter stands the Council will be obliged to ask for tenders for street lighting.

Regarding the street railway bylaw, it is of little consequence whether it is quashed or not. The railway will not be resuscitated by the present company unless the Peterborough Light & Power Company is given the lighting contract at [illegible] per lamp. This is, as repeatedly pointed out by The Times, beyond the power of the Council to grant.

SOME FINE HARDWOOD

R. Hicks & Co. Taking Out Two Thousand Cords of Maple

Messrs R. Hicks & Company, Peterborough's enterprising coal and wood merchants, own valuable timber "limits" near Dean's station on the Grand Trunk, about six miles from town, where they have put in a camp of 16 men.

The firm propose to cut about 2,100 cords during the winter. This wood is all maple, and is of the very choicest quality. The wood is sawn into four foot lengths, and hauled to town, the teams each making two trips a day, bringing a cord and a quarter each load. Operations have been in progress for about a month, and considerable wood has already been delivered at the firm's premises in town.

A Splendid Musical Treat in Store for Our Citizens

It is to be hoped that the citizens will appreciate the efforts of Mr. Gliddon and the members of the 57th Band in their efforts to give the citizens of Peterborough a treat in high class music. A great deal of labor has been spent in preparing the programme for the concert to-morrow night, and it remains with the people as to whether high class music is wanted or in demand. Let us hope that it is.

The plan of the Opera House is open at Ormond & Walsh's and is rapidly being filled. Let every seat be taken, so that our splendid organization may be encouraged to continue their good work.

THE CASE DISMISSED

In the Case Webb vs. Canadian General Electric Company

Osgoode Hall, Toronto, Dec. 15—Webb v. Canadian General Electric Co.—E. E. A. DuVernet, for defendants, appealed from judgment of King's Bench Divisional Court, setting aside judgment of Meredith, J., at trial of action with a jury, non-suiting plaintiff and dismissing action with costs on the ground that there was no reasonable evidence to go to the jury in support of claim for $2,000 damages for injuries which plaintiff alleges were sustained by him while working in defendant company's "compound building" at Peterborough, by reason of the negligence of the defendant company, or of those for whom it was responsible. W. R. Riddell, K.C., and John Green (Peterborough) for plaintiff contra. On objection by respondent's counsel that no appeal lies, a new trial having been had under the Divisional Court judgment, while notice of appeal from the first trial alone has been given and there having been no expectation that appeal would be prosecuted, and the objection treated as a motion to quash and the action of appellants as of an intention to vacate appeal having gone to trial a second time, appeal dismissed but without costs.

WEDDING BELLS

Nuptials of Mr. Fred A. Clarke and Miss Lil. Jackson

Yesterday morning at 10.30 a quiet wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Jackson, Hunter st., when their daughter, Miss Lily, was united in marriage to Mr. Fred. A. Clarke of town. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. C. Davidson, rector of St. John's church, in the presence of the immediate relatives. The bride was attired in white silk with veil and orange blossoms and carried white roses. Miss Daisy Jackson, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid and wore white organdie and carried pink roses. Mr. R. P. Watt, was best man. The bride's going-away gown was of navy blue serge, and Persian lamb coat, with mink trimmings, the gift of the groom, with hat to match.

Among the many handsome presents received were a handsome mantel clock from friends of Mr. Clarke in sporting circles, a silver cake and butter dish, from friends at the Crown Hotel, where he has resided since coming to town, a carving set from Eko Camp of which he was a member. A magnificent piano was the gift of the bride's father. The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a pretty crescent pin.

The happy young couple left on the train for points west. On their return they will reside in the Grand Central Block.

The demise of Robert Harrison, Esq., occurred at his home "Evergreen Hill," lot 13, con. 1, Asphodel, on Tuesday, 15th inst., at 1.30 o'clock, P.M., after a brief illness of less than two days. Pneumonia was the immediate cause of death. The deceased gentleman was born of Scoto-Irish parentage in the the Parish of [illegible], County Down, Ireland, on the 13th day of September, 1816, and came to Canada with his parents, Joseph and Catherine M. Harrison, in August, [illegible], and took up their home at [illegible], in the County of Prince Edward, Ontario.

When but five months in the country his father died of pneumonia, in March, 1825, being in his tenth year, the boy first came to Asphodel, and after a residence there of about one year he returned to Prince Edward County, where he lived for some time in the home of the late Captain Dumeres, as he had formerly lived a favorite with every member of the good old Captain's family. After returning to Asphodel after the lapse of four years he was a resident of that Township from that time until his death. On the 13th day of February, 1840, Mr. Harrison became united in mariage to Miss Margaret Carlton Rae, of the Township of Belmont, who still survives him, and is in the enjoyment of good health for a lady in her ninety-first year. Mrs. Harrison was born at Killaleagh, on the estate of Lord Dufferin, County Down Ireland.

There were born of this marriage union, Catherine, now Mrs. T. E. Finlay, Ashfield, County Huron; Robert, who lives at his home, 549 Water street, town; Joseph, of Cavan, County Durham; Jane, now Mrs. Thos. Hall, of Smith Township; Wm. C., of Norwood; John, who resides on the homestead; Stewart M., who died in early boyhood, and Margaret, who is the faithful attendant of her parent's good old age.

The late Mr. Harrison had been for many years a J. P. in and for the County of Peterborough. In politics he was a life-long and staunch Liberal, but was ever wishful and ready to recognize the good qualities of a political or other opponent. In religion the deceased was a staunch, consistent member and elder of the Presbyterian church, well trained in the underlying principles of the Scottish Covenanters, from whom he was of direct descent.

Such, in very truth, was the experience of the deceased, and his joyous benediction rests upon and abides with his widow and the members of his family who yet tarry until their earthly sojourn be accomplished.

The funeral will take place from the homestead, "Evergreen Hill," on Friday, the 18th inst., at 1.30 o'clock, P.M., to Westwood cemetery.

The religious services will be conducted at the homestead, at the above named hour, by the pastor of the deceased gentleman, Rev. D. D. McDonald, of Keene and Westwood.

"VERDI"

To the Editor of the Morning Times:

Sir,—The Band of the 57th has, under the leadership of Mr. Gliddon, attained a degree of proficiency surpassed by few similar organizations in the country. For weeks no pains have been spared to make the "Verdi night" the climax to all previous efforts. It may be safely said that no composer of Operatic music has appealed to the emotional side with equal force, and his delightful melodies today give as much enjoyment as they did a generation ago; particularly when given with the finish which our Bandmaster knows so well how to produce.

Do our citizens encourage and support the Band, in which we should feel great pride, and which deserves so well of us? Unfortunately many persons are, without considering, apt to take the view that this, being a "home enterprise" should give of its best without expecting return, but as the organization is for the purpose of cultivating a higher conception of music and ennobling somewhat our people, how can these things be attained unless the people will listen?

It is to be hoped, for the credit of our Town, that next Friday night the Band will be greeted with a "bumper house."

Yours, &c.,
A. P. POUSSETTE,

Dec. 16th.

The 8 Hour Day

Which the working man has fought for and succeeded in obtaining is something the wife has no share in. Her day begins before his and ends long after it, as a rule, and many a night her rest is broken by the baby's fretfulness. The healthiest woman must wear out under such a strain. What can be expected then of those women who are weakened by womanly diseases? Women who are weak, worn-out and run-down will find new life and new strength in the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It establishes regularity, dries weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

$500 REWARD! FOR WOMEN WHO CANNOT BE CURED.

Backed up by over a third of a century of remarkable and uniform cures, a record such as no other remedy for the diseases and weaknesses peculiar to women ever attained, the proprietors of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription now feel fully warranted in offering to pay $500 in legal money of the United States, for any case of Leucorrhea, Female Weakness, Prolapsus, or Falling of Womb which they cannot cure. All they ask is a fair and reasonable trial of their means of cure.

"I suffered with female weakness about eight years—tried several doctors but derived no benefit until I began using Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription," writes Mrs. John Green, of Danville, Boyle Co., Ky. "This medicine was recommended to me by other patients. I have taken six bottles and I feel like another person."

Refuse all substitutes.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets should be used with "Favorite Prescription" whenever a laxative is required.

STREET LIGHTING BY-LAW.

The Cereal Company or Mr. Stuart Not in Any Way Interested

According to the Affidavits of Members of the Council—The Judge's Finding.

The motion to quash the Street Lighting By-Law and the Street Railway By-Law came on for hearing on Wednesday, before Mr. Justice Meredith, at Osgoode Hall, Toronto.

Mr. W. H. Meldrum moved to set aside the Street Lighting By-law, upon the ground that the Otonabee Power Company had offered to supply the town with similar light for ten years at $14,000.00 less than the Peterborough Light and Power Company were willing to supply the same electric current for.

Mr. Meldrum further contended that the Town Council in awarding the street lighting contract to the Peterborough Light and Power Company were indirectly seeking to bonus the Peterborough Radial Railway Company, or at all events this extra sum of $14,000.00 was being paid by the town to the Peterborough Light and Power Company for their assistance in securing the street railway.

Mr. Meldrum further contended that material alterations were made by the Council in the terms and conditions upon which the Otonabee Power Company were asked to tender, namely: The Otonabee Power Company were asked to supply electric current for one hundred lamps on the streets, instead of for a minimum number of one hundred and twenty. It was left open to the Town Engineer to state what lamp should be installed, and other minor changes were made.

Alderman Best and Alderman Clinkscale supported the applicant in his contention, and stated that it was well understood by the public that the street lighting contract was really being awarded to the Peterborough Light and Power Company at $14,000.00 extra in order to encourage Mr. Robert Stuart, on behalf of the American Cereal Company, to build and operate the street railway and supply the town with an efficient railway service, which would never have to go begging for the want of capital.

It turned out, however, upon the motion, that Mayor Roger and Alderman Morrison and the other Councillors, who voted for the Street Lighting By-law, swore that the two by-laws were treated separately and independently. Affidavits were also produced for the purpose of showing that neither Mr. Robert Stuart nor the Cereal Company or any of its members, had any connection whatever, directly or indirectly, with the Peterborough Radial Railway Company, and that on the other hand the Peterborough Radial Railway Company was under the control of the following directors; Messrs. T. E. Bradburn, J. C. Shook, G. W. Hatton, S. D. Hall, C. H. Bradburn and D. Davidson.

It further appeared by the evidence that Mayor Roger was Secretary of the Peterborough Radial Railway Company. Under the circumstances, Mr. Justice Meredith held that the Councillors of the Town were trustees for the people, that it was their duty to make the best bargain they could for the lighting of the streets of the Town, and even though the Otonabee Power Company put in their tender at the eleventh hour offering to supply the Town their light for $14,000.00 less than the opposition Company were willing to supply the same light for, the Council, to honestly discharge their duty, should accept the lowest offer. That is what they would have done in their own private affairs. That is what they should have done in acting as trustees for the people.

The Peterborough Light and Power Company By-Law was set aside with costs to be paid by the Town.

The Peterborough Radial Railway Company By-Law stands over until after the New Year, to enable the Council to amend their agreement in respect to certain illegal exemptions which were granted to the Railway Company. In the event of such amendments being made, the motion with respect to the Street Railway By-law will be dismissed, the Town to pay its own costs and the Applicant to pay his own. If the Council do not change the by-law, then the further disposition of the costs will be reserved, to be disposed of on the return of the motion.

Mr. R. E. A. DuVernet appeared for the Applicant, Mr. Meldrum. Mr. Shepley, K.C., and E. H. D. Hall appeared for the Town of Peterborough. Mr. R. M. Dennistoun appeared for the Peterborough Light and Power Company, and W. R. Middleton for the Peterborough Radial Railway Company.

CANADA WOULD NOT BURDEN THE POOR

Hamar Greenwood and Lord Brassey Speak on Fiscal Question

London, Dec. 17—Lord Brassey and Mr. Hamar Greenwood, formerly of Toronto, spoke in Sheffield last night, on the fiscal question in its relation to the colonies. Lord Brassey referred to the recent congress at Montreal to the colonies. Lord Brassey referred the intense loyalty shown by the Canadians. He said he sang the National Anthem four times each day. "We can lay upon ourselves no increased charges for food or raw materials unless the Canadians give us an open market,' he declared. "Young Canadian industries are not ready for free trade just yet, and until they are ready an effective preference is impossible.'

Mr. Greenwood maintained that the English Liberal party had the political sympathy of all the colonial Governments. Mr. Greenwood said he would never believe that any Canadian Government would be mean enough to exact as the price of their loyalty any increase in the burdens laid upon the home land. He said that the many eulogies passed by Canadian Boards of Trade on Mr. Chamberlain were assumed to move with the object of embarrassing the Laurier Government than for the purpose of cementing the Empire together.

HAYS' CURT ANSWER.

Laughed at Offer of Salary of Three Thousand Pounds.

London, Dec. 17—During the visit of Mr. Hays, general manager of the Grand Trunk Railway, a year ago, one of the directors of one of the leading roads here hastened to Paris to offer Mr. Hays the general managership of his railway.

"What salary are you prepared to pay me?" asked the railroad manager.

"We have been paying our general manager £2,000 a year,' answered the director. "But in your case we might raise this figure to four, perhaps five, thousand."

"Oh, I see," said Mr. Hays. "You are looking for a good office boy."

TRADE COMMITTEE TO TAKE EVIDENCE

Mr. Chamberlain Proposes Commission of Business Men To Take Evidence

London, Dec. 17 — Speaking at Leeds yesterday, Mr. Chamberlain characterized the objection that the colonies had never asked for a preference as a monstrous misrepresentation. He asked those who urged it if they had forgotten the Ottawa conference and the two London conferences where every Premier urged consideration of a mutual preference. "Let them send me as ambassador to the colonies," said the speaker, "with full powers, and I am perfectly willing to risk my reputation upon being able not merely to satisfy the colonies that we have something to give them worth acceptance, but also to secure an equal measure in return."

A Business Committee.

Mr. Chamberlain announced that he has been engaged in getting together a committee of business men from all parts of the kingdom to make enquiries among the various branches of trade at home and abroad, as a result of which many difficulties would be cleared away. Substitute committees will be formed to deal with each branch of trade and to take exhaustive evidence. From these Mr. Chamberlain said he expected to be in a position to formulate a tariff bill acceptable to the country which will enable Great Britain to give trade advantages to those who are prepared to render her similar favors.

Mr. Fielding's Letter.

Mr. Chamberlain then read a letter received a day or two ago from Hon. Mr Fielding, Finance Minister of Canada, "for whom," he said, "we feel the greatest respect as one of the new race of colonial statesmen who will be second to none in the councils of the Empire." Mr. Fielding had been asked if the Canadian Ministers intended refraining from replying to some of the press statements as to what was the position taken by the Canadian Minister at the Colonial conference last year. He said: "It was in favor of imperial preferential trade, which is cordially endorsed by both of the great political parties. Some difficulties might arise as to the details of so large a scheme, but it is surely not too much to believe that if the principle is approved, the intelligence of British and colonial public men can be relied upon to overcome them, and to put the project into practical form.' (Cheers.)

Mr. Chamberlain added that there was no physical difficulty to prevent the federation of the British race; the distance between the Yukon and Hudson Bay was greater than the distance between Britain and Canada.

The Standard, referring to Mr. Chamberlain's speech, says the commission of business men which he proposed is so novel and striking as to completely overshadow all other topics. A tour of the colonies would be a grand idea.

The News calls it, the commission, eccentric and anarchic, and says it shows distrust of the House of Commons, the Board of Trade, and the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

The Chancellor says it is amusing. The commission would be upon Montreal Congress lines except that the members would be bound to a preconceived conclusion.

AMERICANS ASLEEP,

Do Not Realize Danger to Their Trade From Preference.

London, Dec. 17— It is a common remark in London that Americans are not sensible to the grave importance of the fiscal contest. It is suggested that if Americans really knew how strong the tide was running in Britain toward protection they would be enquiring, if, through making some tariff concessions to Britain, it would be possible to hold the market open to American products upon reasonable terms.

RAGGED SCHOOL UNION,

London, Dec. 17—The London Ragged School Union has received thirty dollars from the children of Victoria, British Columbia to provide some of the poorer London children with a Christmas dinner.

London, Dec. 17.—Major Coates has received many Canadian congratulations upon his signal triumph for Chamberlain in the Lewisham election.

His victory is all the more significant because the whole weight and influence of the Duke of Devonshire, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, Lord Goschen and the free food Unionists went into the scale against Chamberlainism.

TROOPS REPULSED

Revolutionists Win at Monte Cristi and Besiege Santiago

Santo Domingo, Dec. 17.—A rumor is in circulation here that the troops of the provisional government have attacked the revolutionary troops stationed at Monte Cristi. The government troops were repulsed and are now besieged in a fort in Santiago City. All is quiet in the neighborhood of the fort, though the situation may become serious at any moment. The United States gunboat Newport left here yesterday.

Washington, Dec. 17.—State Department advices from Santo Domingo indicate that the latest revolution in that island was caused by a breach between General Jiminez, who aspired to succeed Wos y Gil as president, and the provisional government which has been in control of the island since Wos y Gil was deposed. It is surmised that Minister Powell's inflexible attitude toward the provisional government, which he refused to recognize until it had agreed to admit the validity of American claims, may have had something to do with this breach.

CANADIAN PACIFIC AND ITS EMPLOYES

No Proposed New Rule Regarding Use of Liquor

Montreal, Dec. 17.—During the course of a speech at Toronto last evening, Rev. J. H. Hector is reported to have said that the C.P.R. had a notice ready to be issued New Year's Day that all employes must stop the use of liquors and tobacco.

Enquiry at the head office of the company in this city elicits the information that the C.P.R. has no intention of introducing a hard and fast prohibitive measure as regards its employes.

Rev. J. H. Hector has reference to the action of the Northern Pacific, which on January 1st, will make the taking of a drink cause for dismissal. As for the C.P.R. the management considers the present regulations quite drastic enough. Under them "the use of intoxicating liquor while on duty is prohibited. "Their habitual use, or the unnecessary frequenting of places where they are sold while on duty is sufficient cause for dismissal.

The rink was besieged by hockey players last night. The juniors and seniors had a good practice and the T.A.A. teams were also out.

JAPAN KNOWS RUSSIA'S DESIRE FOR PEACE

Japan Has Introduced New Demands into the Negotiations

London, Dec. 17 — The Times has the following today from its correspondent at Tokio.— In spite of reassuring utterances from Paris and Berlin, the conviction is widespread here that Russia shows not the smallest practical evidence of a desire to conciliate Japan. While she is simulating a pacific demeanor in Europe she is in reality seeking by delay and a display of warlike preparations to goad Japan beyond endurance, and thus impose upon this country the responsibility of a belligerent initiative. Indignation is consequently growing rapidly in Japan. Three petitions, urging resolute measures, have been addressed to the throne since the Diet dissolved.

Tokio. Dec. 16—In consequence of Russia's reply a special conference of the older statesmen of Japan, including the Marquis Ito and the Cabinet Ministers, is proceeding here to-day. It is understood that the statesmen are considering the adoption of a firm stand against Russia. General Kodama, the War Minister, was present for the first time at the conference.

Paris, Dec. 16—Well-informed diplomatic circles believe that, despite the discouraging news regarding the Russo-Japanese situation, war will not occur. It is said that Japan has introduced into the negotiations new demands, which Russia did not expect when she presented her recent note, and it is added that the Czar hardly would have made the concessions in respect to Corea unless he had been convinced that Japan would not extend her demands.

The sympathetic attitude of the British press towards Japan is regarded as exercising a stiffening influence on that country; but the British government has not changed its policy, and is working to prevent war, so far as is known in Paris.

CANNOT SURRENDER.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 16—The Novkai, the personal organ of Viceroy Alexieff says "Japan knows Russia's desire for peace, but she should also know that Russia cannot surrender vital interests to foreigners, either Japanese or Americans, by relinquishing her big undertaking in Manchuria, created at the expense of Russian blood and treasure."

FACTORIES CLOSE DOWN

Employees Refuse to Sign an Anti-Strike Contract

Chicago, Dec. 17.—Three factories in the Fox River Manufacturing district in Northern Illinois were shut down today because their employes, numbering nearly 1,500, refused to promise in individual agreements not to strike. The firms are; Appleton Manufacturing Company, Challenge Wind and Feed Mill Company, Newton Waggon Company.

The United States Wind Engine and Pump Company is also tied up. All the concerns mentioned are members of the Fox River Valley Manufacturers Association, which recently started a campaign to re-establish the ten hour work day where factory hands have been getting a full day's pay for nine hours work.

A MOB'S VENGEANCE

Foiled Lynchers Wreck Homes and Turn Family Out

Brazil, Ind., Dec. 17.—An unsuccessful effort has been made to take Town Marshal Harmon from the gaol here for the purpose, it is believed, of lynching him. Harmon, while trying to quell a fight at Diamont, a mining town, Thursday night, accidentally shot Dennis McCann a miner at Darlington. McCann died Friday. Harmon voluntarily surrendered to the authorities here. Last night four men arrived here and represented themselves as officers come to take Harmon to Rock Mine for trial. Harmon recognized them as friends of McCann who had sworn to take his life, and the sheriff refused to give them up. The men returned to Darlington, wrecked the home of his son, Shelby Harmon, and drove his family into the street. They have not been arrested. Harmon was taken today to Rockville and placed in gaol there.

CARNEGIE SAYS BRITAIN WILL LOSE SOUTH AFRICA

Says Dutch Population is Increasing While the British Are Not

New York, Dec. 16—At a meeting of the Armstrong Association today, Andrew Carnegie surprised his hearers by asserting that he believed Great Britain would surely some day lose South Africa, because the Dutch population is increasing while the British are not. Mr. Carnegie said

"What would Great Britain give for nine million negroes as placable and lovable as those in the United States. They give us 11,000,000 bales of cotton a year, and this, I contend makes the United States the most powerful nation in the world."

I said in case of war all this country would have to do would be to stop exporting cotton and the war would be done.

"My knowledge of the question leads me to the opinion that no political measure can ever save or benefit the negro." said Mr. Carnegie.

The Armstrong Association work in behalf of the colored man in the United States.

ROSS RIFLE IN ENGLAND

Canadian Pacific Negotiating With Hamburg-American Line re European Traffic

London, Dec. 18.—The report to the Secretary of the Burnley Chamber of Commerce of the delegate to the Montreal Congress says: "The Canadian Manufacturers Association are the instigators of the whole movement for preferential trade. They are saturated with protection, and believe that in fair straight competition, in the open market, with the manufacturers of England and the United States, they would all be ruined."

C.P.R. NEGOTIATIONS.

A reliable city informant says that the Hamburg-American and C.P.R. lines have concluded arrangements by which the former will manage the latter's continental traffic. If the C.P.R. run the line, as announced, from Antwerp, emigrants will use that route, otherwise the Hamburg-American company will run steamers to a Canadian port.

CANADIAN AGENT FOR BRISTOL.

At a meeting of the Bristol delegates to the Montreal Congress it was decided to ask the Canadian Government to appoint a commercial agent for Bristol, as the delegates claim that Bristol supplies a large tract of country, including many counties and important cities and towns.

LABOUCHERE'S VIEW.

Truth asks how we are going to defend ourselves against Canadian dumping under a preferential system, and recommends those desiring to know all sides of the Canadian opinion on this question to read Mr. Edward Farrer's article in the Contemporary Review for December.

MONTREAL TO AVONMOUTH.

The C.P.R. and the chief dock officials at Avonmouth are in conference with a view to the development of the Montreal to Avonmouth service for 1904. It is believed the C.P.R. officials, if the local railways will co-operate, reckon on a much larger traffic.

London, Dec. 17—A. Stanley Rowe, the absconding secretary of the Great Fingal Consolidated Company, who was arrested in Toronto, pleaded guilty, and was sentenced in the Old Bailey court today, to ten years' penal servitude for embezzling over $500,000 of the company's funds. Rowe fainted when his sentence was pronounced.

Rowe was about to enter into a stock broking business in Toronto when captured here a few months ago by the Montreal and Toronto police. At first he denied but finally admitted his identity. He fought extradition, but his crime was proven to the satisfaction of the Canadian authorities, and he was taken from Toronto to London.

GREAT CANADIAN NICKEL INDUSTRY

Mr. R. G. Leckie Discusses Present Conditions Prevailing

THE. MAKING OF RAILS

New Process of Which Very Much is Expected in the Future

Montreal, Dec. 17.—"Canada produces over half the nickel consumed throughout the entire world. The balance comes from New Caledonia, in the Southern Pacific."

The authority for this statement was Mr. R. G. Leckie, of Sudbury, Ontario. Mr. Leckie is one of the directors of the International Nickel Company, the largest plant engaged in the nickel industry in Canada, and to the Star representative, at the Windsor, he gave many interesting facts concerning the industry.

According to Mr. Leckie the International Company owns a great many of the richest properties in the famous Sudbury nickel belt, and have an output of 700 tons a day. Among their properties is the well known Creighton mine, regarded as one of the most remarkable mines in the world. There are over 5,000 tons of ore actually in sight in this mine, and the ore carries 4 per cent. nickel and 2 per cent. copper. This mass of valuable ore has been proved to be 1,500 feet in length and about the same in width. The other properties are very rich, and the supply of ore would appear to be only just tapped.

Mr. Leckie spoke of the new plant that the International Company were commencing to build in the spring. This will be a novel plant, as all the buildings and plant, including the machinery (with the exception of the blowing engines, which have to be brought from Chicago), is made in Canada. "That is a credit to our Canadian spirit is it not?" said Mr. Leckie, smiling.

Mr. Leckie made an important statement when speaking of the uses of nickel. So far it has been used for steel plates, especially armor plates. The International Nickel Company had just delivered an order to the Pennsylvania Railway Company of 15,000 tons of nickel steel rails. These rails are being tested by that railway company, and Mr Leckie says that the new departure in this connection is likely to revolutionize the present rail market. The ordinary rail, especially on curved grades, will not last more than two years, and the cost of renewing them is very great during a year. The nickel steel rail will stand the test much better and last for years longer.

The uses of nickel and the ways in which it can be utilized, according to Mr. Leckie, would appear to be inexhaustible. He outlined a new invention whereby nickel steel would take the place of tin plate. The steel billets are plated with nickel and then heated and brought up to a rolling heat, and then rolled to the thickness of tin plate. The nickel keeps on the surface and a beautiful bright plate, very malleable, is the result. This can then be stamped in any way.

Of the Clergue enterprises Mr. Leckie would say nothing beyond the fact that they were not run on a business basis, apparently. Mr. Leckie leaves for Sudbury tonight. He estimates the output of ore when the new plant is running at 1,500 tons a day.

NEW TRANSCONTINENTAL LINE

The G. T. Pacific and the Deposit of $5,000,000

Montreal, Dec. 16.—The $5,000,000 deposit required to bind the agreement between the Grand Trunk Pacific Company and the Federal Government still continues to engross a great deal of attention upon the street.

Wherever men of commerce meet the delay upon the part of the directors of the G.T.R. in England is canvassed in all its bearings, and not a little speculation, as to the cause of that delay, has been indulged.

It is known that General Manager Hays went to England ostensibly to straighten out any difficulty that might have risen, because, though the President of the Company, Sir Charles Rivers-Wilson, was in Ottawa when the details of the measure were under consideration of the Laurier Cabinet prior to the submission of the National Transcontinental measure to Parliament, Mr. Hays was the member of the executive of the company who devoted most time to arranging the details of the project.

When, therefore, the rumor was circulated on the street that the $5,000,000 had been paid in London, it was at once assumed that Mr. Hays has been successful in his mission.

Enquiry at the headquarters of the company, however, elicited the information that nothing new had developed, and that there was not likely to be anything further until Mr. Hays return to the city.

Belfast, Ireland, Dec. 17— It is announced on reliable authority that 20 battalions of volunteers will shortly be raised in Ireland. Hitherto the Government had refused to extend the volunteer movement to Ireland, although there are a number of militia regiments in the country.

You Pay Only if Cured

Expects No Money Unless He Cures You—Method and Full Particulars Sent Free—Write For It This Very Day

A Detroit specialist who has 14 certificates and diplomas from medical colleges and boards, has perfected a startling method of curing the diseases of men in their own homes; so that there may be no doubt in the mind of any man that he has

DR. S. GOLDBERG,

The Possessor of 14 Diplomas and Certificates Who Wants No Money That He Does Not Earn.

both the method and the ability to do as he says, Dr. Goldberg, the discoverer, will send the method entirely free to all men who send him their name and address. He wants to hear from men who have stricture that they have been unable to get cured, prostatic trouble, sexual weakness, varicocele, lost manhood, blood poison, hydrocele, emaciation of parts, impotence, etc. His wonderful method not only cures the condition itself, but likewise all the complications, such as rheumatism, bladder or kidney trouble, heart disease, nervous debility, etc.

The doctor realizes that it is one thing to make claims and another thing to back them up, so he has made it a rule not to ask for money unless he cures you, and when you are cured he feels sure that you will willingly pay him a small fee. It would seem, therefore, that it is to the best interests of every man who suffers in this way to write the doctor confidentially and lay your case before him. He sends the method, as well as many booklets on the subject, including the one that contains the 14 diplomas and certificates, entirely free. Address him simply Dr. S. Goldberg, 208 Woodward Ave., Room Detroit, Mich., and it will all immediately be sent you free.

This is something entirely new and well worth knowing more about. Write at once.

UNION LABEL

PETERBOROUGH, DECEMBER 18, 1903

THE UNION WITH NEWFOUNDLAND

It is to be regretted that the Government of Canada has not yet seriously taken up the question of union with Newfoundland. The question was broached forty years ago. Terms were agreed upon in 1865 when the Newfoundland delegates sat side by side with those from Canada and the Maritime Provinces in the great conference at Quebec, but public opinion in the Ancient Colony was not then prepared for the forward step. In 1869 the Council and Assembly of Newfoundland passed resolutions stating the terms upon which they would enter the union. Counter proposals were made by Canada, but there was a failure to agree. In 1888 another effort was made by an exchange of despatches, but it ended without result. In 1890 Newfoundland negotiated the Bond-Blaine treaty of reciprocity with the United States, which Canada remonstrated against and prevented it going into effect. In 1895 a conference was agreed upon and Sir John Thompson, Sir Mackenzie Bowell and Hon. J. A. Chapleau, representing Canada, met at Halifax, Sir William Whiteway, Hon. Robert Bond and Mr. A. W. Harvey, representing Newfoundland.

The object of the Canadian ministers was to see whether the trouble existing could be settled upon a basis of confederation, but the Bond-Blaine treaty proved a bone of contention. The Canadian Government, through Sir John Thompson, refused to withdraw its protest against the treaty. Some minor causes of friction were disposed of, but there was an entire failure to agree upon terms of union. So matters have remained until the present, but last year the question of union took on a more hopeful aspect. Mr. Justice Morison, of Newfoundland, resigned from the Bench to enter the political arena with Confederation as his platform. He and Premier Judge Seymour, holding the same views, visited Canada. At Toronto, Deputy Minister of Justice Hutchings, of Newfoundland, expressed his belief that the island would benefit by union and must some day come in. Hon. A. B. Morine declared himself in sentiment in favor of the union, and believed it was "bound to come." The Premier of Newfoundland spoke at the Canada Club in London on July 15, and declared that the question of union was only one of terms. "If the terms are advantageous to the people of Newfoundland I shall find it my duty to lay the proposal before my people and if necessary exert myself to bring Confederation about. . . . It will have to come sooner or later."

Newfoundland has a population of 220,000, a public debt of $20,000,000 of which $14,000,000 was incurred on railway account, and the balance for public works. Its revenue is in round figures $2,000,000 under a tariff somewhat higher than that of Canada. The imports and exports are each about $8,000,000. Its fisheries are more valuable than those of any Province of the Dominion. It has great mineral and forest resources. Territorially it is nearly as large as Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, and together with Labrador, its outlying possession, is more than three times the area of the three Maritime Provinces. It blocks the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and shuts us in on our Atlantic coast for over seven hundred miles to the northward. There are many strong reasons for bringing about the union, if only for our own security and convenience, and to round out the Dominion on its Atlantic side. We can better afford to give Newfoundland liberal terms of union than not to have all British North America united. We sincerely hope that another effort will be made in the near future to complete in this way the original scheme of Confederation.

THE EXPELLED FRENCH ORDERS

Of some 9,000 members of religious orders expelled from France, it is estimated that 6,100 have settled in England, 1,100 have gone to Canada and 1,800 have entered the United States. The number of men and women who have settled in England is about equal; of those who have gone to Canada the women are in the majority, while those who have settled in the United States are nearly all men. It is estimated that nearly $22,000,000 has been taken into England by these religions, while the sum of $10,000,000 has come to the United States and Canada.

GUARDING OUR FISHERIES

We are glad to see that at last steps are being taken to protect our deep sea fisheries from the depredations of poachers. Extensive as the fisheries on our coasts are believed to be, they are not inexhaustive, and if permitted to be reaped by those whose only concern is for the present without any regard for the future, it will be only a question of time—and that not of very long duration—when this harvest of the sea will be scanty, or, perhaps, an entire failure. Indeed, judging from what has occurred on the New England coast, even fishing operations carried on in a legitimate manner require to be supervised and controlled if the fisheries are to be permanent. The practical destruction of the Atlantic halibut fisheries is a case in point, and should be a lesson to those who are entrusted with the care of the fisheries on our coast.

The fishing cruiser, if kept steadily in commission, can do a great deal in preventing the operations of these American poachers. To be really effective the vessel must be constantly cruising and not start out from port with an announcement of the programme duly heralded abroad days previously. These fisheries are valuable enough to justify more effective preventive service than is possible under the existing arrangements.

PORT HOPE SAFE BLOWN.

Nitro-Glycerine Desperadoes are Carrying on a Campaign.

Port Hope, Dec. 16.—Safe-crackers again operated in Port Hope early yesterday morning. The safe in the grocery store of Cyrus T. Throop was blown open and about $17 in cash taken.

This is the second time within a month that nitro-glycerine desperadoes have operated here.

Night Watchman Garbutt receives only $5 a month salary from the town and patrils only the business section.

Nervous Dyspepsia

A Disease very common to the American people, but now quickly remedied.

A SURE CURE.

In a case of Nervous Dyspepsia a doctor sees two things, first, that the digestion is deranged, and second that the nerves are in a starved, irritable condition.

If abreast of the times, and in touch with the latest discoveries the doctor is sure to advise Ferrozone, which is now universally prescribed in cases of acute Indigestion and Dyspepsia.

Ferrozone is prepared specially for diseases of the stomach and bowels, and as a sure cure for Nervous Dyspepsia has proved itself a thousand times to be superior to all others.

Where Ferrozone is taken after each meal, it is impossible for Dyspepsia, or Indigestion to exist. It digests the food before it has had time to ferment in the stomach, and by its regular use one is enabled to eat and drink anything at any time, without fear of bad results.

Ferrozone relieves that distressing headache, and burning feeling in the stomach peculiar to dyspepsia. It regulates the action of the bowels, kidneys and liver; strengthens the nerves and makes the sad looking dejected dyspeptic feel like a new man in twenty-four hours.

The general manager of a Toronto Manufacturing Company, who used Ferrozone with very marked results, says: "The strain of conducting a large business brought on a siege of Nervous Indigestion about a year ago, which I endeavored in vain to shake off. Doctors told me only a complete rest would cure me, but not being able to spare the time, I used Ferrozone instead. It perfectly restored my good health in a short time. I have confidence in the merits of Ferrozone, and am pleased to recommend it."

What Ferrozone can do for you can be best proven by giving it a trial. Every reliable druggist recommends and sells it, price 50c. a box, or three boxes for $1.25. Sent to your address by mail if price is forwarded to N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

—Now is the time to subscribe for the Times. To those who come in now the balance of the year will cost them nothing.

DARING BURGLARIES

Ogilvie's Elevator at Argue was Entered by Thieves

The Company's Buyer Lived Near the Elevator

Winnipeg, Dec. 16—A safe in Ogilvie's elevator at Argue was blown open and all the money, $1,220, taken. Mr. C. B. Keighley, the company's buyer, lodges at a farm house half a mile from the elevator. There are no people living near, so that the burglars could operate in safety. The safe is kept in the engine room, and entrance was gained by prying the shutters and windows open with iron bars. Explosives were used, wrenching the door of the safe completely from its fastenings.

A storm of snow covered all traces of the robbers outside, and there is no clue whatever as to who the thieves are.

WORKED COMBINATION.

General Store and Post Office at Oil Springs Entered.

Oil Springs, Dec. 16— The front door of D. Armstrong's general store and express office was broken open. The safe was opened through the combination and fifty-nine dollars in silver was secured, of which ten dollars belonged to the American Express Company.

The post-office was opened in the same way, but no money secured from there. A lady across the street saw the man light a match, and she called for help, which frightened them away.

No trace of them can be found. The tools were taken from Holmes Bros. blacksmith shop, and afterwards were found in the post office.

POST-OFFICE BROKEN.

Alvinston, Ont., Dec. 16—An attempt was made last night to burglarize the post-office here. The combination was broken off the safe, but it was unopened, and no money was taken.

DID SOME ONE BLUNDER?

Cobourg, Dec. 16—A mail bag containing a considerable amount of money was reported to have been stolen from the Grand Trunk Railway station. It was found, however, and had not been damaged in any way. It is thought the thieves lost their nerve and placed the bag in such a position that it would seem as though it had fallen from the mail wagon.

PROTESTANT MISSIONS.

Increase of Over Two Million Dollars in Revenue.

Boston, Dec. 16—The American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions made public today a summary of Protestant foreign missions. The income of societies in the United States and Great Britain alone shows an increase of over two mission dollars. The statistics are as follows: Total missionaries, 16,618; native workers, 75,231; communicants in churches, 1,297,042 ,pupils under instruction, 1,127,853. The total native constituency is 3,613,391.

Cake-Walk Music on the Wane.

According to the London "Express," the favor of the cake walk abroad is waning. Those who went into raptures over the rhythmic wiggling imported from this country are beginning to believe that, after all, it is no dance for the home circle or the ballroom. Germany, we are told, has condemned the cake walk as rowdy, improper and ungraceful. Paris has vetoed it with the label of bad form, and now London is becoming tired of it also. A popular English dancing master is quoted as saying: "For a little while I engaged a colored lady to come to my class once a week to show how it should really be done. But after a while the craze began to dwindle. My lady pupils realised that the cake walk was not suited to the decorum of modern ballrooms. Nor am I sorry. The effects of the cake walk were not good. It had too disturbing a tendency. It caused some of my very best waltzers to acquire a suspicion of a jump in their step. How can you have a good dance if the waltzing is open to criticism, and how can waltzing be good if those who ought to do it spend half their time prancing about like marionettes on a string?"

THE GREAT CHARITY.

THE HOSPITAL FOR SICK CHILDREN, TORONTO.

It Takes Care of Every Sick Child in Ontario Who Cannot Afford to Pay For Treatment.

The Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, is not a local institution—it is Provincial.

MASSAGE FOR RHEUMATISM.

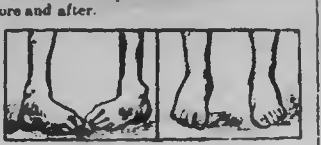
The sick child from any part of Ontario whose parents cannot afford to pay for treatment has the same claim and the same privileges as the Toronto child born within sight of its walls.

This is the reason that the Trustees appeal to the fathers and mothers of Ontario —for as their money goes out to help the Hospital so the Hospital's mercy can go out to help the children.

This is the 28th year of the Hospital's life. The story of the years is a wonderful one—for in that period 10,000 children have been treated, and over 5,000 cured and 3,000 improved.

Last year there were 868 boys and girls in its beds and cots, and of these 493 were cured and 247 improved.

Look at these pictures of club feet—before and after.



BEFORE AFTER

Of the 868 patients 293 came from 216 places outside of Toronto.

In three years the patients from different parts of Ontario, not Toronto, average 250 —nearly a third of the entire number.

In six years 1,400 outside patients have been treated—and for 20 years past they will average 100 a year.

The average stay of every patient was 54 days, the cost per patient per day 94c.

A dollar or two means a small lot of money out of your pocket, but it takes a big load of misery out of some little life.

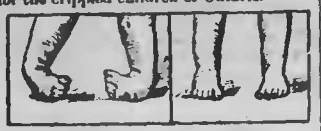
See what the hand of the Surgeon does for the crippled children of Ontario.



BEFORE AFTER

Your money means mercy to somebody's child.

Your money can cheer some mother's heart by saving some mother's child.

Health and wealth. You give wealth to the Hospital, and the Hospital gives health to the children.

HE ENJOYS READING.

The Corporation of the City of Toronto gives $7,500 a year to the Hospital for the maintenance of every child, whether from city or country.

The citizens of Toronto contribute about $7,000 a year towards the maintenance of every patient in the Hospital, whether from city or country.

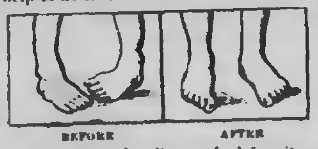
Toronto does its share in the good work, and the Trustees ask you to do yours.

The Newspaper Proprietors of Ontario have kindly helped the Hospital by inserting our appeals.

There are two newspaper cots, and boys and girls from the country are placed in the cots founded by the newspaper men.

Look at the pictures of "before and after." They tell their own story—surely you will help us in this good work.

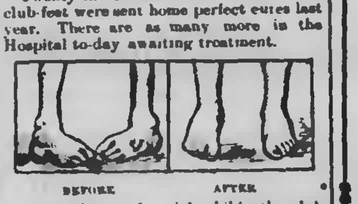
If your dollar could straighten the feet of a little boy or girl with club-feet you would gladly give it, and your dollar will help to do that.



BEFORE AFTER

Take off the handicap of deformity—give all children a fair start in the race of life.

Twenty-three children who came in with club-feet were sent home perfect cures last year. There are as many more in the Hospital to-day awaiting treatment.



BEFORE AFTER

If you know of a sick child—the club foot boy or girl—send his parent's name to the Hospital.

Please send your contributions to J. Ross Robertson, Chairman, or to Douglas Davidson, Sec.-Treas. of the Hospital for Sick Children, College Street, Toronto.

Anecdotal.

"What is the difference between a misfortune and a calamity?" somebody once asked Disraeli. "Well, if Gladstone fell into the Thames," was the reply, "that would be a misfortune; and if anybody pulled him out, that, I suppose, would be a calamity."

The other day, an Irishman bought a copy of "Irish Melodies" at a second-hand London book store for a shilling. The bookseller was surprised, a few moments later, when the excited purchaser returned and, shaking his fist at him, cried: "I could kill ye for selling these immortal gems so cheap!"

"I have one wish I fear will never be fulfilled," said Senator Hanna as he sat in the Senate restaurant at Washington one day last session and ate a very simple luncheon. "What is it?" asked Senator Kean of New Jersey. "I should like to eat everything and then have the work of digestion devolve on some Democrat."

At the Hamilton Club banquet in Chicago recently Speaker Cannon said: "I never wrote a speech in my life, and never but once used one that another man had written. I envy the man who can sit down in cold blood and achieve a thought, then dress it—put clothes on it, pants, coat, vest, shoes and collar, and turn it out in full attire, as Minerva sprouted from the brain of Jupiter."

Two little girls were engaged in an animated discussion as to the merits of their respective homes. "Well, anyway," said one little maiden in a triumphant tone, "you may have more bedrooms than we have, but we have more cream than you do. We have enough for our cereal every single morning." "Pooh!" said the other, "that's nothing. We own a Jersey cow, and we get a whole cowful of cream twice every day."

At a dinner in Boston the other evening the guests insisted upon George Ade of "slang fable" fame making a speech. Finally, in sheer desperation, after all the others present had sung songs or told stories, he rose and said: "I will tell you of an excellent trick in parlor magic. You take a tumbler and fill it two-thirds full of filtered water. Then you insert in the water a lump of sugar and a spoon, and you begin to stir. In a few minutes the sugar will become invisible."

A medley of young literary men were once gathered to meet Robert Browning. The most aggressively literary of the group was first introduced, and at once began to pour out his personal delight and admiration with so unceasing a flow that the other introductions were being held in abeyance, and the other literary young men starved. Browning endured it with great good humor for some time. At last he put his hand almost affectionately on the egotist's shoulder and said: "But I am monopolizing you."

Dr. Gillespie, the present moderator of the Church of Scotland, tells how he was nonplussed, the other day, by a ragged urchin who declared he was alone in the world, his father and mother having died some years ago. "Have you not a sister, then?" asked Dr. Gillespie. "I niver had yin." "But surely you have a brother?" "Yes, but he's at Glasga College." "Well, cannot he spare some time from his studies to look after you a bit?" "Na, sir," replied the urchin mournfully, "for he was born wi' twa heids, and they keep him in a bottle."

The story of how Chopin composed his famous "Funeral March" is related by M. Ziem, the celebrated painter, who still lives in Paris. Ziem was the friend and comrade of Chopin, and it was in the former's studio that a Bohemian repast was given, with Ludre, De Polignac (the musician), Richard (the painter), Chevandier de Valdrome and Chopin, as gay and festive spirits around the table. There was an old rickety piano in the corner, all the panels having been taken out for pictures, as Ziem was poor, and had to economize. Behind a curtain was a skeleton, and this gave an idea to Ziem, who brought the skeleton out, covered it with drapery, and began to agitate it with realistic effect. De Polignac then took the skeleton to the piano, and sat with it as though to make it play. It was at this moment that Chopin, who had been rather quiet, was seized with sudden inspiration. Uttering an ejaculation, he rushed forward to the piano, pushed aside De Polignac, and to the stupefaction and awe of his friends improvised the world-famous "Funeral March."

Sir Edmund Burne-Jones, who shared with Dante Gabriel Rossetti the honor of founding the pre-Raphaelite school of English painters, as a young man exhibited his works at the Old Water-color Society. In 1869 his principal exhibit at the Summer Exhibition was a very poetical drawing called "Phyllis and Demophoon," in which both the figures were nude, but without conveying the faintest suggestion of indelicacy. Unfortunately, however, an important patron of the society, one Mr. Leaf, a prosperous silk merchant, chose to regard the picture as an outrage on propriety, and brought such pressure to bear on the council that they requested Mr. Burne-Jones to import into the picture a certain amount of raiment. This the painter indignantly refused to do, and the result was that before the public admission day he withdrew himself and his drawing from the society. It was a deplorable incident by which all concerned were the losers, except the puritanical silk-dealer, who, as might have been expected, immediately gained the soubriquet of "Fig-Leaf."

About Cats.

The following was the reply to a question on Cats at a recent Board School examination:

"The house cat is a four-legged quadruped, the legs as usual being at the four corners. It is what is sometimes called a tame animal, though it feeds on mice and birds of prey. Its colours are striped, tortoiseshell and black, also black and white and others. Cats also mew, which you have all herd. When you stroke this tame quadruped by drawing your hand along its back, it cocks up its tail like a ruler, so as you can get no further. Never stroke the hairs across, as it makes all cats scrat like mad. Its tail is about two foot long, and its legs about one each. Don't tease cats, for, firstly, it is wrong so to do, and, 2nd, cats have diseases which is danger than people think. Cats have 9 livess, but which is seldom required in this country cause of Christianity. Men cats are allus called Tom, and girl cats Puss or Sias; but little cats is called kittens, which is a wrong name which oughter be changed. This tame quadruped can see in the dark, so rats stand no chance, much less mice."

Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives

Not a single patient has ever been refused admittance because of his or her poverty.

FROM THE YUKON

—From Bishop of Selkirk, Caribou Crossing, Yukon: "The trifling remittance ($10.00) herewith enclosed, is intended to express our sympathy for the sufferers in other parts rather than imply a special need for your institution here."

CONFEDERATION LIFE ASSOCIATION

—J. K. Macdonald, Esq., Managing Director Confederation Life Association, in sending cheque for $500.00 from his Company, says: "I am pleased to be able to be the medium of helping on so good a work."

Funds Urgently Needed

The financial reports for the year just ending show that to keep the doors of the Free Hospital for Consumptives open, maintaining the number of patients for which accommodation has been provided, not less than $25,000 is required for the year now entered upon.

Since the Free Hospital was opened (18 months ago) 224 patients have been received. The help the institution has been to these people—all from the wage-earning and poorer ranks of life—cannot be estimated in human language.

—Edward D. Heddon, Solina, Ont., on leaving the Free Hospital, writes: "I cannot speak too highly of the institution from which I have received so much benefit. I can but tender my best thanks for the kindness shown."

—Minnie Linklater, Hamilton, writes: "I have spent over nine months at the Free Hospital for Consumptives. I believe I have been greatly helped, and shall never hesitate to use my influence to further that good cause."

There is no endowment, excepting the provision made by three life insurance companies for six beds for the current year. Only by the continued contributions of the Canadian public can the work be maintained.

Patients are accepted from every part of the Dominion, and there have been in residence during the past year patients from Prince Edward Island on the east to the Northwest Territories on the west.

Contributions may be sent to SIR W. R. MEREDITH, KT., Vice-President National Sanitarium Association, or MR. W. J. GAGE, Chairman of the Executive Committee, Toronto, Can.

CHRISTMAS WAS FORBIDDEN

To Be Observed by the Puritans Who Denounced it as a Heathen Feast.

As everybody knows, Christ was not born on December 25, and Christmas, though celebrating His birth, is really a survival of the heathen festival—among the Celts called Yule and by the Romans Saturnalia—celebrating the turning point of the year and the henceforth increasing power of the sun.

On this account the Puritans denounced Christmas as a heathen and Popish feast and did not observe it. During the Commonwealth they carried their objections into force and forbade the celebration of Christmas. In 1644 Parliament ordered December 25 to be strictly kept as a solemn fast, and that all people should pass the day in humbly bemoaning the great national sin which they and their ancestors had hitherto committed on that day by eating boar's head, drinking ale flavored with roasted apples, devouring plum pudding and romping under the mistletoe. For twelve years this order remained in force.

Municipal authorities also sought to reduce Christmas Day to the level of other days. We are told that, "Upon Wednesday, December 22, 1647, the cryyer of Canterbury, by the appointment of Master Maior, openly proclaimed that Christmas Day and all other superstitious festivals should be put down, and that a market should be kept upon a Christmas Day."

For attending service in the Cathedral on that day many people were mobbed. The inhabitants divided themselves into two parties—the Christmasites, and the anti-Christmasites—and came to blows.

On December 24, 1652, an Order in Council was issued, proclaiming "that no observation shall be had of the five-and-twentieth day of December, commonly called Christmas Day, nor any solemnity used or exercised in churches upon that day in respect thereof."

This was simply a reproclamation of an edict of 1647, abolishing Christmas, Easter, Whitsuntide and all other holy days. Soldiers were sent to the houses of all suspected persons to search the ovens and larders and carry away for their own consumption all seasonable dainties found therein. People who ate mince pies and decorated their houses with evergreens were declared unworthy of sitting in Parliament.

But the restoration of King Charles was also the restoration of King Christmas, who has ever since reigned undisturbed. But the Puritan's hatred of Christmas lingered long among Nonconformists.

It has now disappeared and services are held in all places of worship on Christmas Day, while the rest is celebrated equally by all sects.

Favors and Fancies.

"No one, nowadays, would think of decorating a Christmas table with anything but holly," said a celebrated New York chef, the other day, and while this statement is a little too sweeping to be taken literally, the fact remains that holly makes one of the prettiest and most seasonable decorations for the Christmas board of plenty.

If not much time can be devoted to the work of trimming, then have simply, for centre piece, low bowl of cut glass or faience ware filled with holly twigs and the red berries.

At each cover place a boutonniere of the holly. For the men merely a buttonhole spray. For the women, a larger "corsage bouquet," tied with scarlet ribbon. Your table will be charming.

But with an hour's work something more elaborate may be evoked from the Christmas greens. For example: the centre piece may consist of three wreaths joined together and laid along the "backbone" of the table. The central wreath must be considerably larger than the other two. All three may be of holly, or prettier still, the larger wreath of holly, the other two of some decorative ferns. In the centre of each wreath is arranged a low flower bowl containing rich red carnations or roses.

Equitable Gold Mining Co.

R. C. LANE, President. W. F. NORTON, Secretary and Treasurer.

Over $330,000 of development work already done. Main shaft 9 x 16 feet, down 700 feet. Over 3,000 feet of drifts, tunnels and shafts showing immense ore body

Destined to become large and continuous dividend payer.

The Equitable Gold Mining Co.'s properties consist of three mines, known as the North Bonanza, Flowery and Kimbark. They are located in Six Mile Canon, less than four miles from Virginia City, Nevada, which is the nearest railroad station.

Years ago, over three hundred thousand dollars of development work was done upon the mines—so they are not mere "prospects" but actual mines. This work was done under the personal supervision of competent engineers, and was paid for by the owners of the mines themselves; thus giving double assurance that the work was well done and that the expenditure was justified.

The Main Shaft (triple compartment, 9x16 feet in the clear) is down seven hundred feet. From this shaft, running along the vein matter, east and west, are four drifts, at different levels, having a combined length (including the Rule winze and the tunnel) of 2,850 feet.

In addition to the above there are four small shafts, with a combined depth of about 300 feet; 585 feet of tunnels, and at least 500 feet of cross-cuts, uprises, etc.

All told, there is 4,650 feet of underground work—the most of which is in ore. Here is nearly one mile of openings in mineralized rock.

It is conservatively estimated by competent and reliable engineers and practical miners that there is developed an ore body of at least One Million Five Hundred Thousand Tons!

As a further evidence of the large amount of work done there is from 75,000 to 100,000 tons of ore on the dumps at the different surface openings—ore that, with modern cheapened processes, can be converted into gold bullion at a profit.

THE TITLE

Title to the Flowery and North Bonanza mines is by patent from the United States government, while the title of the Kimbark is by location and possession.

The Equitable Company obtained the Flowery and North Bonanza mines, both of which are patented, by purchase—the payments therefore to be made out of a share of the net proceeds of the mines. The Company has a written contract, duly recorded, for a deed, and is in possession of the properties, and is now operating them. The sum of $3,000 was paid on the contract, September 30th, 1902, and partial payments have since been made. The Company is entitled to $4.25 per ton as cost of mining and milling. One-half of all over and above this $4.25 per ton goes to the former owners till they receive the total sum of $100,000, without interest. There is no stipulation as to amount of work to be done within any specified time—and no proceeds, no pay. The Company can therefore pay it in one year or it can pay it in ten years. With this exception the Company is free from debt. Its policy is to pay as it goes. In this way it has no fear of financial embarrassments. The title to the Kimbark is by "location," under the mining laws of the United States. Work enough has already been done to entitle the Company to a patent, which in due time will be obtained.

Recent Development Work

Since the Company acquired the property, it has put up poles and wires for a distance of one mile for the transmission of electric power from the Truckee River Electric Power Plant. By this means unlimited power for mining, hoisting and milling is obtained.

It has built a dwelling house for the manager, a large boarding house for the miners, a barn, a power house and blacksmith shop.

It has put an electric hoist and skip into the 300-tunnel; has purchased ore cars and the necessary tools for mining purposes.

It has acquired the Kimbark ground, adjoining the Flowery and North Bonanza mines, and is now developing the property by driving a tunnel.

Dry Placer Miner, formerly of California.

This company has the right, without royalty payments, to use the new patent machine upon all the land it may own, acquire by lease, or operate, in Arizona. We invite special attention to the great commercial value and profit of this machine, and what can be accomplished by it.

What This Machine Will Do.

For the first time in the history of gold mining a machine has been invented which will handle the dry placer gold gravel without water, and in large quantities. This machine will save 98 per cent of all the gold in the gravel, and will do it at a lower working cost than by any existing process. It is operated by a small, compact engine, using crude oil as fuel. A complete plant, capable of handling 200 tons per day will weigh less than 1,200 pounds.

To secure this gold only those placer lands could be worked, which could command large supplies of water, hence the immense bodies of dry placer lands remote from water have never been worked.

Fifteen Hundred Millions in Gold

The United States has yielded nineteen hundred millions in gold, of which fifteen hundred millions—or more than 75 per cent.—were the product of its placers.

Ninety per cent. of the world's total gold supply has been taken from placers by processes which have admittedly lost the bulk of the values.

Simplicity of Machine — Its Method of Operation

The machine is so extremely simple in construction and operation that any intending investor can operate it instantly. He can take a peck or more of sand, either ordinary house of sea sand, or such as is found in the placer lands of Arizona and California, put into this sand ten or a hundred pieces of gold as small as the point of a toothpick, and from that to the head of an ordinary pin, mix the sand and the gold thoroughly, turn them into the hopper or feed of the machine, and in a few seconds the machine will separate the gold from the gravel and recover from 98 to 100 per cent of the gold. It is an absolute, infallible, ocular demonstration of the merits of the machine. It has solved the problem of handling sand or gravel containing gold in regions remote from water.

Cost of Handling Material

Each plant is portable, weighs less than 1,200 pounds and can be easily moved by a few laborers.

The two greatest authorities in the world on the moving of material are "Haswell" and "Trautwine." They say in their standard publications that a laborer can shovel horizontally, 12 feet, vertically 6 feet for 50 feet haul 17 cubic yards in 10 hours.

A well known engineer in his work for the U. S. Government at Sandy Hook, moved 18 cubic yards, 100 feet haul in 10 hours at a cost of 10 cents per cubic yard, paying laborers $1.75 per day.

The dry placer gold-bearing sands of California, Arizona and New Mexico are handled quite as easily as those of Sandy Hook.

Ten laborers can easily supply one machine with 204 cubic yards of gravel in 12 hours, working at the same speed as shown by Haswell, Trautwine or at Sandy Hook.

Placer work on above basis would cost about 11 1-3c. per cubic yard.

Do You Want Monthly Dividends?

We make a special offer of a limited number of shares of stock at this time, because the company requires immediately sufficient to build several machines to operate in the field.

Every machine at work will increase the intrinsic value of the stock.

Twenty machines in the field will increase the price and value of the stock more than double the present offering, and every additional machine means a further increase in price and value.

The Company intends to divide its net earnings every month, so that the stockholders may count absolutely on receiving monthly dividends in proportion to monthly earnings.

THE ROSE OF THE RING

"I am sorry, Duke," she [illegible] first time she met him after his [illegible] "I know you cannot forgive me; [illegible] I never dreamt of such a thing happening. I think I must have been mad that day."

He glanced down upon her where she stood before him, the color coming and going on her face, her hands nervously clasped together, and her eyes shadowed with pain he could not understand.

"I am only too thankful to think you were not hurt," he replied. "At one moment I thought nothing could save you. You must have been terribly frightened."

She shuddered.

"I shall never forget the horror of that moment as long as I live," she said. "It seemed so dreadful to die like that, and yet the agony was not so great as when I saw you lying between the plunging hoofs of the horses. I thought you were dead, Duke," she adder, her voice sinking almost to a whisper, "dead—and I living still, with the consciousness that you had died through me."

He did not speak—he was thinking this had been her only fear—that, but for the hatefulness of knowing she caused his death, she would have cared little whether he had lived or died.

The thought filled his soul with bitterness, and, after interchanging a few indifferent words, he turned and left her—his face gloomy, and his brows drawn together above his brooding eyes.

Nellie watched him go, half wistfully, half despairingly; then, with a great sadness weighting on her heart, she passed out of the house and wended her way towards the cool, fresh woodlands.

The air was ringing with the sweet songs of nesting birds, the boughs were green with buds, and a soft breeze swept the dead leaves apart, disclosing starry primroses and purple violets.

She pursued her way silently along the narrow woodland paths, her mind wrapped in the dull pain of remorse, her heart filled with an unutterable longing.

Suddenly the branches were put aside by a man's hand, and Frank stood before her.

After that one exclamation, a long silence fell between them.

"Why have you sought me again?" she said, at last, her head drawn erect, here? Have you already forgotten what I said to you when last we met?" and her eyes flashing their contempt and loathing upon him. "Why are you

"I could not keep away," re returned. "Oh, Nellie, can you never forgive me? I love you so, my darling, I cannot keep away!"

He moved towards her, his arms outstretched with a wild pleading.

She felt no pity for him—her voice was clear and cold when she spoke again, and she drew farther from him, as if she dreaded the touch of his hands.

"Let me pass," she commanded. "you have no right to speak to me as you are doing—love is no longer a word that can be spoken between us."

She moved as though to pursue her way, but he placed himself before her, barring her passage.

"I will let you pass, Nellie," he said, in slow dull tones, "but I must first say what I have to say."

"I do not wish to listen to you."

"You shall hear me," he replied, clenching his teeth with a sudden fierce wrath—the calmness of her scorn, the superb fury that blazed in her eyes maddened him.

"Can you never forgive me?" he went on. "You are generous, I know. I have deserved little favor at your hands; I feel I am unworthy a word of pity from you, but I still love you, Nellie—you will not be cruel to my love?"

"I cannot and will not listen to you—let me pass," she said. "How dare you speak to me so?"

"Can this be the same Nellie who once plighted her troth to me?" he said, looking into her disdainful face. "And yet your love seemed deep and true enough to bear a greater trial that that I gave it."

"Its very depth served to strengthen the hate that came into my heart for you when I learnt your baseness."

"You hate me?" he repeated, a sullen light in his eyes.

"Sometimes I wonder whether I ever really loved you."

"You did; you did! You cannot deny it!"

He seized both her hands in his as he spoke, and drew her to him, his face glowing with fierceness and passion.

"You cannot deny it," he repeated. "You loved me once; you will love me again, as I love you."

He bent his face towards her, and pressed ardent kisses on her brow and lips.

Nellie felt herself grow sick and cold with horror. With a shriek she wrenched herself free from his embrace, and rushed frantically away.

He did not follow her. The terror and loathing he had read on her face withheld him from attempting to stop her again.

His brow was black with sullen despair as he turned and pushed his way slowly in another direction direction to that which Nellie had taken.

Flying from Frank, she came suddenly upon Duke.

She ran straight to him, and caught his arm in a trembling clasp.

"Save me, Duke," she panted, lifting her agonized face to his, her eyes full of supplication, "save me from him—from Frank."

"My poor darling," he murmured, "do not tremble so, no harm can come to you while I am here."

He drew her head down until it rested on his breast.

"My love, fear nothing," he said. "I came to seek you, and I shall not go from you now. I was so angered against you awhile ago, but I was wrong, and I am come to tell you so."

He held her close to him until she ceased to tremble and her hands relaxed in their frightened hold upon his arm.

"You are not afriad now?" he said, in his soothing tones.

She looked up into his face, and something he read in her eyes caused his pulses to thrill with a wild, delirious joy.

"I love you, Nellie," he whispered. "Do I read aright when your eyes tell me I do not love in vain? Do you love me?"

"Yes, I love you, Duke—oh, so dearly, so very dearly!"

He lifted her head from his breast, and pressed a lingering kiss upon her yielding lips.

"You will be my wife, Nellie?"

"Yes," she murmured, "I will be your wife."

Even as their lips met in the kiss that sealed their betrothal, a sharp sound quivered on the air—the sound of a pistol-shot.

Anecdotal.

It is related that Sainte-Beuve detested rain. On one occasion, when he had to fight a duel, he appeared with a pistol in one hand and an umbrella in the other. "I am willing to be shot," he exclaimed, "but not to get wet."

George Meredith, the eminent novelist, is as alert and witty in his casual talk as he is in his fiction. Not long ago, in conversation with a friend, Mr. Meredith was asked his opinion of a certain obnoxious person who had lately settled in the neighborhood. "He seems to me," replied the author of "Diana of the Crossways," "to be one of the least of God's mercies."

A characteristic story of the late Sir Hector Macdonald has just reached us. Always a man of few words, when sending his only son to a public school for the first time, he addressed the following brief note to the headmaster: "Herewith boy Hector, to be made a man of"—a sentence worthy of being handed down to posterity as a remarkable example of brevity and sterling common sense.

An Englishman of somewhat questionable reputation, who was criticizing the American way of spelling, once turned to Maurice Barrymore, the actor, and said: "I'll leave it to Mr. Barrymore. Is it right to leave out the 'u' in such words as harbor, neighbor, honor, candor, etc?" "Well, about harbor and neighbor I am not sure," replied Barrymore, "but when it comes to honor and candor I leave you out."

The story is told of a Scotch preacher who gave his people long, strong sermons, and delivered them in a remarkably deliberate manner. One Sunday he asked a friend who was visiting him to occupy his pulpit in the morning. "An' were you satisfied wi' my preaching?" asked his friend, as they walked home from the kirk. "Weel," said his host, slowly, "it was a fair discoorse, Will'm, a fair discoorse; but it pained me at the last to see the folk looking sae fresh and wide awake. I mistrust 'twasna sae long nor sae sound as it should hae been."

When Booker T. Washington was asked by a Southerner recently to prove to a Northern audience that that section was really responsible for the introduction of slavery into the American colonies, Mr. Washington said he was reminded of the story of an old colored man who had a pig, which he sold one morning to a white man for three dollars. The white man drove off with his purchase, but on the road the pig escaped, and found its way back to Uncle Zeke's cabin. A little later, another white man came along, and Uncle Zeke sold him the same pig for another three dollars. On his way home with the pig the second purchaser encountered the first returning in search of the escaped animal. After some wrangling they decided to go back and refer the question to the old darkey. "Uncle Zeke" said number one, "didn't you sell me this pig at nine o'clock this morning?" "Sho' I did, massa." "But, Uncle Zeke," said number two, "didn't I pay you three dollars for this pig at twelve o'clock?" "Sho' you did, massa." "Well, then, who does the pig belong to?" "Sakes alive," said Uncle Zeke, "can't you white folks settle dat question between yo'selves?"

Like many Frenchmen, especially those hailing from the south of France, President Loubet is very fond of those national dishes in which garlic forms an important ingredient. Once, in his lawyer days, when he was pleading in court after having partaken of some such dish, his democratic tastes in this respect placed him in a somewhat embarrassing position. The presiding judge happened to be a man of aristocratic origin and breeding, to whom the odor of garlic was absolutely intolerable. M. Loubet rose and began his argument. He had not proceeded very far when the judge was observed to sniff rather uncomfortably and to take out a perfumed handkerchief, reinforcing it a few moments later with a smelling-bottle. These measures, however, proved of no avail as a protection from the pungent and penetrating effluvium which emanated from the future President of the republic. At last, his olfactory sense rising in open rebellion, the indignant judge shouted: "Usher, open the windows; open the doors. For heaven's sake, let out this abominable smell!" Since then M. Loubet, it is said, though he still preserves his simplicity of life, has eliminated garlic from his articles of diet.

His Excuse.

"You can't go inside," said the doorkeeper of the village theater, wherein a certain "Uncle Tom's Cabin" aggregation were holding forth. "You are drunk."

"Zrunk!" echoed the applicant for admission, who was lavishly and luridly lighted up inside. "Courah I'm—hic—drunk! Why — goodgosh'lmighty!—do you s'pose I'd—hic—wants see your darned old show if I wasn't—hic—drunk?"—"Smart Set."

Storm King Group of Mines

TO CANADIAN INVESTORS

The property comprising what is known as the STORM KING GROUP OF MINES offers an attractive and safe investment. The property is the richest in the country and we believe it would be difficult to secure an investment that promises better returns. The following is a description of the mines written by Capt. A. M. Paul, whose reputation as an expert in mining matters is known far and near.

These properties are situated in the Cable Cove Mining District about fifteen miles north of Sumpter, Oregon, and about one mile northwest of the Baby McKee mine, about two miles northwest of the Last Chance, the Alpine, the Imperial and the California mines.

The properties in this report consist of seven claims. The names of the seven claims being as follows: The Eureka and the Honest Dollar. These two claims are on the same vein. Adjoining these two claims and paralleling them on the northwest is another vein upon which there are two claims known as the Jessie and Golden Rule, and paralleling them on the northwest there is another vein upon which there are two claims, known as the Storm King and the Ozone. The last claim of this group lies to the northwest of the last two named, and is adjoining them. This claim is the Shannon Bell.

In making my report I will commence with the two first named claims of the group, the Eureka and Honest Dollar. The development on these claims consists of a tunnel ninety-seven feet in length, running along the course of the vein, showing two feet ten inches of ore in the top of the tunnel and a little over three feet in the bottom, which assays giving values of from $9.66 to $70 per ton in gold. About four hundred feet in a southwesterly direction there is a shaft on the vein ten feet deep, showing the vein to be from one to two inches wide on the surface and about twelve inches wide in the bottom of the shaft, in which assays give values of from $9.76 to $40 per ton in free milling gold ore.

This vein is exposed by small shafts and open cuts for a distance of fifteen hundred feet, and the course of this vein is north, ten degrees east, and the vein cuts the formation, showing it to be a true fissure, and the formation is granite. This vein shows in places a width of from ten to fifteen feet of mineralized matter, commonly called vein matter, but which is caused by hot solutions from below.

I will now pass to the Jessie and Golden Rule. There has been very little work done upon these two claims, there being one discovery shaft ten feet deep, showing crop on all sides of the shaft, and running in value of from $4 upwards. It is my opinion that with development this, too, will prove valuable property.

The work on the Storm King and Ozone consists of a [illegible] near the point of discovery and is driven along the vein for a distance of one hundred and eighty feet, showing ore all the way from the surface to the face of the tunnel, and averaging in width from six to eighteen inches. Three assays give the following values, $12.50. This being a general sample taken from the dump. The other two assays are $62.66 and $79.00 respectively, this being the assorted ore for shipment. The course of this tunnel and vein are north, ten degrees west, and the vein cuts the trend of the formation obliquely (which is granite) and by driving this tunnel five or six hundred feet [illegible] meet a quartzite reef (which is running north, twenty degrees east) which would make this a contact vein between granite and quartzite, and should produce a large body of ore, at the intersection of the contact.

The only work done upon the Shannon Bell, the last claim of this group is the location work, and is not enough to allow of a report being made.

There is water for power purposes one mile from the property, and timber on the ground, of a very fine quality, sufficient to run the mine for many years to come.

All the assays mentioned in this report were made by the assayer, of the Imperial mine at my request, and the ore was taken by me from the properties mentioned.

I will state that I have been a practical miner since 1870, and am now the manager and superintendent of the Imperial mine in this district.

Langtry & King Edward.

In commenting on that interesting and now historical episode in which she was said to have playfully sent a lump of ice tobogganing down the spinal column of the present Edward Rex, Lily Langtry said to Acton Davies the other day: "There is no reason in the world why I shouldn't tell the truth about that little matter, for the very good reason that it never occurred. When the King, then the Prince of Wales, heard the story, he asked me if I knew how on earth it could have been started. Of course I couldn't. However, my old friend, Mrs. Cornwallis-West, finally solved the mystery of how the story started, and her explanation, though a very weak one I admit, is the only peg on which any of us have been able to hang this story. An informal dinner was given one night at which Mr. and Mrs. Cornwallis-West and myself were guests. The Prince of Wales was not present. It was a very jolly little party; we all knew each other very well, and everyone was having a beautiful time, with the exception of Mr. Cornwallis-West, who was tired and wanted to go home. Several times he asked his wife to make a start, but she was enjoying herself and refused point blank. Finally he became quite angry and begged her to start. The ices were still on the table, and, taking a spoonful of hers, Mrs. Cornwallis-West laughingly slipped it under her husband's collar, with the remark: 'There, my dear boy, that will cool you off for a few moments.' This story must have been repeated by some of the guests, and enlarged upon until it was landed upon his Royal Highness and myself. That, I assure you, is all I know about the matter. Even my enemies must admit that I have always been noted for gentle manners, and that I or any other woman would ever have dared take such a liberty with the prince is too ridiculous. His Royal Highness was charming and most good-natured about the whole matter. In fact, only this past summer, when the King was talking to me at Newmarket about my last American tour, he remarked, with a twinkle in his eyes: 'I suppose they are still telling that lump of ice story on us in America,' and I answered, 'Yes, and I'm afraid their time prancing about like marionettes.'"

Kill or Cure.

A short time ago a veterinary surgeon summoned a man to the Winkletown County Court for two guineas for attendance on a dog, reports an English paper.

He swore that he had been called in and found the dog suffering from distemper, and that he had paid so many visits and had supplied such and such medicines, for which he claimed two pounds two shillings as per agreement. Then came the defendant's turn.

"You say that I agreed to pay you two guineas?" questioned the defendant.

"Certainly you did!" replied the plaintiff.

"Do you remember what our arrangement was?"

"Perfectly."

"Didn't I say that I was afraid of you running up a long bill, but that if you would agree to take two quid, 'kill or cure,' you might have the case?"

"Quite right; and I said that if you would make it guineas I would take it on," answered the plaintiff, with a gleam of triumph.

"Well, now, on your oath, did you kill my dog?" demanded the defendant, with a sudden energy that woke up the judge and made the usher jump again.

"Certainly not," replied the other, with a bluster that was perhaps justifiable in the circumstances.

"And you didn't cure him, coz he's dead; and as I promised to pay, and you agreed to accept, two guineas, 'kill or cure,' and you haven't done either, I wonder how you've got the nerve to ask for the money even, let alone bring me here."

At this point the learned judge intervened, and the case was remanded for further consideration.

An Engagement Extraordinary.

According to the Paris correspondent of the London "Telegraph," a determined suitor recently found a new way of using the motor-car for matrimonial purposes. The object of his affection was willing to wed him, but her parents were obdurate. He pretended to give up hope, and to be reconciled to the idea of being merely a friend of the family, and he took out the girl and her father for an automobile drive to Havre. At a dangerous part of the road he suddenly put on full speed, and the car sprang away at a terrific rate. The girl sat still and showed no fear, but her terrified father shouted to the man who wanted to be his son-in-law to stop. "Consent to my marriage with your daughter" was all the motorist replied. Still the car tore along, and if any obstacle had appeared in the road at least three fatalities would have occurred. "Stop! We shall all be killed!" the girl's father continued to cry. "Most certainly we shall," said the determined young man, grimly; if you don't consent at once I am going to send the machine into the ditch, and at this rate that means quick death." As he spoke he imparted violent lurches from side to side to the car. "I consent!" gasped the now vanquished parent. Immediately the car slowed down, and the rest of the journey was done at a steady touring pace. But during the motor's previous mad career a policeman had jotted down its number. When the girl's father, to whom the machine belongs, appeared in court to answer to the summons, his future son-in-law accompanied him, and looked exceedingly pleased with himself. When a fine of sixteen francs was imposed the younger man said he would pay it himself with pleasure. He confided to the magistrate that the day has been named.

AN ICE-CLAD STEAMSHIP ON A PERILOUS JOURNEY

Detroit, Mich., Dec. [illegible]—The propeller J. T. Hutchinson came into Detroit yesterday coated from stem to stern with so many inches thick. She looked like a steam-driven iceberg. Her voyage down the lakes is one of the most remarkable in the history of inland navigation, and it is not ended yet. The navigation, and is not ended yet. This morning she left for Buffalo.

The Hutchinson struck on the rocks off Eagle River, Lake Superior, on the night of November 28th, and so certain were her owners that she would be a total loss that they abandoned her to the underwriters.

Agents of the underwriters took charge and induced the crew to return to the boat by promising extra wages, and a bonus. The steamer was released from the rocks, and under her own steam she started down the lakes with five of her six safety compartments filled with water and a cargo of soaked flax in her hold.

As she slowly steamed down the river thousands gathered to see her. Tons of ice were on her decks. The pilot house was sheathed with ice to the top of the weather cloth and one of the windows had to be chopped out that the helmsman could see.

On top of the pilot-house behind the weather cloth, which was a scant protection against the wintry blasts, Captain John H. Smith had his post.

When the steamer got into the river Captain Smith had the hot water hose rigged and set the crew chopping off some of the ice.

The Hutchinson is drawing about 20 feet of water, and enough of her cargo will be lightened to allow her to cross the limekilns. The centrifugal pump was working at the forward hatch all the way down.

The Hutchinson has trouble ahead of her in Lake Erie, say the old lakemen. Some of the old fellows, who have had experience in bucking the ice in Lake Erie, say she will never get through to Buffalo. Captain Smith says she will.

"They have lots of nerve to send that boat out to Buffalo," said William Livingston, president of the Lake Carriers' Association, as he looked at the big pumps working on the ice-covered boat.

Effect of Rain Upon Animals.

"The effects of a rainy day upon animals of a zoo, said a keeper the other day, "are as interesting to watch as anything I know in connection with a collection of beasts. Now that big wolf over there just revels in a rainy day, and skips about as gay as you please. All the wolves are the same. Rain cheers them up. But the lions are different. They fret and fume and growl and snarl unless you give them an extra allowance of meat or a big pan of warm milk. Then they will sleep, but a rainy day seems to get on the nerves of a lion or any of the cat family. Snakes are kept in just a certain temperature all the time, and you would think that the damp air would never reach them. Perhaps it doesn't, but I have always noticed that all the reptiles are active and cheerful, if a reptile can be said to be cheerful, when it rains. The deer family, the bears, the various sorts of wild goats and the like, don't seem to mind the rain a bit. Birds, however, are the most disconsolate, dreary things in the world on a rainy day. They don't sing, hardly chirp, but just settle down to be as comfortable as possible."

—If you want to make a GOLD DIVIDEND PAYING INVESTMENT—

Purchase the Treasury Stock of The Drake Mining Drainage and Tunnel Transportation Co.
OF COLORADO

The Company is capitalized at $2,000,000, consisting of 2,000,000 shares, par value one dollar per share. Seven hundred and fifty thousand shares of this amount is eight per cent. Preferred Treasury Stock.

The Property

Consists of nine patented, well developed mines and mill sites, situated in Gilpin County, Colorado. This county has already produced more than $80,000,000 in Gold!

The development of the property consists of many shafts sunk on ore to a depth of 100 to 400 feet, and a tunnel run a distance of 2,300 feet, not only to develop its own property, but also to unwater and furnish underground transportation for the Gregory, the Bob-Tail and other rich mines of the district.

Transportation

The Colorado & Southern Railroad passes directly in front of the mouth of the tunnel. All ore can be dumped therefrom directly into the cars, giving quick and cheap transportation to the mills. Large returns have been paid from the product of these mines.

Sale of Preferred Stock!

The company desires to not only push its development work and complete its tunnel at an early day, but also erect on its own mill site at the mouth of the tunnel, proper reduction works for the treatment of its ores. For that purpose it now offers for sale [illegible] shares of its Preferred Treasury Stock at [illegible] cents per share, reserving the right to increase the price of all unsold shares thereof at any time without notice. The Company pledges the whole net product of its mines to pay an eight per cent. annual dividend on the sum paid for such stock, before any other stock receives any dividends whatever. After such dividends has been paid, the common stock shall receive a like dividend, when the surplus fund remaining shall be distributed among the common and preferred stock, share and share alike. All stock will be issued full paid and non-assessable.

Successfully Rescued

Mr. Harry Gibson of Kingston, was rescued from an enemy that relentlessly pursued him for years

Mr. Gibson was born and brought up in Kingston. By profession he is a school teacher. He received his training in Queen's University, where he took a course in arts and medicine that well befits him to talk on almost any subject.

The enemy that for 25 years relentlessly pursued Mr. Gibson is a menace to our entire population—it is the demon, Catarrh.

Mr. Gibson says:—"For years I was never free from Catarrh of the nose and throat. It bothered me winter and summer and kept me so continually coughing and hawking that I found it a great impediment to the proper performance of my duties at school. I used every available means of obtaining a cure, took bottle after bottle of medicine prescribed by local doctors, but never got more than temporary relief. I consulted a well-known specialist in the States, but after spending a considerable amount of money with him to no advantage, was forced to look elsewhere for relief, which I first received from Catarrhozone.

I consider Catarrhozone a genuine cure for Catarrh. It drove the loathsome disease completely out of my system, and to-day I am as well as if I never knew what the word Catarrh implied."

A straightforward proof of cure, coming from a well known gentleman like Mr. Gibson carries conviction of the fact with it that Catarrhozone does all that is claimed for it. As a cure for Catarrh and Bronchitis it positively has no equal. All druggists, price $1.00; small size, 25 cents. By mail from Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

Want the Present System

Cobourg Sentinel-Star: The County Council is antagonistic to the scheme of the Ontario Government to revolutionize the County Council by having the township reeves form the council. This scheme meets the view of the municipal councils, as the reeves will not only be reeves of the township, but also county councillors. The measure has its defects and its benefits. The county Council debated it on Tuesday, and if they don't head the movement off, they will as one member stated, be wiped out. They will memorialize, with other county councils, the government as to amending the new law.

IGNORANCE

Blows out the gas and furnishes the newspapers with a jest and an obituary notice. "Didn't know it was loaded" may be an honest plea, but it never brought a victim back to life. Those who let a cough run on, in ignorance of the danger, find no escape from the consequences when the cough develops into lung trouble.

The best time to cure a cough is when it starts. Ordinarily, a few doses of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will cure a cough at the beginning. But even when the cough is deep-seated, the lungs bleed and the body is wasted by emaciation, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will in ninety-eight cases out of every hundred effect a perfect and permanent cure.

$3,000 FORFEIT will be paid by the World's Dispensary Medical Association, Proprietors, Buffalo, N. Y., if they cannot show the original signature of the individual volunteering the testimonial below, and also of the writers of every testimonial among the thousands which they are constantly publishing, thus proving their genuineness.

"My husband had been coughing for years and people frankly told me that he would go into consumption," writes Mrs. John Shirumsen, of No. 615 25th Place, Chicago, Ill. "He had such terrible coughing spells we not only grew much alarmed but looked for the bursting of a blood-vessel or a hemorrhage at most any time. My husband's recovery was remarkable. In three days after he began using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery he was up and around, and in two more days he went to work. Two bottles cured him."

FEAR FOR POPE PIUS' LIFE

Sisters Want Pontiff to Abdicate Because of His Ill Health

Rome, Dec. 19.—Disquieting rumors of the ill-health of Pope Pius X. were supplemented today by the news that his sisters have asked him to abdicate because of his weak heart. Close confinement within the Vatican grounds have noticeably affected his strength.

DUNDONALD AS GOVERNOR

This is the Latest Gossip at Ottawa—Lord Aylmer May Command Militia

Ottawa, December 19.—Currency is given to the report that Lord Aylmer will be appointed to the command of the Canadian Militia on the retirement of Gen. Lord Dundonald. It is expected that the General will make a trip to England after the Christmas holidays in order to attend the marriage of his eldest daughter. His desire is to continue his good work for the improvement of the militia, and for that reason his stay in the Mother Country will not be long, but it is confidently expected that when Lord Minto's term of office has expired, Lord Dundonald will succeed him as Governor-General of Canada. Col. Otter is mentioned for the position of Adjutant-General in succession to Lord Aylmer. It is said that he will be made a Brigadier-General, and associated with him in this rank will be Col. T. D. B. Evans, of Winnipeg, and Col. C. W. Drury.

NO NEED FOR WORRY, CANADA'S COAST WILL BE SAFE SAYS DUNDONALD

So Long As the Navy of Great Britain Commands the Seas

Vancouver, B.C., Dec. 18—At a dinner given last night in honor of Major-General Lord Dundonald, his Lordship, in responding to the toast of "The Naval and Military Forces of the Empire," said

"I have just paid my visit of inspection to the northern shores of your great Province. Among other places I visited was Port Simpson. I had heard that this port had been rendered useless as a port because two little islands, with unpronounceable names, not many miles from it, had been allotted to the United States, and that, therefore, the entrance to the port could be shut up at will.

"I found that his Lordship, the Bishop of Caledonia, was correct as to the commanding position of Wales Island. It is quite true that from the fortress-like heights of this island it would be possible to pour shot and shell on all around within six or eight miles, but the only smoke that is likely to issue from Wales Island other than the sort of smoke that has been hanging about it of late, is not the smoke of a big gun, but smoke from fish drying establishments to cure and dry the vast quantities of halibut and other fish that frequent these waters.

The Oneness of the Great British Empire is Significant

"I do not think we need be under any apprehension that any guns ever likely to be made and used from the two islands given to the United States will shut up Port Simpson or prevent its use as a port if it was desired to use it as such.

The Navy Can be Depended On.

"Gentlemen, the only power that can shut up Port Simpson in time of war will be the power that commands all the sea approaches to it. What is the use, gentlemen, of a port for commerce if you can get no ships out of it, and no ship in it. All the ports of the British Empire are open and will always be open to the commerce of the world, not by the kind permission, nor by the goodwill or the bad will of any foreign power or any two foreign powers, or any three foreign powers, but because the Union Jack, which is flying here in Vancouver, and which is flying all over the sea-coast ports of Canada and the British Empire, is the flag flown by the most powerful navy the world has ever known, those mighty warships of your Mother Land.

Important Speech by the G. O. C. At Vancouver, B.C.

"I know, gentlemen, your sentiments towards the British navy, that navy which helps to maintain our liberties. In a short time the war establishment of the navy will amount to the stupendous total of 175,000 men and yet the British workingman does not grumble. He will work and pay and man the ships and enter the army and fight just as his forefathers taught him to do.

The Oneness of the Empire.

"But now he knows that shoulder to shoulder with him stand the sons of Greater Britain, just as eager, just as ready as he is. In the late war no part of the Empire gave a readier response to the call to arms than did the Province of British Columbia. Victoria and Vancouver, among other places in your Province, poured men into the fighting line, and I assure you they were amongst the best.

"The British army and navy know the feeling of British Columbia, and they honor the Province of British Columbia for the devotion to the old flag and for sending such men to fight for it. (Loud and prolonged applause, the whole audience rising to their feet and singing "Rule Britannia.")

In the afternoon Lord Dundonald and staff visited New Westminster and inspected the local companies of the Sixth Regiment, Duke of Connaught's Own Rifles. In the evening at the Vancouver Drill Hall, his Lordship inspected the headquarters of the companies of the regiment, and also the Boys' Brigade and the veterans of the Fenian Raid and South African War. He leaves today on his return trip to Ottawa.

GREAT VICTORY FOR LABOR PARTY IN AUSTRALIA

Secures a Majority in Both Senate and House, A Complete Turn-Over

London, Dec. 18—The victory of the Labor party in Australia is even more sweeping than yesterday's despatches indicated.

They have secured a majority in both Houses of the Federal Parliament, which, while not large enough to enable them to carry on a Government, will reverse the previous condition of things and, instead of the labor party being the tail to the kite of one of the old parties, the reverse will be the case, and the Protectionists or Free Traders will have to decide which will support the Labor leaders.

It would not be surprising if one result would be the entire remodelling of Australian parties, on the understanding that the fiscal question is to be allowed to rest. The Protectionists would willingly accede to such a proposal, in fact, they suggested it before the elections, but the Free Trader leader, Mr. Reid, would not consent.

A Complete Turn-Over.

The details of the composition of the new Parliament indicate how sweeping the Labor victory has been. In the Senate, prior to the dissolution, the parties stood:

Ministerialists	12
Opposition	16
Labor	8

The new Senate is composed thus:

Labor	17
Opposition	12
Ministerialists	6

In the House of Representatives the standing of parties at the dissolution was:

Ministerialists	32
Opposition	27
Labor	16

The new House stands thus:

Labor	20
Ministerialists	27
Opposition	26

What Does It Mean?

The London papers have not yet grasped the importance of the result from an Imperial standpoint. The Australian Labor party is notoriously anti-Imperialist; in fact, many of its leaders are avowed Republicans. When the Labor party was in control in New South Wales in 1886, its leaders were openly hostile to any attempts to bind the Empire closer together by fiscal or trade bonds. One of the planks of their platform was the repeal of the subsidy for the steamship service between Sydney and Vancouver. They favored the subsidy for the San Francisco service, but always voted against the Vancouver subsidy, and it was only carried by the combination of the old parties who could unite upon such a subject, it not being a fiscal one.

Then during the South African war, the leaders of the Labor party were openly opposed to any participation by Australians in the war. They lost no opportunity of expressing their sympathy with the Boers, and led by The Sydney Bulletin, the most widely circulated paper in Australia — a paper which The Times here, a few weeks ago, admitted was the most potent force in Australian national life — have since thrown cold water upon all proposals for a trade alliance between Australia and the rest of the Empire. Messrs. McGowen, Watson, Griffiths, Rae and other of the Labor leaders have repeatedly declared against "any harnessing of Australia to the decrepit old Empire" and have more than once advocated a trades union with the United States rather than with Great Britain.

Of course, at this distance it is hard to say just how much of this they will put into practice now that they have got the ball at their feet; but the situation is evidently critical enough to warrant the gravest apprehensions by those who had looked forward to the Australian elections as the first opportunity for the self-governing colonies to endorse Mr. Chamberlain's trade proposals. The result is most disappointing to those who had looked for such a result, and they are hoping that when the mail advices come to hand the situation will not be as serious as it looks.

GREAT BRITAIN DEMANDS HER TRADE RIGHTS

Will United States Refuse Most Favored Nation Treatment Regarding Cuba?

Washington, Dec. 18—Now that the Cuban reciprocity bill has become law, a question has arisen as to the effect of the reduction of the duty on Cuban sugar upon importations of sugar from other countries. The British Government has served formal notice upon the State Department that, under the favored nation clause, it expects that British sugar from the British West Indies shall be admitted into the United States on equal terms with Cuban sugar; and it is not doubted that Germany, France, Austria, and the other great beet sugar producing countries will do likewise.

An old holding of Attorney-General Olney, in President Cleveland's administration was averse to such demands, but the question promises to be reopened with vigor.

London, Dec. 18— The Paris correspondent of the Times says Henri Lorin, in discussing United States progress in recent years, says the best thing for them to do is to renounce all plans in American waters which are not exclusively economic. That one power, he concluded, will prove the best advised which establishes a great free port upon its territory in the immediate vicinity of the new canal.

SAD PLIGHT OF A PRINCESS

Niece of Great Napoleon Makes a Pathetic Appeal to the Public

Paris, Dec. 19.—Princess Mathilde Bonaparte, a niece of the great Napoleon, now aged and infirm, has made a pathetic request of those who surround her. She asked that she might be given gloves to cover her hands.

"Once," she said, sadly, "I wore gloves because I wanted to preserve my hands. Now I would like to wear gloves to conceal them."

While at her villa last summer the princess broke a leg. She has never recovered from the accident, the consequences of which are graver because she had just reached her eighty-third birthday. She is the daughter of Jerome Bonaparte, once King of Westphalia, and Queen Catherine, born Princess of Wurtemberg.

A BRUTAL SERGEANT

Maltreated German Soldiers and will be Punished

Berlin, Dec. 16.—Owing to his maltreatment of soldiers on 1,520 counts, and abuse of authority on one hundred counts, a non-commissioned infantry officer named Frankzki of the 85th Infantry, has been sentenced to five years' imprisonment and dishonorable discharge from the army by a court-martial at Rendsburg. The court declared Franzki had displayed the "brutality of an ox-driver," and pronounced his superior officers guilty of negligent oversight. Franzki borrowed sums of money from soldiers habitually, and never repaid them, and beat his subordinates with his fist and with clubs and whips and spat in the faces of the men. Several of the men were maltreated from one hundred to two hundred times each. One of them was dismissed from the service disabled.

FROZEN TO DEATH

Terrible Experience of Three Men in a Snow Storm

Owen Sound, Dec. 17—Paul Bokash, a farm laborer, was frozen to death on a side line near Balaclava, 15 miles from Owen Sound, early on Sunday morning. The body was found on Monday at noon, but particulars did not reach the coroner until yesterday. He decided that an inquest was unnecessary.

Bokash, with two companions, Wm. Waterton, and a man named Roadhouse, left in a cutter for home on Saturday evening. The road runs northward a short distance from Georgian Bay, and a freezing snowstorm swept across the water chilling the men to the bone. They finally turned down the side line, within a couple of miles of their home, when the cutter became stalled. Waterton left his two companions, and after a thrilling experience reached home on foot at 2 o'clock on Sunday morning. Bokash and Roadhouse made another desperate attempt to get through, but failing they unhitched the horses, and abandoned the cutter. Roadhouse struggled through the storm and reached home at 4 a.m. Bokash did not appear.

His body was found the next day 40 rods from the cutter, lying on his back, where he had apparently fallen after a last struggle to regain his feet. He had no overcoat, and his hands were bare.

ACCUSED OF THEFT

Park Worthington Said to have Robbed Employer

Guelph, Dec. 17— Park Worthington a clerk in the office of Mr. J. M. Baird, the Douglas street broker, has disappeared, and a discrepancy of over five hundred dollars has been discovered. He was sent to the Traders Bank on Tuesday morning at about 10 o'clock to make a large deposit. He did not return and inquiries at the bank revealed the fact that he had not left the money and a search was instituted. The police were notified and are at work upon the case, but have not succeeded in locating him. It is supposed that he has gone to Chicago, and the authorities throughout the Province have been notified.

In making an inspection of the books, it was discovered that a further embezzlement of some hundreds of dollars had been made. The shortage, so far as is known, will reach over five hundred dollars, but further investigations may reveal a much larger amount.

Mr. Worthington is a young man of seventeen years of age, dark complexion, 5 ft., 6 inches in height, weight 130 pounds, and of Jewish features. He wears a dark overcoat, and a blue peak cap. His teeth are discolored, and two of them are broken in front.

NEXT YEAR'S COUNCIL.

Result of the Vote For Mayor and Aldermen

MAYOR G. M. ROGER LEADS

For Chief Magistrate--Ald. H. Rush in Second Place.

H. P. Kennedy, Ald. Shortly and Reeve Frank Adams Lead for Aldermen with Ald. R. F. McWilliams well Placed—Ald Best Commended for His Stand on the Railway and Lighting By-Laws.

We publish herewith the first count in our Municipal Voting Campaign. All the present Aldermen are placed, together with some new blood, some of which stands pretty high on the list. For Mayor, His Worship leads the count, with Ald. H. Rush a good second, and Ald. Henry Best third. H. P. Kennedy leads for Alderman, while Alderman Shortly and Reeve Adams, of Ashburnham are neck and neck for second place. Councillor Scott, of Ashburnham, is also well up amongst the names of Peterborough's present representatives. The youngest member on the Town's Civic Board, Ald. R. F. McWilliams, shows up well in an even count of 90 with Ald. Best and Morrison.

We have received many coupons but partially filled in, and would ask our readers to avail themselves of the 12 blanks provided for Aldermen. This is the number required for next year's Council, together with a Chief Magistrate. Once again we leave this matter in your hands; go over the field carefully and bring to the front only those men in whom you have the fullest confidence, and of whose fitness for municipal honors there is not the shadow of a doubt.

NEW NAME FOR MAYOR.

One subscriber writes: "I know it is customary to allow each Mayor a second term unopposed; still, I must record my confidence in Ald. Rush's executive ability and business tact by asking you to name him for Mayor. I consider his scheme to purchase the Hilliard Estate a wise one, everything considered. Anyway, the Town cannot lose by the transaction. The present revenue from the farm and homes on the property would pay the interest on the debentures issued to raise the purchase price of $10,000. Then there is considerable frontage on Water street, valuable for building lots and building lots are fetching a good price in these days of house famine. As to stone, the Town paid this year $3 a cord for its delivery at the town yard, thence it was carted to the crusher, and again to the road on which it was needed for Macadam purposes. Should the Town acquire the Hilliard estate, a portable crusher could be placed right on the spot and the stone handled but once, and then ready for use wherever required; why I consider that a big saving in cartage alone is apparent. The price of stone delivered is steadily increasing: in 1902 we paid $2.50 a cord, this year $3, and as its distance from the town increases so will the price for cartage. In the matter of gravel, this estate contains enough to do the town for many years to come. I consider it a splendid idea to have a source of gravel and stone of our own right in our midst, to say nothing of the property's value in other ways. Ald Rush in this, as well as in other matters, has shown commendable foresight and judgment in the town's interest."

ALD. BEST FOR MAYOR

An admirer of the father of the council, writes: "It's about time Alderman Best was nominated for Mayor. He has always proved as careful of the Town's interests as of his own, and Street Railway or no Street Railway, he had the courage of his convictions, and headed the minority of two against paying $14,000 more for street lighting than necessary. I notice that he had the Town Clerk record his protest to the passage of the Street Railway and Street Lighting Bylaws, and his action was subsequently endorsed by Mr. Justice Meredith at Osgoode Hall. Best in name and Best in judgment, in this as in many other matters, he's my choice, Mr. Editor, for Mayor."

A merchant writes: "I don't like the look of that paragraph in your edition of Friday, which points out that affidavits were produced to show that neither Mr. Robert Stuart, nor the Cereal Co., or any of its members had any connection whatever, directly or INDIRECTLY with the Peterborough Radial Railway Co. It's up to the Council now to say why Mr. Stuart's name and that of his Company were used at all in connection with the street railway franchise. Citizens generally looked for great things and rightly too, from the operation of the street railway (omit the phrase Peterborough Radial Railway Co. if you like) in connection with Mr. Stuart and his Company's extensive local interests. Perhaps had the Street Railway Franchise not been quashed, Mr. Stuart, or his Company, or some members of the Cereal Co., would shortly have been interested in the Peterboro Radial Railway Co. In justice to all concerned it's a pity the whole question was not submitted to the people in the regular way, in which event we should not have had the present muddle. We need such men as Frank Adams, C. B. McAllister, A. W. Cressman, Ald. Best and R. Clinkscale in next year's Council, so put them down on your list, if you please."

ELECTIONS IN DOUBT IS OTTAWA'S REPORT

There Probably Will be Another Session of Parliament Before Dissolution

THE COLD WEATHER DREADED BY ORGANIZERS

The Latest Grist of News from the Dominion Capital--The Fight in North Renfrew

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Dec. 19.—The Times' representative has it from authority close to Sir Wilfrid that nothing has yet been decided as regards date of election. All the country members are anxious for another session, while the party leaders feel that now is the time to strike. Those who anticipate an election in midwinter such as speakers and organizers are shivering in anticipation. It is no fun to go electioneering with the thermometer 30 degrees below zero, particularly in the North-West or the Gaspe peninsula, where all the traveling has to be done by sleigh, and where the principal rations will consist of dried salted tommycods and smuggled molasses rum.

An election of that sort always claims scores of victims and some of the most promising young politicians of the day have caught their death from colds gathered in midwinter campaigns in this country.

Rodolphe Lemieux, one of the younger French Canadian confidants of the Premier, made a statement to The Times which he would not have dared to make unless it was quietly authorized, to the effect that nothing had yet been decided.

When Mr. Prefontaine, the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, was asked he said: "A winter campaign will be very disagreeable, but I am afraid the people will have to make up their mind to that. At any rate there will be no elections within the next six months."

The question why the Government should bring on the elections now was thus explained by a prominent Liberal. "The cry for protection is getting so loud that the Government is afraid it will have to promise a great deal more in that way six months from now than at present, while a year from now it probably would be compelled to change around its entire policy."

The Conservative organizers have been at work for months getting out campaign literature and to confirm the rumors of an early change in the Liberal campaign matter also has started to make its appearance. Strange to say, there is not a reference in it to the new Grand Trunk Pacific Railway.

LORD MINTO WILL NOT INTERFERE.

The Premier has almost the sole say in the matter of the dissolution of the parliament. Naturally his decision is subject to the approval of the Governor-General, but it is pretty certain that Lord Minto will not raise any objection under the present circumstances. After the Governor-General has authorized and signed the proclamation the secretary of State issues a special edition of the Canada Gazette and the struggle is on in earnest.

From a month till two months is usually the time given after the issue of the proclamation, and at least a month is necessary to arrange the proper machinery of the elections and to give the returning officers and deputy returning officers an opportunity to put their districts in proper order.

There are 213 electoral divisions in the Dominion, and there is really a separate election in each of them. If a minister should fail to be re-elected he would either have to try his luck again in some other division or would have to retire for good. In case he wants to try his luck again the member who has been successful in one of the well-known government constituencies will be asked to resign, his resignation being rewarded with some important and well-paying government position. The defeated candidate will then stand for the division thus vacated.

WILL SECURE GUNS IN BRITAIN.

The absence of Sir Frederic Borden, Minister of Militia, will be shortened as much as possible. He would not have been allowed to go to England at all had it not been considered that the fact of his giving personal attention to the purchase of defense material and the general rearrangement of the Dominion militia would have a good effect in connection with Sir Wilfrid Laurier's statements anent the Alaskan boundary decision. He will make a strong plea in England in favor of a Canadian head for the Canadian militia, and in addition he will purchase field artillery and siege and Maxim guns. It is considered that Canada is very short of Maxim guns. There are only about fifteen in all in the country at present, and it is the intention to buy a sufficient number to arm every city regiment in Canada with one. If the Maxim cannot be had in England orders will be given through the War Office to secure them elsewhere. The order will be completed with a dozen batteries of field artillery. Sir Frederick has the assistant adjutant general Lieutenant Colonel Rutherford with him to prevent mistakes.

The defense of the country is creating considerable talk, and the Ministers are keeping up the interest in the question by their occasional reference to it. Hon. Clifford Sifton in a speech suggested the Swiss idea of educating every boy in part to be a soldier. He believed in boys at school being taught how to shoot, and he would not be adverse to having young men when they reached the age of 21 presented with a rifle if they showed themselves proficient enough, and to be compelled to show well they took care of it and how well they used it at least once a year.

CAANDIAN LUMBER INTERESTS.

Henri Bourassa, the great anti-Chamberlain member of Parliament, who always advocates Canada for the French Canadians, has made a number of speeches in which he advocates that Canadian lumbermen shall be compelled to manufacture their pulp within Canadian territory. He intends to make a strong campaign in that direction if he is reelected, as he no doubt will be.

The value of timber limits are certainly going up all the time, and particularly those containing pine. A few days ago 180 square miles of pine limits were sold for $350,000, and pine is getting scarcer.

NORTH RENFREW CONTEST.

Your correspondent had a heart-to-heart talk with a prominent Liberal regarding the probable outcome in North Renfrew. The Ottawa Government is not concerned as to the fate of the Ross Government, as it is felt here that the latter has not always been loyal to the Laurier Administration. Nevertheless, it is believed that the Liberals will win in North Renfrew.

Must Answer Murder Charge

London, Dec. 18—Patrick Upton, the Strathroy man, who was attacked by his niece, Fanny McGarvey, on November 5 at Strathroy, died at four o'clock this morning, and on Thursday the woman will come up on a charge of murder at Strathroy. The inquest will be held at Strathroy today.

The case was one of the most remarkable that has come under the attention of physicians in this district for some time. It is forty-two days since Upton received his injuries. His head was split open in three pieces, so that a part of the brain protruded. It was expected all the time that he would die, but it was never imagined that his vitality would hold him up for such a space of time.

The case is one in which it will be sought by the defence to prove her assailant's insanity. The two lived together for many years. The woman took the news of her uncle's death calmly. Since being confined in the jail, she has improved mentally, and is fully penitent for the crime.

You Pay Only if Cured

Expects No Money Unless He Cures You—Method and Full Particulars Sent Free—Write For It This Very Day

A Detroit specialist who has 14 certificates and diplomas from medical colleges and boards, has perfected a startling method of curing the diseases of men in their own homes; so that there may be no doubt in the mind of any man that he has

DR. S. GOLDBERG,

The Possessor of 14 Diplomas and Certificates Who Wants No Money That He Does Not Earn.

both the method and the ability to do as he says, Dr. Goldberg, the discoverer, will send the method entirely free to all men who send him their name and address. He wants to hear from men who have strictures that they have been unable to get cured, prostatic trouble, sexual weakness, varicocele, lost manhood, blood poison, hydrocele, emaciation of parts, impotence, etc. His wonderful method not only cures the condition itself, but likewise all the complications, such as rheumatism, bladder or kidney trouble, heart disease, nervous debility, etc.

The doctor realizes that it is one thing to make claims and another thing to back them up, so he has made it a rule not to ask for money unless he cures you, and when you are cured he feels sure that you will willingly pay him a small fee. It would seem, therefore, that it is to the best interests of every man who suffers in this way to write the doctor confidentially and lay your case before him. He sends the method, as well as many booklets on the subject, including the one that contains the 14 diplomas and certificates, entirely free. Address him simply, Dr. S. Goldberg, 208 Woodward Ave., Room [illegible], Detroit, Mich., and it will all immediately be sent you free.

This is something entirely new and well worth knowing more about. Write at once.

THE CEMENT INDUSTRY

We have just been handed a little booklet on the Portland Cement Industry dealing quite extensively with its position, prospects and promotion, and by carefully perusing this the reason that the Lakefield Portland Cement Company have decided not to add an additional six kilns and full compliment of cement machinery, buildings, etc., to their plant, although they have water power electrically developed to supply the power, is quite apparent.

In Germany and the United States the consumption of Portland Cement is one barrel to every four persons of the population. On this basis then the Canadian consumption, figuring the population at the outside mark of six millions, cannot exceed one million five hundred thousand barrels. The fact is, in past years the consumption has not reached anything like those figures, and it is highly improbable that it will for many years to come reach one barrel to four the figures of the immensely wealthy countries of the United States and Germany.

The cement industry in Germany is in a very critical condition, the production of cement being about 40 per cent. more than the consumption. As a consequence many of the works, on which million dollars have been spent, have been forced to the wall, and practically none of the German factories run at a profit. Cement can be bought in Germany, practically speaking, at about the cost of production, and this with coal and labor over 40 per cent cheaper than in Canada.

In the United States for the past three or four months the cement market has also been in a terrible state. Cement has been selling a. the actual cost of production at the mills, leaving no profit to pay the interest charges on the enormous capital invested. We understand that nine out of every ten factories are now closed down, their being no sale for their product even at cost.

We believe that one of the chief arguments of the Canadian cement promoters is that the uses of cement are unlimited, that it will practically take the place of all building material, that all the cement that can be manufactured will be used, or practically no limit to the demand. If this argument is right, why then have these disastrous conditions arisen in tremendously wealthy countries like the United States and Germany, and we might add England?

Returning to the Canadian industry, we are told that there are enough plants now in operation to supply the one and a half million barrels, figuring the consumption one barrel to four persons which it would appear we cannot hope to reach. What will be the condition of things when the fifteen or more companies who have secured charters, are selling stock and have commenced to build their works, place their product on the market. These works, accepting the figures of the promoters as to capacity, with those already in operation, will produce over four millions of barrels, or about three times the maximum consumption that can be looked for under the most favorable circumstances.

Again all the coal used in making cement in Canada, and this is the most important item, must come from Pennsylvania, and the freight alone, without considering the cost of coal, costs the Canadian manufacturer far more money than the Canadian manufacturer can buy his coal delivered at his works, to say nothing of the duty of about 31 cents a ton to which his coal entering Canada is subjected. There is, therefore no possible hope of cement ever being exported from Canada. Further, in the Eastern Provinces and British Columbia imported cement can be laid down duty paid for less money than the Canadian manufacturer can place his product, dear coal, high wages and excessive rail freights being the cause. The Canadian manufacturer is therefore shut out of a very large and important part of his own home market.

From these facts it would appear that these companies are being promoted not to make money out of cement, but out of stockholders who unwarily subscribe for the stock. The stock sellers profit comes immediately the name is subscribed to the stock sheet, and is in no ways dependent, like the stockholder is for his, on the manufacture of cement by the company at a profit. It is said that over one hundred million dollars has been lost in Canada in the past few years in rigged joint stock companies. If the promoters of the many concerns that are being floated, without any regard to supply or demand but simply for promoters profits and pickings, are successful, how many more millions will be added to this total?

THE PATRIOTIC FUND

There still remains $100,000 of the patriotic fund in the hands of the trustees for the relief of South African soldiers. Recently it was suggested that this balance should be divided up pro rata among those who had already received relief from the fund, and the fund closed up. The Ottawa Citizen took strong ground against this, and advised that the fund be retained for the relief of men of the contingents who have not yet asked for assistance, but who may from time to time become incapacitated physically from the after results of the campaign. Many men, among the very best soldiers, came back suffering from permanent injuries, but refused to take advantage of the fund as long as they could earn their own livelihood, but at any time in the future the effects of the hardships or wounds of the campaign may again make themselves felt, and cause disablement. To provide for such cases as these the fund should be maintained.

HILLES AND YATES FINED

Hamilton, Dec. 17—This morning Hilles and Yates came up in the Police Court on the charge of robbing Grafton & Co.'s store. Yates was committed for trial, but there was no evidence to connect Hilles with the crime. The Crown decided not to press the charge of shooting Constable Pearce against the pair. They were both fined $25 or one month in jail for carrying weapons unlawfully and sent up for trial on the charge of carrying explosives.

OUR LETTER-BOX

NOTE—The Times does not hold itself in any way responsible for the opinions expressed by its correspondents.—Ed. Times.

THE QUASHED BY-LAW

To the Editor of The Times;

Sir,—Allow me to congratulate the tax ridden people of this town upon the result of the judgment in Meldrum vs. Peterborough. Under the present regime our taxation has become a burden, and had the "ring" been successful in saddling us with the extra $14,000.00, as contained in the by-law, without any consideration, ours, indeed, would have been an unhappy plight. When the learned judge who quashed the by-law with but a meagre knowledge of the facts at the bottom of the transaction, held "that there was an intention to give and get a reward for introducing the railway, what an alarming state of affairs there must be if the whole facts were laid bare!' One of the grounds urged by the plaintiff on his motion before the court, that the Mayor was interested in one of the companies as secretary, demands a full and explicit denial before that gentleman seeks re election. When our Council illegally tried to foist upon the taxpayers all the burthens contained in that by-law and to exempt the dividends of the Railway Company from taxation, without first submitting it to a vote of the ratepayers, any man of ordinary intelligence knew that it was ultra vires, and yet we find that Council with a lawyer for its head, and with lawyers in its body, and still further fortified with a Town Solicitor, passing the same. Under the circumstances it becomes the duty of the people at the next municipal election to rout the guilty members of the Council, bag and baggage. In order that no injustice should be done to those Aldermen who stood out for the rights of the people I believe that Aldermen Best and Clinkscale voted against the by-law. I might also mention that Alderman O'Connell is entitled to some measure of praise in not voting at all, but why, he should explain. Special mention should be made of Alderman Best in his Titanic struggle for the rights of the people. He it is who should be made Mayor, if the people are true to themselves. He has consistently fought their battles throughout, and it would be a fitting tribute to elect him Mayor for the coming year. I must also congratulate The Times upon its prescience in warning us against the trap into which our Council was leading us before the passing of the by-law, and how it foretold with unerring certainty the result found by the Court.

RATEPAYER.

MOTHER OF FOUR CHILDREN.

The trustees, secretary, and other officers of the Free Hospital for Consumptives at Muskoka are daily in receipt of many piteous letters.

A few days since Mr. W. J. Gage, of Toronto, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the National Sanitarium Association, received a letter from a resident of Quebec, pleading for the admission of a victim of the dread white plague, living about a hundred miles south-east of Montreal, and asking if it were not possible to admit her into the Free Hospital. The writer says: "The applicant is a Mrs. Wm. Paterson, the mother of four children and the wife of a farmer in a place called Goshen, in the township of Windsor. The doctor says that her left lung only is troubled. She is able to go about, but her appetite is very bad. I believe if she could be admitted into the Free Hospital for Consumptives she might be cured. She could not pay much, if anything. Kindly let me know if you could receive her."

We are told by Mr. Gage that applications for admission to the Free Hospital reach the secretary from all points in the Dominion, and patients have been received from Prince Edward Island on the east to Alberta on the west. Two hundred and twenty-five patients have been admitted in eighteen months, and not a single patient has been refused because of his or her poverty.

We can hardly think of any charity that appeals more pathetically for the support of the Canadian people.

Subscriptions may be sent to Sir Wm. R. Meredith, Kt., Vice-President of the National Sanitarium Association, or to Mr. W. J. Gage.

DISTRICT NEWS

APSLEY.

—Winter seems to be here for keeps, snow is about 20 inches deep, and more coming every day with severe cold.

—J. W. Ratcliff, of Stouffville, is renewing old acquaintances in Anstruther and Chandos. Pleased to see John again.

—There was a heavy docket for the municipal fathers to clean up at the final meeting, December 15th.

—Mr. C. Coones had a narrow escape while top loading in G. Stone's camp, a log slipping and striking him on the back, but is, at the time of writing, all right and at work again.

—A very painful and rather serious accident happened to Mr. Fred Bullied of Apsley, last Friday. His horse, which is inclined to be vicious, kicked him on the arm, breaking the bone above the elbow in two places and shattered the arm, driving a piece of the bone through the muscle. Dr. Bell was immediately called, and set the fractured limb, and up to the present Fred is doing nicely.

—Mr J. Lang, M.P., and Mr. W. Anderson, M.P.P., were in our locality for several days, and took a trip through to the northern boundary of Anstruther, accompanied by Mr. Z. Tucker and Mr. W. Gallon. The object of the trip was to inspect the present road with the view of changing part to shorten and make a better road through that settlement as far as Mr. J. Hadley's. This proposed change has been advocated by Mr. Gallon for some time, and we trust that the change will be made, as it will shorten the distance several miles.

—Will try and have a large budget next time.

Dearth of Marriageable Dukes.

The engagement of the Duke of Roxburghe has, so to speak, swept the matrimonial market of strawberry leaves, says an English paper; for the delicate health of the Duke of St Albans, who is now in his thirty-fourth year, renders it very improbable that he will marry; and the only other bachelor duke, his Grace of Leinster (whose trustees have just sold his rich Kildare estates for him to such advantage) is only a few months past his sixteenth birthday. Matters are much the same as regards the second order of the peerage; for the sole eligible marquis at this moment is the young Lord Bute, who is a good deal wealthier than many dukes, but evinces at present no inclination towards matrimony. Travel and sport are his chief tastes so far; and he has just started for Hungary to have a few weeks' shooting with Count Maurice Esterhazy, with whom he struck up a friendship when they were together at Oxford two or three years ago.

WINDY GULCH FAIRIES

(Copyright.)

I.

Of course, we are all so wise nowadays that we don't believe in fairies. And the supposition that fairies would live in Windy Gulch, Colorado, is too absurd to be considered anything but a miner's joke. Yet it is a fact that when the inhabitants of Windy Gulch wish to crow over the denizens of Gabriel's Roost, the rival camp across the divide, they always tell the story of the Windy Gulch fairies.

II.

"Who has seen old Victimus Stiffens lately?" remarked Ben. Jarvis to a group of fellow-miners, who lay about under the trees near the camp.

"I saw him last week," replied Yellow Pete. "Came down to the store and got some whiskey and writing material. He looked shaky, and I shouldn't wonder if he was gettin' ready to write his will."

"That's why I asked," said Jarvis. "Gabriel's Roost is one ahead of us on their cemetery plant, and something has got to happen soon. There hasn't been a shootin' since Jack Litz was elected Marshal, and somebody will have to die a natural death in order for us to catch up with Gabriel's Roost. We must keep an eye on Victimus."

It may be remarked that Victimus Stiffens was the camp name of one Hugh Craig, who had come to the camp with a partner about a year before. They had staked a claim and built a cabin about a mile up the gulch, and for some months had done well, but Craig's partner, one Billy Garvin, had skinned out a couple of months before the events narrated herein, taking with him all the results of their labors. Since this event Craig had had nothing but bad luck. He was a moody, unsociable man, and his misfortune and ill health had rendered him more peculiar than ever, and less popular with the camp.

"The Injuns have a legend," remarked Ben Jarvis, "that this gulch is inhabited by fairies. They believe in fairies, you know. Queer they should have that notion just the same as our forefathers. Now, if there are any fairies about here I wish they would bring me word of Victimus. I tell you, boys, I am getting anxious about that cemetery."

As if in answer to this queer petition, there came a gust of wind, and a paper fluttered to the ground in the midst of the group of men.

"Great Scott!" exclaimed Yellow Pete. "What's that?"

"Well, boys, this is queer," he said. "Guess the fairies heard what I said. Listen to this."

And he read as follows:

> To whom it may concern:
>
> Will any good Christian help a dying man? I have a heavy secret on my soul. I cannot die without revealing it. HUGH CRAIG.

"Good-by, boys," exclaimed Jarvis, rising. "Wait here till I come back."

III

Ben. Jarvis reached the well-built cabin of Hugh Craig in less than a quarter of an hour, although it was a mile over a rough path. He found the sick man lying on an iron camp bedstead. He advanced to the bedside.

"I got your message," he said, solemnly. "What can I do for you?"

"You got my message," repeated the sick man in a husky voice. "Strange! Yet I knew it. I could not die here alone, without relieving my guilty soul. I managed to scrawl the note and to throw it from the door, and the wind swept it down the gulch. And you got it?"

"Yes," replied Jarvis.

"I knew it—I knew it. I have lived a godless life, having faith in nothing. Yet since this sickness of death came upon me I have felt there was a higher power, to which I must answer."

He paused a few moments, and then continued:

"I have no time to lose. Sixteen months ago my pal and I committed a bank robbery in the town of S——, Illinois. We managed so as to throw suspicion on the cashier, a young man named Henry Launt. He was arrested, tried, convicted and is now in prison. He has a wife and two children. I have written a full confession. Here it is."

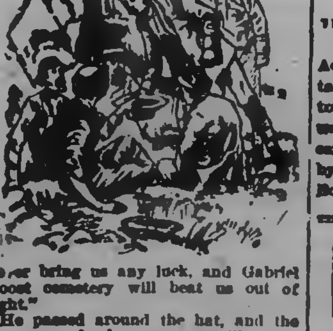
"Take it. See that justice is done. Don't try to do anything for me. It is too late. Leave me alone to die."

IV.

It was not long before Ben Jarvis burst on the camp with his strange tale.

"Here, boys," he said, as he ended it, "chip in. There's two of us got to go to Illinois and right this thing. If we don't the fairies of Windy Gulch will never bring us any luck, and Gabriel Roost cemetery will beat us out of sight."



He passed around the hat, and the necessary funds were speedily provided.

"I'll write you particulars," were the last words of Ben Jarvis as he and Nervy Jelliff took leave of Windy Gulch.

V.

"We got here O. K.," wrote Ben Jarvis a fortnight later, "and went at once to the Mayor of the town. There was a lot of foolin' with lawyers and the District Attorney, and then we all went before the Governor, and he decided to issue a pardon so as to let the young fellow out about Christmas. A lot of his friends are going to get up a big dinner and reception for him, and we're invited. You ought to see his wife and kids. She's as pretty as a picture, and I'm going to have a photograph of the whole family to bring back to Windy Gulch. How about the cemetery?"

The answer came in a dispatch sent from Preston, a town twenty miles from Windy Gulch:

> Your letter received. Glad of your success. The camp is all right. Old Stiffens pegged out two days after you left. Billy Garvin came poking back, and Jack Litz settled with him. Our cemetery is one ahead of Gabriel's Roost. THE BOYS.

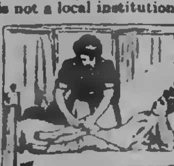
Gentle reader, if you should visit Windy Gulch during the present civic regime there, be careful not to throw any doubts upon this fairy tale. The rivalry between Windy Gulch and Gabriel's Roost over the cemetery record is still in full blast.

THE GREAT CHARITY.

THE HOSPITAL FOR SICK CHILDREN, TORONTO.

It Takes Care of Every Sick Child in Ontario Who Cannot Afford to Pay For Treatment.

The Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, is not a local institution—it is Provincial. The sick child from any part of Ontario whose parents cannot afford to pay for treatment has the same claim and the same privileges as the Toronto child born within sight of its walls.



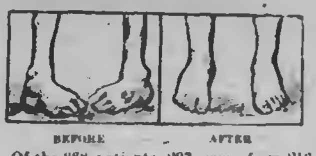
MASSAGE FOR RHEUMATISM.

This is the reason that the Trustees appeal to the fathers and mothers of Ontario—for as their money goes out to help the Hospital so the Hospital's mercy can go out to help the children.

This is the 28th year of the Hospital's life. The story of the years is a wonderful one—for in that period 10,000 children have been treated, and over 5,000 cured and 3,000 improved.

Last year there were 868 boys and girls in its beds and cots, and of these 408 were cured and 247 improved.

Look at these pictures of club feet—before and after.



BEFORE AFTER

Of the 868 patients 293 came from 216 places outside of Toronto.

In three years the patients from different parts of Ontario, not Toronto, average 250—nearly a third of the entire number.

In six years 1,400 outside patients have been treated—and for 20 years past they will average 100 a year.

The average stay of every patient was 54 days, the cost per patient per day 94c.

A dollar or two means a small lot of money out of your pocket, but it takes a big load of misery out of some little life.

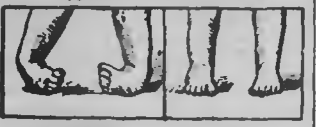
See what the hand of the Surgeon does for the crippled children of Ontario.



BEFORE AFTER

Your money means mercy to somebody's child.

Your money can cheer some mother's heart by saving some mother's child.

Health and wealth. You give wealth to the Hospital, and the Hospital gives health to the children.

The Corporation of the City of Toronto gives $7,500 a year to the Hospital for the maintenance of every child, whether from city or country.

HE ENJOYS READING.

The citizens of Toronto contribute about $7,000 a year towards the maintenance of every patient in the Hospital, whether from city or country.

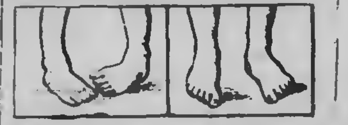
Toronto does its share in the good work, and the Trustees ask you to do yours.

The Newspaper Proprietors of Ontario have kindly helped the Hospital by inserting our appeals.

There are two newspaper cots, and boys and girls from the country are placed in the cots founded by the newspaper men.

Look at the pictures of "before and after." They tell their own story—surely you will help us in this good work.

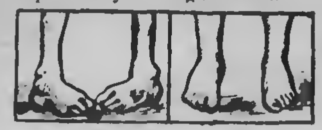
If your dollar could straighten the feet of a little boy or girl with club-feet you would gladly give it, and your dollar will help to do that.



BEFORE AFTER

Take off the handicap of deformity—give all children a fair start in the race of life.

Twenty-three children who came in with club-feet were sent home perfect cures last year. There are as many more in the Hospital to-day awaiting treatment.



BEFORE AFTER

If you know of a sick child—the club foot boy or girl—send his parent's name to the Hospital.

Please send your contributions to J. Ross Robertson, Chairman, or to Douglas Davidson, Sec.-Treas. of the Hospital for Sick Children, College Street, Toronto.

Equitable Gold Mining Co.

R. C. LANE, President. S. F. NORTON, Secretary and Treasurer.

Over $330,000 of development work already done. Main shaft 9 x 16 feet, down 700 feet. Over 3,000 feet of drifts, tunels and shafts showing immense ore body

Destined to become large and continuous dividend payer.

The Equitable Gold Mining Co.'s properties consist of three mines, known as the North Bonanza, Flowery and Kimbark. They are located in Six Mile Canon, less than four miles from Virginia City, Nevada, which is the nearest railroad station.

Years ago, over three hundred thousand dollars of development work was done upon the mines—so they are not mere "prospects" but actual mines. This work was done under the personal supervision of competent engineers, and was paid for by the owners of the mines themselves; thus giving double assurance that the work was well done and that the expenditure was justified.

The Main Shaft (triple compartment, 9x16 feet in the clear) is down seven hundred feet. From this shaft, running along the vein matter, east and west, are four drifts, at different levels, having a combined length (including the Rule winze and the tunnel) of 2,850 feet.

In addition to the above there are four small shafts, with a combined depth of about 800 feet; 535 feet of tunnels, and at least 500 feet of cross-cuts, upraises, etc.

All told, there is 4,650 feet of underground work—the most of which is in ore. Here is nearly one mile of openings in mineralized rock.

It is conservatively estimated by competent and reliable engineers and practical miners that there is developed an ore body of at least One Million Five Hundred Thousand Tons!

As a further evidence of the large amount of work done there is from 75,000 to 100,000 tons of ore on the dumps at the different surface openings—ore that, with modern cheapened processes, can be converted into gold bullion at a profit.

THE TITLE

Title to the Flowery and North Bonanza mines is by patent from the United States government, while the title of the Kimbark is by location and possession.

The Equitable Company obtained the Flowery and North Bonanza mines, both of which are patented, by purchase—the payments therefore to be made out of a share of the net proceeds of the mines. The Company has a written contract, duly recorded, for a deed, and is in possession of the properties and is now operating them. The sum of $2,000 was paid on the contract, September 30th, 1902, and partial payments have since been made. The Company is entitled to $4.25 per ton as cost of mining and milling. One-half of all over and above this $4.25 per ton goes to the former owners till they receive the total sum of $105,000, without interest. There is no stipulation as to amount of work to be done within any specified time—and no proceeds, no pay. The Company can therefore pay it in one year or it can pay it in ten years. With this exception the Company is free from debt. Its policy is to pay as it goes. In this way it has no fear of financial embarrassments. The title to the Kimbark is by "location," under the mining laws of the United States. Work enough has already been done to entitle the Company to a patent, which in due time will be obtained.

Recent Development Work

Since the Company acquired the property, it has put up poles and wires for a distance of one mile for the transmission of electric power from the Truckee River Electric Power Plant. By this means unlimited power for mining, hoisting and milling is obtained.

It has built a dwelling house for the manager, a large boarding house for the miners, a barn, a power house and blacksmith shop.

It has put an electric hoist and skip into the 300-tunnel; has purchased ore cars and the necessary tools for mining purposes.

It has acquired the Kimbark ground, adjoining the Flowery and North Bonanza mines, and is now developing the property by driving a tunnel.

Dry Placer Miner, formerly of California.

This company has the right, without royalty payments, to use the new patent machine upon all the land it may own, acquire by lease, or operate, in Arizona. We invite special attention to the great commercial value and profit of this machine, and what can be accomplished by it.

What This Machine Will Do

For the first time in the history of gold mining a machine has been invented which will handle the dry placer gold gravel without water, and in large quantities. This machine will save 98 per cent of all the gold in the gravel, and will do it at a lower working cost than by any existing process. It is operated by a small, compact engine, using crude oil as fuel. A complete plant, capable of handling 300 tons per day will weigh less than 1,200 pounds.

To secure this gold only those placer lands could be worked, which could command large supplies of water, hence the immense bodies of dry placer lands remote from water have never been worked.

Fifteen Hundred Millions in Gold

The United States has yielded nineteen hundred millions in gold, of which fifteen hundred millions—or more than 75 per cent.—were the product of its placers.

Ninety per cent. of the world's total gold supply has been taken from placers by processes which have admittedly lost the bulk of the values.

Simplicity of Machine — its Method of Operation

The machine is so extremely simple in construction and operation that any intending investor can operate it instantly. He can take a peck or more of sand, either ordinary house of sea sand, or such as is found in the placer lands of Arizona and California, put into this sand ten or a hundred pieces of gold as small as the point of a toothpick, and from that to the head of an ordinary pin, mix the sand and the gold thoroughly, turn them into the hopper or feed of the machine, and in a few seconds the machine will separate the gold from the gravel and recover from 98 to 100 per cent of the gold. It is an absolute, infallible, ocular demonstration of the merits of the machine. It has solved the problem of handling sand or gravel containing gold in regions remote from water.

Cost of Handling Material

Each plant is portable, weighs less than 1,200 pounds and can be easily moved by a few laborers.

The two greatest authorities in the world on the moving of material are "Haswell" and "Trautwine." They say in their standard publications that a laborer can shovel horizontally, 12 feet, vertically 6 feet for 50 feet haul 17 cubic yards in 10 hours.

A well known engineer in his work for the U. S. Government at Sandy Hook, moved 18 cubic yards, 100 feet haul in 10 hours at a cost of 10 cents per cubic yard, paying laborers $1.75 per day.

The dry placer gold-bearing sands of California, Arizona and New Mexico are handled quite as easily as those of Sandy Hook.

Ten laborers can easily supply one machine with 204 cubic yards of gravel in 12 hours, working at the same speed as shown by Haswell, Trautwine or at Sandy Hook.

Placer work on above basis would cost about 11 1-3c. per cubic yard.

Do You Want Monthly Dividends ?

We make a special offer of a limited number of shares of stock at this time, because the company requires immediately sufficient to build several machines to operate in the field.

Every machine at work will increase the intrinsic value of the stock.

Twenty machines in the field will increase the price and value of the stock more than double the present offering, and every additional machine means a further increase in price and value.

The Company intends to divide its net earnings every month, so that the stockholders may count absolutely on receiving monthly dividends in proportion to monthly earnings.

THE ROSE OF THE RING

It was Frank's death-knell; but they did not know it—until long afterwards.

CHAPTER XXIII.

"To love once, with me, is to love for ever."

Rose had uttered those words very softly, and without raising her eyes to Marc's face.

The syllables had escaped her unawares, half dreamily, and a sudden flush came to her brow lest he should have read what was in her heart.

"What do you know of love?" he said, trying to catch a glimpse of her face; then, in an earnest tone, he added: "Not much, I hope, Rose."

She did not answer. How could she tell him that all the worship of her life was laid at his feet—that she loved him with a love which would last to eternity?

Mrs. Netherby looked at Rose with a smile. She had noticed the flush which had risen to the young face, the shy drooping of the violet eyes, and had put her own construction on the girl's silence—that silence which is the first sweet language of love.

"Though he has not yet awakened to the fact, he loves her," the widow thought, as she watched her godson descend the steps, with Rose's hand clasped in his own. "She is worthy to fill the most sacred place in his heart. He might search to the world's end and find no fairer woman on whom to bestow his name."

Rose enjoyed the long ride with Marc.

The verdure of spring was all around them; the air seemed laden with a balmy incense and the fragrance of hawthorn and of dew-bespangled moss.

In the hedge-banks the violets had spread a purple carpet, and in the meadows beyond the pink-tipped daisies were peeping up at the sun.

A neck-to-neck race, with half a dozen leaps over the blossoming hedges, had brought a rich glow to her cheeks, her eyes sparkled, and her hair, tossed about in the breeze, rippled to her shoulders in a golden shower.

"Who would not feel happy in the sweet springtide?" she exclaimed, when the race was over, reining up to thrust her sunny curls under her hat. "I feel happier to-day than I have ever felt in my life. Everything is so beautiful."

"Do you love best that which is beautiful?" he asked, smiling into her shining eyes.

"Yes," she answered, stooping to pat her horse's neck, "thanks to your early training."

"Then I must be a dreadful blot on the landscape," he said, plucking a sprig of pink-and-white blossom that was just above their heads. "There is nothing lovely about me except this flower."

He held the blossom out to her, gazing deep into her eyes as she took the fragrant cluster from his hand.

"There is something better than the beauty of a flower," she answered, her tones very low.

And then, as though she wished her words to be forgotten, she put her horse to a gallop, turning a laughing face towards Marc.

He noticed that she did not let the flowers drop from her clasp. She held them until she had returned to the Court and he had helped her to dismount.

When she entered the house, he saw them still in her hand.

Could he have followed her to her room, he would have been surprised at the care she bestowed on those few spring blossoms.

Her gaze rested lovingly on the delicate buds, and more than once she lifted them to her lips.

"I will never part with them!" she thought, as she placed them in a little vase of water on her dressing-table. "How sweet they are, and how tenderly he looked at me when he gave them!"

She hastily changed her riding-habit for a black dress, and, smoothing her curls into something like order, she hurried down to luncheon.

Marc did not leave until late in the afternoon, and then with the understanding that he was to dine at the Court on the following day.

"You ought to stay here altogether," Rose had said, giving him his gloves in the hall. "I do not like the idea of your putting up at an inn—especially when we are so dreadfully in want of a guest."

"Take care!" had been his laughing retort. "There is danger that I may wear out my welcome. Whenever I am not painting, I shall be with you."

He kept his word.

During the days that followed, he was her constant companion.

Their long rides and walks were taken without Mrs. Netherby, who was glad to escape the fatigue of bodily exercise, contenting herself with a drive in the pony-chaise, or sometimes meeting them on their way home.

The mauve and white lilacs were waving above the hedgerows before Marc realised that any event might change the current into which his life had drifted—drifted with hardly any knowledge of his own, and yet bringing him to such a state of dream-like peace.

Together they had watched the gradual unfolding of the spring, their pulses throbbing in unison with the awakening earth—and now the year was in the fullness of its first and fairest bloom.

Marc had finished all the sketches he had commenced when, on a previous occasion, he had been in the vicinity of Drayton Court.

The views were mostly of ruins—crumbling battlements and deep-arched cloisters, with here and there a clump of yew trees or pines.

He was painting a scene fairer than any of these—an azure sky, and a rippling brook; a girl bending over the water.

"Will it soon be finished?" Rose asked, as she half knelt, half reclined, on the flowery bank.

"Are you tired?" he said, pausing in his work, and looking with deeper interest at the lovely, living face, with its frame of sun-tinged hair. "Would you like me not to do anything more to the picture? I am afraid I have wearied you by letting you sit for so long. I ought not to have exacted so much from you."

"Oh, no, I did not mean that," she replied. "It is rest—sweet rest, to be here, watching you paint, and to know I am, in a way, helping you. It is all so beautiful—the flowers, the sunshine, the ripple of the brook, and the birds singing overhead. Most of all, it is beautiful to see you sitting there, and to realize that after our long separation we are together again—you the great artist, and I your model."

No dimness had come to her eyes, but there was a trembling, as of tears, in her voice.

In the overflowing of her heart she could have wept, and yet have found gladness in weeping.

She hardly knew what had come to her. The fragrance, the soft stir of life in the air, appeared to have cast a spell about her, and above it all there seemed to rise her love for the man seated at his easel, among the reeds, his bronzed face turned towards her in the sunlight.

The brook flowed between them, al-

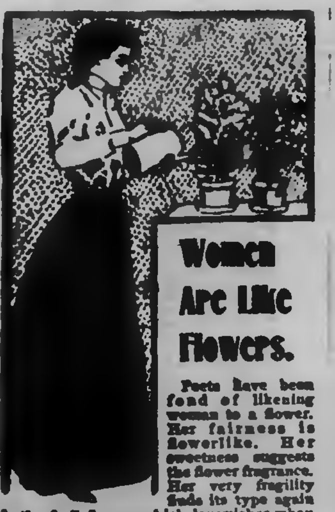
108 YEARS OF AGE

Lives in Montreal and is Still Hale and Hearty

Montreal, Dec. 17—Montreal to-day discovered that it has a citizen who has reached the ripe old age of 108 years and is still hale and hearty. He is Mr. Timothy Collins, born in Cork, Ireland, in 1795, and he is by several years the oldest resident in the Province of Quebec. Mr. Collins came to Canada in 1815 and has resided in and around Montreal ever since.

In conversation with a press representative Mr. Collins referred to a number of interesting incidents that occurred in the twenties and thirties. In 1819, on November 8, a series of earthquakes occurred, followed by a terrible cyclone, during which a downfall of matter that seemed like soot, caused considerable damage. Two days later a still greater earthquake occurred, preceded by almost entire darkness.

In the same year the first paper to appear in Montreal came out, and was known as the Canadian Spectator.



Women Are Like Flowers.

Poets have been fond of likening woman to a flower. Her fairness is flowerlike. Her sweetness suggests the flower fragrance. Her very fragility finds its type again in the frail flower, which languishes when neglected, and is so easily destroyed. It is a pretty simile and almost as perfect as poetry.

All women love flowers, and every woman who grows them knows that their health depends on daily care. Not alone are water and sunshine necessary to the health of the plant. Their leaves and roots must be guarded from the parasites which soon destroy the flower's beauty and undermine its life.

If a woman would care for herself as she does for her plants she would preserve her beauty and retain her strength far beyond the period when the average woman looks old and feels older than she looks.

THE GREAT SECRET

Of woman's preservation of her beauty lies in the intelligent care of the womanly health. So close is the relation between the health of the delicate womanly organs and the health of the whole body, that whenever the feminine functions are deranged or disturbed the consequences are felt by every nerve in the body. Severe headache, backache, pain in the side, and bearing-down pains are borne with by so many thousands of women that one who is in sound health is a rare exception. Most women would give anything to know how to be cured. The way is very plain. Follow the path made by more than a half a million women who have been perfectly cured of womanly ills and weakness.

"I believe I owe my life to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Pleasant Pellets,'" says Mrs. Maria G. Haysel, writing from Brookland, D. C. "Six years ago, after the birth of one of my children, I was left in a weak, run-down condition. My health seemed utterly gone. I suffered from nervousness, female weakness and rheumatism, and I suffered everything one could suffer from these complaints. Life was a burden. I doctored with three different physicians and got no relief. I tried several patent medicines, all with the same result. I began to get worse, and to add to the complications I suffered terribly from constipation. I chanced to see one of your advertisements and concluded to try the above remedies. I commenced to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Pleasant Pellets' and began to improve right away, and continued improving and gaining in strength. I cannot express the relief, it was so great. Seven months later my little daughter was born without much trouble. I feel that I would never have been able to endure my confinement had it not been for the help I received from Dr. Pierce's medicines. My baby was a fine, healthy child, and the only one I have ever been able to nurse. She is now two years old and I have never had to take any medicine since, so I feel that your medicine has made a lasting cure with me. I owe so much in thanks, it would be impossible for me to express by word or pen how thankful I am to God and Dr. Pierce."

NOTHING IS SURER

Than the effect of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It makes weak women strong, sick women well. It regulates the periods, stops disagreeable drains, heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness. It prepares the wife for motherhood, gives her vigor and physical strength, so that the birth hour is practically painless. It is the best of tonics because it contains no alcohol, neither opium, cocaine, nor any other narcotic. For working women in the home, store or schoolroom it is an invaluable medicine. It quiets the nerves, increases the appetite, and causes restful and refreshing sleep. Nursing mothers will find no tonic so beneficial to mother and child as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

WHAT SHALL I DO?

That question is often on a woman's lips, for of her it is expected that she shall be ready to do something in any emergency in the home. When that question refers to health, sickness or disease, the answer will be found in Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. This great work contains 1008 large pages, and is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of customs and mailing only. Send 21 one-cent stamps for the book bound in paper or 31 stamps for the volume in cloth binding. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Storm King Group of Mines

TO CANADIAN INVESTORS

The property comprising what is known as the STORM KING GROUP OF MINES offers an attractive and safe investment. The property is the richest in the country and we believe it would be difficult to secure an investment that promises better returns. The following is a description of the mines written by Capt. A. M. Paul, whose reputation as an expert in mining matters is known far and near.

These properties are situated in the Cable Cove Mining District, about fifteen miles north of Sumpter, Oregon, and about one mile northwest of the Baby McKee mine, about two miles northwest of the Last Chance, the Alpine, the Imperial and the California mines.

The properties in this report consist of seven claims. The names of the seven claims being as follows: The Eureka and the Honest Dollar. These two claims are on the same vein. Adjoining these two claims and paralleling them on the northwest is another vein upon which there are two claims known as the Jessie and Golden Rule, and paralleling them on the northwest there is another vein upon which there are two claims, known as the Storm King and the Ozone. The last claim of this group lies to the northwest of the last two named, and is adjoining them. This claim is the Shannon Bell.

In making my report I will commence with the two first named claims of the group, the Eureka and Honest Dollar. The development on these claims consists of a tunnel ninety-seven feet in length, running along the course of the vein, showing two feet ten inches of ore in the top of the tunnel and a little over three feet in the bottom, which assays giving values of from $9.66 to $10 per ton in gold. About four hundred feet in a southwesterly direction there is a shaft on the vein ten feet deep, showing the vein to be from one to two inches wide on the surface and about twelve inches wide in the bottom of the shaft, in which assays give values of from $3.76 to $40 per ton in free milling gold ore.

This vein is exposed by small shafts and open cuts for a distance of fifteen hundred feet, and the course of this vein is north, ten degrees east, and the vein cuts the formation, showing it to be a true fissure, and the formation is granite. This vein shows in places a width of from ten to fifteen feet of mineralized matter, commonly called vein matter, but which is caused by hot solutions from below.

I will now pass to the Jessie and Golden Rule. There has been very little work done upon these two claims, there being one discovery shaft ten feet deep, showing ore on all sides of the shaft, and running in value of from $4 upwards. It is my opinion that with development, this, too, will prove valuable property.

The work on the Storm King and Ozone consists of a tunnel near the point of discovery and is driven along the vein for a distance of one hundred and eighty feet, showing ore all the way from the surface to the face of the tunnel, and averaging in width from six to eighteen inches. Three assays give the following values, $12.50. This being a general sample taken from the dump. The other two assays are $62.66 and $79.66 respectively, thus being the assorted ore for shipment. The course of this tunnel and vein are north, ten degrees west, and the vein cuts the trend of the formation obliquely (which is granite) and by driving this tunnel five or six hundred feet on the present course it will intersect a quartzite reef (which is running north, twenty degrees east) which would make this a contact vein between granite and quartzite, and should produce a large body of ore, at the intersection of the contact.

The only work done upon the Shannon Bell, the last claim of this group, is the location work, and is not enough to allow of a report being made.

There is water for power purposes one mile from the property, and timber on the ground, of a very fine quality, sufficient to run the mine for many years to come.

All the assays mentioned in this report were made by the assayer, of the Imperial mine at my request, and the ore was taken by me from the properties mentioned.

I will state that I have been a practical miner since 1870, and am now the manager and superintendent of the Imperial mine in this district.

(Signed) CAPTAIN A. M. PAUL.

CHRISTIANITY AS CHARACTER.

John P. Peters, D.D., St. Micheal's Church, New York City.

He that believeth on Him is not judged; he that believeth not hath been judged already.—St. John iii. 18.

There is absolutely not one single doctrine that is, according to Jesus Christ's teaching, essential to salvation. No dogma can save, no heresy of doctrine in itself condemns; no forms can save, and even the lack of all connection with the visible Church itself, its forms and sacraments, does not of necessity judge a man.

Do not misunderstand. Doctrines are not useless, neither are forms. Right doctrines and right forms are of inestimable value, but they are not essentials because they are the means to an end, and that end is life, character. Christ Jesus came to help us become one with God. Belief on Him is of no use if it mean only that you hold the correct doctrine of His incarnation, the atonement, regeneration, the eucharist, the Church, etc. Flatly, if that is all the faith a man has, if his belief do not involve oneness with God in the Spirit of Christ, he might exactly as well believe in the incarnation of Buddha. The one would help him as much or as little as the other. Saving faith is not belief in a fact, not belief in the facts of the life and death of our Lord, but such a real belief in His life that we come into union with Him; and such union with Christ is union with God the Father and eternal life.

The possibility of eternal life lies in the development of our divine nature, its growth through the infinite ages as we develop more and more in the image of God. It is a constant growth of happiness; a growth of love, of truth, of all the possibilities of the glorious divine nature within us, the feeble consciousness of which even now gives us a sense of power, of grandeur, of happiness, of satisfaction which nothing else can give. But this eternal felicity of divine development belongs only to the man who gives play to his soul—that is, who seeks to develop the divine, the good and the noble that is in him, who believes with his life on the name of the only begotten Son of God.

A man that makes himself a beast, who surrenders himself to the beastly nature that is within him, who chooses the ignoble, the sensuous, the selfish, the dishonorable, is the man who does not believe on the name of the only begotten Son of God, however loud his protestations to the contrary. That is the man who is becoming a beast, who is forfeiting his divine nature and with it every possibility of the eternal and glorious development of the sons of God.

The possibilities of heaven lie in the character of a man, in the aim and purpose of his life; and so it is that God sent His Son, not to judge the world, but to save the world by a life and death, belief in which might help and mould our characters. If a man make choice of Jesus Christ as his master and his pattern, believing in Him as his Saviour from evil, then he has found a help, a succor which priests and prophets longed for and could not find.

All men, whether they will or not, are preparing for the future life as surely as the boy is preparing to be the man. Every man the whole world over is developing the worldly, devilish, beastly side of his nature, or the true, loving, divine side of it. Jesus has shown us what is divine, what we should aim at, what we can be. Belief in Him means the acceptance of that life as our pattern; that we judge right and wrong, good and bad, by no other standard than the perfect standard of our Lord Jesus Christ. To believe on the name of the Son of God is to aim to make our lives like His; to do what we honestly believe that He would have done in our place. And so to believe in Him means to obtain incomparable aid in the hard struggle against the beastly and devilish part of our nature, which, I take it, every man, at least in the moment when he stops and thinks, would like to conquer if he had the strength.

We know God through man, for in the man Jesus of Nazareth was God revealed, and as we know God through man, so only through man may we reach God. Our belief in Jesus Christ, if it be a true belief, is not merely a belief in the one perfect manifestation of God in man; it is a belief in the divine which He manifested. It is a belief in love and truth wherever we find them, a love for and kinship and communion with all good men who manifest in their lives love and truth.

The democracy of the kingdom of heaven—and remember that the kingdom of heaven as Jesus used the expression, meant something in this earth and not merely something in the world to come, and that no man enters the kingdom of heaven in the future life except as he strives to enter it here—the democracy of the kingdom of heaven is the most levelling democracy that men have ever imagined. There is not the shadow of a distinction of rank, wealth, birth or race. All these material and worldly distinctions are cast aside. Full belief in the Son of God means full brotherhood with all the sons of God. The true test of our love of and belief in the only begotten Son of God is our love of and belief in our fellow-men.

The London World has the temerity to advance the following opinion:—"When do women find time to read aught save the novel which others of the set find amusing, and the organ of the special sport to which they are devoted? Never was there a time when books were more plentiful and reading made more tempting; but the dames and damsels who read nowadays are regarded with positive awe, as persons either singularly gifted or just a trifle eccentric."

That must have been written by a man who talked geology to a woman when she was thinking of something more personally interesting.

Out Into the World.

It was in Cairo that they first met, in a narrow street, amid a motley collection of Arabs and native Egyptians, Dervishes and Orientals. She and her mother found themselves straying one day from their hotel.

"May I assist you?" he observed, and, thankfully accepting his proffered aid, they had permitted him to escort them to a place of safety.

It could not have been long after this that they came across each other again in Rome. There is a little, straggling Roman street, or way, that leads off from the Coliseum.

It was there that their eyes met. His were large and dark and grave; hers blue and a trifle confused.

This incident, however, put him in a different mood for the rest of the day. He wondered at what hotel she was stopping. He wondered where she came from, whither she was going. He had started out on his travels months before, with a vague, undefined sense of loneliness, a desire for companionship.

New York, he thought, was the most lonesome place in the world. Perhaps he would run across someone, somewhere, who would be a treasure of friendship, or love—who could tell?

And now that he had seen her, he felt somehow that she would fulfil those requirements. This girl, with the serene blue eyes that yet showed depths of humor and courage and that certain quality of innate refinement which reflects itself from some eyes, disturbed him greatly.

Who was she?

It was going down the Rhine that they met again.

He became conscious of a gaze—what is the subtle psychology of that look beaming upon us from the unknown? He had turned, and there indeed she was, with the golden sunset gleam lighting up her almost classic face—classic save for the rather large mouth which, when she smiled, gave to her features just the irregularity that was needed.

He bowed again, and in a few moments more found himself seated by the ladies' side, talking commonplace language, and thinking uncommonplace thoughts.

When they met again it was in Paris, if not by appointment, at least by the aid of a certain sort of understanding. She had remarked casually that they expected to be in Paris on a certain date, and he had replied that he was glad that this was so, for he expected to be there himself at that time, although only at that instant his determination to do this had defined itself.

In Cairo and Rome they were to each other merely travelers from the same land, bound together by the distant claims of patriotism. On the Rhine, they were acquaintances. In Paris, they became friends, and then——

On the homeward voyage, when, one night, they stood by the rail and watched the moon come up over the waters, he held her hand in his, and said:

"Dearest, I knew that if I went out into the world I should find you; I knew it instinctively—I must have known it. I was so lonesome living all those years in New York by myself—and now, to think I have found you, at last!"

And she replied:

"Do you know, I felt much the same way. I, too, was lonesome. No one in New York seemed to satisfy my longings. I sometimes wonder why we have never met before."

He smiled. "Do you want to know the reason?" he asked. "I can tell you for the other day your mother told me the street and the number where you lived."

"Indeed," she said, "what has that to do with it? What is the reason?"

"Because," he replied, with a smile, "all these years I have lived next door to you."—Tom Masson, in "Smart Set."

A Startling Revelation

The Friends of Miss May McKenzie of London were Astonished to hear that she had gone into Consumption

This sad intelligence came as a shock to Miss McKenzie's many friends. In the early fall she contracted a heavy cold which developed rapidly into Catarrh, and finally made such rapid advances that the bronchial tubes and lungs became affected.

Although the doctors said nothing short of a change of residence to the south would benefit, on the advice of a Dundas street druggist Miss McKenzie decided to thoroughly test Catarrhozone, which is warranted to cure all diseases of the throat, lungs and bronchial tubes.

Miss McKenzie says: "After my druggist had recommended Catarrhozone I spoke to my friends about it and they all said it was such a good remedy that I commenced forthwith to inhale it five or six times each day. I breathed it deeply into my lungs, and felt its beneficial action very quickly. It seemed to go where other remedies did not reach, and was so pleasant and convenient that I did not mind using it very frequently, which, probably, was the cause of it curing my obstinate case so quickly. Certainly no case of Catarrh or Bronchitis should go uncured if the sufferer can get Catarrhozone, which is a sovereign remedy, worthy of the highest recommendations."

Miss McKenzie's case needs no enlargement. She was in a critical condition, apparently beyond the aid of doctors' medicines.

Catarrhozone has cured her, and others in her condition should no longer experiment with uncertain, untried treatments, but should turn at once to Catarrhozone, and in it they will find relief and cure unobtainable by other means. Remember the name, Catarrhozone. Complete outfit guaranteed to cure, Price $1.00. Small size 25 cents. Druggists, or N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

Prevalence of Profanity

We do not know whether profane swearing is distinctively a Canadian vice or not, but we do know that it is disgustingly prevalent. As a habit it deserves the reprobation of all sane and healthy minds. It is a coarse and vulgar practice, even regarded apart from ethical considerations. The small boy uses profane language because he thinks it smart to dare the canons of profanity in speech, but too often when he becomes a man he ceases to put away this childish and revolting thing. What he does at first from a false and immature motive becomes later in life a confirmed habit that often marks him to others as a person of much coarser fibre than he really is. A glaring example was given yesterday in front of The Times office, when two young men made the air blue with foul oaths. The fact is profanity is alarmingly prevalent among the boys and even the girls of the town.

VERDI NIGHT

Splendid Concert Given By the Band Last Night

Among this season's many musical events, none have been more enjoyable than the "Evening with Verdi" given last night in the Opera House under the auspices of the 57th Band. The affair was admirably conducted throughout, and never did the Band exhibit the careful training of Mr. Gliddon to more advantage than last evening.

The address given by Mr. Burnham "The Motif of Verdi's Operas,' was handled in a thoroughly comprehensive and masterly manner and was listened to with rapt attention. The solo given by Miss Helen Davies, "Ernani, Ernani, Involami" evoked much applause, as also did the solo, "Forget, Forgive," given by Mrs. Bardley-Wilmot.

The various selections from Verdi's Operas given by the Band displayed marked artistic taste on the part of the performers and careful attention to details.

Altogether the affair was a most brilliant one and the Band is to be congratulated on the success attained.

The following was the programme:

The Motif of Verdi's Operas...... ....
Mr. Burnham.
Grand Selection ...."Ernani"
Anvil Chorus ...."Il Trovatore"

Mrs. Bardley-Wilmot.
Selection... ....Reminincences of Verdi
Introducing Excerpts from the following Operas: "Il Trovatore," "Riggoletto," "Macbeth Simmon Boccanegra," "Nabucodonosor," "Traviate" "En Ballo-in-Maschera."

REV. W L. ARMITAGE LEAVING.

Has Accepted an Appointment as Vicar of Picton

The news that the Rev. W. L. Armitage who has accepted an appointment at Picton, and will leave town in a couple or three weeks, will be received with general regret by the people of Peterborough and surrounding district. During Mr. Armitage's rectorate All Saints' congregation has prospered, and it has become so large that a new church is badly needed, and will no doubt be provided in the near future.

Mr. Armitage has been appointed Vicar of Picton, in succession to Rev. Canon Loucks, who still retains the title of rector. He was the unanimous choice of the congregation of St. Mary Magdalene.

It is needless to say in his departure from Peterborough Mr. Armitage will carry with him the hearty good wishes of the entire community regardless of creed.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Movements of the People—What They Are Doing and Saying

—Mr. O. B. Shortly, of Toronto, has been appointed Superintendent for the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., of New York at Belleville, Trenton and Picton.

—Mr. and Mrs. John McCrae, of Manvers, who have resided in Calgary for about six years, have returned and are the guests of Miss Chambers, Water street, Mrs. McCrae's sister.

—We are pleased to learn that Mr. A. C. McCallum, who has been connected with the engineering department of the Canada Foundry Co., Toronto, for a year or so, has returned to town, having accepted a similar position with the Wm. Hamilton Manufacturing Co.

—The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Matthews will deeply sympathize with them in their anxiety over the serious illness of their little son, who has been suffering from croup. Last night, the little fellow was better, and it is thought he will be out of danger soon.

—Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Jamieson have the sympathy of their friends in the illness of their daughter, Miss Zetta, who was stricken on Tuesday last, and is very low. Her condition last night was favorable, and strong hopes are now entertained of her recovery.

TEARFUL OR CHEERFUL?

Whether a woman is tearful or cheerful depends not on what she has materially, but what she is physically. Many an indulgent husband is driven almost to despair by the tearful outburst of a wife who has "everything she wants." He wants to know what's the matter. But the wife can't tell. She only knows that she is depressed and despondent.

$500 REWARD FOR WOMEN

WHO CANNOT BE CURED.

Backed up by over a third of a century of remarkable and uniform cures, a record such as no other remedy for the diseases and weaknesses peculiar to women ever attained, the proprietors of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription now feel fully warranted in offering to pay $500 in legal money of the United States, for any case of Leucorrhea, Female Weakness, Prolapsus, or Falling of Womb which they cannot cure. All they ask is a fair and reasonable trial of their means of cure.

Mrs. Alice Adams, of Laboratory, Washington Co., Pa., says: "With many thanks I write to let you know how I am. I can say by God's help and your help I am well. I have taken six bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and two of his 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and I can do all my work. I can't praise your medicine too highly. I will recommend your medicine as long as I live. If any one doubts this give them my address."

NO ULTIMATUM SENT YET, JAPAN DELAYS HER REPLY, RUSSIA'S NEW MOVE

British Officers Are Volunteering for Service With the Island Kingdom, Russia Trying to Avoid a Rupture with Japan.

London, Dec. 19.—The Times correspondent at Pekin says the Russians are using every means in their power to induce China to come to an agreement regarding the Russian occupation of Manchuria. The Chinese Ministers at St. Petersburg and Tokio both have telegraphed to the Waiwupu (the Board of Foreign Affairs), urging it to agree quickly, saying that now or never is the opportunity. The message fell flat, it being known that both were prompted by the Russian Foreign Office. The French Minister is re-echoing the official declaration at Paris, even at this juncture, when Russia's reply to Japan's irreducible minimum demands is known to be unfavorable, and declares that the negotiations promise a pacific issue.

THE RUSSIAN FLEET.

Bizerta, Tunis, Dec. 19.—The Russian naval forces now anchored here, consisting of a battleship, will be reinforced in a few days by six torpedo boats and proceed hence to the Far East.

AMERICAN FRIENDSHIP.

Tokio, Dec. 19.—The publication here of the letter of Mrs. Anita Newcomb McGee, President of the Association of Spanish-American War Nurses, offering Japan the services of trained nurses in the event of war with Russia, is warmly appreciated as a mark of the traditional American friendship for Japan.

WOULD BLOCK JAPAN.

The Premier still studiously avoids an answer to the questions of United States Minister Allen in regard to Wiju.

Bombay, Dec. 19.—General De la Rey made a speech to the Boer prisoners at Admadnager yesterday, and succeeded in persuading all but ten of them to sign the oath of allegiance to Great Britain. General De la Rey spoke for five hours.

These prisoners, numbering several hundred, have steadfastly refused to take the oath of allegiance, since they had not been parties to the peace proposals, and have been therefore refused entrance to South Africa.

General De la Rey will be best remembered for his exploit of capturing General Lord Methuen in the closing days of the war.

London, Dec. 19.—In reply to an inquiry of the Associated Press regarding a report from Tien Tsin that Japan had sent an ultimatum to Russia Baron Hayashi, the Japanese Minister to Great Britain, said this evening: "An ultimatum has not been sent."

Some British officers have volunteered their services to Japan in the event of war. Baron Hayashi, the Japanese Minister, points out that the rules of the Japanese service preclude the employment of foreigners on active service.

A report circulated regarding British preparations for a naval mobilization is declared at the Admiralty to be unfounded.

RUSSIA'S NEW MOVE.

Paris, Dec. 21.—Russia has made another move towards avoiding a rupture with Japan, and there is reason to believe it will be followed in a few days by the submission of a second proposition tending to ameliorate the present strained situation.

Tokio, Dec. 20.—Japan's answer to Russia has not yet been sent. Owing to the indisposition of the Russian Minister, Baron de Rosen, it will probably be delayed for a day or two.

THE RUSSIAN PEOPLE ARE OPPOSED TO WAR

So Says Russian Diplomat Who Has Just Returned From Europe

Chicago, Dec. 21.—"If there is war between Russia and Japan it will not be of Russia's making," said Baron A. A. Schlippenback, Russian Consul in Chicago, yesterday afternoon. Baron Schlippenback had just returned to Chicago, after an absence of more than four months. He spent all his time in Russia, visiting relatives and attending to official business.

"There is absolutely no sentiment for war in Russia," he continued. "The people of Russia know what war means. If they go to war with any nation at this age it will be because they are forced to it. They are not ready to fight over any question. The Czar is a man of peace. His counsellors are also men of peace. They will not fight until every art of diplomacy has been exhausted. The sentiment in Japan may be different. I see the newspapers of this country speak as though war were a possibility.

RUSSIA WANTS ONLY PEACE.

"I do not know whether they represent the true sentiment of the people. Perhaps they do. There are times when the people of a new country are anxious to display to the world what they are capable of. But as for Russia, the war sentiment is not there and if the newspapers of any country have led the people to believe my countrymen are anxious for a fight they have revealed a sentiment that does not exist. And I suppose I may be excused for saying it is not fear for Japan that makes them peaceable. They know what war is, that is all, and they are anxious to avoid it."

Baron Schlippenbach was then asked how the affairs in the east would be settled.

"That is a question I cannot answer," he said. "It has been many years since I was in Japan. The country has changed much since. I have lost track of the situation in the far east and I cannot tell how the troubles will be settled."

BARON IN EXCELLENT HEALTH.

Baron Schlippenbach is in excellent health, and the leave of absence certainly did him good. "I have many relatives in Russia," he went on, "and I saw them all on the trip. I had also considerable private business to attend to and when that was done I had little time left. Of course it was necessary for me to pay my respects to the Minister of Foreign Affairs, and I found him anxious to hear about Chicago. The city's reputation for push and energy has travelled all over Europe, but few people have correct impressions about it.

It was expected Baron Schlippenbach would be received by the Czar. In fact, the news reached this country that the baron had been received.

"It was a mistake," said Baron Schlippenback. "The Czar was not in St. Petersburg when I was there, and of course I was not received." Baron Schlippenbach sailed Aug. 4. He returned to this country the first of the month and arrived in Chicago Saturday.

Montreal, Dec. 21.—When seen this morning, Japanese Consul Nosse said that applications continue to reach him from Canadians who are anxious to participate in any hostilities which may eventuate from the present strained relations existing between Japan and Russia.

The applications for the most part have been received from militia officers in Canada who have already had considerable experience in matters of that nature.

Two more were in Mr. Nosse's morning mail, making forty-nine in all.

"These letters have been to me a most gratifying indication of the sympathy which Canadians feel for my country," said Mr. Nosse, "and it begins to look as though I would be able to secure a Canadian contingent for service should hostilities unfortunately result from the present strained relations between Japan and Russia."

FIELDING'S LETTER TO CHAMBERLAIN

Text of Statement by Canadian Minister Read at Leeds

IN FAVOUR OF PREFERENCE

If Principle is Admitted, All Practical Difficulties Can be Solved

London, Dec. 21.—The following is the text of Mr. Fielding's letter to Mr. Chamberlain, as quoted by the latter in his speech at Leeds on Wednesday night. Mr. Fielding asked:

"Do we intend refraining from stating emphatically in reply to some of the statements which have appeared in the press that the position taken up by the Canadian Ministers at the Colonial Conference last year in favor of imperial preferential trade is cordially endorsed by both of the great political parties in Canada? That some difficulties might arise in the arrangement of the details of so large a scheme is to be anticipated, but surely it is not too much to believe that if the principle be approved, the intelligence of the British and Colonial public men can be relied upon to overcome them and put the project into practical form."

GAOL TO THE ALTAR

Young Girl Rescued from a 50-day Term by her Lover

Buffalo Girl Seemed Determined to Live Shamefully

Buffalo, Dec. 21—Carl Runkling yesterday effected the release of Florence Lieder from the penitentiary by pleading that the invitations had been sent out for their wedding on Christmas Eve. Carl is 22 years old, and works as a collector. Florence is only seventeen years old, but she is known by two names in police circles. She had started to serve about 50 days.

On February 5th the girl was picked up in Canal street by an officer. The next morning she was convicted of vagrancy before Justice Rochford. He sent her to the penitentiary for 30 days. Some friends interested themselves, and she was released from the penitentiary after being there a few hours. There was an appeal from the sentence, and Frank Delassio of No. 1280 Lovejoy street, a saloon-keeper, furnished the $500 bail for her. She gave her name through all those proceedings as Flossie Russell.

Six days later the girl was again picked up in Canal street, and arraigned before Justice Rochford. The charge was violating the ordinance prohibiting girls from frequenting disorderly houses. She was convicted, and the justice fixed her $25, with the option of serving it out at $1 a day. Having no money, the girl was taken to the penitentiary, but again she served only a short time.

The so-called guardian angel of the morning court, Mrs. Ross, had undertaken to reform her, and Judge Emery again ordered the girl's release on an appeal. The second time, Chas. Deggert, of No. 75 Locust street, a fireman, gave the $500 bail. The girl's real name was used throughout those proceedings, the other being given as an alias. The girl's home was then given as No. 41 1-2 Lawrence place.

The uncle, Mrs. Ross, and an aunt, used all their influence, and the girl, used all their influence with the girl, and for a time their attempts at reform seemed promising. Through their efforts the hearings on the two appeals were put off from time to time to see how the girl would act. Lately the girl, it is claimed, had fallen wholly back into her old ways, notwithstanding her engagement to Mr. Runkling, which was made in May.

Last Saturday, Mrs. Ross and the girl's aunt, went to the District Attorney's office, and asked that the girl be rearrested. Mr. Coatsworth put the matter into the hands of William J. Curtin, one of his corps, and two bench warrants were issued. The girl was easily found in her old haunts. Judge Emery on being told of the facts, denied the appeals and Florence was taken to the penitentiary to serve the unserved time of both sentences.

Yesterday, her lover and some other persons interested in the couple went to Mr. Curtin. One of the invitations to the wedding next week was shown, and the young man asked what could be done to get her out, so he could marry her. He said the girl's uncle gladly would care for her till the wedding.

Mr. Curtin finally gave in to the young man's pleadings. He brought up the girl's case before Judge Emery again, had the two appeals opened and, he explaining what kind of a Christmas gift was in the Judge's giving, got an order commuting the sentences to the time served.

Then an order for the girl's release was given to the happy young man. He did not take long to get to the penitentiary. After being taken from her cell, the girl began to cry. When she was greeted by her lover outside, she appeared very contrite. They kissed, and as they started away, she turned to one of the keepers, and said, "Goodbye. I'm going to be a good girl now."

CHAMBERLAIN'S POLICY

London, Ont., Dec. 16— Ald. Stevenson, of this city, recently wrote Right. Hon. Joseph Chamberlain for information in regard to certain phases of his fiscal policy, and to-day received a communication from Mr. Chamberlain's private secretary, in which it is stated that the former Colonial Secretary, "cannot commit himself to further details at present, without consulting representatives of all the trades interested, and without an opportunity of referring the matter to the Governments of the colonies interested."

MRS. EDDY CALLS DENTIST

New York, Dec. 21.—Rev. Dr. James M. Buckley, an able Methodist preacher and editor of the Christian Advocate for some time, is fiercely attacking Christian Science and its chief advocate, Mary Baker Eddy. He declares Mrs. Eddy does not practice what she preaches. As an instance he relates that she had a toothache and instead of bringing to bear her fundamental principles she sent out for a dentist. More than that, she was placed under the influence of an anaesthetic so that no pain should be felt while the troublesome tooth was being extracted. Dr. Buckley laid particular stress upon this story, saying it was authentic and could not be disproved.

AN INSULT TO A MINISTER

If Necessary an Entire American Spuadron will Menace Ports of the Enemy

Washington, Dec. 21.—As a result of Minister Leishman's advices respecting the Alexandretta affair the State Department has requested the Navy Department to place a warship at the disposal of Consul Davis, now at Beyroot, upon which he might return to Alexandretta at his pleasure. The Navy Department accordingly cabled instructions to Admiral Cotton, on board the flagship Brooklyn at Alexandria, Egypt, to place a vessel at the disposal of Mr. Davis. It is left to the consul to arrange the time of his reception.

Although Rear Admiral Cotton was not instructed specifically to take the consul back to his post under escort of a squadron, it will not be in opposition to the Navy Department's wishes if both the flagship Brooklyn and the San Francisco proceed to Alexandretta on this mission. It is felt that in view of the indignities offered our consul his return to Alexandretta under the protection of a squadron might prove more salutary in its effect than if only one ship accompanied him.

Acting Secretary of State Adee has taken a firm stand in the matter of the assault upon Consul Davis. He has cabled Minister Leishman to present the facts to the Turkish Government and inform that Government that the case is one seeming to invite an expression of regret and reparation. The State Department does not indicate what measure of reparation is expected, but it is understood the Turkish Government will, by removal or otherwise, punish the offending Turkish officials and compensate Attarian for the losses and injuries he has sustained. The Turkish Government is willing to compensate Attarian and deport him.

It is understood that the main offense is the assault upon the United States Consul, a matter of gravity in international law. The consul has found refuge for the time being at Beyroot, awaiting instructions from the State Department or Minister Leishman.

The information that reaches the department is to the effect that Mr. Davis was acting entirely within his rights and powers and that while engaged in protecting, as was his duty, a naturalized American citizen he was set upon by five Turkish policemen and dragged along the ground. It also appears, incidentally, that upon recovering his footing the consul promptly and soundly thrashed all of the five policemen.

Mr. Leishman, our Minister at Constantinople, under the department's instructions, has made a quick inquiry into the assault and, while the detailed mail report of the investigation has not yet reached the State Department, Acting Secretary Adee felt that the cable advices warranted him in taking positive action.

PREPARING FOR WAR AS A LAST RESOURCE

"United Colombia Committee" Would Plead Then Arbitrate, and Then Fight

Paris, Dec. 19.—The "United Colombian Committee" here gave out a statement today saying that Colombia would first seek through a commission to induce the United States to recognize Colombia's rights under the treaty of 846, second, if the commission fails Colombia will ask for the submission of the question to The Hague Arbitration Court; third, if its submission to The Hague court is refused, Colombia will go to war and rely on the Latin Republics to come to her aid.

DECLARATION OF WAR.

Washington, Dec. 19.—In the Senate yesterday Senator Morgan introduced a resolution declaring that the President has no right to wage war against any foreign power without the consent of Congress, when such country is at peace with the United States; that the provision of the canal treaty between the United States and Panama guaranteeing the independence of the Republic of Panama is in effect a declaration of war with Colombia; that the intervention of the United States in preventing Colombia to suppress the secession of Panama is contrary to the law of neutrality and the law of nations.

THE STORY OF A MINE

Concerning The Sapphire Corundum Company

SOME QUEER FINANCING

How the Peterborough Mine Was Exploited in England by Mr. Hooley

The Times is indebted to Dr. Pigeon for a copy of the Morning Leader, London, England, from which we take the following, which will be of interest to many of our readers:

The affairs of Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Hooley, occupied the attention of the Lord Chief Justice and a special jury the whole of yesterday.

The action was brought by Mrs. Hooley against Mr. Frederick Handel Booth of Mosley street, Manchester, chairman of the Sapphire Corundum Company to recover £300, the balance of the price of 1,250 preferred shares and 2,150 ordinary shares, and a sum of £2,500, the price of 25,000 ordinary shares in that company. Defendant appeared in person.

In explaining the transaction, Mr. Kisch, for the plaintiff, said Mrs. Hooley had no part in the transaction; her husband did all his business in her name.

HISTORY OF THE MINE.

The Sapphire Corundum Company was formed to acquire a property in Canada, which was undoubtedly valuable.

Mr. Hooley took it up, and the defendant, after making his own inquiries, became chairman. In order to obtain a substantial interest in the company he agreed to pay 2s. per share for 6,000 shares. Of that £600 he only paid £300 and he now alleged that that was all he agreed to pay.

In consequence of newspaper attacks all the influential Canadian directors resigned. Mr. Booth went out to Canada, and from what he learned there he came back and told Mr. Hooley that he was perfectly satisfied with the value of the property, and in proof of his belief he agreed to take 25,000 £1 shares at 2s. each.

The defence now was that these 25,000 shares were a gift—that Mr. Hooley agreed to give 100,000 shares to be distributed among the directors and employees and that these 25,000 shares were the first instalment. It was therefore said Mr. Kisch a question of which witness the jury believed.

MR. HOOLEY'S STORY.

Mr. Hooley went into the witness-box and bore out the statements of his counsel.

In cross-examination by the defendant he said he could not remember telling the defendant that he was acting for his wife. He denied that he told defendant that his wife had provided £10,000 working capital. He had repeatedly asked for the balance of £300.

Mr Hooley denied that when he issued the writ he knew that a meeting had been summoned by defendant for the voluntary liquidation of the company. He did not know that Kelly and Mr Tom Lambert, of Nottingham, offered this property at £25,000 or £40,000.

CONDITIONS IN NEW AUSTRALIA COMMONWEALTH

Preferential Trade Has Many Very Warm Advocates--Fiscal Issue Vital

Sydney, Dec. 19.—The first Parliament of the Commonwealth of Australia has come to an end after a life of two years and nine months, of which but six months counted as recess. The general election will take place in December, and the respective leaders have just opened the fight proper, though Mr. George Reid has for some time been displaying his great versatility as a platform orator on behalf of free trade principles. The Premier, Hon. Alfred Deakin, of Victoria, who took office on the recent elevation of Sir E. Barton to the bench of the High Court, made an exhaustive speech to his constituents at Ballarat last week, and was immediately followed by Mr. Reid, at Melbourne. Mr. J. C. Watson, leader of the "Labor" party, has also issued a manifesto, claiming credit for much of the legislation accomplished by the late Parliament. Thanks to Mr. Reid's insistence, the first Commonwealth elections turned in many cases on the question of fiscal policy, Victoria e.g., returning an almost unbroken phlanx of protectionists, while New South Wales was equally solid for free trade. Seeing that the Commonwealth was bound for ten years to return three-fourths of its customs duties to the States, it was evident that the tariff to be adopted must be a compromise among those of the several States, neither so low as to penalize the protectionist communities, nor so high as to destroy revenue. This was, in fact, the actual result. The Government endeavored to shape the tariff upon protectionist principles, without going so far in that direction as had been done by Victoria or Queensland; but the "Labor" party came out of the elections with sufficient strength to hold the balance of power, and while mainly in accord with the Government, succeeded in altering many details of the tariff proposals. The Customs Act was only completed after months of incessant labor and almost interminable discussion of detail. Remembering, however, the many conflicting views and interests that had to be considered in its framing, Mr. Deakin is fairly justified in asserting that had nothing else been accomplished by the first Parliament, this alone might have also constituted a satisfactory record of work. In no State excepting Queensland and Tasmania has the revenue from customs been less than before federation, nor even in New South Wales has the cost of living materially increased.

Federalism Adopted.

Turning to other matters, the three great departments of Customs, Defence and Post and Telegraph have been taken over from the States, the policy of a "white Australia" has been asserted by the restriction of undesirable immigration; the Federal High Court has been established; a scheme of naval defence has been adopted in concert with the Admiralty universal suffrage, women included, has been adopted, and a revision of the boundaries of electorates attempted. One matter which ought certainly to have been settled was the choice of a site for the Commonwealth Capital. The amended Act of Federation included a proviso that the Capital should be within the State of New South Wales but not less than one hundred miles from Sydney. This mischievous restriction of the selecting power, after promoting local jealousies as it was designed to do, has resulted in the Senate preferring one site and the House of Representatives another, so that the question will have to be reconsidered in the next Parliament. An Arbitration and Conciliation Bill was another piece of business not carried to a conclusion, and over this Hon. C. C. Kingston, Minister of Customs, resigned and went into Opposition. The Government, having also lost its leader in each House by Hon. R. E. O'Connor as well as Sir E. Barton accepting a judgeship, is somewhat weakened in personal strength. However, the Premier, in his Ballarat speech, after reviewing the work of the first Parliament, which he describes as not only satisfactory, but under the circumstances, distinctly creditable, declares for fiscal peace and preferential trade with the completion of the work of organization, for which the life of one Parliament has proved to be insufficient. Mr. Reid, on the contrary, claims that little has been accomplished, twits the Government with undue deference to the "Labor" vote, and raises a cry of gerrymander, because the redistribution of seats was not carried out. He preaches free trade, well knowing that the need of revenue would compel him if successful, to maintain the tariff very much as it is, since the Commonwealth has no other source of income, and must return to the States three-fourths of the proceeds.

Penal Settlement.

An Australian grievance, of which we hear something from time to time, is the proximity of the French penal settlement of New Caledonia. A few days ago seven men, apparently from that quarter, were picked up at sea in an open boat, and are now confined at Melbourne to await the action of the French authorities.

Better Times.

The great drought may now be said to be broken up, and the good rains in the next season will ensure the return of prosperity. Already we are reaping the blessings of a good harvest, but in New South Wales agriculture does not count for much. In reply to enquiries by the State Premier, there come from almost every quarter the reply that the demand for labor could be met by local men, so that the hope of work being found for the thousands of men driven into Sydney by the drought is likely to be fulfilled only in a measure. Government relief works, too, have almost ceased, through lack of funds, and the city is still thronged with unemployed. Not in one year can the enormous losses of stock be repaired, and until the pastoral interest is once more fairly on its feet there is bound to be a stagnation in trade. It is most unfortunate that Federation has come at the very height of the distress occasioned by the drought, the inevitable dislocation of State finance giving color to the complaints of the opponents of union, who ascribe to it all the ills from which they suffer, and many that exist only in their imagination. Others again lay all the effects of depression at the door of the State Government. As to providing for future droughts, not one man in a hundred gives it a thought. Practically nothing has been done in the way of irrigation or the conservation of water in good seasons. That, of course, is, according to Australian ideas, a matter for governmental action, but to secure such action nothing of practical effort is apparent. As to storing up fodder for the evil days to come, the necessity of which recent experience might have been expected to impress upon individuals, nothing whatever seems to be done. The grass which the diminished flocks and herds cannot consume may go to waste or serve as material for dangerous fires, but few, indeed, are they who utilize it as provision for the future. Should the hope of a succession of fruitful years be fulfilled, the majority will proceed as before in blissful unconcern until the next drought once more upsets all their calculations, and wipes out their bank balances, when they will cry out to Government for help. However, sufficient for the day is the evil thereof. At present nature is smiling upon us, and everywhere is seen abundant evidence of the marvelous recuperative powers of the soil.

You Pay Only if Cured

Expects No Money Unless He Cures You—Method and Full Particulars Sent Free—Write For It This Very Day

A Detroit specialist who has 14 certificates and diplomas from medical colleges and boards, has perfected a startling method of curing the diseases of men in their own homes; so that there may be no doubt in the mind of any man that he has

DR. S. GOLDBERG,

The Possessor of 14 Diplomas and Certificates Who Wants No Money That He Does Not Earn.

both the method and the ability to do as he says, Dr. Goldberg, the discoverer, will send the method entirely free to all men who send him their name and address. He wants to hear from men who have stricture that they have been unable to get cured, prostatic trouble, sexual weakness, varicocele, lost manhood, blood poison, hydrocele, emaciation of parts, impotence, etc. His wonderful method not only cures the condition itself, but likewise all the complications, such as rheumatism, bladder or kidney trouble, heart disease, nervous debility, etc.

The doctor realizes that it is one thing to make claims and another thing to back them up, so he has made it a rule not to ask for money unless he cures you, and when you are cured he feels sure that you will willingly pay him a small fee. It would seem, therefore, that it is to the best interests of every man who suffers in this way to write the doctor confidentially and lay your case before him. He sends the method, as well as many booklets on the subject, including the one that contains the 14 diplomas and certificates, entirely free. Address him simply

Dr. S. Goldberg, 208 Woodward Ave., Room [illegible] Detroit, Mich., and it will all immediately be sent you free.

This is something entirely new and well worth knowing more about. Write at once.

MORE GERMANS WANTED

The growth of the population of Germany in 1902 was the greatest ever known, amounting to 908,212, the number of births being 2,000,000.

Hundreds of thousands leave the Empire yearly for foreign lands, yet the nation is getting wealthier and more populous every day.

A few of the emigrants come to Canada. We should make a bid for more. A better class of people could not be wished for, frugal and industrious as they are.

We want them on our farms. We want them in our villages, towns and cities. We want them in Peterborough. A thousand more Germans in this town would provide an element that is lacking in our population—an element to judge by its achievements in other towns that is nothing if not progressive, labor-loving and orderly.

A one-race town in America can always be beaten by a rival with a cosmopolitan population.

FISCAL FIGHT IN BRITAIN

Recent cable news from Great Britain is interesting, as showing that Canada and the other colonies are taking a greater place than perhaps ever before in the regard of the Old Country folk. Monday's cables show a great variety in the views of speakers before the London Chamber of Commerce; but even Lord Brassey, who avows himself a follower of Rosebery, thinks "an interchange of opinions as to the best way to help each other" is an eminently practical thing. Here is evidence of the good it has done the delegates to see Canada and to hear Canadians, as they have done this year. On the other hand the Daily News calls a commission, such as is proposed to be formed to discuss trade and tariff problems, eccentric and anarchical," mainly, we are at liberty to infer, because such a commission would "betray distrust of the British Board of Trade." Exactly. Anything which differs from the free trade ideas of 1850, and the machinery adjusted to them, must be wrong, no matter how much conditions may have changed since. It might be premature to lay too much stress upon "the victory of Mr. Chamberlain's policy," as it is called, in Lewisham and Dulwich on Tuesday. But it is undeniable that Chamberlain's anti-free import views are taking a strong hold in various parts of the United Kingdom. Among the Canadians who have been speaking over there Mr. Andrew Patullo, of Woodstock, Ontario, expressed to an audience at Leyton his amazement at the views of the Duke of Devonshire and other Liberal leaders re Canada. Before the fiscal question is settled, Canada is going to be heard in these islands. When I hear British statesmen's caution against irritating Americans, I wonder how Englishmen can sing 'Rule Britannia.' The United States has humbugged England for years. The only way to fight her is to fight her as Canada has done."

THE SOO INDUSTRIES

Perhaps at no time during the last three months of uncertainty and disaster have the present position and the future prospects of the Consolidated Company at Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., been more enveloped in darkness and uncertainty than just now, when the properties have been sold and yet nobody seems clear about whom they belong to. The sale, which has been postponed so many times, actually took place on Tuesday last, in spite of the protests made by various of the creditors, and the entire property was declared sold to the Speyer Syndicate, the holders of this mortgage, for $4,500,000. This syndicate, as is generally known, was composed mainly of Speyer & Co., and Philadelphia and New York capitalists. The mortgage was for $5,050,000, so that not sufficient was realized at the sale to satisfy it, and the defunct company, without assets, is confronted with a judgment of over a million dollars. The result of the sale is that the properties are now in the actual possession of Speyer & Co., but as to whether this condition will last there is much difference of opinion. Representatives of the old corporation assert that the sale was not valid, and will not affect the winding-up order of the Canadian Court; but this is doubtful. The Ontario Government is interested to the amount of $250,000, which was advanced to the employees as wages at the time of the crash, but it is not expected that it will do any more than watch the course of events. The reorganization syndicate, headed by Messrs. T. J. Drummond and F. H. Clergue, are understood to have secured $4,500,000 towards the underwriting of the new company, the capital coming largely from New York. Meanwhile the chief interest of Canadians is that the industries shall be enabled to resume operations, by whom, they do not so care.

GIRLS ROBBED SCHOOLS

Washington, Dec. 19.—Two young girls captured here have confessed to 150 school house robberies. They say they have stolen from 100 schools in New York, and from a number in this city. They also visited Baltimore—when arrested as they were coming out of a theatre where they had been attending a matinee, they gave their names as Celia Gibson, sixteen years old, of 11 East 114th street, and Fannie Lewis, 13 years old, of 100 East 101st street, New York.

Kidney Diseases

Every Year Thousands Suffer and Die from Kidney Disease, That Never Knew the Exact Nature of their ailment.

Among the Most Easily Noted Symptoms are Pain in the Back, Frequent Desire to Urinate, Constant Headache Sleeplessness, and Nervousness.

When these signals of danger are unheeded, and proper precaution is not taken to avert more serious results, the very worst form of kidney trouble will develop, namely, Bright's Disease, which is almost incurable.

To obtain quick relief and a sure cure you must at once commence to take Ferrozone. It is a treatment for kidney and bladder troubles of undoubted merit and is prescribed now by all doctors and physicians who are abreast of their profession. Hospitals, Sanitariums, and all public health institutions rely on Ferrozone in all derangements of the kidneys, and claim that it affects more cures of chronic cases than any other remedy.

The action of Ferrozone is very mild and efficient and can be depended upon to give satisfactory results in every case. It brings about a healthy condition of all the organs of the body, causes the kidneys to eliminate all poisonous products and wastes of the body. It purifies and enriches the blood, reconstructs wasted tissues, excites healthy appetite and promotes good digestion. By the regular use of Ferrozone nutrition is improved, and strength to ward off disease is established and maintained.

No remedy for the alleviation and cure of kidney disease can possibly equal or surpass Ferrozone. This fact is conceded by all those who have used it, and a trial will convince you of its merits. Don't be misled into accepting a cheap, unworthy substitute, but insist on having the genuine Ferrozone. It is the very best that money, brains, skill and scientific research can produce, and that is the sort of remedy you want. Price 50c per box, or three boxes for $1.25, at druggists, or N. C. Paris's Greatest Scientist.

Since the death of Pasteur in 1895, M. Elie Metchnikoff is probably the most distinguished scientist in Paris. He is a Russian by birth, as his surname makes evident, and possessed of all the naivete and large-hearted simplicity of his race. As a scientific writer he is most refreshing. His new book, "The Nature of Man," has been pronounced by English scholars the most important contribution to science since Darwin's "Origin of Species," and yet it can be read with "ease, profit and pleasure by the most casual amateur." Among the dry-as-dust specialists, M. Metchnikoff is as a pioneer in an untried country, and perhaps a bit of an adventurer. He demonstrates enthusiastically and by the most approved scientific methods, that people should live a hundred and thirty-odd years. A man who expires at seventy or eighty is the victim of accident, cut off in the flower of his youth! M. Metchnikoff gives very good advice about simple living in a charming and piquant way, and if his prophecies will probably not greatly prolong our day and generation, we still may add something to our span of life by studying his entertaining precepts.

Needed a Change.

When the tired man entered the office says the Philadelphia "Ledger," he told the doctor he did not know what ailed him, but he needed treatment; he was pretty well worn out.

The physician put on his eye-glasses looked at the man's tongue, felt his pulse, sounded his chest, and listened to the beating of his heart. "Same old story!" exclaimed the doctor, who was of the new school of fresh air. "Man can't live hived up in an office or house. No use trying. Now I could make myself a corpse, as you are doing by degrees, if I sat down here and did not stir."

"I——" began the patient.

"You must have fresh air," broke in the doctor. "You must take long walks and brace up by staying out-of-doors. Now I could make a drug store out of you and you would think I was a smart man, but my advice to you is to walk walk, walk."

"But, doctor——" interrupted the man.

"Now, my dear man, don't argue the question. Just take my advice. Take long walks every day—several times a day—and get your blood into circulation."

"But my business——" said the patient.

"Of course, your business prevents it; everybody says that. Just change your business so you will have to walk more. By the way, what is your business?"

"I'm a letter-carrier," meekly replied the patient.

The Czar is Not a Cad.

The Czar of Russia has a keen sense of justice, which displays itself occasionally in an unexpected but praiseworthy manner, as the following true story will serve to show: A Russian officer receiving but a slender salary was one day seen riding in a tram. The other officers of the regiment were furious at what they called an insult to the uniform, and intimated to the culprit that he had the option of either sending in his papers or being cashiered, and the unlucky subaltern chose the former alternative. Before he had time to do so, however, the Czar heard of the affair, and, without a moment's delay, donned his colonel's uniform of the regiment in question, and, sauntering out of his palace, hailed a tram and, entering it, sat calmly down till it stopped in front of the barracks. He desired the officers to be called, and when they were assembled, addressed them thus: "Gentlemen, I have just ridden from the palace in a tram, and I wish to know if you desire me to send in my papers. I presume I have disgraced my uniform."

"Sire," replied the major, nervously, "your majesty could never do that."

"Then," replied the Czar with a smile, "as I have not degraded the uniform, Lieutenant D—— cannot have done so, and will thus retain his commission in this regiment, even if he, like me, dares to ride in a tram."

The New Little Girl.

A female child approached me not long ago on the street. An air of refinement and good breeding attended her. I paused and pleasantly observed her.

"Hello, grandpa!" exclaimed the child. "Has anybody seen our cat?"

I made no reply.

"Speak up," said the child, "if you don't happen to have amputated your voice. I've lost kind of a tall cat, done off in a tortoiseshell finish. Her feet don't track, but she's sound and kind, city broke, stands without hitching, and answers to the name of Laura Jean Libbey. Where is she?"

"Young woman," said I, "I am not aware that I have the honor of your acquaintance."

"Don't let that cause you any insomnia, grandpa," said the female child. "I'm not trying to make a hit with you. Either you've seen my cat or you haven't. If you haven't, we'll part in a friendly way, with no clothes torn. If you have, I'd like you to produce, dig up and relinquish the cat. Is it a go? Is there anything doing in the feline way?"

"No," said I.

"Then so long," said the female child.

This, sir, I presume, is the result of our system of educational and home training, allowing children to develop along the lines of least resistance.—Syracuse "Post-Standard."

Ballet Skirts.

Ballet-dancers, brought up in two centuries of tradition, fight against "skirt-dancing," and favor the lamp-shade costume. Our best and most graceful dancer, Mlle. Genee, is in favor of tradition. During my second directorship of the Alhambra I had immense difficulty with Mlle. Legnani, my principal dancer, to persuade her to do a "skirt-dance" in a ballet. I succeeded, and she succeeded, much to her astonishment.—John Hollingshead in "Pall Mall Gazette."

A GOOD STAGGERER

Would be British Tariff Wall Against the United States

London, Dec. 18 — It is a common remark in London that Americans are not sensible to the grave importance of the fiscal contest progressing in this country. It is said they do not appreciate that the life of American trade is involved in the tendency here toward the abandonment of free trade, and the erection of a retaliatory tariff against those now confronting Britain. It is pointed out that no mere academic discussion about the tariff is going on here, but that Britons are earnestly considering what to do in a situation which is not satisfactory to a vast majority, and intolerable to many. It may take some little time to reach a conclusion, but not an eternity. It is suggested that if Americans really knew how strong the tide was running in Britain toward protection, they would be inquiring if, through making some tariff concessions to Britain, it would be possible to hold the market open to American products upon reasonable terms. Many British people believe that Americans, who are usually alert, are not awake to the situation here. It is argued that, if they really knew what was going on, strong efforts would be made in the American Congress to bring about some sort of reciprocal trade relation with Britain. "Germany," said a business man of wide outlook, who discussed the question with me today, "is alarmed over the tariff situation in this country and has a right to be; but she is not in any greater danger than the United States. Of course, nobody on earth can positively say that Britain will have a protective tariff, but it looks that way. Your people may find our fiscal contest intruding into their Presidential politics next year. I should say that the erection of a tariff wall about Britain would be a jolly good staggerer to American protectionists."

ARE YOU A PRISONER?

THOUSANDS of men are prisoners of disease as securely as though they were confined behind the bars. Many have forged their own chains by the vices of early youth, exposure to contagious disease, or the excesses of manhood. They feel they are not the men they ought to be or used to be. The vim, vigor, and vitality of manhood are lacking. Are you nervous and despondent? tired in the morning? have you to force yourself through the day's work? have you little ambition and energy? Are you irritable and excitable? eyes sunken, depressed and haggard looking? memory poor and brain fagged? have you weak back with dreams and losses at night? deposit in urine? weak sexually?—you have

—J. K. Macdonald, Esq., Managing Director Confederation Life Association, in sending cheque for $500.00 from his Company, says: "I am pleased to be able to be the medium of helping on so good a work."

Funds Urgently Needed

The financial reports for the year just ending show that to keep the doors of the Free Hospital for Consumptives open, maintaining the number of patients for which accommodation has been provided, not less than $25,000 is required for the year now entered upon.

Since the Free Hospital was opened (18 months ago) 224 patients have been received. The help the institution has been to these people—all from the wage-earning and poorer ranks of life—cannot be estimated in human language.

—Edward D. Heddon, Solina, Ont., on leaving the Free Hospital, writes: "I cannot speak too highly of the institution from which I have received so much benefit. I can but tender my best thanks for the kindness shown."

—Minnie Linklater, Hamilton, writes: "I have spent over nine months at the Free Hospital for Consumptives. I believe I have been greatly helped, and shall never hesitate to use my influence to further that good cause."

There is no endowment, excepting the provision made by three life insurance companies for six beds for the current year. Only by the continued contributions of the Canadian public can the work be maintained.

Patients are accepted from every part of the Dominion, and there have been in residence during the past year patients from Prince Edward Island on the east to the Northwest Territories on the west.

Contributions may be sent to SIR W. R. MEREDITH, KT., Vice-President National Sanitarium Association, or MR. W. J. GAGE, Chairman of the Executive Committee, Toronto, Can.

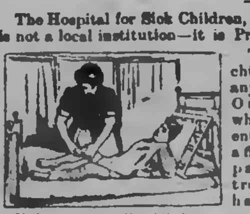
THE GREAT CHARITY.

THE HOSPITAL FOR SICK CHILDREN, TORONTO

It Takes Care of Every Sick Child in Ontario Who Cannot Afford to Pay For Treatment.

The Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, is not a local institution—it is Provincial.



MASSAGE FOR RHEUMATISM.

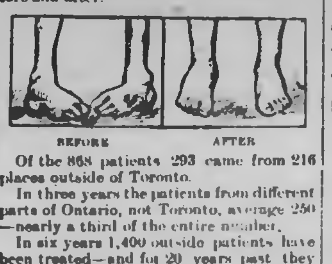
The sick child from any part of Ontario whose parents cannot afford to pay for treatment has the same claim and the same privileges as the Toronto child born within sight of its walls.

This is the reason that the Trustees appeal to the fathers and mothers of Ontario—for as their money goes out to help the Hospital so the Hospital's mercy can go out to help the children.

This is the 28th year of the Hospital's life. The story of the years is a wonderful one—for in that period 10,000 children have been treated, and over 5,000 cured and 3,000 improved.

Last year there were 868 boys and girls in its beds and cots, and of these 493 were cured and 247 improved.

Look at these pictures of club feet—before and after.



BEFORE AFTER

Of the 868 patients 293 came from 216 places outside of Toronto.

In three years the patients from different parts of Ontario, not Toronto, average 250—nearly a third of the entire number.

In six years 1,400 outside patients have been treated—and for 20 years past they will average 100 a year.

The average stay of every patient was 54 days, the cost per patient per day 94c.

A dollar or two means a small lot of money out of your pocket, but it takes a big load of misery out of some little life.

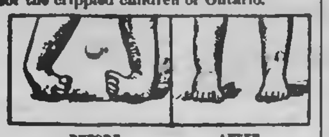
See what the hand of the Surgeon does for the crippled children of Ontario.



BEFORE AFTER

Your money means mercy to somebody's child.

Your money can cheer some mother's heart by saving some mother's child.

Health and wealth. You give wealth to the Hospital, and the Hospital gives health to the children.

The Corporation of the City of Toronto gives $7,500 a year to the Hospital for the maintenance of every child, whether from city or country.

HE ENJOYS READING.

The citizens of Toronto contribute about $7,000 a year towards the maintenance of every patient in the Hospital, whether from city or country

Toronto does its share in the good work, and the Trustees ask you to do yours.

The Newspaper Proprietors of Ontario have kindly helped the Hospital by inserting our appeals.

There are two newspaper cots, and boys and girls from the country are placed in the cots founded by the newspaper men.

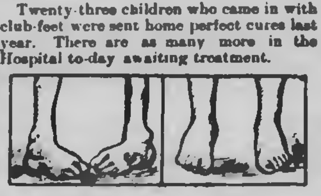
Look at the pictures of "before and after." They tell their own story—surely you will help us in this good work.

If your dollar could straighten the feet of a little boy or girl with club-feet you would gladly give it, and your dollar will help to do that.

BEFORE AFTER

Take off the handicap of deformity—give all children a fair start in the race of life.

Twenty-three children who came in with club-feet were sent home perfect cures last year. There are as many more in the Hospital to-day awaiting treatment.



BEFORE AFTER

If you know of a sick child—the club foot boy or girl—send his parent's name to the Hospital.

Please send your contributions to J. Ross Robertson, Chairman, or to Douglas Davidson, Sec.-Treas. of the Hospital for Sick Children, College Street, Toronto.

PRAYER.

Charles E. Jefferson, D. D.,
Broadway Tabernacle Church,
New York City.

And he said unto them, when ye pray say, Our Father.—Luke, xi., 2.

Jesus took it for granted that men were going to pray. He always prayed Himself. It was His habit, His nature, His life. The Evangelists fail to tell us many things which He said and did, but they make large room for His prayers. His praying was one of the outstanding and awe-inspiring features of His life. He was found praying before every important step in His career.

And what He did He expects all men to do. To lift His eyes to heaven and say "Father" was natural and easy, but it is not so easy to many of us, and some of us have doubts as to its reasonableness and value. We are living in an age when men are determined to get if possible to the bottom of things. Everything is subjected to analysis, investigation, criticism. Prayer, as all admit, has roots which run down into the realms of mystery, and it is not surprising that earnest people should be asking many questions about it.

They want to study the psychology and chemistry of prayer. This is entirely proper, but the study of chemistry must be kept in its right place. The chemistry of bread is both interesting and important, but the chemist should eat his breakfast before he enters on his studies. He will then be better fitted for his work. Eating comes first and chemistry afterward. The psychology of sleep is a most fascinating study, but before all the problems have been explored it is necessary for a man to sleep. After one has enjoyed a good night's sleep he is in better humor for psychological investigations. And so it is with prayer. Prayer is one of the natural appetites of the soul. In prayer the soul finds food with which it nourishes its life.

Before prayer is studied in its scientific aspects let the soul commune long with God. Prayer is an instinct, a deep-seated instinct in every unspoiled heart. If it is safe to follow the hint given by a falling eyelid and postpone all study until the mind has been refreshed by sleep, so also is it safe to follow the instinct which at certain times impels us to throw a passionate wish Godward. If, then, you have your questions, pray first and face your questions afterwards. If you have your doubts, pray first, then deal with them one by one. The chemistry of prayer is interesting, but it is demoralizing if the study of it is made a substitute for lifting one's eyes to heaven and saying, "Father." In the words of Emerson, "As well might a child live without its mother's milk as a soul without prayer."

One reason why many persons have lost faith in the efficacy of prayer is because they and others have made their prayers too small. Let us discard the notion that prayer is simply asking for things. Prayer is, first of all, adoration, pouring out the soul in the presence of manifested greatness and beauty. When in the Scriptures we catch glimpses of the worship which goes on behind the veil we do not hear angel or archangel or saint asking for things. The burden of the prayer is, "Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Almighty." Surely we violate no law of the universe when we adore.

Prayer is thanksgiving; it is giving something to God. It is the glory of man to be able to return thanks. Animals do not know how to feel or to say "I thank you." But to feel gratitude is human and to give expression to it is always becoming. We will not allow a boy to pick up our handkerchief for us in the street without some vocal recognition of his kindness; what shall we say of men and women who take the good things which the great God offers to them daily and turn away without ever once saying in heart or by lip, "I thank Thee"? Surely there is no law in God's universe which is transgressed by the expression of glad and genuine gratitude.

Prayer is also confession. We have all sinned and come short of the glory of God. There is none righteous—no, not one. We have all broken the commandments of the Heavenly Father, and modern science has discovered nothing which renders it unreasonable for a man to say to God:—"I have sinned. I am sorry." The man who tramples on us in the street and hurries on without so much as "I beg your pardon" is put down instantly as a boor, and where does a man belong who, sinning against his Creator, never asks to be forgiven? Many a man is discontented, sour and ill at ease because he carries in his heart a load of unforgiven sins.

But may we not ask for anything at all? Certainly. But we should ask for large things. Follow the prayer which the Master gave to His disciples. It has in it but one petition for an earthly good, and that petition is swallowed up in the music of the great cries that go before and that come after—the longing for the establishment of God's kingdom on the earth and the pleading for sufficient strength to come off victorious over temptation and evil.

"Darling," whispered the young bridegroom, "we are about to enter a tunnel."

"Then won't you please go and get a drink of water for me, Harold?" said the young bride, observing that the other passengers were watching them expectantly.—Chicago Tribune.

A Stormy "First Night."

Commenting on the receptions of his various plays, H. J. W. Dam recently told a reporter that at one time at the opening production of his play, "The Coquette," he thought nobody connected with the entertainment would leave the theater alive. "The house," he said, "was the little Prince of Wales, managed by Oscar Lowenthal. The piece did not go very well, and at the end there were calls for the author. I did not mind going out, for a similar play of mine, 'The Shop Girl,' had run twenty months in the Gaiety, and I felt that the pit and gallery would treat me with some courtesy, as one who had, at least, pleased them once. But the 'Boo!' that came over the footlights that night as I made my appearance was really like a tornado! It was almost palpable. I fairly reeled and staggered back as it came at me like something that might be warded off had I the thickness of the curtain between me and it. And it endured, too—endured until I felt myself pulled and jerked about, and realised that the curtain, to the end of which I had been holding with one clenched hand, was ascending. I looked about, and there stood Lowenthal, the color of pure marble. He stepped down, pushed me aside, and then gave that audience a vast amount of information concerning the private character of each and every individual composing it. I do not believe that a coster from Whitechapel could have competed with the manager that night in the expert use of choice Billingsgate. He blackguarded them until they were stilled, and then he blackguarded some more. He paid for that speech with a fortune, for popular indignation told against the Prince of Wales Theater, and he, too stubborn to let go, held on until he was wiped out."

Athletics vs. Beauty.

"The 'beauty specialists' appear to be doing a better trade than ever before; for which they have to thank the immoderate indulgence in athletic exercises which so many women now affect. It is impossible for a woman to abandon her natural position in the scheme of creation without losing something, and the attainment of masculine strength and skill involves, for woman, the penalty of ugliness—that is, from the standard which centuries have set up. Beauty, as generally understood, depends chiefly upon the curves produced by softness and roundness of outline, and a facial expression void of strain or effort.

"Among the lower classes beauty is rare, except in very young, well-fed girls. Comparative idleness, quiet surroundings, mental and physical repose, favor the development of beauty; while work and such sports, games, and exercises as call for more than a trifling amount of exertion harden the muscles and expression together, with artistically unfavorable results.

"The beautiful women of to-day who are known to the world as such are not very numerous. But early in the century painters of portraits were hard put to it to keep pace with the demands of lovely women. Those beauties rode quiet horses, used a needle slowly, and played the harp. To straddle a bicycle would have been an impossible, if not an improper, feat for any one of them, had such a machine existed.

"The health of our girls is certainly much improved, and many a modern father feels the bald patch on top of his head more exposed to the gaze of his giant daughter than is comfortable. But health and stature are purchased at a great cost, and portraits of grandmother, painted in youth, look down without cause for envy upon their healthy, firm-jawed, flat-footed, muscular successors. The apostle of moderation seldom gets a hearing until excesses have been long indulged in, for vested interests without number cause every social hobby and craze to be thoughtlessly and recklessly encouraged.

"The 'open-air' craze has much to answer for. Delicate people open their bedroom windows to fog and damp, to dust and dirt and microbes, with a pathetic belief that the outer air is always safer than that within. The 'morning tub' has before now produced fatal illness, and in all the physical training fads there is danger for those without special knowledge. The chief disease of the day is overstrain, and it fathers a hundred others. 'Nervous disorders,' says Dr. Goodhart, 'affect the muscularly weak and the muscularly strong,' which is a hard saying for those who would rival Hercules."

TO THE AFFLICTED.

Dear Reader,—Are you a sufferer from any of the following ills: Lack of ambition, nervous exhaustion, ideas easily confused, irritability of temper, impairment of memory, despondency, general debility, liver not right, kidneys out of order, rheumatism, dyspepsia or indigestion, dizzy or fainting spells? Equitable Gold Mining Co.

R. C. LAND, President. S. F. NORTON, Secretary and Treasurer.

Over $300,000 of development work already done Main shaft 9 x 16 feet, down 700 feet. Over 3,000 feet of drifts, tunels and shafts showing immense ore body

Destined to become large and continuous dividend payer.

The Equitable Gold Mining Co.'s properties consist of three mines, known as the North Bonanza, Flowery and Kimbark. They are located in Six Mile Canon, less than four miles from Virginia City, Nevada, which is the nearest railroad station.

Years ago, over three hundred thous and dollars of development work was done upon the mines—so they are not mere "prospects" but actual mines. This work was done under the personal supervision of competent engineers, and was paid for by the owners of the mines themselves; thus giving double assurance that the work was well done and that the expenditure was justified.

The Main Shaft (triple compartment, 9x16 feet in the clear) is down seven hundred feet. From this shaft, running along the vein matter, east and west, are four drifts, at different levels, having a combined length (including the Rule winze and the tunnel) of 2,650 feet.

In addition to the above there are four small shafts, with a combined depth of about 300 feet; 535 feet of tunnels, and at least 500 feet of cross-cuts, uprises, etc.

All told, there is 4,650 feet of underground work—the most of which is in ore. Here is nearly one mile of openings in mineralized rock.

It is conservatively estimated by competent and reliable engineers and practical miners that there is developed an ore body of at least One Million Five Hundred Thousand Tons!

As a further evidence of the large amount of work done there is from 75,000 to 100,000 tons of ore on the dumps at the different surface openings—ore that, with modern cheapened processes, can be converted into gold bullion at a profit.

THE TITLE

Title to the Flowery and North Bonanza mines is by patent from the United States government, while the title of the Kimbark is by location and possession.

The Equitable Company obtained the Flowery and North Bonanza mines, both of which are patented, by purchase—the payments therefore to be made out of a share of the net proceeds of the mines. The Company has a written contract, duly recorded, for a deed, and is in possession of the properties, and is now operating them. The sum of $2,000 was paid on the contract, September 30th, 1902, and partial payments have since been made. The Company is entitled to $6.25 per ton as cost of mining and milling. One-half of all over and above this $6.25 per ton goes to the former owners till they receive the total sum of $106,000, without interest. There is no stipulation as to amount of work to be done within any specified time—and no proceeds, no pay. The Company can therefore pay it in one year or it can pay it in ten years. With this exception the Company is free from debt. Its policy is to pay as it goes. In this way it has no fear of financial embarrassments. The title to the Kimbark is by "location," under the mining laws of the United States. Work enough has already been done to entitle the Company to a patent, which in due time will be obtained.

Recent Development Work

Since the Company acquired the property, it has put up poles and wires for a distance of one mile for the transmission of electric power from the Truckee River Electric Power Plant. By this means unlimited power for mining, hoisting and milling is obtained.

It has built a dwelling house for the manager, a large boarding house for the miners, a barn, a power house and blacksmith shop.

It has put an electric hoist and skip into the 200-tunnell; has purchased ore cars and the necessary tools for mining purposes.

It has acquired the Kimbark ground, adjoining the Flowery and North Bonanza mines, and is now developing the property by driving a tunnel.

Within the last few months the Company has mined and milled over 800 tons of ore—realizing therefrom about $10,000 worth of gold bullion. The out-put is constantly increasing and all the Company needs is more mill capacity to handle its ore.

Dry Placer Miner, formerly of California.

This company has the right, without royalty payments, to use the new patent machine upon all the land it may own, acquire by lease, or operate, in Arizona. We invite special attention to the great commercial value and profit of this machine, and what can be accomplished by it.

What This Machine Will Do.

For the first time in the history of gold mining a machine has been invented which will handle the dry placer gold gravel without water, and in large quantities. This machine will save 98 per cent of all the gold in the gravel, and will do it at a lower working cost than by any existing process. It is operated by a small, compact engine, using crude oil as fuel. A complete plant, capable of handling 200 tons per day will weigh less than 1,200 pounds.

To secure the gold only those placer lands could be worked which could command large supplies of water, hence the immense bodies of dry placer lands remote from water have never been worked.

Fifteen Hundred Millions in Gold

The United States has yielded nineteen hundred millions in gold, of which fifteen hundred millions—or more than 75 per cent.—were the product of its placers.

Ninety per cent. of the world's total gold supply has been taken from placers by processes which have admittedly lost the bulk of the values.

Simplicity of Machine — Its Method of Operation

The machine is so extremely simple in construction and operation that any intending investor can operate it instantly. He can take a peck or more of sand, either ordinary house of sea sand, or such as is found in the placer lands of Arizona and California, put into this sand ten or a hundred pieces of gold as small as the point of a toothpick, and from that to the head of an ordinary pin, mix the sand and the gold thoroughly, turn them into the hopper or feed of the machine, and in a few seconds the machine will separate the gold from the gravel and recover from 98 to 100 per cent of the gold. It is an absolute, infallible, ocular demonstration of the merits of the machine. It has solved the problem of handling sand or gravel containing gold in regions remote from water.

Cost of Handling Material

Each plant is portable, weighs less than 1,200 pounds and can be easily moved by a few laborers.

The two greatest authorities in the world on the moving of material are "Haswell" and "Trautwine." They say in their standard publications that a laborer can shovel horizontally, 12 feet, vertically 6 feet for 50 feet haul 17 cubic yards in 10 hours.

A well known engineer in his work for the U. S. Government at Sandy Hook, moved 18 cubic yards, 100 feet haul in 10 hours at a cost of 10 cents per cubic yard, paying laborers $1.75 per day.

The dry placer gold-bearing sands of California, Arizona and New Mexico are handled quite as easily as those of Sandy Hook.

Ten laborers can easily supply one machine with 204 cubic yards of gravel in 12 hours, working at the same speed as shown by Haswell, Trautwine or at Sandy Hook.

Placer work on above basis would cost about 11 1-2c. per cubic yard.

Do You Want Monthly Dividends ?

We make a special offer of a limited number of shares of stock at this time, because the company requires immediately sufficient to build several machines to operate in the field.

Every machine at work will increase the intrinsic value of the stock.

Twenty machines in the field will increase the price and value of the stock more than double the present offering, and every additional machine means a further increase in price and value.

The Company intends to divide its net earnings every month, so that the stockholders may count absolutely on receiving monthly dividends in proportion to monthly earnings.

THE ROSE OF THE RING

though they could have clasped hands across the rippling water.

It was like the stream of fate winding itself between them, and looking across it at the man, the girl wondered how it would be with her if some dark shadow should rise out of the silvery flood, and cut him off from her sight for ever.

His voice, soft, deep, full of tenderness, roused her from her dream.

"Rose!" she heard him say. "Rose!"

She could not raise her eyes to meet his across the stream, although she knew he had left his easel and was standing on the edge of the water.

The tears had risen, and were burning under her eyelids.

Her hands plucked aimlessly at the forget-me-nots, and a shower of them floated across to his feet.

Her face was bent over the long, sweet grass, yet he knew there were tears on the flowers she scattered, and there smote upon his heart a sudden knowledge of the depth and entireness of his love for her.

That she could care for him as he knew now that he cared for her, did not enter his mind.

It seemed to him he could never be worthy to hold the nearest and dearest place in her heart.

She might look upon him with friendship, even with cousinly affection; but it was not possible she could feel for him such passionate love as he felt for her.

These thoughts flashed through his brain, as he watched her in the moment of his heart's awakening.

Then, driving down the knowledge of his love, he tried to think only of her—of the sorrow that had brought tears to her eyes in this fair day.

In another moment he was at her side, holding her trembling hands in his own, and raising her gently to her feet.

"What is it, Rose?" he said. "What has made you so sad? What sorrow are you keeping from me?"

She snatched her hands from his grasp, and pressed them tightly over her eyes, ashamed of those burning tears—of their cause.

"Why do you ask that which I cannot answer?" she exclaimed in a choking voice. "Go back to your picture, and leave me to myself!"

"But not to these tears, Rose—I cannot bear to see you in tears!"

"How do you know I was in tears?" she exclaimed, dropping her hands, and looking at him with a mingling of pride and pain in her eyes. "If such were the case, what would those tears be to you? You have no right to question my every mood. Whether I am full of gladness, or full of sorrow, it is the same to you."

"It is not the same to me," he answered, gravely, "and yet, as you say, I have no right to question your feelings. I will remember in future, and be more guarded."

He was hurt by her manner.

She knew this as well as if he had told her so in matter-of-fact words, and she felt angry with herself for having given him offence.

"I am sorry I have kept you with me so long today," he said, pained at her silence. "I will pack up my paints at once and walk back with you. I shall not trouble you any more with my picture. I have a good memory, and in this case I am not likely to pass over any detail."

He crossed to the other side of the brook and strapped up his easel and camp-stool, then returning to where he had left her standing, he set his face towards Drayton Court.

Rose walked by his side in silence, her gaze fixed on the narrow footpath they were traversing, and which seemed to wind away into endless distance, her heart darkened by the cloud that had arisen between herself and the man she loved.

"This leavetaking is very unexpected," Mrs. Netherby said to him that evening, when he called on his way to the railway station. "You mentioned nothing this morning of your intended departure for London."

"I had not then made my plans," he answered. "The truth came home to me suddenly—so suddenly that it prompted me to immediate action."

Something in his tone made her look into his face—a pale, haggard face, greatly changed from what it had been that morning.

She laid her hand on his arm, and drew him further into the room, then quietly closed the door.

"What is it all about?" she asked, once more going to his side, and laying her hand upon his arm. "I know you and Rose have quarrelled, but I did not think it was so serious as this. What have you said to her?"

"I said nothing to her," Marc returned, "except that I am going away."

"And why? You have made her very unhappy, Marc. She has been fretting her heart out ever since she came back this morning. She was hurt that you did not come in."

"I think not," he said, with a bitter smile. "I have worn out my welcome; she does not care for me, and will be relieved when I am gone."

"And you—answer me truthfully, Marc—do you care nothing for her?"

"I care for her so much that it would be misery—madness—for me to stay near her, knowing, as I do, that I can never hope to win her love."

"And this is why you are going?"

He bowed his head in silence.

"I must ask you one thing more," Mrs. Netherby said, looking searchingly into his eyes. "Have you told her what is in your heart? Does she understand how deeply you love her?"

"I have told her nothing," he said. "There was no need. I knew she could never love me as I love her."

"So you have come to say 'Good-bye' to her?" his godmother said, her eyes growing misty, "and with nothing explained? Is love always blind, Marc! Does not it occur to you that she may be suffering the same heartbreak you are bearing now?"

He started and flushed, then grew pale again.

"If her heart is breaking, it is not for me," he answered, remembering with bitterness the sorrow she had withheld from him. "It may be that she cares for somebody; if so, I hope he is worthy of her love."

"I am sure he is," Mrs. Netherby replied, a smile playing about the corner of her mouth.

"You know him, then?" he questioned, huskily.

"I do—better than he knows himself. He is my own dear boy, and he is here."

She reached up and kissed him, and then hurried from the room, leaving him gazing at the open doorway like one half stunned.

In a few moments Rose entered, very pale, and with deep shadows under her eyes.

"You wish to say good-bye," she said, ending the silence he had seemed unable to break, and holding out a cold hand to him. "I am so sorry we have quarrelled—so sorry I spoke unkindly to you to-day. Good-bye, Marc; God bless you. I am, indeed, grieved that you have come to say goodbye!"

There was a heart-breaking pathos in her voice.

It touched a chord in Marc's nature, and opened his eyes to much that he had been blind to.

He took both her hands, and held them as though he could never let them go again, drawing her nearer and nearer, until he could almost hear the quick, startled beating of her heart.

"My darling—my darling!" he said, passionately; "I can never say good-bye! I love you—it would be death to me to leave forever."

What strange, sweet power was in those words!

A sudden light seemed to break over all her being.

She gave one wild look into his eyes, then her head sank until the wealth of sunny curls rested against his breast.

"Speak, Rose," he said. "Do you love me as I love you? Will you be my wife?"

"Yes—I love you," she murmured, closing her eyes for an instant; then, influenced by some power in his gaze, she looked up into his face and smiled—a smile that went like a ray of sunshine to his heart.

With a great joy in his soul he drew her nearer to him, and in the sweet still silence their lips met in a kiss that seemed to hold their lives as one.

• • • • • •

While the summer roses were in bloom, there were two fashionable marriages that created a good deal of interest.

The first bride was the Hon. Eleanor Rayne, and those who saw her leave the church as Captain Tremaine's wife understood how perfect was her happiness, and almost forgot that dark day on which Frank had been denounced at the altar—almost forgot how desperately he had ended his career.

To Nellie, the past did not seem more than a terrible dream; her love for Duke left no room in her heart for painful memories, and the sound of that pistol shot had long since ceased to haunt her with its ghastly significance.

The bride whose beauty was raved of most was Rosalie.

Hers was a "rose wedding;" and as Marc led his fair young wife from the church over a carpet of fragrant petals, he touched her hand on which shone the little golden circlet that proclaimed her his wife.

"You have won your title in full, my darling," he said, bending so that his words could be heard by her alone. "Now and forever sweet Rose of the Ring!"

Hand in hand they passed out into the sunlight, and the flowers that were scattered at their feet seemed each one to hold a blessing for those two whose lives were linked with a chain of roses.

THE END.

FROZEN TO DEATH

Terrible Experience of Three Men in a Snow Storm

Owen Sound, Dec. 17—Paul Bokash, a farm laborer, was frozen to death on a side line near Balaclava, 16 miles from Owen Sound, early on Sunday morning. The body was found on Monday at noon, but particulars did not reach the coroner until yesterday. He decided that an inquest was unnecessary.

Bokash, with two companions, Wm. Waterton, and a man named Roadhouse, left in a cutter for home on Saturday evening. The road runs northward a short distance from Georgian Bay, and a freezing snowstorm swept across the water, chilling the men to the bone. They finally turned down the side line, within a couple of miles of their home, when the cutter became stalled. Waterton left his two companions, and after a thrilling experience reached home on foot at 2 o'clock on Sunday morning. Bokash and Roadhouse made another desperate attempt to get through, but failing, they unhitched the horses, and abandoned the cutter. Roadhouse struggled through the storm and reached home at 4 a.m. Bokash did not appear.

His body was found the next day 10 rods from the cutter, lying on his back, where he had apparently fallen after a last struggle to regain his feet. He had no overcoat, and his hands were bare.

A BRUTAL SERGEANT

Maltreated German Soldiers and will be Punished

Berlin, Dec. 16.—Owing to his maltreatment of soldiers on 1,520 counts, and abuse of authority on one hundred counts, a non-commissioned infantry officer named Franzki of the 85th Infantry, has been sentenced to five years' imprisonment and dishonorable discharge from the army by a court-martial at Rendsburg. The court declared Franzki had displayed the "brutality of an ox-driver," and pronounced his superior officers guilty of negligent oversight. Franzki borrowed sums of money from soldiers habitually, and never repaid them, and beat his subordinates with his fist and with clubs and whips and spat in the faces of the men. Several of the men were maltreated from one hundred to two hundred times each. One of them was dismissed from the service disabled.

Storm King Group of Mines

TO CANADIAN INVESTORS

The property comprising what is known as the STORM KING GROUP OF MINES offers an attractive and safe investment. The property is the richest in the country and we believe it would be difficult to secure an investment that promises better returns. The following is a description of the mines written by Capt. A. M. Paul, whose reputation as an expert in mining matters is known far and near.

These properties are situated in the Cable Cove Mining District, about fifteen miles north of Sumpter, Oregon, and about one mile northwest of the Baby McKee mine, about two miles northwest of the Last Chance, the Alpine, the Imperial and the California mines.

The properties in this report consist of seven claims. The names of the seven claims being as follows: The Eureka and the Honest Dollar. These two claims are on the same vein. Adjoining these two claims and paralleling them on the northwest is another vein upon which there are two claims known as the Jessie and Golden Rule, and paralleling them on the northwest there is another vein upon which there are two claims, known as the Storm King and the Ozone. The last claim of this group lies to the northwest of the last two named, and is adjoining them. This claim is the Shannon Bell.

In making my report I will commence with the two first named claims of the group, the Eureka and Honest Dollar. The development on these claims consists of a tunnel ninety-seven feet in length, running along the course of the vein, showing two feet ten inches of ore in the top of the tunnel and a little over three feet in the bottom, which assays giving values of from $9.60 to $90 per ton in gold. About four hundred feet in a southwesterly direction there is a shaft on the vein ten feet deep, showing the vein to be from one to two inches wide on the surface and about twelve inches wide in the bottom of the shaft, in which assays give values of from $9.76 to $40 per ton in free milling gold ore.

This vein is exposed by small shafts and open cuts for a distance of fifteen hundred feet, and the course of this vein is north, ten degrees east, and the vein cuts the formation, showing it to be a true fissure, and the formation is granite. This vein shows in places a width of from ten to fifteen feet of mineralized matter, commonly called vein matter, but which is caused by hot solutions from below.

I will now pass to the Jessie and Golden Rule. There has been very little work done upon these two claims, there being one discovery shaft ten feet deep, showing green all sides of the shaft, and running in value of from $4 upwards. It is my opinion that with development, this, too, will prove valuable property.

The work on the Storm King and Ozone consists of a tunnel near the point of discovery and is driven along the vein for a distance of one hundred and eighty feet, showing ore all the way from the surface to the face of the tunnel, and averaging in width from six to eighteen inches. Three assays give the following values, $12.60. This being a general sample taken from the dump. The other two assays are $62.66 and $79.68 respectively, this being the assorted ore for shipment. The course of this tunnel and vein are north, ten degrees west, and the vein cuts the trend of the formation obliquely (which is granite) and by driving this tunnel five or six hundred feet on the present course it will intersect a quartzite reef (which is running north, twenty degrees east) which would make this a contact vein between granite and quartzite, and should produce a large body of ore, at the intersection of the contact.

The only work done upon the Shannon Bell, the last claim of this group, is the location work, and is not enough to allow of a report being made.

There is water for power purposes one mile from the property, and timber on the ground, of a very fine quality, sufficient to run the mines for many years to come.

All the assays mentioned in this report were made by the assayer, of the Imperial mine at my request, and the ore was taken by me from the properties mentioned.

I will state that I have been a practical miner since 1879, and am now the manager and superintendent of the Imperial mine in this district.

Anecdotal.

It is said that Mark Twain was standing in a crowded street car, hanging to a strap, the other day. As the car swung around a corner the strap broke, dumping him into the lap of a well-dressed woman. The humorist arose and bowed. "Madam," said he, "this is the first time the street car company ever conferred a favor on me."

A missionary in China was endeavoring to convert one of the natives. "Suppose me Christian, me go to heaven?" remarked Ah Sin. "Yes," replied the missionary. "All lite," retorted the heathen, "but what for you no let Chinaman into Amelica when you let him into heaven?" "Ah," said the missionary with fervor, "there's no labor party in heaven."

Abraham Benedict of the New York bar tells the story of a young man who entered a street car with a dog and attracted the attention of an Irishman, who enquired what kind of a dog it was. The young man replied: "It is a cross between an ape and an Irishman." "Then we are both related to it," responded the Irishman.

The teacher of a country school asked his pupils one day if any of them could tell him who Joan of Arc was. The question was followed by profound silence. Some of the pupils stared at the teacher, and some turned and stared at one another, as if seeking information in the faces around them. Finally a boy burst out with: "Oh, yes, I know; she was Noah's wife."

Once, when they were talking literature, Mrs. Isobel Strong said to Robert Louis Stevenson: "At least you have no mannerisms." Whereupon Stevenson took a copy of his own "Merry Men," which she was reading, out of her hands, and read, "It was a wonderful clear night of stars." "Oh," he said, "how many, many times I have written 'a wonderful clear night of stars.'"

In 1[illegible] an Englishman and his wife were being driven about Ireland by a rather melancholy jarvey, who could see no silver lining to the cloud overshadowing his country and his own particular trade. "Never mind, Pat," said the Englishman, "you'll have a grand time when they give you Home Rule." "Bedad, yer honner, and we will—for a week." "Why for a week?" "Drivin' all the gintry to the boat," answered Pat.

A good story is told of Professor Jebb of Oxford. In the classroom immediately above his own Professor Veitch lectured on logic. One day the peroration of the professor of logic was greeted with such rapturous applause that it brought down some pieces of ceiling in the room below. As the bits of plaster dropped about his room Professor Jebb quietly remarked, "Gentlemen, our premises will not support the conclusion of the professor of logic."

Congressman Charles N. Fowler of New Jersey tells a story of a small boy who was over supplied with green apples. "I had gone to see one of my constituents down in Union County," said the Congressman, "and found him trying to give some medicine to a young son who had eaten too many green apples, while a Christian Science neighbor was assuring the boy that there was nothing at all the matter with him. 'I think I ought to know,' groaned the boy. 'I guess I've got inside information.'"

At a banquet after the overwhelming defeat of "Shamrock III." Sir Thomas Lipton said: "You Americans are hard to beat. You remind me of the Scotchman who came up to London and was set upon by two highwaymen, whom he so unmercifully mauled that by the time they had overcome him they were about ready to go to the hospital themselves. And they only found tuppence in his pocket, whereat one of them said: 'It's lucky, Bill, he didn't 'ave sixpence. If he 'ad, 'e'd a killed both of us.'"

A well-known churchman of Memphis—the late Dr. Patterson—used to take pleasure in relating several good ones on himself. One of his favorites concerned a generous-hearted but rather wild young friend in whom the reverend gentleman took a special interest. The climax was reached one day when the doctor was walking along the street and suddenly came upon the young man as he staggered out of a cafe. "George, George, drunk again," sighed the scandalized priest. The answer was quite as unexpected as it was unsteady. "Thash all right, doctor; so'm I."

An anecdote which has lately been going the rounds in British official circles concerns the memorable experience of a certain member of Parliament during the last year of Queen Victoria's reign. The statesman in question is not one of those who are most firmly convinced of the benefits of total abstinence, and the evening of a certain public function at which royalty was to be present found him in a condition which would not have been edifying to the supporters of that movement. The late Queen was receiving the guests of honor, and it was necessary that the convivial M.P. should be presented with the rest. As he approached his sovereign, Victoria extended her hand for him to kiss. But he did not kiss it; instead, he grasped and shook it with vigorous enthusiasm, while he scrutinized her face with grave perplexity. "Your face, madam," he observed, "is perfectly familiar to me, but I'm blowed if I can remember your name!"

An amusing story is told of Phil May, the late famous cartoonist of the London "Punch," and an English conjurer at a fair at Stratford-on-Avon. Phil was watching the very clever gentleman who was wrapping up sovereigns and half-crowns in pieces of paper and selling them for two shillings. The "sharp" had a beautiful face—such a face as Phil May loved to draw. So he sketched him furtively. But the gentleman saw him, and made a speech forthwith. "If that there celebrited portrit painter with the tight breeches on will 'end up the picter, the equally celebrited benefactor to 'comanity wot is givin' away quids for coppers will reward 'im accordingly!" he shouted. Phil, with a twinkle in his eye, handed up the drawing. The conjurer was delighted with the sketch and pinned it to the tail-board of his cart. With another preliminary speech he threw three sovereigns, three half-sovereigns and several half-crowns into a piece of paper, screwed it up and handed it to the artist. "You'll be president of the bloomin' R'yal Academy some dye, young man," said he. "Here, catch!" "A bargain's a bargain," said Phil, walking off with the packet of gold and silver, which when opened proved to contain two pennies and a ha'penny; but Phil said that it was the most entertaining commission he had ever been paid for.

Actors' Wives.

It is filthy lucre, and not family jars as a rule, that causes so many popular married Thespians to separate and star at the head of their own companies. So long as they are nobodies, marriage makes no difference, but once they stand in the fierce light that beats on the center of the stage it seems best for them to separate. Maxine Elliott, who has broken loose from her husband, Nat Goodwin, so far as her theatrical efforts are concerned, had become quite too popular to share business and public favor with her clever husband. C. B. Dillingham, who is starring her, was confident that she would in a successful play, draw audiences just as large as she and her husband had drawn together. That his judgment was good is proved by the fact that in Clyde Fitch's latest play, "Her Own Way," she is crowding the Garrick Theater in New York. In the present arrangement Mr. and Mrs. Goodwin are able to get parts that suit them without having to struggle to find plays that show them both to equal advantage. James K. Hackett is another popular actor who no longer appears with his wife. It is not probable that their earnings would be materially increased if they played together. The case of E. H. Sothern and Virginia Harned is the same. They find it much more profitable to be single stars. Richard Mansfield is also able to do better work now that his wife has retired from the stage. Charming as Beatrice Cameron was in many roles, there were others totally unsuited to her; but as the wife of the star she had to have always the part next to his. This not only damaged many of the Mansfield productions but it was a great injustice to the actress, who was called on for work she could not do. Now that Mrs. Mansfield has retired, her husband can engage the woman best suited to the leading parts in his play. Julia Marlowe's great financial success began only after her appearance as a separate star without the support of her husband, Robert Taber. One of the crimes charged against the theatrical syndicate was that it forced Robert Taber and his wife, who were acting together, to go into different companies. As they were divorced a short time after this artistic separation occurred, however, the separation could not have been very difficult for them to bear. Miss Marlowe's position is better now than it ever was, and Mr. Taber is one of the most successful London actors to-day. No American has, indeed, done half so well in London for such a long time. Were he in this country, he would certainly be a star. Difficulties in finding plays for co-stars have always troubled managers, and ultimately led to the artistic separation of the actors Louis Mann and Clara Lipmann, who were married before they made their first success in "The Girl from Paris," tried for four years to get a play that would suit both of them, and met with very moderate success. Now they have separated, and prosperity once more perches on their banners. Kyrle Bellew has been a much more successful actor during the last few years than he ever was during the days of his artistic partnership with Mrs. Potter. And she, too, has fared better since they have been traveling in single harness.

THE STOCK OF THE BRET HARTE GOLD
MINING COMPANY
IS THE BEST MINING INVESTMENT TO-DAY

This is a strong statement, but facts substantiate it. The work on the mine has proven its value. The promoters have shown their confidence in it by using their own money for development work.

The Company's Property is Six Claims, Patented Land

$60,000 worth of ore blocked out and mine ready for mill.

Mine can be cheaply and economically worked.

Dividends positively guaranteed in sixty days after mill is in operation.

Treasury Stock only for sale, and only sufficient stock will be sold to supply machinery.

The mine lacks but one thing—machinery, and to purchase this a small block of stock will be sold at 15 cents per share. When machinery is paid for no more stock will be sold.

PROSPECTUS INFORMATION FREELY GIVEN

This proposition is better than that of many companies selling stock at 50 cents a share, and will stand a thorough investigation.

BRONCHITIS

Scientifically Treated

The best authorities agree that bronchitis is treated most scientifically by Catarrhozone, which goes right to the root of the trouble

Bronchitis can be treated successfully only by a remedy carried direct to the affected parts along with the air breathed.

Catarrhozone is a vegetable antiseptic and is inhaled [illegible] the mouth, and after passing through all the air passages of the throat, bronchial tubes and lungs, is exhaled through the nose.

The healing vapor of Catarrhozone goes wherever the air you breathe goes, and reaches every part that is affected. No matter how deep-seated the bronchial irritation may be, Catarrhozone is sure to reach it. Catarrhozone protects and heals the mucous membrane, stops the cough, heals up the sores, and is guaranteed to bring speedy relief and sure cure.

By means of the inhaler Catarrhozone treats the [illegible] symptoms of bronchial trouble very effectually. [illegible] impurities in the blood are driven off by Ferrozone, which is a wonderful tonic and stimulant for the entire system. [illegible] a muscle and [illegible] builder, increases the appetite aids digestion and makes the body so healthy and strong that bronchitis goes away for good.

A prominent steamboat owner, well known throughout Ontario, Captain Dunlop, of Kingston, was perfectly cured of Bronchitis by Catarrhozone. The Captain had suffered for more than 20 years, and says that Catarrhozone is the best cure for Bronchitis on the face of the globe.

Mr. A. J. Calhoun, a prominent citizen of Neepawa, Manitoba, speaks very appreciatively of Catarrhozone as a specific for Bronchitis, and states that his wife could not get along without it.

Everyone that has used Catarrhozone is satisfied that it is superior to all other remedies. It is delightful to inhale, simple and convenient to use, and relieves from the first breath taken through the inhaler.

Better try Catarrhozone. All druggists sell and recommend it. Complete outfit, price $1.00; trial size, 25c. By mail from N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

DOURO ELECTION

The Members of the Old Council Will Again Stand

It is understood that the people of Douro will re-elect Reeve Quinn for an [illegible] term. Mr. Quinn has made an excellent Reeve, and deserves another [illegible] unopposed.

The members of the present Council [illegible] seek re-election, viz.: Messrs. [illegible] Ryan, John R. Allen, James Condon and Charles Curtis. No better men ever sat around the Council board than those. The new names mentioned are, Messrs. Frank Maher, H. Leahy and David Darling. In the absence of a contest for the Reeveship the contest will be less exciting than usual.

BUSY DAYS AT THE POST OFFICE

Christmas Mail Coming to the Front Earlier Than Has Been the Rule

The post office people are feeling the strain of Christmas work. The staff are working extra hours, hours that grow longer with each day that brings them the [illegible] to Christmas.

"We expect the rush this time of the year," said one of the employees good-naturedly. "We have to take the bad with the good, you see. And if we're a bit extra hard-worked now we will have the slack seasons later on."

"The Christmas rush this year set in earlier than usual," said an employee to The Times. "It is very noticeable to us that citizens are awake to the wisdom there is in early attending to the sending of Christmas gifts. It is like the early buying of these gifts. The sooner the duty is attended to the better the satisfaction from every standpoint.

INCIDENTS OF THE DAY

Newsy Paragraphs Picked Up By Reporters on Their Rounds

—Only four days more and then Christmas.

—To-morrow will be the shortest day of the year.

—We want a couple of good smart girls at The Times' Bindery.

—The municipal elections are drawing near. Nominations will be held on the 28th inst., and elections on January 4th.

—New Crokinole boards—the best make ever shown in town—just received at Times Bookstore. Will be sold while they last at one dollar each —The total expenditure in connection with the police force of Berlin is $1900 per year. Peterborough spends about three times this sum.

—Toronto News: The Mayor is down on signs, and believes that all advertising should be done in the newspapers. This is one more proof of Mr. Urquhart's good judgment.

—Have you seen the pretty Pictures we are showing? Come in and see them; you will be pleased; prices right; from 10 cents up to to $1.75. Times Bookstore.

—Minden Echo: There are rumors afloat that the C.P.R. Co. has purchased Irondale, Bancroft & Ottawa Railway and will connect it east and west with Ottawa and Midland.

—Shortly before one o'clock Saturday afternoon, the fire brigade was called to the corner of Smith and Water streets, to extinguish a small blaze. The damage was slight owing to prompt action by the firemen.

—By the completion last week, after an outlay of $1,500,000, of a 46 mile stretch of new roadway between Port Hope and Whitby, the Grand Trunk has now a double track system from Montreal to Toronto, a distance of 333 miles.

—Brantford City Council decided against asking the people to vote upon the question of abolition of the ward system. They believed that it was better to bear the ills they had than to fly to others they knew not of—politics in municipal affairs, for instance.

—The local custom department have received authority to seize and confiscate theatrical posters from the United States depicting blood curdling scenes and episodes peculiar to some melodramas. This is in addition to those of an airy character for advertising burlesque attractions.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Movements of the People—What They Are Doing and Saying

—Mr Barrie, the genial treasurer of Douro, was in town Saturday, and gave The Times a call.

—Mr Andrew Russel and son, Carl, of Winnipeg, arrived in town Friday for a short visit with his parents, Water street.

Married at Nassau

A very pretty wedding took place on Friday afternoon, when Miss Mary Gill, youngest daughter of Alfred Gill, was united in marriage to Mr. Wm. Spencely, of Auburn. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. E. A Langfeldt. The bride, who was given away by her father looking charming in a suit of gray cloth, trimmed with white satin and in white silk waist. The bridesmaid, Miss Lockington, of Nassau, was similarly attired. Mr. James Ellis, of Peterborough, supported the groom. After the ceremony the party sat down to a delightful wedding dejeuner. The happy young couple will take up their residence in Auburn. The presents received were numerous and costly.

Saturday's Market

The market on Saturday was largely attended as might be expected at this season. Turkeys sold from $1.00 to $1.60; geese from 85c. to $1.20; ducks were scarce, and were worth about 30c.; chickens sold from 40c. to 65c.; butter went generally at 18c., and eggs at 22c. There was any amount of beef at 5c. and 6c., pork was worth 8c. and 9c. potatoes, 65c. per bag, apples, 60c. and 75c. There was considerable wood of different qualities, ranging in price from $4 to $7.

For Christmas Presents

For the next week you will be buying Christmas presents. There is nothing better to give and nothing more acceptable to the receiver than a box of Lowney's chocolates or some oranges, grapes, nuts, raisins, candles, or even a small bill of groceries. There is no place better to get them than that of E. F. Mason & Co. 234tf

DIRECT LEGISLATION.

MR. W. H. ROEBUCK ADDRESSES MEETING SATURDAY NIGHT

General Organization and Election of Officers to Take Place

General organization and election of officers was the program at the second meeting of "The Peterborough Federation for Majority Rule," held in the Y.M.C.A hall on Saturday night. Mr. Roebuck, assistant secretary of the Direct Legislation League of Ontario, was again present, having returned from Lindsay where he addressed a meeting on the question on Friday night.

The questions to be asked the candidates at the next elections were considered in detail, and it was decided that:

"By-laws and resolutions subject to the optional referendum and to the rules of procedure dealing therewith shall be those only which relate to the following matters:

(a) The granting, renewing or extending of any rights or franchises to any person or corporation, giving power to enter upon the streets or the property of the town for the purpose of carrying on any undertaking. This clause does not include ordinary leases.

(b) Applications for legislation for the purposes of changing the present method of city government.

(c) Applications for legislation for the purpose of raising money for city purposes.

(d) Increasing the rate of taxation beyond twenty mills on the dollar for all purposes.

(e) Granting exemptions from taxation on land."

By this it is meant that all bills relating to these subjects shall lie on the table thirty days between the second and third reading, so that ten per cent. of the voters may by petition to the Council have them submitted to a referendum vote.

Candidates for the election will be presented with the following questions and asked to pledge themselves;

1. Do you believe that the will of the majority should prevail in this town; "majority" meaning a majority of those entitled to vote and who do vote?

2. To give effect to the will of the majority, do you favor the adoption of the People's Veto by Optional Referendum and of the Direct Initiative by Petition or Collective Request?

3. Will you, if elected, use the power of your office to obtain the adoption in the Town Council of Rules of Procedure providing for the Optional Referendum and the Direct Initiative along the lines of the proposed Rules of Procedure herewith appended?

4. Will you, if elected, use the power of your office to carry out the will of the majority as expressed by any Referendum votes that may be taken?

5. Will you, if elected, use the power of your office to submit for the decision of the voters any measure that is asked for by ten per cent. of the electors.

It was decided that the organization of the Federation should consist of a president and secretary and a committee of three. The officers were instructed to secure delegates from the Board of Trade, the Labor Unions and all other associations possible and that their delegates to form part of the executive committee.

The following officers were elected: President, John McCann; Committee, Messrs. Lundy, Fairns and Montgomery. Mr. S. W. Robinson, the Secretary, was elected at the previous meeting last Wednesday.

THE STORY OF A MINE

The figures jumped from £45,000 to a million. Are you responsible for that jump?—No.

The Judge: Who is responsible for raising the purchase price to a million of money?—The only terms that were offered to me was a million of money. I know nothing of anything else.

Defendant: How many shares did you and your nominees finger?—I think about 400,000.

MRS. HOOLEY'S "ANNA MARIAS."

Did you not assure me that Mrs. Hooley was a wealthy woman, and that her undertaking to pay these calls was as good as money in the bank?—No.

Don't you carry about with you her cheques ready signed?—Two or three I often have with me.

Don't you call them "Anna Marias"—speaking of them familiarly?—No, I don't.

Mr Hooley denied that he had ever made overtures in regard to this action through a Mr. Cawson.

There the judge interposed, and in answer to further questions Mr. Hooley denied that over the telephone on Sunday night he had asked Mr. Cawston to keep away from the court, and to stay in bed on Monday.

"He rang me up at the Albemarle Hotel and said, 'I hear you are going to get it to-morrow in the courts.' I said, 'All right, I shall see you there, I expect,'" explained Mr. Hooley.

MAN WHO "THINKS IN MILLIONS."

Defendant, in addressing the jury, said the increasing of the capital to a million was just the sort of thing that Mr Hooley would do. "He thinks in millions; traffics in millions."

In the witness-box defendant said when he returned from Canada and reported favorably on the mine he told Hooley that he wanted 100,000 shares to carry out the construction of the company, and Hooley gave him 25,000.

In cross-examination defendant admitted that the company was not advertised in a regular manner, but "in a surreptitious manner."

"Hooley (defendant said) was generally very glad to get hold of money and very loth to part with it."

Asked whether he could get Corundum shares from anybody else as cheap as 1s., he replied, "Yes; he was offered them at six-pence apiece."

LOST MONEY AND CREDIT.

Mr. George R. Cawston said he had been associated with Mr. Hooley, and had carried on his operations. Mr. Hooley was in communication with him on Sunday night, after he had been subpoenaed, and did not want him to come.

"What are you?" asked cross-examining counsel.—"I suppose I am one of those who have been swindled by Mr. Hooley. I used to be with him. He told me he was going to make a lot of money for me. I have lost all mine—certainly my credit.

What are you now?—Do you think it is possible after all these disclosures for me to get anything to do?

"When did you cease to be on friendly terms with Mr. Hooley?"

"When he kicked me out of his flat."

Witness was then cross-examined as to a letter he had written in connection with the case of "Bradshaw v. Kelly," and he asserted that that letter was written at Risley Hall at the direction of Hooley, who practically compelled him to do it.

The case was adjourned.

GOOD LIVING

Quite often results in bad health, because what is termed "good living" is usually the gratification of the palate without reference to the nutrition of the body. When the good liver is a business man and rises from a full meal to plunge at once into work requiring mental effort the result is almost sure to be disastrous, because digestion draws upon the same nervous forces which are employed in thought. In time the stomach becomes diseased, the processes of digestion and nutrition are imperfectly performed and there is a physical breakdown.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It eliminates the effete poisonous matter which originates in the system as a consequence of imperfect digestion. It gives sound health to the whole body.

"I wish to say to the world that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has proved a great blessing to me," writes Mrs. Ellen E. Bacon, of Shutesbury, Franklin Co., Mass. "Prior to September, 1897, I had doctored for my stomach trouble for several years, going through a course of treatment without any real benefit. In September, 1896, I had very sick spells and grew worse; could eat but little. I commenced in September, 1897, to take Dr. Pierce's medicine, and in a short time I could eat and work. I have gained twenty pounds in two months."

FREE. Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of customs and mailing only. Send 31 one-cent stamps for the book in paper covers, or 50 stamps for the cloth-bound volume. Address Dr. R.V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

GENERAL VILJOEN VS. BUFFALO BILL

Boer Bound for St. Louis to Arrange for Big Show

NOT LOOKING FOR A WIFE

Hopes for Success in New Boer Colony to be Established at Guer ara, Mexico

New York, December 22—The famous Boer General, Ben. J. Viljoen, accompanied by Capt. A. W. Lewis, formerly of the Canadian Scouts, arrived in New York yesterday. The General and his friend are on their way to St. Louis to make arrangements for producing a big show on the style of Buffalo Bill's to illustrate the principal battles of the Boer war. It is intended to give the show outside the Exposition grounds. The owners of the show will be organized as a stock company, with a capital of $50,000.

The General laughed when he was asked if he was coming here to marry a rich widow. "I have been married now for twelve years, so you can see how ridiculous the story is," he said.

Talking about the Boer colony in Mexico, he said the one that was started at Chihuahua was not as prosperous as it had been expected, for the reason that the Mexican Government had not voted the money to pay the passage of the Boer families from their homes in South Africa to Mexico.

Will Go to St. John

Information was received last night that the Singer Sewing Machine Company, which were offered inducements to locate in Peterborough, have decided to go to St. Johns.

—Mr. Jos. Louden, marine engineer, and one of the popular crew of the Str. "City of Peterborough, last season, is home from Owen Sound, from which place he has been running out of since the close of navigation here. Joe reports the fall run as having been unusually rough and stormy.

HUNT FOR THE SCHOMBERG FIREBUGS IS CONTINUED

Schomberg, Dec. 19.—Intense interest was taken here yesterday in the investigation into the mysterious fires in King Township, held before Inspector Rogers in the St. George's Hotel. There were upwards of 300 farmers in attendance. Mr. H. H. Dewart, K.C., County Crown Attorney, represented the Crown, while Mr. T. Herbert Lennox, of Aurora, appeared for the Godsons. Twenty-four witnesses were summoned to discover, if possible, the person or persons responsible for the fires that have robbed James Bell, of the Township of King, of his house and two barns, and his son John of his barn, making a total loss of $6,700, and a $700 loss sustained by George Brown through the loss of his furniture in the house fire of James Bell.

The history of the case in brief is that James Bell, who resides in Tecumseh Township, inherited the old homestead in King Township on the death of his father. Mr. Bell rented the property to Thomas Godson, who gave up his lease in March, 1903. There was an arrangement whereby Godson was to pay a portion of the rental in work, and when he left a disagreement occurred as to terms, Godson claiming that Bell owed him $32.32. Godson entered suit, and the case was set for trial on July 13th last.

Offered to Settle.

Before that date, however, Godson offered to settle for $10, and afterwards for $3, but Bell was obdurate. When the case was called, Godson refused to enter the witness-box, and the suit was dismissed.

After Godson left the Bell property he moved to an adjoining farm, where he, his wife, and son Joseph lived. Mr. Bell continued to reside in Tecumseh Township, but worked the homestead vacated by Godson.

In April a trifling fire occurred in the woodshed of the farmhouse. On July 10th the house itself was destroyed by fire, and on October 9th the two barns with their contents were consumed. On November 18th the smokehouse, the only building remaining on the property, was destroyed, while on November 22nd the barn of John Bell, son of James Bell, was also burned.

Enquiry Started.

It was proved beyond the shadow of a doubt that all five fires were of incendiary origin. This led the Attorney-General's Department to appoint Inspector Rogers to conduct an enquiry. He opened the investigations at Schomberg on the 8th inst. and after hearing a number of witnesses, adjourned the hearing till yesterday. The court as constituted cannot make any finding, but the County Crown Attorney can, and if he thinks the evidence warrants, institute criminal proceedings.

The principal witnesses yesterday were Joseph Hanlon, a farmer, who swore that the statement made by Joseph Godson at the first hearing, that he was mowing hay at his uncle's place the day James Bell's house was burned down, was not correct. He stated positively that he did not work in the field he said he did on the day in question.

John Walker, another farmer, told of a conversation he had with Thomas Godson, in which he says Godson told him that he saw Bell leave his premises on the day of the fire, in the afternoon, and that he was the last man to be on the place. This evidence is looked upon as important, from the fact that Godson swore that he could not see Bell's house from his own, and further, that he never went near Bell's place, and especially not on that day.

Mary Godson, wife of Joseph Godson, corroborated the testimony of her father-in-law in regard to being on the verandah the time that the fire started. She said that Thomas Godson sat looking at the fire for several minutes before he went to the field to tell Bateman of the affair. Her husband had left early that morning and to her knowledge was not around when the fire broke out. She admitted that a person could have gone to the field and back where Bateman was working between the times before the big puff of smoke was seen, and the thin smoke seen first.

Lost Sight of Her.

Questioned as to whether or not her husband went into the bush west of Bell's buildings to secure poles for the repairing of a hencoop, she denied that her husband was there. She said he had gone to the bush just one field south of the barns. After making the assertion that her husband had not been out of her sight from noon till tea-time, she finally admitted, after cross-examination, that she left her husband to get the tea.

The other evidence went to show that Thomas Godson did not entertain too kindly a feeling toward the Bells, alleging that they had "rogued" him out of money. Several witnesses testified that Godson had made threats against the Bells and had repeatedly declared that he would get even with them for withholding the $32 due him.

The case of the Crown was practically closed yesterday, but the inquest was further adjourned to the Court House, Toronto, until January 15, with a view to permitting Mr. Lennox to recall the Godsons if he should see fit to do so. At the first inquest, when the Godsons were examined, they were not represented by counsel.

The inquest has served a useful purpose, as prior to the holding of the hearing the farmers of the district seemed afraid to say anything respecting the case, while they are now disposed to talk quite freely of what they know respecting the matter.

RAILWAY ACCIDENTS.

MISHAPS ON THIS DIVISION OF THE GRAND TRUNK

Three or Four Cars Wrecked in Lindsay Yard This Morning

Lindsay Post—The mixed train which arrives here from Toronto every morning between three and four o'clock in charge of conductor Fred. Russell and Engineer Wallace met with an accident this morning as it was pulling into the yard. When a short distance west of the roundhouse the train separated and the rear end bumped into the front section with terrific force. Two heavy coal cars, containing 40 tons each, were derailed, one of them lodging across the track, and a box car was badly damaged. The wrecking crew were at work all morning, but the track was not clear in time for the 10.40 express from Toronto, and it was delayed over an hour.

It is reported that a second mishap occurred last evening on the Northern division near Uthoff station, south of Coldwater, and was caused by the Midland-Blackwater way-freight meeting a freight bound for Lindsay. No details are available, the local railway officials professing to know nothing about it.

A third accident is said to have occurred on the Peterboro-Belleville section yesterday afternoon. The story leaked out through one of the crew having telephoned to his family here. It is understood that no one was injured. A local official admitted there had been a slight mishap, but would give no particulars.

INCREASE IN CRIME

Murders and Other Felonies Demonstrated by Records on Increase

Chicago, Dec. 22—In the official Chicago statistics, published yesterday for the first nine months of the present year the increase in crime is shown even in the number of arrests. During this time 9,287 persons were arrested for felonies, against 7,6[illegible] for the corresponding period of 1902, and 10,23[illegible] for the whole of the year, 1902. During the nine months also there were forty arrests for murders, against twenty-six for the whole of 1902, while no figures are given for the corresponding period of that year. The most startling comparison is the number of arrests for accessory to murder, on which charge there were 9[illegible] arrests in the first nine months of 1903 and only 2[illegible] for the whole of the year 1902.

WHY RUSSIA IS ANXIOUS TO POSTPONE FIGHTING WITH JAPAN?

The War Clouds Lowering and Both Nations Preparing for the Conflict

RUSSIA HAS THE ADVANTAGE AT START

Japan will Land an Army in Corea and Will Attack Russia in Manchuria—A Big Conflict

London, Dec. 22—The war clouds are lowering, and hostilities cannot long be averted. The matter of peace or war now rests with Russia, and there is nothing more to be said. In the meantime, Japan is preparing to invade Corea and will also attack Russia in China.

Now is the critical time in the estrangement between Japan and Russia, writes a naval expert. One power is ready, and has its forces on the spot; the other has a reserve, which could it be brought into action, would ensure success, but which is, unprepared, many thousand miles away.

To estimate the strategical problem correctly, we must get a joint estimate of Russia's objective.

The Trans-Siberian railway was at first represented to be an integral part of M. Witte's scheme for developing the industrial resources of the Russian Empire. But the pretence of industrialism vanished with the "discovery" that a line to Khartoum was an impossibility, and that Russian interests demanded the short cut through Manchuria to Vladivostok, with a branch via Kharbin to Port Arthur, when the later was acquired.

Now, no one can suppose that Port Arthur, or any port, warm water or otherwise, is in itself, an objective, or that the Gulf of Pechi-li is a strikingly desirable base for the Russian navy.

The acquisition of Manchuria, again, is a means to an end, not an end in itself. Similarly, the ultimate objective is not to be found in Corea.

All this is pretence; these demands are stepping stones only to that domination of China, which the Russians seek, and which is the one prize worth having in the Far East. The possession of Corea is essential to the safe prosecution of the enterprise, and it is there in order to thwart the larger enterprise that Japan puts her foot down, and will not take it up again.

STRATEGICAL POSITION.

But how does this affect the strategical position? Let it be granted that Japan is the stronger at sea, Russia has but to send her forces across the Yalu and take possession of the Corean Empire. She could overwhelm the Japanese land forces, even if these were transported without molestation to Seoul.

But Russia has set her hand to a most perilous task; her strategical position is as bad as any known to history, and it is not wonderful that she desires to gain time.

If she can delay the struggle for three years she will gain four great advantages.

1. She will have concentrated a fleet in the China seas which Japan, who will have no new ships ready till 1906, will be powerless to resist.

2. She will have completed docks at Port Arthur and Vladivostok, in which her biggest battleships can be repaired.

3. She will have her railway securely laid and doubled, at any rate, for a good part of the length.

4. She will have had time to accumulate stores at Kharbin and Mukden, and have so strengthened her hold upon Manchuria, that she will have overawed the natives into quiescence, the experience of Blatchgrovensk sufficiently indicates the means she will employ.

The naval position at the present moment is as follows:

Japan has six and Russia has seven modern battleships on the spot, the Japanese being superior to the Russian in speed, armament, protection, and homogeneity. Of armoured cruisers, Japan has six modern and one old, to Russia's four, which are of inferior value, and she is also greatly superior in protected cruisers, slightly in torpedo craft.

WELL EQUIPPED DOCKYARDS.

Furthermore, she has the additional advantage of having well-equipped dockyards at hand. Her ships, therefore, will not only be turned out in the pink of condition, but after an action, she will be ready to repair her cripples, and be ready to fight again long before the Russian squadron could leave its port.

If she were so fortunate as to capture one or two of the Russian ships, it is possible that, by the time Russia was able to concentrate a fresh squadron, she would be able to add them as effective fighting machines to her navy.

QUESTION OF COAL.

But re-inforcements for a sorely-beaten squadron cannot afford economical speed and it would not be safe to reckon on the battleships steaming for more than ten hours without filling up with coal for they could not with safety empty their bunkers completely.

The Oslyabia will probably take twenty-four or twenty-five days to steam to Saigon which we will account the "jumping-off place" to enter the contested area the Alexander III. at least thirty-five from Cronstadt thither. The former therefore, must coal at least twice, the latter at least three times on her way.

Now, if hostilities began on either ship leaving the port at which she at present lies, she may receive from any neutral port sufficient coal to carry her to the nearest port of the country which owns her; but then may not coal again at any station belonging to the Power which supplied her for three months.

The Oslyabia (to take her case) has the following ports on route—Port Said, Aden Djibouti, Obock, Colombo and Singapore, of which three are British, two French, (both of these are in the same locality), and one Egyptian, under British control.

The same is the case with the Alexander III., which could make her way to the head of the Canal bycalling at German, French, Italian and Austrian ports without prejudice to her further proceedings. But to coal at Saigon is imperative for both ships, seeing that there is every possibility of their having to fight, at any rate, play hide and seek before they can effect a junction with their colleagues.

Therefore, if France "plays the game" (and the alternative is to make herself a belligerent and bring us into the arena by virtue of our treaty with Japan) and we also stand upon our strict rights as neutrals, it is difficult to see how the Russian warships are to reach Port Arthur at all, at any rate till all is over bar the shouting.

Moreover, from Saigon to Port Arthur is all two thousand miles, quite as much as a battleship can run comfortably without coaling, and in the direct way lies the Japanese island of Formosa.

The Russian admiral will have, if he can, to dodge the Japanese fleet, and steam to meet his reinforcements. But he cannot go very far south, for he has to get back again. Nor can the ships coming north make very much of a detour to avoid Formosa and meet him or they will run short of coal.

Apparently, therefore, a junction between the Russian fleet and its reinforcements will only be possible if the Russian admiral can open the way by a successful engagement. That is unlikely. In any other event, on the analogy of the umpire's decision in our recent manoeuvres, Japan would remain with the command of the sea.

The long and short of the matter is that a war of coal strategy has already begun; the Russians are endeavoring to manoeuvre their ships into a favorable position. Japan's best possible "counter" is a speedy declaration of war.

Tokio, Dec. 21.—Japan's reply to Russia was handed to Baron de Rosen this afternoon at a conference between the Russian Minister and Foreign Minister Komura at the Russian legation.

Japan's reply is in no way in the nature of an ultimatum, but she asks Russia to reconsider certain essential points in her reply to Japan.

Insurance Rates Rose.

Business on the Stock Exchange today opened flat on account of the Far Eastern situation. Japanese fell half a point. Consols went down three-eighths, and Russian stocks declined half a point.

Japanese-Russian war risks at Lloyd's to-day rose 25 guineas per cent, to the end of January, and 45 to the end of February.

Cargo insurance jumped from 5 to 20 shillings. The owners of two cargoes already half way to Japan found difficulty in affecting insurance even at the latter rate.

NEITHER COUNTRY BORROWING.

London, Dec. 21.—Lord Rothschild, while declining to venture an opinion as to the outcome of the Japanese-Russian crisis, said to-day; "One of the most important factors is whether America will seize the opportunity to press her claims for open ports in Manchuria. If she does so it would certainly help a peaceful solution. I have heard of no suggested loans, either Japanese or Russian. What they would have to do in case of war is a hypothesis I do not care to discuss. The present conditions are quit puzzling enough without endeavoring to prophesy.

It is generally understood, says the Tokio correspondent of the Times, that Japan asks Russia to reconsider her reply.

The reply contained no tangible concession inasmuch as it excluded Japan altogether from the Manchurian question and proposed an equal position for the two powers in Corea.

KITCHENER WON'T WED

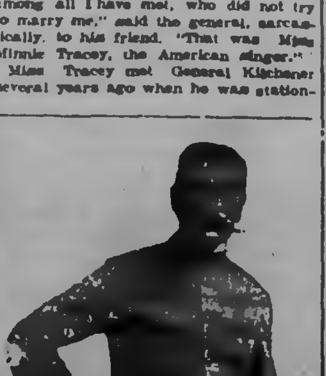
SEEMS MORE THAN EVER DEVOTED TO BACHELOR LIFE

If He Should Change His Mind an American Girl Would be His Choice

London, December 21— A friend of Lord Kitchener who has just returned from India reports that the famous general is as much a woman hater at heart as ever, in spite of the stories published in Europe and America that he was likely to marry soon.

"There is only one unmarried woman among all I have met, who did not try to marry me," said the general, sarcastically, to his friend. "That was Miss Minnie Tracey, the American singer."

Miss Tracey met General Kitchener several years ago when he was stationed at Cairo and she was singing there in grand opera. It was in the beginning of the mad feminine campaign for the noted man's heart, and he swore long and loudly against all womankind.



LORD KITCHENER

Won the General's Regard.

But he was much struck by Miss Tracey's unassuming, simple manners in society, no less than by her beautiful voice. When she declined to receive a casket of jewels certain young men of Cairo offered her, Lord Kitchener sought an introduction and gave several dinners in her honor during the Cairo season, as he discovered that she was not advertising the fact of his attention, and took it in the spirit it was given, which did not include an offer of marriage.

In London last year when Lord Kitchener was at home and Miss Tracey was giving a series of concerts there he went out of his way to be agreeable to her and tried to induce her to go to India on a concert tour.

Is a Beautiful Woman

Miss Tracey is a tall, statuesque brunette. Her mouth is especially beautiful and calls forth much enthusiasm from artists. She is a New York girl, and belongs to the aristocratic Lorillard-Spencer family. Her relatives made strenuous objections when she chose a musical career and for that reason her chief triumphs have been won in Europe. She is a great favorite throughout France, Switzerland, Holland and Sweden. She makes her home in Paris, where she is in the exclusive St. Germain set, which is not often opened to Americans.

Mr Conried made her an offer to sing in New York this winter when she was in Europe last summer, but it was not large enough to induce her to give up other plans.

THE TOWN WILL APPEAL TO A HIGHER COURT.

Against the Ruling of Judge Meredith on the Motion to Quash Street Lighting By-Law

The Town Council met in Committee of the Whole last night to, as the Mayor explained, give an expression of opinion on the position in which the Town stands regarding the Street Lighting and street Railway bylaws, for the guidance of the Legal committee.

All the Aldermen were present, except Ald. Clinkscale and Finnie.

A lengthy discussion of three hours resulted in the following resolutions acted on;

Ald. Morrison moved, seconded by Ald. Shortly,—That the committee recommend that the Council amend the Street Railway bylaw as suggested by Judge Meredith.—Carried.

Ald. McWilliams moved, seconded by Ald. Rush,—That this committee recommend the Council to advise the Legal committee to appeal against the decision of Judge Meredith, on the Street Lighting bylaw, as counsel may advise.—Carried.

Ald. Best enquired why this bylaw, which had been quashed by the learned Judge, should be appealed.

Ald. Morrison—"Because I believe he has misinterpreted the minds of the majority of the Council.

Ald. Best could not agree with Ald. Morrison that the Judge's decision was erroneous, and opposed both resolutions, as did Ald. O'Connell.

Ald. Morrison, Rush, Shortly, Edgcumbe, McWilliams and Batten, voted for both resolutions. Ald. Corkery did not vote either way.

At the incipiency of the proceedings Town Solicitor E. H. D. Hall reported that Judge Meredith had sustained the Street Lighting bylaw; as to the Street Railway bylaw, he had ruled that if clause 37 were amended so as to make it clear that it was not intended to exempt the dividends of the Peterborough Radial Railway Company's stockholders, the bylaw would stand good; this can be done by striking out three words.

A communication was read from Mr. Shapley, the Town's Counsel, advising that the Judge's ruling concerning the Street Lighting bylaw be appealed to the Divisional Court; or if the Street Railway bylaw were amended as recommended, the Street Lighting bylaw might be re-enacted.

A communication was also read from Mr. Arthur Stevenson, to the effect that the Peterborough Light and Power Company are not overly anxious to do the street lighting at prices agreed upon, owing to the difficulty of getting power, by reason of scarcity of water; still they are prepared to keep faith with the Town, but should the matter be left over till next year they would wish to be free to make terms with the new Council.

A letter was read from Mr. R. M. Dennistoun, in which he pointed out that the Peterborough Radial Railway Company will readily agree to the proposed amendment. They never intended that the dividends of shareholders should be exempted from taxation.

The Town Solicitor here remarked that Judge Meredith, after giving his decision, had intimated that his ruling concerning the Street Lighting bylaw was a matter which should be appealed to another court.

Ald. O'Connell said the bylaw had been quashed on the ground that the Council intended to pay $14,000 more for street lighting than necessary as a bonus for the street railway. This was perfectly understood, he opined, by the whole Council. So far as he is personally concerned, the greatest inducement to him to support the two bylaws was to furnish inducements for Mr. Stuart to operate an efficient and up-to-date street railway system. He always maintained that the proposition was a bonus to Mr. Stuart and his company, and did not wish to shelter himself in any way. But he never knew until in Toronto, when the question came before the judge, that the contract with the Peterborough Radial Railway Company was one with the old company in existence under that name for several years. Had he been aware of that fact, he would have hesitated before giving his support to any measure which would grant a franchise to that company which had failed to successfully operate the street railway in the past, and so carelessly regarded its agreement with the town. He considered it fortunate if the town were not found to give a 30 years franchise to the Peterborough Radial Railway Company.

Ald. Best—"The old company was known as the Peterborough and Ashburnham Street Railway Company, and secured a charter in 1902 which holds good until 1905."

Ald. O'Connell—"We were led to believe that we were dealing with the Cereal Company."

The Mayor—"Is there any reason to doubt that we were dealing with Mr. Stuart?"

Ald. O'Connell—None except from facts which came to light in Toronto. Affidavits were filed showing that Mr. Stuart had no connection with the Peterborough Radial Railway Company. And another affidavit appeared in tonight's Examiner to this effect also. We were led to believe we were granting a franchise to Mr. Stuart, who would give a railway service which would prove a credit to the town and promote trade with outlying districts. If this were not the case, it is very fortunate that there is a flaw in the Street Railway bylaw, and that we are still in a position to deal with the Cereal Company. Again, if that were a bonus bylaw we were considering, and as such invalid, we should have been so advised and never been allowed to pass it."

Ald. Morrison explained that in the first place the proposition for street lighting and the operation of the street railway came from Mr. Dennistoun, acting for the Peterborough Light and Power Company and the Peterborough Radial Railway Company, through Mr. Stuart. At that time Mr. Stuart had an option on the charter, plant and assets of the latter company; he also had the controlling interest in the Peterborough Light and Power Company, and his idea was to operate the two concerns in conjunction with each other, so as to cheapen the cost of running the railway, the only additional expense for which, after the initial outlay, would be in motormen and conductors. We submitted an offer for lighting at $40.00 per lamp net, which Mr. Stuart accepted; but subsequently the Council ascertained that they had two companies to deal with—the Peterborough Light and Power Company for street lighting only, as they had no power under their charter to operate a railway, and with the Peterborough Radial Railway Company as they hold the charter for the street railway. It was, however, thoroughly understood that Mr. Stuart would take over that charter. During the delay which necessarily occurred Mr. Stuart's option expired, and he secured a new one, which also expired before negotiations were concluded and in his opinion Mr. Stuart was wise, pending the ratification of the bylaw by the Council, not to appear coupled with the Peterborough Radial Railway Company, and not to renew his option. Therefore, until the question was definitely fixed, we had to deal with the Peterborough Radial Railway Company, which Ald. Morrison contended, the committee found to be in good financial standing, having today $100,000 of subscribed stock and $20,000 in the bank. We also asked Mr. Stuart or Mr. Dennistoun to put up a check for $5,000 as a guarantee that the railway would be operated, and this Mr. Stuart complied with. Ald. Morrison then went on to claim that the Street Lighting contract with the Peterborough Light and Power Company was the best of the two for the town, which gets 25 additional lamps at a saving of $125 on the old contract. He thought this contract the cheapest and best the town would ever have an opportunity of securing, for he understands that Mr. R. R. Hall is already approaching Mr. Dennistoun with a view to an amalgamation for domestic lighting; and further, Mr. Hall says that if the Council is dilatory and does not close with this contract, the town would have to pay $75 per lamp. Ald. Morrison was also of the belief that Peterborough is getting cheaper and better lighting than any town or city in Canada, and the bylaw should be re-enacted as advised by counsel in Toronto. He had no doubt that were the Street Railway bylaw amended and allowed to stand Mr. Stuart would build and operate the road, as he had put up the $5,000 guarantee.

The Mayor said there was no mystery about the proceedings. The Council had had no dealings with any other than Mr. Dennistoun, Mr. Stuart and Mr. Cox and those associated with them. Everything was settled with Mr. Stuart and his syndicate, and its them we have been dealing with, and at their request the bylaw was put in the name of the Peterborough Radial Railway Company, because the Peterborough Light and Power Company's charter would not permit of railway operations. The Council are now free to act in the matter; but the people want the street railway, and are willing to have it on the conditions specified. It may be wise for the Council to stand by the two contracts, go before the people on them, and let the municipal elections decide the question.

Ald. Best—"I'm perfectly willing to go before the people on the question."

The Mayor—"So am I, Mr. Best. The judge expressed his opinion that there is nothing to hinder a re-enacting of the Street Lighting bylaw."

Ald. Best—"That's not his judgment; only an opinion."

The Mayor—"On the other hand, our counsel and solicitor say we have good reason for appealing that bylaw.")

To Ald. O'Connell, the Mayor replied that he did not know whether the town could pass a bylaw as intended, in shape of a $14,000 bonus, without appealing to the people. He would not commit himself on that question. He advised Council to appeal the bylaw, go to the people on the question and act afterwards. It did not occur to him to enquire into the relations between Mr. Stuart and the Peterborough Radial Railway Company; but he assumed the Cereal Company were in a position to carry out the provisions of the street railway franchise. After the old street railway collapsed, its assets were seized by the sheriff and sold to the late Mr. Hazlitt and Mr. T. E. Bradburn; the latter gentleman and the Dickson ladies still hold those assets, and in 1902 obtained a new charter to build and operate in town and outlying districts. Subsequently they negotiated with Mr. Bein, of Detroit, who could not raise the funds to take over the system; they also entered into other negotiations which also fell through. When Mr. Stuart came forward, he (the Mayor) thought it the chance of a life time to secure an up-to-dat system. The first thing Mr. Stuart did was to get an option from the old railway company, and negotiated with the town on that option. He (the Mayor) can understand how Mr. Stuart has no connection with the Peterborough Radial Railway Company; but no doubt he has a fixed price for taking over the assets of that company.

Ald. Best—"Is it a fair question to ask what that option price was?"

The Mayor—"Will you explain what what bearing that has on the case?"

Ald. Morrison—"According to Mr. Hall, the purchase price was to be $30,000, half in stock and half in bonds."

The Mayor here again reiterated that he was quite prepared to go before the electors on both bylaws and stand or fall by their decision. As to the street lighting contract, he was quite satisfied that the town had made a good bargain. He did not think that the Otonabee Power Company would today take the contract, or that they could carry it out. He did not want them to have it for the reason that a new set of poles would have to be erected in town.

Ald. Best—"Are you talking to the reporters."

The Mayor—"Yes, I am talking to the people through the reporters."

After a further lengthy discussion on the question, which will be published tomorrow, it was decided to appeal the judge's ruling on the Street Lighting bylaw which appeal will probably not be heard for three months. In the meantime the new contract with the Peterborough Light and Power Company will hold good until the appeal is settled. In this way it is calculated to secure adequate street lighting until the question is definitely disposed of.

Ald. Best agreed that the better way would be to enter into a year's contract with one of the companies, during which time arrangements could be made for the town to furnish its own street lighting from the waterworks dam, at $35 per lamp for as good service as we have now.

CONCERNING WHALES AND SEALS

Canada has now a big set-off to the Behring Sea seals in the whales of Hudson Bay, on which, bye the bye, American hunters have long been poaching, or at least making destructive inroads, without interruption by the Dominion. This state of things may, however, now be disturbed, as the Dominion Government has seemingly decided to assert practically Canada's treaty accorded rights of full control and ownership—under the Empire—of the great sea of Hudson Bay. As a result, Canada has, as the Toronto News the other day reminded us, a far stronger claim to the Hudson Bay whales, since they are born and live in Canadian territorial waters that are well enclosed by Canadian land, whilst the seals of Behring Sea are not merely denizens of Alaskan inlets, but inhabitants of extra territorial ocean waters, over which no state can claim the sole control.

Seemingly the one point which the American whalers can raise in respect of their Hudson Bay operations, is that they have for some years carried them on uninterruptedly. But Canada can in reply assert that this was only "on sufferance" and not in such state recognized manner, as to create a valid right of continuance. The case would, therefore, seem to be one in which Canada can claim to decide whether or not this American whaling in Hudson Bay is to continue, and, if so, on what terms of revenue or other contribution.

The matter is the more interesting for ourselves, as the subject comes to the front just before the time for a resettlement of the terms of the Behring Sea sealing convention, which is an expected event of the early future. Under all the circumstances the Dominion has seemingly excellent vantage ground in this dual concern, and it is to be hoped that in coming negotiations this will not be lost by our rulers. We have suffered from too many bad bargains with our neighbors of the States, and in this respect history should not repeat itself.

THE WAR SPIRIT IN JAPAN

The war spirit in Japan is becoming so formidable that the imperial government, who is now seeking to avoid a clash with Russia, may be compelled to recognize the popular clamor for a resort to arms. If the Mikado had any doubts about the feelings of his subjects on the Manchurian and Corean questions the recent impeachment of the cabinet's alleged inconsistent and injurious foreign policy must have convinced him that the country is on the verge of war.

Russia's refusal to evacuate Manchuria, her attitude toward Corea, her frequent encroachments in the Celestial empire—these are the grievances which have caused the people of Japan to desire war. During Weyler's bloody work in Cuba indignation in the United States over the inhuman treatment of the reconcentrados finally brought on a struggle which ended Spanish rule in the Western Hemisphere. The Mikado of Japan may experience the pressure which is sometimes exerted by indignant people, and which—like the dispute between Spain and the United States—eventually causes a clash between two high-spirited nations.

NEW LIGHT ON HISTORY

The prospective fair at St. Louis, in recognition of the Louisiana purchase in 1803, has already stimulated historical research to such an extent that new and interesting facts about that immense domain which was secured to the United States through President Jefferson's expansion aspirations have been brought to light. Until recently, the French government refused all requests for permission to copy documents in the archives of the foreign office. During the year that Francis Parkman was in France, studying manuscripts which contributed towards his fund of information relating to "The Jesuits in North America," and kindred works, he was probably seriously handicapped by his inability to secure copies of documents lying in the foreign office. M. Delcasse, minister of foreign affairs, does not believe that the chronicles desired by American historians should be so guarded as to handicap intelligent research. Accordingly, E. Spencer Pratt, formerly United States Minister to Persia, has been able to throw new light on Louisiana and transactions preceding its purchase by the United States.

The archives in the French foreign office show that Louis XV. gave the vast Louisiana territory to Spain after Great Britain had refused to accept it. When Louis made his offer to the English he expected that the latter would cede Florida to France. In presenting his gift, the monarch, who knew more about courtesans than affairs of state, said,—"I feel that Louisiana but poorly compensates your Majesty for the losses you have sustained, but in ceding you this colony I consider less its value than the good accomplished in uniting the Spanish and the French nations. Union is necessary to our subjects and our house." Later documents show that Spain returned the territory to France. In 1819, Spain ceded Florida to the United States.

Perhaps Spain's refusal to participate in the St. Louis Exposition is due to reflection over what might have been if her sovereign had realized that the gift from Louis XV. was worth keeping.

The Enterprise, which took part in the search for Sir John Franklin, is to be used for pile driving for the Dover harbor works. The Enterprise and the Investigator left England, under Captains Collinson and McClure, respectively, in January, 1850, and it was in the May of 1855 that Captain Collinson returned home after one of the most remarkable voyages, even recorded, even in the fascinating story of Arctic exploration. Of all the expeditions fitted out by the government to discover Franklin's fate, Collinson's came nearest to success, and his voyage has been described as a record of patience, endurance and unflagging perseverance under difficulties which have perhaps never been surpassed.

IF YOU HAVE

CATARRH

Remember the best Catarrh medicine that money can buy is Catarrhozone; it cures quickly and permanently when all else fails

The remedy don't exist that will cure Catarrh as quickly as Catarrhozone. It relieves the most stubborn cases in a short time, and drives the disease so thoroughly from the system that it never returns.

Druggists boldly recommend Catarrhozone in preference to other remedies, because they know it is the best, and every progressive doctor prescribed it for the same good reason.

Catarrhozone is a rational, common-sense treatment that finds favor with everybody. It cures by the inhalation of medicated air, which comes into contact with the mucous surface of all the breathing organs. It gets at the source of the trouble, kills the germs and drives every vestige of catarrh right out of the system.

It doesn't matter how deep-seated or chronic your case may be, Catarrhozone can cure it. Even though a thousand other remedies have failed, don't give up hope till you have used Catarrhozone. It has cured other cases probably worse than yours, and will cure yours if it gets a chance.

Mr. Dutcher Law, a prominent citizen of Italy Cross, N.S., says: "I experimented with hundreds of catarrh remedies and found the majority to be worthless, dismal failures. Catarrhozone was the first to give lasting relief; it cured me and I am with pleasure testifying to its merits as a cure for Catarrh of the nose and throat.

(Signed) DUTCHER LAW.

You are sure to derive the most pleasant results from Catarrhozone. It has been tested many times and never found wanting. Every druggist in Canada sells it. Complete two months' treatment, guaranteed to cure costs $1, or a trial size 25c. By mail from N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

CABINET ACCEPTS TRUNK SECURITY

The Railway has Deposited its Guarantee Stock instead of Straight Cash

Legislation will be Required Although the Paper is as Good as the Money Itself

Ottawa, Dec. 19.—The following official statement was issued last night by the Government: The Grand Trunk Railway Company has deposited £1,000,000 of their guaranteed stock as security for the carrying out of the agreement entered into last session between the Government and the Grand Trunk Pacific, subject to ratification of their shareholders at a general meeting. Inasmuch as the contract requires cash or Government securities for the deposit, legislation will be required to confirm the acceptance of the securities which have been deposited, though such securities are worth to-day more than par, and their value is unquestionable.

THE OFFICERS' DEFENCE

Wreckers of the Flora Tell How the Accident Occurred

Esquimalt, B. C., Dec 19.—At the trial of Capt. Baker, commander, and Lieut. Grant, navigator, of H.M.S. Flora, before the court-martial yesterday, in commencing the defence, both officers made statements in which they denied neglect, and, while admitting an error of judgment had been made, they held the circumstances were such that they were guiltless of the charge of hazarding and straining the Flora. They said that the speed of the cruiser was such that, by reckoning, she would have been past Village Point, and when the spar buoy they believed to be Base Flat beacon was sighted by Capt. Baker and others there was a seagull perched on it, which gave this spar, distorted in the fog, the appearance of the Base Flat bacon, which has a white disc surmounting.

AN ANGEL'S WARNING

Wm. Silver's Life Saved by Unpremeditated Move

Walkerton, Dec. 19.—Wm. Silver has a sand pit in the west end of the town, and on Monday forenoon he went to this pit for a load of the aforesaid building material. He had the load nearly on, when, without knowing why he did it, he suddenly stopped work and started for the mouth of the pit. Before he had taken half a dozen steps the whole top of the pit came down with a tremendous thud. So close was Mr. Silver to the falling earth that a stone of considerable size struck him on the back of the head, almost stunning him. Had he been buried in the mass of sand and stone he would never have got out alive, for there was more than a ton of it. And now the question arises, what was it that caused Mr. Silver to thus suddenly cease work and move away? He does not know himself, for the load was only about half on. Was he so prompted by some kind guardian angel?

A Successful Career.

A North-Western land company, or what might be called a syndicate, composed of some of Toronto's richest men has recently been organized, with a capital of five hundred thousand dollars none of the stock being for sale. The following is a list of the shareholders of this close corporation: Hon. Robert Rogers, Winnipeg, president; J. W. Langmuir, Toronto, vice president; E. W. Day, Toronto, general manager; Thomas G. Blackstock, Robert L. Patterson, W. R. Riddell, K.C., S. H. Janes, S. F. McKinnon, A. D. Harris, R. Harstone of Warkworth.

This company was formed by Mr. E. W. Day, who as a boy went west and resided for fifteen years in Winnipeg, making his mark with the Massey-Harris Company in Manitoba. He left that company in 1895, to become the Western agent of the Globe Loan and Savings Society, of which afterwards he became general manager, with headquarters in Toronto, which position he held until 1902, when this most successful loan company was amalgamated with the Colonial Loan. A year ago he was invited to undertake the organization of a newly-projected Employees' Association, a work which he accomplished in a wonderfully short time, Mr. Day making it the third largest employees' association on the continent within one year, and it will doubtless prove to be one of the most useful organizations which has been formed. Mr. Day, who is still a young man and has amassed considerable money, seems to have been again smitten by the Western fever, and is leaving shortly for the North-West to take the active management of the very strong concern mentioned above, and for a time at least Toronto will lose one of its most active and respected citizens.

A Good Thing Gone Wrong.

Once upon a time a man who lived in the city by choice all the year around sent his family away for the entire summer. And as he came home in the cool of the evening and sat down in a comfortable armchair, while the soft wind blew the draperies around, and he put on his pajamas and lighted a fragrant cigar and ordered his evening meal sent up, he said joyfully to himself:

"Life with me from this time on is indeed one long, sweet cinch. I can smoke all over the house, take a bath every hour, live without curtains and have things my own way. All I want is the companionship of a few congenial spirits."

The next day he went around and told everybody what a grand spot he had, with a bursting sideboard full of real old stuff, and he urged the boys, with tears in his eyes, to make it their home and drop in every evening and feel that they were always welcome.

And all the city boys he knew took him at his word, and night after night they made merry at his expense. Not only this, but they took his money away from him, told him stories that he had heard many times before, and made his life so miserable that in four weeks' time he sent the following telegram to his wife:

"Come at once. Bring all the dogs and children."

A Physical Evil.

A recent number of Medical Talk has an article on the evil physical effects of "whining." Complaints, says the writer, are invariably made in a minor key. This monotony rasps the vocal chords, taxes nasal nerves and muscles that should not be brought into play at all in speaking, and tends to shallow, uneven breathing. The whiner, too, is almost without exception a more or less idle, lazy person. The habit of whining itself tends to sap initiative impulse and increase phlegmatic tendencies. Habitual whining, not healthy, vigorous fault-finding where fault really exists, but the peevish, futile complaining of a narrow nature too indolent to make any effort to rid itself of causes of complaint, has a definitely deleterious physical effect on the whole constitution. Add to this the fact that eternal fault-finding is more than likely to wear out the stanchest friendship and take the light from the loveliest countenance, and the full effects of this insidious and prevalent habit will be better appreciated. "Get the whine out of your voice or it will stop the development and growth of your body. It will narrow and shrink your mind. It will drive away your friends; it will make you unpopular. Quit your whining, brace up; go to work; be something; stand for something; fill your place in the universe. Instead of whining around, exciting only pity and contempt, face about and make something of yourself. Reach up to the stature of a strong, ennobling manhood, to the beauty and strength of a superb womanhood. There is nothing the matter with you. Just quit your whining and go to work."

The Profit in Eggs.

Cornell University Bulletin No. 211 affords some valuable suggestions on hens and eggs. It mentions one White Leghorn flock which averaged for the year 116.9 eggs per hen; another 137.4, and the third 134.8, the average of all being 129.7. It will be seen that the average number of eggs produced per hen is much less than that often claimed. Records of 200 eggs and more per hen have been frequently published in the agricultural press and elsewhere. Inasmuch as these flocks represent the better class of poultrymen, the fowl were in all probability much better fed and cared for than average flocks, it would seem that all claimed records of more than 150 eggs per hen per year should be abundantly verified before being accepted.

The average food cost of the eggs produced ranged from 5.9 cents per dozen in April and May to 49.1 cents per dozen in December, and the average per year was 9.2 cents per dozen. The average selling price of the eggs varied from 16.8 cents per dozen in April to 31.25 cents per dozen in January, with an average of 21.4 cents for the whole year. There were 1,200 fowl in the three flocks, and it cost an average of just about a dollar a year per pen for their food. Under the prices at which food and eggs were figured, the food cost 44 per cent. of the value of the eggs produced, leaving 56 per cent. to provide for labor, interest on investment and equipment, depreciation in value of hens and profits.

To Start a Balky Horse.

Says a horseshoer: "When a horse balks, no matter how badly he sulks or how ugly he is, do not beat him; don't throw sand in his ears; don't use a rope on his forelegs or even burn straw under him.

"Quietly go and pat him on the head a moment; take a hammer or even pick up a stone in the street; tell the driver to sit still, take his lines and hold them quietly, while you lift up either front foot, give each nail a light tap and a good smart tap on the frog; drop the foot quickly, and then chirp to him to go.

"In 99 cases out of 100 the horse will go right on about his business, but the driver must keep his lines taut and not pull or jerk him back. If I have tried this once I have tried it 500 times.

"This may make you smile, but a horse has more common sense than most people are willing to give him credit for. The secret of this little trick is simply diversion. I am a firm believer that with kindness and proper treatment a horse can be driven with a string."

The financial reports for the year just ending show that to keep the doors of the Free Hospital for Consumptives open, maintaining the number of patients for which accommodation has been provided, not less than $25,000 is required for the year now entered upon.

Since the Free Hospital was opened (18 months ago) 224 patients have been received. The help the institution has been to these people—all from the wage-earning and poorer ranks of life—cannot be estimated in human language.

—Edward D. Heddon, Solina, Ont., on leaving the Free Hospital, writes: "I cannot speak too highly of the institution from which I have received so much benefit. I can but tender my best thanks for the kindness shown."

—Minnie Linklater, Hamilton, writes: "I have spent over nine months at the Free Hospital for Consumptives. I believe I have been greatly helped, and shall never hesitate to use my influence to further that good cause."

There is no endowment, excepting the provision made by three life insurance companies for six beds for the current year. Only by the continued contributions of the Canadian public can the work be maintained.

Patients are accepted from every part of the Dominion, and there have been in residence during the past year patients from Prince Edward Island on the east to the Northwest Territories on the west.

'A Chophouse Tragedy'

"Certainly," said Atwell. "Is it private? These are all my friends, so I don't mind hearing it here, if you don't."

"I don't care," the manager retorted, gruffly, sitting down. "Why should I? I'm going out of town in the morning, so Mr. Frothman wanted me to see you to-night, before I went. Southfield read your play this afternoon, and he can't see it. Says we'll have to call it off. And what he says pretty near goes."

"What!" cried Atwell, a sickly pallor coming over his face, the lines about his mouth suddenly drawing hard. "Oh, you don't mean that!"

"I'm sorry, but I do," said the manager.

"What's the matter with it? I'll go see Southfield now," Atwell almost shouted, springing up.

"No use, no use," the other replied, pushing him back again. "It's too late to see him to-night, and he won't see you to-morrow. He's made up his mind; so's Mr. Frothman. You'd better leave 'em alone."

"But I will know what's the matter," cried the playwright. "What did Southfield say? It was the play of his whole career!"

"Well," said the manager, "the play was too sad, in the first place. Mr. Frothman decided that before he sent it to Southfield. The public wouldn't have stood for it."

"Sad! Of course it is sad," shouted Atwell. "It's a tragedy, the tragedy of New York. Good——"

"Perhaps, but it wouldn't have gone with the public. Then Southfield read it. He declared the end was silly and preposterous, and Mr. Frothman agreed. The hero, or whoever it is, kills himself in a cafe with a steel meat knife, doesn't he? Pulls his coat and vest open and pricks himself between the ribs? Well, Southfield couldn't see that at all. People never do such things in real life——"

"That's what Brack says in 'Hedda Gabler,'" struck in young Forbes.

"Shut up!" said the manager. "Of course there was no contract signed," he continued, "but Mr. Frothman is willing to do more than the square thing. He'll give you $500."

"Can't the ending be rewritten?" suggested the fat press agent.

Atwell had been sitting in deadly calm for the last few moments. At this suggestion he rose to his feet. His eyes were burning, but his voice was level, under a tremendous control. Two or three waiters stopped in their passage to and fro at his first words, held by the sudden note of gravity in what they perhaps had supposed a drunken toast. Those at surrounding tables stopped their chatter. The big bearded German director of grand opera faced about from the bar, holding his beer mug in his hand, his excitable little eyes fixed in wonder on the speaker's face. The chophouse was suddenly still.

"No, Billy," Atwell began, "the ending cannot be rewritten. There is only one way a tragedy can end, and that is in death. Of course Mr. Frothman's dear public, the dear American public, would much rather have their tragedies end happily; but I'm not writing for them but of them. There's a difference, I find. Moreover, there is only one form of death artistically possible to any given tragedy—that form in mine is suicide with a table knife."

The room had become more silent as Atwell spoke. Curiosity had deepened into strained attention at the strange earnestness of his voice. A solitary laugh at his last words jarred harshly and was smothered. He turned on Hyatt, who was glowering uncomfortably in his chair, conscious that the dignity of the firm of Frothman was in danger by this public discussion.

"Tell Frothman from me," said Atwell, his voice rising, "that I don't want his $500, that I won't take it, that I can still earn a living as I have done. What do I want of money except as it comes from the public in proof of the mettle of my play? What I want is to see my play produced. I know it's a good play, a great play. Why shouldn't it be produced? You think it's a joke, all of you, my writing plays. For ten years I've written them and tramped up and down, up and down, that street out there, trying to sell them. Do you think I've enjoyed that? Do you think it has been easy to face the disappointment, the scorn, the laughter, to see my hopes go, my best years pass, my goal forever in the distance? Do you think, then, there's no truth in this play you say is too sad for the public, too preposterous for production? I've known myself, I tell you what it is to fight single-handed this monster we call New York, to struggle for a hearing where so many others are struggling, with as much right to be heard as they, to be filled with hopes and dreams and great ambitions, to be thrown back and recover and be thrown back again, till hopes and dreams and heart are gone. Tell Frothman that. Tell Southfield that. And tell Southfield that if he calls the ending of my play silly and preposterous it is because——"

Atwell stopped abruptly. His eyes rolled up suddenly and stared in horror to the far end of the chophouse. "Look!" he cried, pointing with his finger.

Everyone turned in the direction of his gaze. The German conductor, unnerved by the sudden transition, dropped his mug with a crash on the floor. Appleton was the first to grasp the situation. With a cry he faced around again and sprang upon Atwell. He was too late. Atwell's coat and waistcoat and shirt were ripped open, and the steel knife that had lain on the fat press agent's plate was in his heart.

Appleton caught the body as it lurched forward over the table.

"People don't do such things in real life," he said to Hyatt, who stood ghastly pale and still as the crowd surged up with a great, outrushing breath of horror. "Go quick for the police, will you?"

THE GREAT CHARITY.

THE HOSPITAL FOR SICK CHILDREN, TORONTO.

It Takes Care of Every Sick Child in Ontario Who Cannot Afford to Pay For Treatment.

The Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, is not a local institution—it is Provincial.

MASSAGE FOR RHEUMATISM.

The sick child from any part of Ontario whose parents cannot afford to pay for treatment has the same claim and the same privileges as the Toronto child born within sight of its walls.

This is the reason that the Trustees appeal to the fathers and mothers of Ontario—for as their money goes out to help the Hospital so the Hospital's mercy can go out to help the children.

This is the 28th year of the Hospital's life. The story of the years is a wonderful one—for in that period 10,000 children have been treated, and over 5,000 cured and 3,000 improved.

Last year there were 868 boys and girls in its beds and cots, and of these 493 were cured and 247 improved.

Look at these pictures of club feet—before and after.

BEFORE AFTER

Of the 868 patients 293 came from 216 places outside of Toronto.

In three years the patients from different parts of Ontario, not Toronto, average 250—nearly a third of the entire number.

In six years 1,400 outside patients have been treated—and for 20 years past they will average 100 a year.

The average stay of every patient was 54 days, the cost per patient per day 94c.

A dollar or two means a small lot of money out of your pocket, but it takes a big load of misery out of some little life.

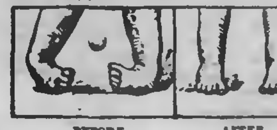
See what the hand of the Surgeon does for the crippled children of Ontario.



BEFORE AFTER

Your money means mercy to somebody's child.

Your money can cheer some mother's heart by saving some mother's child.

Health and wealth. You give wealth to the Hospital, and the Hospital gives health to the children.

The Corporation of the City of Toronto gives $7,500 a year to the Hospital for the maintenance of every child, whether from city or country.

HE ENJOYS READING.

The citizens of Toronto contribute about $7,000 a year towards the maintenance of every patient in the Hospital, whether from city or country.

Toronto does its share in the good work, and the Trustees ask you to do yours.

The Newspaper Proprietors of Ontario have kindly helped the Hospital by inserting our appeals.

There are two newspaper cots, and boys and girls from the country are placed in the cots founded by the newspaper men.

Look at the pictures of "before and after." They tell their own story—surely you will help us in this good work.

If your dollar could straighten the feet of a little boy or girl with club-feet you would gladly give it, and your dollar will help to do that.

BEFORE AFTER

Twenty-three children who came in with club feet were sent home perfect cures last year. There are as many more in the Hospital to-day awaiting treatment.

BEFORE AFTER

If you know of a sick child—the club foot boy or girl—send his parent's name to the Hospital.

Please send your contributions to J. Ross Robertson, Chairman, or to Douglas Davidson, Sec.-Treas. of the Hospital for Sick Children, College Street, Toronto.

Valpy's Dinners.

I have more than once referred to Mr. L. R. Valpy as a friend of Howell and Rossetti, and an extensive purchaser of the latter's works, writes "Sigma" in his reminiscences in "Blackwood." Mr. Valpy was by profession a Lincoln's Inn Fields family lawyer of good position and repute; but though a strenuous worker in his vocation, his heart was divided between two curiously antagonistic predilections—the "austere" and the "sensuous," his religious tendencies being sternly Calvinistic, and his artistic sympathies chiefly identified with the school of Rossetti and Burne-Jones. This singular contrast of proclivities led not infrequently to scenes and situations of a distinctly comical nature. Many a time have I met in his dining-room, hung with a superb line of Rossetti's red-chalk studies, a solemn assemblage of Exeter Hall lawyers and Low Church clergymen, who looked upon their host's cherished drawings either as autotype reproductions or the work of some inspired madman! Two instances of this Philistinism I particularly remember. The hero of one of them was an eminent commercial solicitor, who, after inspecting some newly-acquired treasure contemptuously for half a minute, turned on his heel with the comment that "faces of that kind were usually symptomatic of scrofula!" The other offender, a gormandizing clergyman, was even more flagrant. Uplifting his eyes from his empty plate during a change of courses, he happened to catch sight for the first time of three new purchases from Rossetti's studio. "Queer-looking affairs those, Valpy," he remarked with a pitying sneer; "where did you pick them up?" "They are the work of one Rossetti," replied Valpy with simmering irony. "Rossetti, Rossetti? Never heard of him," rejoined the appalling guest. Then glancing at an idealized study of his hostess, which formed the center of the three drawings he added, "And who, may I ask, is that ill-looking woman over the mantelpiece?" "That, sir," replied Valpy with what Dizzy used to call "a superb groan"—"that, sir, is my wife!" Yet, strange to say, Valpy persisted to the last in entertaining these uncongenial guests, who never failed to drive him nearly frantic with their outrageous comments. Occasionally, however, in his bachelor days he would invite one or two artists, and perhaps myself or some other more sympathetic friend, to what he called a quiet dinner, but which really was almost Spartan in its provender. I suppose he imagined that artists were too ethereal to care for the succulent fare which he set before parsons and lawyers, a theory wherein he was, of course, grievously mistaken. I well recollect dining with him once to meet Rossetti and Samuel Palmer, when the menu actually consisted of nothing more luxurious than thin pea-soup, cold boiled beef (as the waiters say, "low in cut"), and a "roly-poly" pudding! Samuel Palmer rose superior to this fare, and was cheery and charming throughout the evening; but it was otherwise with poor Rossetti who, without being a gourmand, was constitutionally unable to appreciate plain diet. His normal melancholy deepened into positive gloom, and I cannot recollect his uttering a syllable during the whole of dinner, at which he sat like one of the figures at the banquet in Holman Hunt's picture of Isabella and the Pot of Basil. Valpy seemed quite unconscious of offence, and to see him persistently plying Rossetti with "roly-poly," which the poet-painter as persistently refused in ever more deeply accentuated tones of weary dejection, was inexpressibly comic.

"I don't understand how E. H. Harriman got up about two weeks after his operation for appendicitis," said one of a group at the club, "when it took me six weeks to get on my feet."

"Oh, well, your time was not so valuable," etc., from the crowd. Meanwhile the doctor in the group had been silent.

"You heard, of course, what they found?" he ventured. General interest—

"Why, the appendix was full of undigested securities, and all they had to do was to cut the coupons off."—[illegible]

Equitable Gold Mining Co.

H. C. LANE, President. W. F. NORTON, Secretary and Treasurer.

Over $300,000 of development work already done. Main shaft 9 x 16 feet, down 700 feet. Over 3,000 feet of drifts, tunels and shafts showing immense ore body

Destined to become large and continuous dividend payer.

The Equitable Gold Mining Co.'s properties consist of three mines, known as the North Bonanza, Flowery and Kimbark. They are located in Six Mile Canon, less than four miles from Virginia City, Nevada, which is the nearest railroad station.

Years ago, over three hundred thousand dollars of development work was done upon the mines—so they are not mere "prospects" but actual mines. This work was done under the personal supervision of competent engineers, and was paid for by the owners of the mines themselves; thus giving double assurance that the work was well done and that the expenditure was justified.

The Main Shaft (triple compartment, 9x16 feet in the clear) is down seven hundred feet. From this shaft, running along the vein matter, east and west, are four drifts, at different levels, having a combined length (including the Rule winze and the tunnel) of 2,450 feet.

In addition to the above there are four small shafts, with a combined depth of about 300 feet; 535 feet of tunnels, and at least 500 feet of cross-cuts, upraises, etc.

All told, there is 4,650 feet of underground work—the most of which is in ore. Here is nearly one mile of openings in mineralized rock.

It is conservatively estimated by competent and reliable engineers and practical miners that there is developed an ore body of at least One Million Five Hundred Thousand Tons!

As a further evidence of the large amount of work done there is from 75,000 to 100,000 tons of ore on the dumps at the different surface openings—ore that, with modern cheapened processes, can be converted into gold bullion at a profit.

THE TITLE

Title to the Flowery and North Bonanza mines is by patent from the United States government, while the title of the Kimbark is by location and possession.

The Equitable Company obtained the Flowery and North Bonanza mines, both of which are patented, by purchase—the payments therefore to be made out of a share of the net proceeds of the mines. The Company has a written contract, duly recorded, for a deed, and is in possession of the properties, and is now operating them. The sum of $3,000 was paid on the contract, September 30th, 1902, and partial payments have since been made. The Company is entitled to $6.25 per ton as cost of mining and milling. One-half of all over and above this $6.25 per ton goes to the former owners till they receive the total sum of $105,000, without interest. There is no stipulation as to amount of work to be done within any specified time—and no proceeds, no pay. The Company can therefore pay it in one year or it can pay it in ten years. With this exception the Company is free from debt. Its policy is to pay as it goes. In this way it has no fear of financial embarrassments. The title to the Kimbark is by "location," under the mining laws of the United States. Work enough has already been done to entitle the Company to a patent, which in due time will be obtained.

Recent Development Work

Since the Company acquired the property, it has put up poles and wires for a distance of one mile for the transmission of electric power from the Truckee River Electric Power Plant. By this means unlimited power for mining, hoisting and milling is obtained.

It has built a dwelling house for the manager, a large boarding house for the miners, a barn, a power house and blacksmith shop.

It has put an electric hoist and skip into the 265-tunnel; has purchased ore cars and the necessary tools for mining purposes.

It has acquired the Kimbark ground, adjoining the Flowery and North Bonanza mines, and is now developing the property by driving a tunnel.

Within the last few months the Company has mined and milled over 800 tons of ore—realizing therefrom about $10,000 worth of gold bullion. The out-put is constantly increasing and all the Company needs is more mill capacity to handle its ore.

Dry Placer Miner, formerly of California.

This company has the right, without royalty payments, to use the new patent machine upon all the land it may own, acquire by lease, or operate, in Arizona. W invite special attention to the great commercial value and profit of this machine, and what can be accomplished by it.

What This Machine Will Do.

For the first time in the history of gold mining a machine has been invented which will handle the dry placer gold gravel without water, and in large quantities. This machine will save 98 per cent of all the gold in the gravel, and will do it at a lower working cost than by any existing process. It is operated by a small, compact engine, using crude oil as fuel. A complete plant, capable of handling 300 tons per day will weigh less than 1,200 pounds.

To secure this gold only those placer lands could be worked, which could command large supplies of water, hence the immense bodies of dry placer lands remote from water have never been worked.

Fifteen Hundred Millions in Gold

The United States has yielded nineteen hundred millions in gold, of which fifteen hundred millions—or more than 75 per cent.—were the product of its placers.

Ninety per cent. of the world's total gold supply has been taken from placers by processes which have admittedly lost the bulk of the values.

Simplicity of Machine — Its Method of Operation

The machine is so extremely simple in construction and operation that any intending investor can operate it instantly. He can take a peck or more of sand, either ordinary house of sea sand, or such as is found in the placer lands of Arizona and California, put into this sand ten or a hundred pieces of gold as small as the point of a toothpick, and from that to the head of an ordinary pin, mix the sand and the gold thoroughly, turn them into the hopper or feed of the machine, and in a few seconds the machine will separate the gold from the gravel and recover from 98 to 100 per cent of the gold. It is an absolute, infallible, ocular demonstration of the merits of the machine. It has solved the problem of handling sand or gravel containing gold in regions remote from water.

Cost of Handling Material

Each plant is portable, weighs less than 1,200 pounds and can be easily moved by a few laborers.

The two greatest authorities in the world on the moving of material are "Haswell" and "Trautwine." They say in their standard publications that a laborer can shovel horizontally, 12 feet, vertically 6 feet for 50 feet haul 17 cubic yards in 10 hours.

A well known engineer in his work for the U. S. Government at Sandy Hook, moved 18 cubic yards, 100 feet haul in 10 hours at a cost of 10 cents per cubic yard, paying laborers $1.75 per day.

The dry placer gold-bearing sands of California, Arizona and New Mexico are handled quite as easily as those of Sandy Hook.

Ten laborers can easily supply one machine with 204 cubic yards of gravel in 12 hours, working at the same speed as shown by Haswell, Trautwine or at Sandy Hook.

Placer work on above basis would cost about 11 1-2c. per cubic yard.

Do You Want Monthly Dividends?

We make a special offer of a limited number of shares of stock at this time, because the company requires immediately sufficient to build several machines to operate in the field.

Every machine at work will increase the intrinsic value of the stock.

Twenty machines in the field will increase the price and value of the stock more than double the present offering, and every additional machine means a further increase in price and value.

The Company intends to divide its net earnings every month, so that the stockholders may count absolutely on receiving monthly dividends in proportion to monthly earnings.

A Chophouse Tragedy.

Being a Tale of the Great American Drama.

"HOW old is Atwell, anyway?" asked the musical comedy tenor, shrugging his tailor-made shoulders to indicate that the subject, after all, did not greatly interest him.

"Nobody knows," answered the fat press agent, reaching for the bread, which was placed in the center of the round table, that all five of the diners might have an equal opportunity—as a matter of fact an inequitable arrangement, since the fat press agent inevitably got most of the loaf.

"He's been around the Rialto ever since I can remember," said young Forbes, the only son of a prosperous playwright.

"He's older than I thought," exclaimed another of the party, who had been listening in silence, an amused smile twitching the corners of his mouth at the press agent's inroads on the bread.

Young Forbes, whose round, boyish face and body, not yet quite set on the legs of a man, were, as the fat press agent once put it, as much of a fixture of Gray's Chophouse as the bar, took the fling good-naturedly. If his juvenile curiosity and enthusiasm for everything connected with the stage carried him constantly into the company of all sorts of actors and hangers-on of the drama he yet admired Appleton for his taciturn high-born culture and his alien air of breeding, in a shy, clumsy way even trying to win the older man's affection.

So the boy answered with a laugh "Anyway, I don't believe there was ever a time when Atwell wasn't writing a play," he said.

"There never was," chipped in the press agent, munching a fresh piece of bread. "He always has one play in his pocket and six more in his head, and they're never likely to get any nearer the stage than that. Poor Atwell! He's worn out enough shoe leather tramping up and down this street, always getting the cold shoulder, to keep a Roosevelt family in boots for a lifetime."

"By the way," said the fifth member of the party, a red-headed advance agent with a nasal voice and boundless enthusiasm for his own attraction, but none for the attractions of a rival manager, "Atwell's back on the Rialto. Saw him to-day. He's thrown up his job promoting the publicity of 'The Delaware Peach,' so he must have got another play out of his system. Saved up enough money to live on for a while, I suppose and is back here trying to sell 'the great American drama.'"

"Heavens!" cried the press agent "Warn all the managers. To-morrow he'll begin his rounds. Ah, here comes the grub!"

With this heartfelt ejaculation he seized the last piece of bread and fell to on his dinner. The red-headed advance agent threw away his cigarette and pounded the table for beer. The tenor began to talk between mouthfuls about his part in a new musical comedy that had gone into rehearsal that afternoon especially about the great beauty of the songs that fell to him to sing. No one listened to him but the advance agent who was reminded of a story by everything he said. Atwell was forgotten.

Appleton smiled and quietly ordered more bread from a passing waiter. Then he turned to young Forbes. "And how's your play getting on?" he asked.

"Jolly bad," said the boy. "You take my advice and stick to writing about the stage, not for it."

"Well, I'm not so sure but I ought to write for it," the other laughed.

"Why?" asked Forbes.

"Do you see that tall, thin chap two tables away?" asked Appleton.

"Yes; that's Colby. Used to be dramatic editor of the Baltimore 'Bee,'" the other answered.

"He did," said Appleton. "But he isn't. He's changed 'about' to 'for,' and last night he told me the plot of his play. It's to be 'the great American drama'—he told me so himself. And do you see that black-haired, black-eyed chap at the table by the door?"

"That's Morris Levi," said Forbes "He's writing a play, I know."

"He is!" said Appleton. "He told me about it this afternoon. Wall street is to be dramatized at last, with a full grasp of its significance and tragedy There'll be no 'Henrietta' superficiality about Levi's drama. It's to be the first truly great play of American life. Levi told me that. And he and Colby are only two out of how many hundred? Atwell for instance, has written our national masterpiece no less than ten times"

"Well?" said Forbes.

"Well," Appleton replied, "since I'm the only man who has not written 'the great American drama,' it must be that I am the only one left to write it. However, if I don't write about it, perhaps I will confer almost as much of a boon on the public. Now, tell me about your work."

"Oh," said Forbes, with a grunt of disgust, "I'm working now on a musical comedy! Between you and me, with the guarantee of father's revision, it's going to get produced. I hate writing such slop, but father says I've got to earn some money some way, so I do it. I'd rather write pale green imitations of Ibsen that nobody wants, any more than they want Atwell's great American dramas. But don't you just love Ibsen, though?" Forbes finished with a burst of boyish enthusiasm, looking eagerly up to Appleton's face.

The other man raised a warning finger "You needn't be afraid of anyone at this table," he said. "They don't know anything about Ibsen. But you never can tell who may be at the next table, a manager, a critic, who knows a little about him, to overhear your dreadful remark. Forbes, in this country a man can be a vulgarian, a municipal grafter, a political thief; he can love Mammon, he can preach agnosticism, he can even worship Emerson, and yet remain an esteemed and accredited member of society. But let him beware that anybody knows he enjoys Ibsen!"

"Poor Atwell loves Ibsen, too," said Forbes. "Perhaps that's the matter with him. He goes around declaring that some day America will realize that the intellectual drama of the Norwegian is the style which must mould our national drama. The trouble with Atwell is, he hasn't——"

"Pass the salt, please," said the press agent, "and shut up on Ibsen."

"Yes," said the red-headed advance agent; "here comes Atwell. He'll do the talking now."

Everyone turned toward the door. The long, narrow room, hung with theatrical pictures and decorated with beer mugs on the ceiling beams, was alive with hurrying waiters and incoming or outgoing customers, jostling each other at the narrow entrance in the center. The air was heavy with tobacco smoke and noisy with the clatter of dishes and the roar of carriages from the street, for it was nearly the theater hour. Calm in the midst of the confusion, Atwell stood on the top step of the entrance and surveyed the room. He was tall, thin, stoop-shouldered, with black hair and large, black eyes that gave an un-Saxon aspect to his smooth shaven face. He might have been a man of thirty, or he might have been older. It all depended whether the wrinkles about his mouth were made by dissipation and strong emotion or by the slow chisel of time. He wore a brilliant new waistcoat, and swung a cane jauntily in his hand as he calmly took in the scene.

"Ye gods!" cried the advance agent. "He's got Shakespeare down and out this time, sure! He wears his apologetic look even when he's written a two hundred night success and bought a new vest on the strength of it. But this time he looks actually defiant, and he's got the new vest into the bargain!"

"He looks almost handsome," said Forbes.

"He looks almost successful!" said Appleton.

"He looks as if he'd buy a drink," said the fat press agent. "Hi! Atwell!" he called, raising his voice.

With a nod of recognition Atwell came down to them. He shook hands all around and pulled up a chair. "Back on the Rialto again, thank God!" he said.

"Yes, and we're all glad to see you!" said the red-headed advance man, with a wink at the others. "What'll you have to drink?"

"Nothing," said Atwell.

"What?" came the astonished chorus. Even the expectant waiter looked incredulous.

"No!" Atwell continued, "nothing. I'm on the water wagon till my new play has been produced."

"My, how thirsty you'll get!" said the red-headed one, with another wink.

"On the contrary," said Atwell, with some asperity, but not without a sense of the dramatic effect his words would produce, "it has already been taken by Frothman for Richard Southfield's use. Southfield, in fact, was to read it this afternoon."

"The devil!" exclaimed the fat press agent, with quaint sincerity.

"That's about what I said when Frothman took it," laughed Atwell good-naturedly. "Of course Southfield is the only man who can play the lead. I wrote it with him in view. But I've been thrown down so many times by the big guns that I sent the piece to every manager in town before Frothman read it. It was the old story till I struck Frothman. I was pretty well down with the blues, I can tell you. But the contract is as good as signed now, and no more of this hand-to-mouth life for me! I'll make a name now and a fortune. not earn a living and the jeers of my 'friends.' I've been an advance agent for the last time. (A grunt from the red-headed one.) I'll make my pile and my reputation now, and do work that's worthy of a thinking man!"

"What's the play about?" asked Appleton, diplomatically heading off an evidently very red-headed retort from the slandered member.

"Well, I don't want to give it away too much before the production is settled," said Atwell, "but I can promise you it is a great play, a great play!"

"Humph!" said the advance agent.

"The scene is laid right here in New York," Atwell went on, in his mounting enthusiasm not heeding the interruption, "and it's no commonplace comedy-drama; it's a real picture of a life crushed out by this gigantic, heartless town. We have had New York plays in plenty, but never one like this, where the two contending forces are the will and ambitions of a man, a single, tiny man, and the great impetus of three million beings in a mass, hurtling headless against him. Of course the man goes down; he goes down with a struggle, a fight, that is the meat of the drama, to end his own life in a restaurant at the final curtain. It's a pitiful ending, with the noise and rattle of gay New York life, which we think is all of New York life, at any rate, in our drama, to furnish greater contrast. It's a splendid moment for an actor, too, that end. I know you'll like the last act, Appleton, when you see it."

"I'm sure I shall," said Appleton, politely.

"Oh, have a drink!" said the advance agent.

"Again, thank you, no," said Atwell. And he went on with his talk about the play, his eyes big with excitement, his body tilted forward over the table. "I've avoided, I'm sure," he said, "the faults which make Ibsen unpopular in this country, while keeping all his virtues. I know the time has come for the drama of the mind as well as of the heart, for the drama of psychology as well as of sensation. But it can't all be done by conversational means. There have got to be some bits of stirring action or your American audience won't recognize their great play when it comes. I've got the psychology and I've also got the action. The two are fused also. When that last moment comes the audience will know the man's brain was ripened for the suicidal idea, and though the physical act of self-slaughter, following on the heels of the messenger who brings word of the man's last failure, will startle and thrill them, it will come as the natural completion of the play, the last note of the great tragedy of New York. I tell you, gentlemen, I am going to make my hit at last; I am going to do the laughing now; I am going to turn the tables on all of you who——"

"Mr. Atwell?" asked a waiter, interrupting the speaker as he was almost rising to his feet in his excitement.

"I'm he," said Atwell, sinking down again. "What's wanted?"

"Mr. Hyatt, Mr. Frothman's manager, you know, is outside in a cab, and he wanted to know if you were here, sir; I'll tell him. He said he'd come in if you were," the waiter explained, and went out of the door.

"Humph!" said the advance agent. "Make Hyatt come to you now, do you?"

"He usually comes only to show girls. Principals and playwrights have to go to him," said the tenor.

"I wonder what he wants," said Atwell, half to himself.

At that moment Hyatt entered the chophouse, his hulking body towering over the waiters, who bustled about, his glum face glummer than usual. "Can I have a word with you, Atwell?" he said, coming up to the table and pitching his head slightly forward by way of greeting to the others.

Storm King Group of Mines

TO CANADIAN INVESTORS

The property comprising what is known as the STORM KING GROUP OF MINES offers an attractive and safe investment. The property is the richest in the country and we believe it would be difficult to secure an investment that promises better returns. The following is a description of the mines written by Capt. A. M. Paul, whose reputation as an expert in mining matters is known far and near.

These properties are situated in the Cable Cove Mining District, about fifteen miles north of Sumpter, Oregon, and about one mile northwest of the Baby McKee mine, about two miles northwest of the Last Chance, the Alpine, the Imperial and the California mines.

The properties in this report consist of seven claims. The names of the seven claims being as follows: The Eureka and the Honest Dollar. These two claims are on the same vein. Adjoining these two claims and paralleling them on the northwest is another vein upon which there are two claims known as the Jessie and Golden Rule, and paralleling them on the northwest there is another vein upon which there are two claims, known as the Storm King and the Ozone. The last claim of this group lies to the northwest of the last two named, and is adjoining them. This claim is the Shannon Bell.

In making my report I will commence with the two first named claims of the group, the Eureka and Honest Dollar. The development on these claims consists of a tunnel ninety-seven feet in length, running along the course of the vein, showing two feet ten inches of ore in the top of the tunnel and a little over three feet in the bottom, which assays giving values of from $9.64 to $16 per ton in gold. About four hundred feet in a southwesterly direction there is a shaft on the vein ten feet deep, showing the vein to be from one to two inches wide on the surface and about twelve inches wide in the bottom of the shaft, in which assays give values of from $9.76 to $40 per ton in free milling gold ore.

This vein is exposed by small shafts and open cuts for a distance of fifteen hundred feet, and the course of this vein is north, ten degrees east, and the vein cuts the formation, showing it to be a true fissure, and the formation is granite. This vein shows in places a width of from ten to fifteen feet of mineralized matter, commonly called vein matter, but which is caused by hot solutions from below.

I will now pass to the Jessie and Golden Rule. There has been very little work done upon these two claims, there being one discovery shaft ten feet deep, showing ore on all sides of the shaft, and running in value of from $1 upwards. It is my opinion that with development, this, too, will prove valuable property.

The work on the Storm King and Ozone consists of a tunnel near the point of discovery and is driven along the vein for a distance of one hundred and eighty feet, showing ore all the way from the surface to the face of the tunnel, and averaging in width from six to eighteen inches. Three assays give the following values, $12.60. This being a general sample taken from the dump. The other two assays are $62.68 and $79.08 respectively, this being the assorted ore for shipment. The course of this tunnel and vein are north, ten degrees west, and the vein cuts the trend of the formation obliquely (which is granite) and by driving this tunnel five or six hundred feet on the present course it will intersect a quartzite reef (which is running north, twenty degrees east) which would make this a contact vein between granite and quartzite, and should produce a large body of ore at the intersection of the contact.

The only work done upon the Shannon Bell, the last claim of this group, is the location work, and is not enough to allow of a report being made.

There is water for power purposes one mile from the property, and timber on the ground, of a very fine quality, sufficient to run the mine for many years to come.

All the assays mentioned in this report were made by the assayer of the Imperial mine at my request, and the ore was taken by me from the properties mentioned.

I will state that I have been a practical miner since 1870, and am now the manager and superintendent of the Imperial mine in this district.

(Signed) CAPTAIN A. M. PAUL.

The Common Cold.

There is no doubt, according to the London "Hospital," that the ordinary nasal catarrh is a specific infectious disease. What we observe among domestic animals affords ample evidence of this. It is a familiar fact that a horse that has been wintered out, on being brought into a stable with others is most likely to develop a cold. The coachman will say it is because the unaccustomed warmth of the stable makes him "nesh." However, disinfection of the stable before bringing animals from grass is a true preventive of the symptoms of catarrh. What occurs among domestic animals we observe, too, among ourselves. Some source of infection must be present before it is possible to catch a cold. There are places where colds are unknown. The universal experience of Arctic and Antarctic explorers is that so long as the members of the expedition are in the polar regions they remain free from colds, but on return to the mainland or to settlements inhabited by those who are in frequent communication with the mainland, they nearly always at once suffer severe colds. The same is said to be true of the men in the observatory on the summit of Ben Nevis, though they live in clouds. Colds they never take, because there are no colds to catch, until the moment they descend to inhabited regions, then they catch severe ones directly. For over two centuries the classical St. Kilda cold has not ceased to interest learned men. On this remote and rocky island of the Western Hebrides, where some 100 inhabitants dwell, colds are unknown except after the arrival of a ship from the mainland, when all the inhabitants are seized with colds, even to the babe at the breast. Afterward they seem to become to some extent immune, for many escape until the following year. The inhabitants affirm that those colds which are brought by boats from the large ports, Glasgow and Liverpool, are more severe than those brought from the Hebrides.

By Way of Chicago.

A pupil of one of the public schools in Chicago sends this communication:

Dear Sir—In our school this morning an amusing dialogue took place.

A primary teacher of Chicago, wishing to impress upon her pupils the necessity of greater quiet, said, "I am a great deal larger than any of you, yet I don't make any noise when I walk round the room."

"Perhaps," remarked little seven-year-old Kenneth, "you don't wear shoes."

"Oh, yes, I do," quickly replied the teacher; "just look. Did you ever see any larger than mine?"

Kenneth surveyed them carefully. "Yes," he replied, slowly, "once—in a show."

The Numeral Series.

"Mr. Punch" has been investigating the question of literary successes, and he has arrived at the surprisingly novel conclusion that much depends on the name of the book. He believes, for instance, that Mr. Kipling owes much of his fame to his habit of including a numeral in the titles of his volumes. Having the welfare of authors and publishers at heart, "Mr. Punch" selects the following titles from his Christmas announcement list, as an aid to finding suitable names:

"The Two Too Solid Flesh: a Vegetarian Romance." By G. Bernard Shaw.

"The Three Bridges." By the Inventor of Ping-Pong.

"The Four Corners." By J. Pierpont Morgan.

"The Seven Dials." By Big Ben.

"The Nine Helms." By W. W. Jacobs.

"The Hundred Best Cooks." By Lieut.-Colonel Newnham Davis.

"The Three Hundred and Sixty-five Days." By Zadkiel.

"The Thousand and One Knights." By Debrett.

Smart Society.

Mrs. de Flashe (to the Major, who is telling a short story)—Er—yes, major, but don't you think you ought to tell this story in a little lower tone of voice? It seems a little risque, and the young lady on the other side might overhear you. The Major—Gad, madam—she has just told the yarn to me!"

Wabash.

Cheap one-way colonist tickets are now on sale daily until November 30, over the great Wabash line to California, Colorado, Utah, Idaho, Montana, Washington and British Columbia. Most Annoying.

"We must part," he declared, with quivering lip.

"It is impossible for us to live together," he insisted, as he fastened the only life-preserver on board to his person.

As it May Be.

"Hello, Laura, is that you?"

"Yes."

"This is George. Say, I can't get anything to eat down town here to-day. The hotels and restaurants are all closed on account of the strike. Have a good dinner ready for me this evening when I get home."

"I can't do it, George. The girl says all the grocery stores and meat markets out here are closed on account of the strike."

"Well, cook up a pudding or something of that kind."

"Can't do that, either. No milk to-day. The milkmen are all on a strike."

"Well, great Scott! Can't you send one of the children in with a luncheon of bread and molasses?"

"No. Johnny says there are no trains or street cars running. All the men have just gone on a strike. But, say, maybe I can——"

"Well, go on. Maybe you can what?"

But there was no response.

Everybody at the telephone office had gone on a strike.—Chicago "Tribune."

Lost Hairpins.

It used to be said by a great mustard manufacturer that the profit came, not from the mustard people ate, but from what they wasted. The same principle seems to apply to the hairpin trade.

Mr. R. P. Mugford of Bromley, Kent, sends to the "Strand Magazine" a photograph of what looks like a Fifth of November bonfire stack, but is really a pile of hairpins picked up by six people on a walk of about five miles, half of which was over fields and commons. They were picked up after much windy weather. They numbered 327 and weighed nine ounces.

A Thrilling Moment.

The death of the famous Spanish toreador, Reverte, recalls to the London "Globe" one of the most thrilling incidents ever witnessed in the arena. It was at Bayonne. After disposing of two bulls, Reverte had twice plunged his sword into a third, of great strength and ferocity, and as the beast continued careering wildly, the spectators began to hiss Reverte for bungling. Wounded to the very quick of his pride, the Spaniard shouted, "The bull is slain!" and, throwing aside his sword, sank on one knee with folded arms in the middle of the ring. He was right, but he had not allowed for the margin of accident. The wounded beast charged full upon him, but the matador, splendid to the last, knelt motionless as a statue, while the spectators held their breath in horrified suspense. Reaching his victim, the bull literally bounded at him, and as he sprang he sank in death, with his last effort giving one fearful lunge of the head that drove a horn into the thigh of the kneeling man and laid bare the bone from the knee to the joint. Still Reverte never flinched, but remained kneeling, exultant in victory, but calmly contemptuous of applause till he was carried away to heal him of his grievous wound.

The late discovery in strawberries of salicylic acid, a specific in acute rheumatism, has seemed to confirm the idea that these berries are a desirable article of food for rheumatics. The effect of the fruit cannot be due to the salicylic acid, however, as less than the hundredth of a grain per pound is found.

Bad Complexion

Has Its Cause in Impure or Impoverished Blood

To have a soft, smooth skin, free from eruptions and unsightly blemishes, the blood must be maintained in a healthy condition.

Face powders, lotions and other toilet preparations may, for a short time cover up a multitude of wrongs in the blood, but they cannot remove those red, disfiguring pimples that are the bane of so many young ladies' lives.

Why not use Ferrozone? It is an unfailing cure for the worst kind of skin disease, the most effective of all blood purifiers, and cures bad complexion by removing its cause.

Ferrozone invigorates and purifies enfeebled blood. Makes it strong rich and red. Ferrozone puts power into the blood to nourish the body and all its organs. It is a regulator of acknowledged merit, and is quite unrivalled as a remedy for Female disorders.

Mrs. Shanly, of Pittsburg, Ont., says: "Fore five years my face was disfigured by raw, bleeding eruptions that resisted all treatment.

"Three Kingston doctors did their best for me and when they acknowledged themselves beaten, I tried Ferrozone. The first box helped me quite a little, and by the time I had used six boxes I was cured. Ferrozone is a fine remedy for womanly disorders of all kinds and I can highly recommend it." (Signed), Mary Shanly.

Growing girls, women, men, in fact everybody can derive untold benefit from Ferrozone. It is a tonic for the blood, brain and nerves and worth its price ten times over to everyone who uses it.

Three weeks' treatment contained in a box of sixty-three chocolate coated tablets, cost 50c., or three boxes for $1.25. Sold by all Druggists, and N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

ASHES HERE AND THERE BY TIMES' REPORTERS

Next Summer's Meet

Mr. Arthur Rountree, secretary of the Peterborough Turf Club, Limited, received a letter yesterday from Tavistock, regarding next summer's races. This looks as though our next season's meet will be a very successful one.

Prepare for spring

Prepare for the scarcity of dry hardwood in March, April and May, when you wish to let out your coal fires, by putting in some green hardwood cut and split. This will be ready for use when you require it. R. HICKS & Co. 295tf

May Eat Meat Christmas

Though Christmas and New Year's day this winter fall on Friday Roman Catholics the world over will be permitted to eat meat. This disregard of the usual fast-day observance is due, in the case of Christmas, to a special law of the church, and in the case of New Year's day to a special dispensation by Pope Pius X.

For Christmas Presents

For the next week you will be buying Christmas presents. There is no thing better to give and nothing more acceptable to the receiver than a box of Lowney's chocolates or some oranges, grapes, nuts, raisins, candies, or even a small bill of groceries. There is no place better to get them than that of R. F. Mason & Co. 294tf

Board of Trade Meeting

The Peterborough Board of Trade will hold a banquet in the Opera House on Wednesday, December 30th. A limited number of tickets will be issued at $2.50 and a proportion of these will be allotted to people outside of town. Applications for them must be forwarded to the President, Mr. D. Hughes-Charles, not later than December 28th. Gallery tickets for the ladies will be issued with the banquet tickets.

Christmas Cheer

A few things that will make Christmas brighter:—Malaga green grapes, [illegible] per lb.; figs 7c, 15c, and 20c. per lb, Dates, golden 10c., 3 lbs. for 25c.; extra quality, 15c. lb., candies choice mixed 10c., 3 lbs. for 25c. cream candies or chocolates, 2 lbs. for 25c; Lowney's chocolates, fancy boxes, 25c and 50c. FIVE DAYS MORE AND NOMINATION

Men who Would be Candidates Must Make up Their Minds

A MAYORALTY CONTEST.

Alderman Best May be Induced to Run for Mayor Against His Worship Mayor Roger,

Less than a week only remains in which the men who may be aldermen next year have a chance to make known the fact that they are willing to be counted among the men on the ballot paper. Nomination will take place on Monday next, and election day the following Monday. When the system of election by general vote was instituted it was argued that it would make it easier for men of well known ability to find places on the council and harder for the ward heeler to be elected. In individual cases this has already been demonstrated, but it remains a fact that the men of well-known ability are just as backward as ever they were under the old ward system. It is a difficult matter to get them to be candidates and their refusal to enter a contest makes it the easier for the poor or indifferent representatives to be elected. Very few of the solid business men of the town take that personal interest in the town's welfare that should draw them into the council, and so long as they have to be dragged into the contest, so long is it possibly better that they should remain out. The council of this year is certainly far from being popular. It's conduct in forcing through the street railway and lighting contract, in an illegal way, against the protests of The Times, has not strengthened it with the people. As pointed out by this journal, the people want the street railway, and would be willing to pay something to get it, but they decidedly object to the underhand way the thing was tried. Ald. Morrison and those who voted with him on this question will probably have some difficulty in explaining how it was that they led the people to believe that Mr. Stuart was the street railway company, and argued the opposite before the courts. Had the council been less obstinate, the matter we think, would have been different.

It is useless to deny that a strong feeling exists among the people that too much is being paid out in salaries. Take for instance streets and bridges: The salaries of the engineer and the road commissioner amount to nearly 20 per cent of the whole expenditure. This is absurd. A large number of ratepayers believe that there is little use for a salaried engineer, and that a practical street man, who knows how to make good roads, and who also understands handling men, is all that is needed. Work on streets is confined to the summer, and it is nothing short of downright waste to go on as we are doing. Nor is this the only source of waste, as will probably be pointed out later on.

Getting back to the original subject again The Times is informed that a requisition is to be presented to Alderman Best with a view to inducing him to stand for the Mayor's chair. Mr. Best has many admirers throughout the town, who would be pleased to see him at the head of the Council. Mayor Roger will, in any case, seek re-election. His many friends believe that he should have another term, as is the custom.

We hope to see some of our substantial business men enter the council next year, so that many of the evils that exist may be remedied.

Increase for Postmasters

Sir William Mulock has decided to increase the pay of postmasters. The minimum salaries are to be increased from $10 to $25 a year and salaries of those paid on a percentage of revenue to be increased ten per cent. on the amount they would receive under the scale heretofore in operation. Postmasters acting between public and smaller offices dependent on them have their allowances increased ten per cent. Commissioners paid for transaction of money orders and saving bank business are increased on the same percentage. The remuneration for the transaction of postal note business is doubled. Rent is allowed for postoffices at rate of $5 a year to office with revenue of $100 and $5 a year for each hundred additional until rent of $30 is reached. Hitherto no rent was allowed until the revenue reached $300.

JAPAN AND RUSSIA NAVAL STRENGTH

Opinion of Leading Japanese Paper on the Situation

Tokio, Dec. 2[illegible]—The Japan Times prints the following article on the diplomatic situation of the Japanese Government and Russia.

"The pacific statements made by the Japanese Government both here and abroad regarding the present diplomatic situation are apparently irreconcilable with the actual circumstances in so far as they are known to the public. Of these circumstances the most conspicuous relate to the military preparations on the part of Russia. As to the alleged eastward movement of Russian troops on a large scale, it is probably safe to receive these reports at a large discount. It has, indeed, been noticed throughout the present crisis that the reports of Russian military movements emanating from Russian sources have been greatly exaggerated. But after making due allowance for exaggeration, the fact remains indisputable that Russia, so far from showing any inclination to evacuate Manchuria, has all along been engaged and is still engaging in strengthening her position there. If it is difficult to know the exact truth about the disposition of Russia's land forces, no such ambiguity attaches to the movements of her fighting units on the sea, with regard to which neither exaggeration nor concealment is possible.

"We know then that Russia is straining her naval resources to the last degree in her anxiety to add to the strength of her already formidable fleet in East Asiatic waters. So steady has been her activity in this respect that within a few weeks the fighting portion of her fleet will be on a level with ours, so far as tonnage goes, while three months from now the Russian naval force will be considerably superior to ours in tonnage and number of guns. Not that we are troubled by any undue uneasiness on this score, for the tonnage and numbers of guns are only two out of the numerous component factors of the naval equation. It is, however, impossible not to be impressed by the extraordinary efforts Russia is making to augment her naval strength in these waters. It is certainly not without significance. Why this feverish haste and activity? The only likely inference is that Russia has no intention of withdrawing from Manchuria. But with Russia in effective occupation of those provinces, we fail to see how the principle of the open door could in practice be carried out, let alone the principle of China's territorial integrity — principles which Japan is bound by honor and interest to see maintained intact.

In view of these circumstances and others of like import, it is quite natural to receive the pacific declarations of our responsible statesmen with some doubt and hesitation. With not a few observers the first impulse must doubtless have been to regard these declarations in the light of those diplomatic statements which Governments usually issue more for form's sake than anything else, and to which therefore, the public attach little importance. But on more mature considerations, it will not be difficult to perceive the strong probability that there may be a real and solid ground for the generally calm and hopeful views held in high official circles. It is probably the result of consciousness on the Government's part of its peaceful aims and the justice of its position backed by a strong sense of self-confidence born of being prepared for all emergencies. It is also not improbable that notwithstanding her ostensible warlike preparations, Russia may not be ready for an appeal to arms, and she may have consequently shown signs of a spirit of peace and conciliation which her attitude in the initial stage of the present crisis did not warrant us in expecting. In any case there is no reason to doubt the perfect honesty of the peaceful official statements, although the Government's excessive caution and moderation may be regarded by the nation as uncalled for.

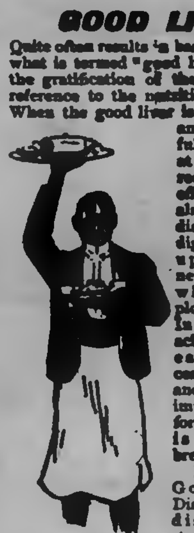
GOOD LIVING

Quite often results in bad health, because what is termed "good living" is usually the gratification of the palate without reference to the nutrition of the body. When the good liver is a business man and rises from a full meal to plunge at once into work requiring mental effort the result is almost sure to be disastrous, because digestion draws upon the same nervous forces which are employed in thought. In time the stomach becomes diseased, the processes of digestion and nutrition are imperfectly performed and there is a physical breakdown.



Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It eliminates the effete poisonous matter which originates in the system as a consequence of imperfect digestion. It gives sound health to the whole body.

"I wish to say to the world that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has proved a great blessing to me," writes Mrs. Ellen E. Bacon, of Shutesbury, Franklin Co., Mass. "Prior to September, 1897, I had doctored for my stomach trouble for several years, going through a course of treatment without any real benefit. In September, 1896, I had very sick spells and grew worse; could eat but little. I commenced in September, 1897, to take Dr. Pierce's medicine, and in a short time I could eat and work. I have gained twenty pounds in two months."

FREE. Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of customs and mailing only. Send 31 one-cent stamps for the book in paper covers, or 50 stamps for the cloth-bound volume. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

THE HOPE FOR PEACE IS ALMOST GONE SAYS LONDON NEWSPAPERS

Russia Has Assumed a Defiant and Offensive Attitude

WAR MAY BREAK OUT AT ANY MOMENT

Bold Move on Part of Japan, It Is Belived, Would Bring Russia to Time Promptly

London, December 22—In an editorial The Times says it fears the situation in the Far East is not improving, but says that so long as negotiations are not formally broken off, there is hope for a peaceful settlement. "The Japanese," says the Times, "have made up their minds not to be satisfied with words. Doubtless they are ready to come to a compromise on certain points, but they are quietly resolved that whatever they insist upon as a minimum, compatible with the interests of the country; must be secured to them by something more tangible than promises. A compromise ought not to be impossible, but it must be an honest compromise, and not a mere device for securing all the advantages on one side."

The newspapers display increased alarm over the aspect of affairs in the Far East, rather from the fear that some unforeseen incident may precipitate a conflict than from any belief that the resources of diplomacy have become exhausted, the opinion being that Russia and Japan are anxious to avoid war.

The Morning Post, which is inspired in the Japanese interest, makes a suggestion which may possess significance—namely, that Japan should cut the Gordian knot by declaring a protectorate over Corea. The paper contends that such a solution would commend itself to all the powers with the exception of Russia, and that it might even be welcomed at St. Petersburg, if it be true that Russia does not desire war.

NO ULTIMATUM SENT.

The special cablegrams from the Far East, published in this morning's newspapers throw no new light on the situation, but all are agreed upon one thing, that Japan has not sent an ultimatum to Russia.

The correspondent of the Daily Telegraph who, after a tour of Manchuria, has arrived at Nagasaki, expresses the belief that Russia does not want war before she has consolidated her position in Manchuria. She is apprehensive, however, of the strength of the Japanese fleet, and over the attitude of China and Great Britain. The correspondent doubts whether there are as many as 100,000 troops south of Mukden, or whether the stores there will last for six months. Electric lights have just been installed at Mukden. The correspondent believes that Mukden is over-fortified and says: "All positions cannot be defended, as not half of them are yet provided with guns. The Russians are preparing for the investment of Port Arthur, but will make a fight to secure Dalny from occupation."

THERE IS MUCH ANXIETY.

Reuter's Telegram Company has learned that considerable anxiety exists in the best informed circles of London regarding the possible outcome of the situation in the Far East. Fears, it says, are expressed that the Russian government may have overstepped the boundary which would make a continuation of peaceful negotiations with Japan possible. It may be regarded as quite certain, it asserts, that Japan will not accept the principles of the last Russian note, which are altogether at variance with Japan's main contentions, and that Japan's reply must necessarily be cast along this line.

Apart from the delicate state of the negotiations between the two nations Reuter says, it is also known that Russia is assuming a more defiant attitude, and the outlook may be regarded as more gloomy than it hitherto has been, although it can not yet be said that the resources of diplomacy have been completely exhausted.

It concludes by saying that there is no actual news of fresh developments, and that no ultimatum has been sent by Japan to Russia.

GRAVE CRISIS APPROACHING.

While no news has been received at the Japanese Legation that Japan has sent an ultimatum to Russia, it is recognized at the Legation that a grave crisis is approaching. Major-General Yamani, the Japanese military attache, and the Japanese Colonel who has been instructing General Yuan Shai Kai's troops, have both started for Japan.

The native press recently reiterated a circumstantial story to the effect that in the event of Manchuria being retained by Russia, it was the intention of Great Britain to establish a protectorate over the Yang-Tse valley, as compensation and to appoint a vice-roy therein, so that her prestige in the Far East would be equal to Russia's. Some of the native papers give the Chinese foreign board as authority for the story. This fiction is largely credited and is causing hostility against Great Britain. It is suspected that the story has been fostered by unfriendly agencies and the British Legation is investigating the origin.

New York, Dec. 21.—A correspondent of Collier's, writing from Pekin, says: There is another serious possibility that I have seen mentioned nowhere, and which the home papers and Governments may not appreciate. In the event of further trouble in this Province Russia, with her present great military and naval forces at Port Arthur, could overrun the Province (Chihli) with a large army before the other powers were able to get troops to the scene. Having done that, and having the right to claim credit for restoring order, she would doubtless continue her occupation by the same methods and excuses she has used to retain Manchuria. The tentacles are drawing more closely about us every month. There is reason to believe that the railway from Irkutsk to Pekin via Kalgan is well under way. The Russians are acquiring control of the cable and telegraphic service in Northern China; the Great Northern (a Danish company whose stock is largely owned by the Russian royal family) is fast elbowing out the Eastern Extension (a British corporation), and the Russo-Chinese bank is establishing branches in many places, regardless of the fact that they have not yet been opened to foreign business by treaty. When Tien-tsin goes the way of Newchwang, we shall have lost the two cities where American trade is most important.

FEAR ANARCHIST PLOT TO KILL ROOSEVELT

Presidents Life Said to be in Great Danger From Anarchists

Galveston, Texas, Dec. 22—Through the arrest of a man who was delivering an anarchistic speech in the street last evening the police believe they have discovered a plot to assassinate President Roosevelt and perhaps other men high in the nation's affairs. The man arrested gave his name as Charles Pierzen, and claimed to be an organizer of the Socialist Labor party. He had gathered a crowd of over 300 persons and was denouncing the President and the government and urging an uprising of the laboring classes. When searched at the police station, it is said, much circumstantial evidence was discovered.

PLANS OF PRESIDENT'S HOME.

The evidence included rough plans of the executive mansion at Washington, President Roosevelt's Oyster Bay home and also the homes of men prominent in the national government. In his pockets, the police declare, were letters from Paterson, N.J., Chicago and New York, which appear to reveal a desperate plot of anarchists scattered through the United States with headquarters in Chicago. In addition two lists of the names and addresses of prominent personages were found.

Following Pierzen's arrest several Sicilians, who, the police declare, are known to be anarchists, called at the police station and avowed friendship for the man. All local anarchists were at once placed under police surveillance, and the department has communicated with the authorities in Washington, New York city and Paterson.

DEFIES THE POLICE.

When questioned, Pierzen declared: "I am simply following my life's work." He refused to give any explanation of his acts or the papers found on him, and defied the police to prosecute him. He is swarthy about 30 years old, apparently is well educated, and speaks English fluently.

The Galveston labor leaders have denounced him as an enemy to the laboring classes and will have nothing to do with him. His sanity is not questioned.

MILITARY TRAINING TO BE COMPULSORY.

Outlines of New Scheme Announced by the War Department

London, December 22—As a little bonne bouche for Christmas, a circumstantial account is published of a scheme now in preparation at the War Office, by order of the Secretary of State, for the universal compulsory military training of all males between the ages of eighteen and twenty-two years, who are not in the volunteers, army or navy. They are to undergo four years training, beginning with two months of physical and rifle drill, in the eighteenth year, and devoting a fortnight annually to advanced drill, in each succeeding three years, so that by their twenty-third year of age, all young England will be capable of serving their country in case of need. It is estimated that 1,165,000 will be trained each year.

THE ARMY PLAN.

Some such scheme, which, of course, is far removed from the continental systems of conscription, has long been in the minds of army reformers as the utmost length to which English public opinion is likely to go in the direction of universal service. Even as it stands it would need the most tactful and delicate handling to avoid political shoals. When presented to parliament it will probably be part of the large scheme comprising War Office reform, the abandonment of Mr. Brodrick's grandiose army corps scheme, the adoption of South Africa as part of the home army establishment, and the readjustment of the army generally to the really modest army needs of the British Empire. Mr. Arnold-Foster, the new War Minister, is no man for gold lace and military aggrandisement. He wants a keen, small, working army.

NAVAL REFORM.

In the navy, too, a new spirit is at work. This week has seen the issue of the crowning reform of Lord Selborne's rule, by which the principle of the survival of the fittest will be applied to the promotion of naval officers. Captains will reach the admirals list at an earlier age, with the result that England's future Nelson will have less chance of being buried in the captains list when war comes. Captains who by seniority become rear admirals will be on the active list three years and a half. If by then they have not had employment, they will be retired to make way for the men below them. By this and other methods incapable officers will disappear to make way for capable.

JAPAN'S ARMY IS CLOSED TO FRIENDS

Foreigners Cannot Serve Against Russia in Case of War in the Far East

Japan May Still Accept a Compromise but has Russia gone too far to draw Back

London, Dec. 22.—In an editorial the Times says it fears the situation in the far East is not improving, but so long as negotiations are not formally broken off there is hope for a peaceful settlement. "The Japanese," says the Times, "are ready to come to a compromise on certain points, but they are quietly resolved that whatever they insist upon as a minimum, compatible with the interests of the country, must be secured to them by something more tangible than promises.

Foreigners Can't Enlist.

Considerable anxiety exists in the best informed circles of London regarding the possible outcome of the situation in the far East.

Some British officers have volunteered their services to Japan in the event of war. Baron Hayashi, the Japanese Minister, points out that the rules of the Japanese service preclude the employment of foreigners on active service.

The Morning Post, which is inspired in the Japanese interest, says that Japan should cut the Gordian knot by declaring a protectorate over Corea.

TRUMPED UP STORY.

Pekin, Dec. 21.—The native press recently reiterated a story to the effect that in the event of Manchuria being retained by Russia it was the intention of Great Britain to establish a protectorate over the Yangtse valley. This fiction is creating hostility against Great Britain.

CHINESE RUSHING TO ESCAPE THE TAX

Hundreds of Mongolians Entering Canada Prior of Imposition Poll Fee

San Francisco, Dec. 21.—Chinese laborers are rushing into Canada by the hundreds to evade the head tax of $500 on every Chinaman that enters Canada after January 1. They are now required to pay but $100. The steamer Doric, which recently arrived here from the Orient, brought 80 Chinese, who were immediately shipped to Victoria.

The Japanese liner Nippon Maru, just arrived, brought 80 Chinese, and the steamer Canfa carried 149 Mongolians, all of whom are in transit to Canada.

WILL TEST A HUNTING LAW

Courts to Pass Upon an Act of the Michigan Legislature

Marquette, Mich., Dec. 22—The new law passed by the last legislature, providing for the prosecution of the hunter who kills or wounds another while in quest of game is to be tested in the circuit court. On complaint of the widow Fred. Murray, son of a business man, has been arrested, charged with manslaughter, for killing David Pickett, a carpenter, who was in another hunting party. The maximum sentence under the law is imprisonment for ten years or a fine of $1,000.

CANADA CANNOT BUY GREENLAND

The Rumored Purchase from Denmark Not Within Range of Practical Politics

London, Dec. 21.—Lord Strathcona, the Canadian High Commissioner here, was interviewed to-day regarding a rumor cabled from Ottawa that the Canadian Government has under consideration negotiations for the purchase of Greenland from Denmakr, and the admission of Newfoundland into the Canadian confederacy. His lordship said the announcement that Canada is about to purchase Greenland is premature, as such a move on the part of Canada is not within the range of practical politics at present.

Remarkable Escape

London, Ont., Dec. 21.—Mr. H. Moore, a workman in Leonard & Sons' engine works, was on Saturday caught in the machinery connected with a turret lathe and whirled around swiftly through the air several times. Moore's clothing was torn from his body before he could be released, but further than being severely bruised, he was not injured.

FUGITIVE GAYNOR REPAYS BONDSMAN

American in Quebec Returns the $40,000 W. B. Kirk Lost When Bail was Estreated

Syracuse, N.Y., Dec. 21.—Former Mayor William B. Kirk has induced Col. John F. Gaynor, a fugitive from justice at Quebec in connection with the Carter frauds against the United States Government, to pay to him the $40,000 which he lost by being on Gaynor's bond when he left the United States. The bond was estreated, and Kirk had to stand the amount.

Mr. Kirk made several trips to Quebec, urging Gaynor to reimburse him, but Col. Gaynor's finances, it is said, were not in the condition to allow him to pay $40,000 in cash. Recently, however, Gaynor called a conference of his family at Quebec, and arrangements were made to pay Mr. Kirk.

THOUSANDS WILL BE THROWN OUT OF WORK

A Period of Industrial Depression has now set in Philadelphia, Pa., December 21—More than 10,000 workmen will be thrown out of employment after the 1st of January, because of the shutting down of the Pennsylvania and New Jersey Portland Cement Mills. For over two years these mills have been pumping night and day, and the machinery is in such bad repair that it will necessitate six weeks suspension of work to remedy it. Over 20,000,000 barrels of Portland cement were used this year, and the industry is very extensive in the vicinity of the Lehigh Valley Allenton, Easton and adjacent quarries in New Jersey.

There will be no increase in price of the cement. It has been a custom to shut down every winter, says Mr. Lober, and the shortage will probably not exceed 2,500,000 barrels. The output next season will probably be increased to 10,000,000 more barrels.

AUSTRALIAN VOTE FRIGHTENED MANY

Labor Leader's Victory Causes Consternation Among the Conservatives Denounced Naval subsidy

London, Dec. 21.—The London Daily Mail, referring to the Australian elections, says that the result is a menace to Australia. The Labor party is ready to sell its vote to the highest bidder, and has loaded the country with debt.

The Sydney correspondent of the Morning Leader says the Federal elections are a blow to Mr. Chamberlain.

The Chronicle's Melbourne correspondent wires that the election has caused widespread consternation among the more conservative portion of the community.

The Melbourne Age, the Government organ, declares there can be no peace so long as the free traders maintain a vestige of the fiscal flag.

J. C. Watson, the labor leader, has denounced the naval subsidy, and has favored a preference to Britain.

GOVERMENT WILL RAISE MEN'S WAGES

Substantial Increase Will be Given Trainmen on the Intercolonial

Moncton, N. B., Dec. 21.—Before leaving Moncton, Mr. Fielding, acting Minister of Railways, authorized publication of a statement pointing out that the impression prevailed that an indiscriminate increase of wages among Intercolonial Railway employes was probable, but adding that he was not at liberty to encourage such misimpression. Wages had been substantially increased, and individual cases would be dealt with as formerly. Mr. Fielding stated that he had been giving particular attention to the claims of the trackmen. He found that their duties were arduous, and involved considerable responsibility, but they hardly received as good wages as were being paid for the best classes of ordinary labor. He was willing to agree to an advance of ordinary wages for trackmen from one dollar and thirty-cents to one dollar and forty cents per day. In case of trackmen employed in certain special yards, where the work is more than ordinarily responsible, the rate would be increased from one dollar and thirty cents to one dollar and fifty cents per day. Some increases would also be included to section workmen and mechanics in connection with maintenance of way. The number of men who will participate in these increases approaches one thousand.

BRITONS ANGRY WITH THE KAISER

One Paper Thinks the Emperor Has a Swelled Head

UNFORTUNATE OUTBREAK

Times Says the Kaiser Has Chosen a Very Clumsy Method to Promote Harmony

London, December 22—Angry dissent greets the Kaiser's declaration at Hanover Saturday that the German legions with Blucher and the Prussians rescued the English army from destruction at Waterloo.

Naval and military circles, always sensitive to German remarks, pronounce the Hanover performance "another illustration of Teutonic swelled head." The Times thinks the Kaiser's outbreak unfortunate. It says: "If he meant to promote Anglo-German harmony he chose a clumsy method."

"William," says the Standard, "seems to be aspiring to rise above his historical accuracy wherein he displays the audacity of our old friend Richmond, who [illegible] clothed in [illegible] and proclaimed himself superior to grammer. What would have become of the Germans and Blucher if the British infantry had given way on the day of mud and blood? We have a better right to claim that our troops enabled Blucher to descend on the right flank of the French and thus turn Napoleon's repulse into rout."

Declaring that the Kaiser's statement is preposterous, the Chronicle says: "It might be remembered that the organizer of the victory was an Englishman."

All the papers rejoice that William has recovered his voice, while regretting that he "does not know how to use it."

NINE KILLED IN WRECK

Fast Express Meteor Derailed Near Fort Scott

Kansas City, Mo., December 22—The Meteor, the fast train on the St. Louis and San Francisco railway, was wrecked at Godfrey, about 15 miles south of Fort Scott, Kansas, yesterday. The train ran into a switch, and all except the sleeper was derailed and turned over. Nine persons were killed and over twenty injured. The dead and injured were taken to Fort Scott.

SWITCH LEFT OPEN.

The wrecked train was one of the finest and fastest in the service. It was made up of two baggage and one mail car, a smoker, two chair cars, and a sleeper. When the train reached Godfrey it was running at full speed to make up time. The crew of a freight train that had preceded the Meteor, left the switch open and the passenger train jumped the track and rolled down a small embankment. The smoker turned over, and so fast was the train running that the engine and baggage car landed nearly sixty feet off the road bed. The sleeper remained upright and none of the passengers in this car were injured.

FOUR KILLED INSTANTLY

The baggage cars were wrecked and the smoker badly damaged. Five of those who were in the forward end of the smoker and four of them were killed instantly. A news agent died on the relief train that carried the dead and injured to Fort Scott.

Engineer B. A. Deweese, of Fort Scott, Conductor Roy, of Topeka, and Fireman Bishard, of Fort Scott, were instantly killed and Express Messenger John Hell of Kansas City, was seriously injured. Others of the crew and almost every passenger on the train, except those in the sleeper, who escaped with a severe shake up, were injured, some of them seriously.

MR. E. S. CLOUSTON RETURNS HOME

Says That Grand Trunk Pacific Deposit Has Been Made

CHAMBERLAIN'S CAMPAIGN

Is Absorbing Topic in Great Britain and is Discussed by Everybody

Montreal, Dec. 22—Mr. E. S. Clouston, general manager of the Bank of Montreal, who has just returned from a trip abroad, states that the Grand Trunk Pacific deposit of $5,000,000 was made Saturday in the Bank of Montreal's London, England, branch.

Asked as to the Company's ability to finance the project, Mr. Clouston stated that he knew nothing personally as to the company's plan, but from what he had learned in the British capital he judged that there would be no difficulty in securing the funds necessary to construct the road.

HON. GEO. E. FOSTER'S INFLUENCE

Of course, Mr. Chamberlain's campaign was the one absorbing topic in Great Britain. All classes were discussing it pro and con. Even during his brief sojourn in London Mr. Clouston had been made aware of the rapid growth of the movement, and he came away convinced that sooner or later the Chamberlain party would secure a complete victory.

The higher classes and the moneyed interests appeared to be Mr. Chamberlain's chief opponents, while the masses were for it. The English people are conservative, and many of them feared that trade would be interfered with by so radical a change. They had always lived in an atmosphere of free trade, and it was hard to make them realize that there was anything else worth while.

Mr. Clouston states that, next to Mr. Chamberlain himself, no speaker on the British platform had made so good an impression as had the Hon. George E. Foster. In a private letter from Scotland which Mr. Clouston had chanced to read it was stated that no one had made more converts to the cause than had the ex-Minister of Finance.

ALASKAN BOUNDARY AWARD

Touching upon the Alaskan boundary case, Mr. Clouston stated that he had found few to question the justice of the award. Every one regretted that the main contention of Canada was not upheld, but no one for one moment doubted the correctness of Lord Alverstone's decision. The Lord Chief Justice was the personification of honor and ability, and the severe criticism to which he had been subjected was deeply resented, particularly by the legal fraternity of England. The idea that the United States can nullify the utility of Port Simpson as the terminus of a great Canadian transcontinental railway system is not taken seriously in England, the two islands ceded to Canada can be fortified so as to make approach impossible for a hostile ship.

Mr. Clouston accompanied Lord Strathcona to Scotland upon his recent trip, the occasion being that upon which His Lordship received the freedom of Edinburgh. The High Commissioner is enjoying the best of health.

THE STREET LIGHTING AND ST. RAILWAY MUDDLE.

Ald. Best Says the Town Can Do Its Own Lighting At $35 a Lamp.

At the meeting of the Committee of the Whole Council on Monday evening, called for the purpose of considering the ways and means of weathering the storm created by the Street Lighting and Street Railway muddle, it transpired that according to Judge Meredith's decision on the motion brought before him to quash the Street Railway and Street Lighting bylaws, that the former bylaw remains good providing three words are struck out, thus leaving no doubt that the shareholders revenue from the railway will not be exempted from taxation. The Committee of the Whole Council decided to recommend that the Council adopt this course, and thus award the street railway franchise to the Peterborough Radial Railway Company with whom, according to affidavits filed, Mr. Stuart and his associates have no connection whatever, irrespective of the fact that Mr. Stuart had, according to all accounts, deposited with the Town Treasurer a check for $5,000 as a guarantee that he will operate the street railway according to agreement by July 4th, 1904. Alderman Best and O'Connell both strongly opposed this measure.

As to the Street Lighting bylaw, Judge Meredith ruled that it be quashed, but remarked incidentally that it was a question which should be appealed, and the Council have 30 days in which to file such an appeal should they think fit. The Committee of the Whole therefore decided to, on advice of their counsel in Toronto, recommend that the Legal committee appeal this case, as until such time as the question is definitely settled, the new contract with the Peterborough Light and Power Company will hold good, and they can continue lighting our streets.

Ald. Best strongly opposed this measure also. He had no faith in the reported remark of the judge that the case was one which should be appealed, when he had immediately previously ruled that the bylaw be quashed. Besides, he was, he said, opposed to the whole measure, and had recorded in Council his protest against it. It was up to the town to do its own lighting and he is quite satisfied that there is enough surplus power going over the water works dam to provide for this. The town could take over the Peterborough Light and Power Company's poles, use them for street lighting purposes, and charge the company a rental for their use in furnishing domestic lighting. In this way he believed the town could be thoroughly and efficiently lighted for $35 per lamp. It is true, Ald. Morrison's committee brought an expert here to examine into this plan, but that expert never met the committee, of which he was a member, although he understands he reported adversely to the scheme. He was quite sure that he (Ald. Best), never met the gentleman.

Ald. Shortly—"Perhaps you were out of town, Mr. Best at that time."

Ald. Best—"No, I was not; I was right here. Again," continued the chairman of the Board of Works, "if, as Ald. Morrison has insinuated, there is likely to be an amalgamation of the two power companies, the more reason for the town doing its own lighting. We have the power and an extra wheelpit, and all there is to be done is to erect a building for an additional motor in compliance with the underwriters demands."

Ald. McWilliams understood that an agreement had been arrived at between the Peterborough Light and Power Company and Peterborough Radial Railway Company, by which the former were given an interest in the latter concern to the amount of $30,000. It was not until November 15th that he was aware of any friction between the two companies as to the terms of their agreement, and was quite surprised to find that the town had no power to treat the two companies as one. He was astonished at the affidavits which had recently been given publicity to, and considered them as a means of either getting around the real facts or disclosing the existence of facts which the Council were not aware existed. He was, however, perfectly satisfied with the terms of the lighting contract, and would stand by it; he would have voted for that contract irrespective of the street railway question altogether. In his humble opinion, the learned judge's opinion was bad law, and his after remarks worse. Ald. McWilliams thought there were good grounds upon which to appeal against that judgment. He would favor carrying out the franchise with the Peterborough Radial Railway Company, which he believed Mr. Stuart would back up. In any event, if the railway company failed to operate the system by July 4th next, then the town could take over all the company's property they had power to, and kill the Peterborough Radial Railway Company for all time to come.

Ald. Best—"But this company have till 1905 in which to make connections."

Ald. McWilliams—"Well, if we do as I suggest, we will carry out our bargain with Mr. Stuart and give the Peterborough Radial Railway Company a chance." He did not think there was any bonus in the lighting contract at its present price, and would not favor the Otonabee Power Company's tender being considered at all."

Ald. Best—"The judge said there was a bonus in that contract."

Ald. McWilliams—"I would rather see the thing settled by the people."

Ald. Rush—"And in the meantime."

Ald. Morrison—"The contract with the Peterborough Light and Power Company holds good." Ald. Morrison then went on to say that when Mr. Phillip, the expert brought here to examine into the scheme of municipal lighting, arrived here on a certain Monday, he was to have met the committee that night; but he was telegraphed to go to Orillia at once, which he did, and returned next day and met the committee.

Ald. Best—I never saw him."

Ald. O'Connell said he thought all along they were dealing with Mr. Stuart and Mr. Cox; if such were the case he contended that the town had made a good bargain, and was prepared to stand by his vote. He complained that if the matter was legally one of bonus, then the Councillors should have been so advised and safeguarded. He would not have voted for the bylaws had he thought Mr. Stuart was not concerned in them. And if Mr. Bradburn's affidavit is true, then the Council could not have been dealing with the Stuart Company.

Ald. Best—"Why was that $5,000 check put up,"

Ald. O'Connell—"Supposing the two companies could not agree; in that event Mr. Stuart would have no binding contract with the town to operate the railway, but he would have the street lighting contract at $14,000 more than offered by the other company. It makes no difference whether we are getting street lighting cheaper than other towns or not, we have an offer from the Otonabee Power Company to give the same light as called for in this contract, and they are prepared to put up ample guarantee, and it is only our duty to give that company the contract unless we are to get the street railway." We have, Ald. O'Connell continued, a contract with the Peterborough Radial Railway Company binding them to put a certain mileage of track in the town only, whereas we assumed that Mr. Stuart would make connections with outside places." He was opposed to dealing with the Radial Railway Company, and urged that unless the town can get a railway from Mr. Stuart, the whole question should stand over.

Ald Best—"When we proposed to take over the water works, one of the inducements held out to the people was that we would do our own street lighting, and we should keep faith with them. For $35 a lamp we can, I am confident, get as good a service as we have today and perhaps better, and I am prepared to spend time in developing that scheme."

Ald. McWilliams—"But five out of six of the committee concurred in the experts report that the scheme is not feasible."

Ald. Best—"The report of that expert, Mr. Phillip, that we could not do our own lighting at less than $75 a light was absurd. Any one can read between the lines that it was the Peterborough Light and Power Company who made that report. I did not wish to mention any names, but, Mr. Fisk and Mr. Henderson are the men who dictated that report."

Ald. Morrison—"The Mayor put Mr. Phillip in the hands of Mr. Henderson to show him over the waterworks, and I asked Mr. McDonald, on behalf of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, to allow him to examine their plant. This was necessary in order to prepare a report. It appears that Ald. Best has done all he could to throw me down because at the beginning of the year he himself wanted the chairmanship of the Committee on Street Lighting and Franchises. In taking over the water works why did Mr. Best, as chairman of that committee, had he considered this engineer so reliable a man, pay $30,000 more than he recommended.

Ald. Best—"That was for the good will, or commercial value, of the works."

The Mayor agreed that Ald. Best had some reason for complaint in not having met Mr. Phillip; but he concurred in Ald. Morrison's explanation of the matter. "Unfortunately, he said, "the night the committee were sitting, Mr. Phillip was called away to Orillia. On coming back he finished his work, left town and forwarded his report. I only saw him for five minutes."

Ald. Best—"I never saw him at all."

The Mayor said there was no underhand dealings in Mr. Phillips' connection with Mr. Fisk and Mr. Henderson. They simply piloted him over the ground in examining the two plants.

The Council will meet tonight to take action on the Committee of the Whole's recommendations.

A GROTESQUE EXAGGERATION

A few days ago Senator Depew, of New York told a lot of young people to whom he was making a speech that there are probably about 100,00 people of the nearly 80,000,000 of the population of the United States who may be classed as millionaires.

This is a statement, now scattered broadcast, to make one gasp. Less than ten years ago a careful estimate of the millionaires of the republic fell something short of 3,500. If within, say, eight years this number has been multiplied by about thirty it is enough to stagger anybody—to make a whole nation giddy, in fact.

If they have 100,000 millionaires then the aggregate wealth of the nation must be something amazing, for the number of people who are half-millionaires or quarter-millionaires must be very much larger, and the possessors of property grade down by almost infinitesimal differences to the vanishing point.

Moreover, many of their millionaires have more than one million each, yet, to give them each only one million would require one hundred thousand millions. To provide for the additional millions of the multimillionaires and for all owners of wealth in sums of less than a million each must stagger one's mathematical imagination.

The thing is absurd. Take your pencil and set down the whole assessed valuation of all the real and personal property in the United States, add all the money of all kinds in circulation, add also the nominal value of all the industrial trust multiply the sum of the addition by two and you will have hardly enough to equip the senator's 100,000 with one million

Why should a United States senator make drunk the minds of youth with such amazing tales as this?

OTONABEE COMPANY STATE THEIR CASE

Their Report on the Proceedings to Set Aside the Street Lighting By-law.

Contention That the Amount of Bonus to the Street Railway Should Have Been Stated—The History of the Case Reviewed by the Otonabee Power Company.

The Otonabee Power Company have handed to The Times for publication their report on the proceedings to set aside the street lighting by-law.

THE REPORT.

"The only interest the Otonabee Power Company had in the matters engaging the attention of the Council was to see that the street lighting was put up to fair competition and that the lowest tenderer would be awarded the contract. It was further contended that if the Council desired to give the Peterborough Radial Railway a bonus, then the amount of the bonus should be stated and the ratepayers of Peterborough should be asked to vote upon the question. That would have been taking the ratepayers into the confidence of the council and transacting the affairs of the town above board and in a straightforward manner. The Council took a different course. They conceived the brilliant idea of coupling the street lighting franchise and the street railway franchise together, and sought to award the street lighting franchise to an amalgamated company which was supposed to be composed of the American Cereal Company shareholders at the modest sum of $60.00 per lamp per annum for over one hundred lamps for ten years and also to grant to the same company the street railway franchise on very favourable terms for the term of thirty years. These statements were made public at the time, and the move was regarded as a dexterous way to avoid the act prohibiting bonuses without the consent of the ratepayers.

About this time the Otonabee Power Company put in a tender to supply the town with the same quantity of light at the sum of only $35.00 per lamp per annum and offered to install the very latest alternating current enclosed arc lamp of 2000 candle power capacity that the Canadian General Electric Company could manufacture.

The difference between these two propositions was no less than $2500.00 per annum for ten years, or in round numbers $25,000. That was too large a sum to attempt to justify and the Mayor evidently thought that it was a part of his duty to appeal to Mr. Robert Stuart for directions and to solve "the difficulties of the situation." The following is a copy of the letter the Mayor wrote to Mr. Robert Stuart:—

Peterborough, April 17, 1903.

Dear Sir,—You will, no doubt, have been advised that contemporaneous with Mr. Dennistoun's proposals to the Council in reference to electric light and street railway, came also one from the Otonabee Power Co. to furnish lights at $35.00 per lamp. This apparent bonus of $2500 per annum for the street railway is clearly more than public opinion would justify the council in giving. Resulting discussion and enquiry have further elicited the fact that modern power energy lamps can be operated at less cost with more satisfactory results than can our present class of high energy lamps.

Expert advice is now being obtained on the whole subject of street lighting as applicable to our local conditions.

Though there will probably be opposition, the majority of the Council are decidedly anxious to effect an arrangement with you if possible, and neither the coupling of the lighting contract and the street railway franchise, nor the thirty-year duration of the latter will be obstacles if the terms can in other respects be brought within the radius of moderate public opinion. It would be fair to the Council, however, that they should have details of the franchise part of the proposition before them also, before making a decision in regard to either, as it would be trying if possibly after turning the Otonabee Power Company down, they should find themselves unable to agree with you as to these.

I am giving Hon. G. A. Cox and Mr. Dennistoun copies of this letter also. These gentlemen fully appreciate the difficulties of the situation.

Yours truly,
(Signed) G. M. ROGER.

Mr. Robert Stuart, American Cereal Co., Chicago, Ill.

From the above letter it clearly appears that the Mayor recognized that the Otonabee Power Company's offer was $2500 per annum lower than the offer of the proposed amalgamated company "that modern power energy lamps can be operated at less cost, with more satisfactory results than can our present class of high energy lamps"; that it would be necessary to "turn the Otonabee Power Company down," and that the Mayor "appreciated the difficulties of the situation."

The Council then went into committee and held its secret sessions, to which the Otonabee Power Company were not invited, though, the opposition companies were invited to be present and did attend the meetings. How were the "difficulties of the situation" overcome? Who was to pay for the cost of removing the snow from the streets? How was the Otonabee Power Company to be "turned down"? How was the payment of $2500 per year more for street lighting to the Peterborough Light and Power Company to be overcome? How was the "radius of moderate public opinion" to be circumvented?

The answer to "the difficulties of the situation" was easy. The two propositions could be separated. The street lighting franchise could be given to the Peterborough Light and Power Company at $1400 per year more than the Otonabee Power Company had offered to do it for, and the street railway franchise could be granted to the Peterborough Radial Railway Company. The excuse for not awarding the lighting contract to the Otonabee Power Company could be given, that their proposed lamp was not satisfactory to the "expert."

The reader will say, "That cannot be so because he heard nothing of it prior to the passing of these two by-laws. He never heard at that time that neither Mr. Robert Stuart nor any member of the Cereal Company were not to have one dollar worth of interest in the Peterborough Radial Railway Company. He was not aware that the thirty-year street railway franchise was to be granted to practically the same interests that ran the old railway under the ground. But so it is, and here is the proof taken from the sworn affidavit of Mr. T. E. Bradburn fyled in court.

"I, Thomas Evans Bradburn, of the town of Peterborough, in the county of Peterborough, gentleman, make oath and say:—

"1. I am the president of The Peterborough Light and Power Company, Limited.

2. There is no existing agreement or understanding whereby the Peterborough Radial Railway Company will receive any benefit or advantage from the street lighting contract entered into between the Town of Peterborough and the Peterborough Light & Power Company, Limited, for the ten years following the 1st day of January, 1904.

"3. The suggested amalgamation of the two companies referred to in April, 1903, was never proceeded with, and though negotiations were had for that purpose, nothing was accomplished, and the street lighting contract entered into between the Town of Peterborough and the Peterborough Light & Power Company is not shared in any other way with any other persons or corporaion, nor are any persons or corporations other than the shareholders of the said Peterborough Light and Power Company, interested in the monies payable under said contract, either directly or indirectly.

"4. With the exception of myself, no person holds any stock in both the Peterborough Light & Power Company, Limited, and the Peterborough Radial Railway Comapny. I hold ten shares in tthe former and 200 shares in the latter Company. There is no arrangement for the transfer of shares from the shareholders of one Company to the shareholders of the other Company, or anything of that kind for the purpose of giving either Company or the shareholders thereof an interest in the contracts of the other Company, but each company is carrying on business bona fide and entirely separate and distinct in every particular from the other of said companies, and I deny that there is any secret understanding between the companies as set forth in the affidavits fyled in support of this motion."

Both Mr. R. M. Dennistoun, the Solicitor for the American Cereal Company, and Mr. J. C. Shook, the President of the Peterborough Railway Company, made affidavits corroborating the above statements of Mr. Bradburn.

The by-law granting the franchise to the Peterborough Light & Power Company, Limited, was accordingly passed, giving them $14,000 extra for street lighting.

The by-law was passed, giving the Peterborough Radial Railway Company, but not the Cereal Company, a thirty year franchise of our streets. The Otonabee Power Company was "turned down." The ratepayers, whose assessments were lately increased, were left to pay the cost of shovelling snow. And the Mayor and Council congratulated themselves that they had overcome the "difficulties of ttbe situation," and were still within the "radius of moderate public opinion."

The Otonabee Power Company would not be "turned down." They felt that they had power to spare to the town at moderate rates. They felt that they had reduced the cost of domestic lighting to the citizens of Peterborough at least $20,000 per annum, and that the street lighting would stand a similar reduction.

The representatives of the Otonabee Power Company applied to the Courts, and Mr. Justice Meredith set the Street Lighting By-law aside with costs against the town. Mr. E. E. A. DuVernet, the counsel for the Otonabee Power Company, has reports the decision of the Court:—

"In giving judgment His Lordship said that he could come to no other conclusion than that there had been a desire on the part of the Aldermen to favor the Peterborough Light & Power Company, and to give them an indirect bonus or such substantial advantage as amounted to a bonus under the Act, and he accepted the affidavits and statements of the Aldermen who made affidavits that the primary motive in doing this was to get the Radial Railway introduced.

"The learned Judge commented rather strongly on the action of the Mayor, whose letter seemed to indicate that he was somewhat in the power of the promoters of these two companies.

"He seemed to consider the objections made to the tender of the Otonabee Power Company trifling and unsatisfactory and intimated that the aldermen were trustees and should have conducted the business in the same manner as if they were acting in no other capacity. He suggested that no alderman would make a loss of $1400 a year in his own business simply because an offer had been put in at a late date. In fact this reason appeared to him that they were not doing themselves justice in putting forward this reason."

It now appears from the Mayor's interview that Mr. Robert Stuart really made the deposit of $5000.00 on behalf of the Peterborough Radial Railway Company, though it is positively sworn that he had not one cent's worth of interest in it.

This whole matter should be investigated by some tribunal having power to take evidence under oath. What was to become of this extra $14,000.00? Among whom was it to be divided? Was the railway company to get $5,000.00 and the street lighting company the other $9,000.00? Why did not the aldermen take the ratepayers into their confidence and let them know the facts before voting on these by-laws? Why did none of the aldermen in addressing the council inform the public that this extra price was being paid to induce the American Cereal Company to give the citizens of Peterborough a real live street railway service? In fact there are a number of whys and wherefores that the public are anxiously awaiting a good old-fashioned honest answer to. Be it said to the credit of Ald. Best and Ald. Clinkscale that they stoutly opposed these two by-laws from first to last."

DEAF

FOR THIRTEEN YEAR

Mr. Geo. Warner, publisher of the Masonic Register Toronto was almost totally deaf in both ears for a number of years. He experimented with a thousand different remedies and only go relief by using Catarrhozone and it cured.

Mr. Warner says: "For the past thirteen years my hearing has been badly affected. The streets were as as quiet to me as if I lived in the city of the dead. I could neither hear the noise of the street cars or sound of horses feet on the pavement. Before I had used Catarrhozone Inhaler three days I was able to notice a great change in my condition, which gradually improved until now I can hear a whisper across the room. I cannot tell you how much I appreciate Catarrhozone, or of the wonderful results I have derived from using it. Catarrhozone has my strongest endorsement and I am quite willing that you should use it."

Mr. Warner's unsolicited testimonial furnishes abundant proof that deafness can be cured, even in old age, if Catarrhozone is used. This remedy is scientific in its application and meets with the endorsement of prominent ministers and doctors all over Canada. Our best equipped health institutions always keep it on aland, and cases are recorded where it has been used with great success in the Government deaf and dumb institutions where other means proved futile.

If your hearing is poor, if you have head noises or ringing in the ears, be sure and use Catarrhozone. It is a regular miracle worker and is sure to help you. Complete outfit costs $1; trial size 25 cents. Sold by all druggists and N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

Dry Placer Miner, formerly of California.

This company has the right, without royalty payments, to use the new patent machine upon all the land it may own, acquire by lease, or operate, in Arizona. W invite special attention to the great commercial value and profit of this machine, and what can be accomplished by it.

What This Machine Will Do.

For the first time in the history of gold mining a machine has been invented which will handle the dry placer gold gravel without water, and in large quantities. This machine will save 98 per cent of all the gold in the gravel, and will do it at a lower working cost than by any existing process. It is operated by a small, compact engine, using crude oil as fuel. A complete plant, capable of handling 200 tons per day will weigh less than 1,200 pounds.

To secure this gold only those placer lands could be worked, which could command large supplies of water, hence the immense bodies of dry placer lands remote from water have never been worked.

Fifteen Hundred Millions in Gold

The United States has yielded nineteen hundred millions in gold, of which fifteen hundred millions—or more than 75 per cent.—were the product of its placers.

Ninety per cent. of the world's total gold supply has been taken from placers by processes which have admittedly lost the bulk of the values.

Simplicity of Machine—Its Method of Operation

The machine is so extremely simple in construction and operation that any intending investor can operate it instantly. He can take a peck or more of sand, either ordinary house of sea sand, or such as is found in the placer lands of Arizona and California, put into this sand ten or a hundred pieces of gold as small as the point of a toothpick, and from that to the head of an ordinary pin, mix the sand and the gold thoroughly, turn them into the hopper or feed of the machine, and in a few seconds the machine will separate the gold from the gravel and recover from 98 to 100 per cent of the gold. It is an absolute, infallible, ocular demonstration of the merits of the machine. It has solved the problem of handling sand or gravel containing gold in regions remote from water.

Cost of Handling Material

Each plant is portable, weighs less than 1,200 pounds and can be easily moved by a few laborers.

The two greatest authorities in the world on the moving of material are "Haswell" and "Trautwine." They say in their standard publications that a laborer can shovel horizontally, 12 feet, vertically 6 feet for 50 feet haul 17 cubic yards in 10 hours.

A well known engineer in his work for the U. S. Government at Sandy Hook, moved 18 cubic yards, 100 feet haul in 10 hours at a cost of 10 cents per cubic yard, paying laborers $1.75 per day.

The dry placer gold-bearing sands of California, Arizona and New Mexico are handled quite as easily as those of Sandy Hook.

Ten laborers can easily supply one machine with 204 cubic yards of gravel in 12 hours, working at the same speed as shown by Haswell, Trautwine or at Sandy Hook.

Placer work on above basis would cost about 11 1-2c. per cubic yard.

Do You Want Monthly Dividends?

We make a special offer of a limited number of shares of stock at this time, because the company requires immediately sufficient to build several machines to operate in the field.

Every machine at work will increase the intrinsic value of the stock.

Twenty machines in the field will increase the price and value of the stock more than double the present offering, and every additional machine means a further increase in price and value.

The Company intends to divide its net earnings every month, so that the stockholders may count absolutely on receiving monthly dividends in proportion to monthly earnings.

A Point of Honor.

By Norman Duncan.

DAVID GREY was an old man when first I knew him, a bent old fellow with a staff in his hand, who was long "past his labor," as they say elsewhere, and had settled down to pass the last of life where he had spent the strength of it. That was long ago; it was when I was a schoolboy, and spent my long summer vacations in the Red River district.

Boy and man, David had been in the service of the Hudson Bay Company as hunter, clerk, trader, explorer, factor; and there, in the changed wilderness, while the moon was up and silence was all about, he told us many a tale of trade and fight and narrow escape. It was on such a night that we learned how Donald McLeod, the factor, strong, courageous, defiant, had scorned a compromise with his honor, although his arms were pinioned behind him and a dozen tomahawks were flourished about his head.

"I said I wouldn't, and I won't," I had said to my friend, Jimmy Evans, as we passed up the walk to David's cottage that night.

"You're not always so particular," said Jimmy, tartly.

It was pure perversity on my part—the seizing of an excuse to escape a canoe trip to Hunter's Island.

"Well," I repeated, obstinately, "I said I wouldn't, and I won't."

"What's that you're saying?" old David called from the porch.

"Billy's obstinate," said Jimmy, with a laugh, as we sat down with David. "He said he wouldn't, and he won't—go to Hunter's Island to-morrow."

"You call Donald McLeod to my mind again," said David. "That was what he said. 'I said I wouldn't, and I won't.' But it was different," with a glance at me out of the corner of his eye. "Something important—something important to McLeod, to me, to the women and children, to the poor fellow to whom McLeod had passed his word—something of vast importance hung upon it then."

"Tell us about it," I asked.

"It was long ago," said David, "not later than 1829, I'm sure, for I was little more than a boy then. McLeod was the factor at Fort Refuge, a remote post situated three hundred miles or more to the north-east of this, but now abandoned. And a successful, fair-dealing trader he was, albeit so stern and taciturn as to keep both his helpers and his half-civilized customers in awe of him. It was deep in the wilderness—not the wilderness as you boys know it, where a man might wander night and day without fear of wild beast or savage, but a vast, unexplored place, with dangers lurking everywhere.

"'Grey,' he said to me when I reported for duty, fresh from headquarters, 'if you do your duty by me, I'll do mine by you.'

"'I'll try to,' said I.

"'When you know me better,' said McLeod, with quiet emphasis, 'you'll know that I stand by my word.'

"We dealt, of course, with the Indians, who, spring and fall, brought their furs to the fort, and never failed to remain until they had wasted their earnings in the fashion that best pleased their fancy.

"Even then the Indians were degenerate, given over to idleness and debauchery; but they were not so far sunk in these habits as are the dull, lazy fellows who sell you the baskets and beaded moccasins that the squaws make to-day. They were superstitious, malicious, revengeful, and they were almost in a condition of savagery, for the only law they knew was the law our guns enforced. Some authority was vested in the factor, and he was not slow to exert it when a flagrant offence was committed near by.

"'There's no band of Indians in these parts,' I was told, 'that can scare McLeod. He'll see justice done for and against them as between man and man.'

"Fort Refuge was set in a wide clearing. It was built of logs and surrounded by a high, stout stockade. Admittance to the yard was by a great gate, which was closed promptly at sundown, and always strongly barred. We had no garrison regularly stationed there to defend us. In all, it may be, we could muster nine men—McLeod, two clerks, and a number of stout fellows who helped handle the stores. Moreover, were our gate to be closed and our fort surrounded by a hostile force, we should be utterly cut off from communication with those quarters whence relief might come. We had the company's wares to guard, and we knew that once we were overcome, whatever the object of the attack, the wares and our lives would be lost together.

"'But we can stand a long siege,' I used to think; and indeed there was good ground for comfort in that.

"Our stockade was impregnable to an attack by force, no doubt; but as it soon appeared, it was no more than a paper ribbon before the wily strategy of the Indians. One night, when I had shut the gates and dropped the bars, I heard a long-drawn cry—a scream, in which it was not hard to detect the quality of terror and great stress. It came, as I thought, from the edge of the forest. When it was repeated, near at hand, my heart went to my mouth, for I knew that a band of Indians was encamped beyond, and had been carousing for a week past. Then came a knocking at the gate—a desperate pounding and kicking.

"'Let me in! Open! Open!' I heard a man cry.

"I had my hands on the bar to lift it and throw open the gate when McLeod came out of his house.

"'Stop!' he shouted.

"I withdrew from the gate. He approached, waved me back, and put his own hand on the bar.

"'Who's there?' he asked.

"'Let me in, McLeod. It's Landley. Quick! Open the gate, or I'll be killed!'

"McLeod's hesitation vanished. He opened the gate. A man stumbled in. Then the gate was shut with a bang.

"'What's this about, Landley?' McLeod said, sternly. 'What trouble have you got yourself into now?'

"I knew Landley for a white man who had abandoned himself to a shiftless, vicious life with the Indians. He had sunk lower, even, than they. He was an evil, worthless, ragged fellow, despised within the fort and respected nowhere. But while he stood there, gasping and terror-stricken, I pitied him; and it may be McLeod himself was stirred by the mere kinship of color.

"'Speak up, man!' he commanded. 'What have you done?'

"'I've done no wrong,' Landley whimpered. 'Buffalo Horn's young son has died, and they put the blame on me. They say I've cast the evil eye on him. They say I killed him with a spell. You know me, McLeod. You know I haven't got the evil eye. Don't turn me out, man. They're coming to kill me. Don't give me up. You know I'm not blood-guilty. You know me. You know I haven't got the evil eye.'

"'Tush, man!' said McLeod. 'Is that all the trouble?'

"'That's all!' Landley cried. 'I've done no harm. Don't give me up to them.'

"'I won't,' McLeod said, positively. 'You're safe here until they prove you blood-guilty. I'll not give you up.'

"With that, McLeod turned on his heel and went to the shop. When he had ordered a watch to be kept on the clearing on all sides, we devoted ourselves to the matter in hand—the preparation of the regular quarterly statement for the officials at headquarters. But as we labored, hatchets, knives and the cruel evil faces of the savages, by whom, as I chose to think, we were threatened mixed themselves with the figures, to my bewilderment.

"Soon the dusk came, and while I trimmed and lighted the candles in the shadowy outer room there seemed to be shapes in the corners which I had never seen there in quieter times. McLeod however, was unperturbed. He had forgotten all about the numerous band which he stood ready to defy.

"'Do you think there is danger?' said I.

"'Danger?' said he. 'From what?'

"'Buffalo Horn's band,' said I.

"'Nonsense!' said he. 'What is that last total? There seems to be a shilling and sixpence missing here.'

"At that moment one of the helpers came in. He was visibly excited—like a man who bears tidings.

"'Red Feather is at the gate,' he said.

"'Is he alone?' said McLeod.

"'Yes, sir. We made sure of that.'

"'Fetch him here,' said the factor calmly. 'Take Tom and Tobias to the gate, and don't let Red Feather hold it open.'

"Red Feather was soon brought in. He was the chief of the band, an old, crafty Indian, chief in name, but inferior in authority to Buffalo Horn, who was chief in fact. McLeod continued his work.

"'Let us talk,' said Red Feather, at last.

"He spoke in his own tongue, which I shall interpret freely for you. McLeod put his pen aside and faced about.

"'What have we to talk about?' he asked. 'The trading is done. You have your supplies. There is no business between us.'

"'We have the white man to talk about,' said Red Feather. 'He has killed a child of our tribe, and you have given him refuge here. He has killed the son of Buffalo Horn with the evil eye. He must be put to death.'

"'I know this man,' said McLeod. 'He has not the evil eye. He has killed no man, and he shall not be given up.'

"'His life is forfeit to the tribe.'

"'His life is in my keeping. I have said that he shall not lose it. Am I the man to break my word?'

"'You have kept your word between us,' said Red Feather. 'You are not the man to break your word.'

"'What business, then, lies between us? Our talk is done.'

"The guard at the gate interrupted. 'There is a man knocking at the gate,' he said.

"'It is my brother,' said Red Feather. 'He comes to join the talk. Let him in.'

"'Open the gate,' said McLeod.

"It was growing dark. I went with the guard to admit the brother of Red Feather. Dusk had fallen over the clearing. The sky was overcast; in half an hour it would be deep night, the clearing one with the forest. But we opened the gate. A tall Indian stalked in. He was alone, and I knew him for the brother of Red Feather. I followed him to the shop making sure first that the bar was in place.

"'Let us have the white man,' he said to McLeod. 'Let the peace between us continue.'

"McLeod perceived the threat. He was not a rash man. He had no wish to provoke a conflict, but he had no thought of surrendering the refugee. As for me, my trust was in the stockade.

"'I will talk with the white man,' he said.

"The factor was gone for half an hour. He secreted Landley, inspected the defences, gathered the women and children in the blockhouse, and returned to the council.

"'The white man is not blood-guilty,' he said, proudly. 'I have promised him protection and he shall have it.'

"Again the helper came. 'There is another knock at the gate,' said he.

"'Who is there?' said McLeod.

"'It's so dark I can't see,' said the helper.

"'The man is my cousin,' said Red Feather. 'He has come to talk with us. Let him in, for he is a wise man and may help us.'

"'Open the gate,' said McLeod.

"We sat silent, waiting for the cousin of Red Feather, the wise man who might help us. I heard the rattle of the bar as the helper lifted it, then the creak of the gate. Then a furious outcry, a confusion of howls and screams, a war whoop and a rush of feet. The Indians were within the stockade. A moment later they burst into the shop and advanced upon us, uttering blood-curdling whoops and brandishing their hatchets and knives. McLeod reached for the musket above the desk, but before his fingers touched it Red Feather caught him by the arms, and with the help of the brother made him prisoner. At the same instant I was secured.

"'Let us strike! Let us strike!' the Indians kept shouting, all the while dancing about us, flourishing their weapons.

"The danger was real and terrible. We were at the mercy of the band, and at that moment I did not doubt that they were bent on murder and pillage. There had been a cruel massacre at Fort Pine but a few months before. The story was fresh in my mind. That crime had gone unpunished; nor was it likely that a sufficient force would be sent west to give the band their due. There was nothing now to deter Red Feather's men from committing a similar outrage. We were remote from our kind, on the edge of a wilderness into which escape was a simple matter. Our guns, as I have said, had been our law and defence, and we were now utterly in the power of our enemies.

"'Let us strike! Let us strike!' was the cry.

"Buffalo Horn had come in with the band. It was soon evident that to the restraining influence of his presence was due our respite. He waved his braves back. They withdrew and became quiet.

Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives

Not a single patient has ever been refused admittance because of his or her poverty.

FROM THE YUKON

—From Bishop of Selkirk, Caribou Crossing, Yukon: "The trifling remittance ($10.00) herewith enclosed, is intended to express our sympathy for the sufferers in other parts rather than imply a special need for your institution here."

CONFEDERATION LIFE ASSOCIATION

—J. K. Macdonald, Esq., Managing Director Confederation Life Association, in sending cheque for $500.00 from his Company, says: "I am pleased to be able to be the medium of helping on so good a work."

Funds Urgently Needed

The financial reports for the year just ending show that to keep the doors of the Free Hospital for Consumptives open, maintaining the number of patients for which accommodation has been provided, not less than $25,000 is required for the year now entered upon.

Since the Free Hospital was opened (18 months ago) 224 patients have been received. The help the institution has been to these people—all from the wage-earning and poorer ranks of life—cannot be estimated in human language.

—Edward D. Heddon, Solina, Ont., on leaving the Free Hospital, writes: "I cannot speak too highly of the institution from which I have received so much benefit. I can but tender my best thanks for the kindness shown."

—Minnie Linklater, Hamilton, writes: "I have spent over nine months at the Free Hospital for Consumptives. I believe I have been greatly helped, and shall never hesitate to use my influence to further that good cause."

There is no endowment, excepting the provision made by three life insurance companies for six beds for the current year. Only by the continued contributions of the Canadian public can the work be maintained.

Patients are accepted from every part of the Dominion, and there have been in residence during the past year patients from Prince Edward Island on the east to the Northwest Territories on the west.

Contributions may be sent to Sir W. R. Meredith, Kt., Vice-President National Sanitarium Association, or Mr. W. J. Gage, Chairman of the Executive Committee, Toronto, Can.

"A Point of Honor"

"'Will you give the murderer of my child to our tribe?' the chief said to McLeod.

"'He is no longer mine to give,' said the factor.

"'Will you give him to us in peace and forget that he has gone with us?'

"McLeod was still in the grasp of Red Feather and his brother. Buffalo Horn was facing him. Behind the chief, awaiting his signal, was the band, with knives and hatchets in hand.

"'No,' said McLeod.

"The tumult was renewed. The Indians advanced, threatening the factor with their weapons and crying out for his death. But McLeod was not to be terrified.

"'Let us take the white man,' said Buffalo Horn, lifting his hand for silence. 'We have no quarrel with you. Let all be as it was.'

"'No,' said McLeod. 'I will never consent to his murder.'

"'Let us take him.'

"'I said I wouldn't,' said McLeod, 'and I won't.'

"It seemed to me that the end had come. Buffalo Horn looked steadily into McLeod's eyes. McLeod gave him glance for glance. He was ready to die for the word he had passed. The Indian hesitated. It may be that he did not want to precipitate the slaughter. Then he turned, as if to give the signal. Before his hand was raised, however, the daughter of the Indian interpreter of the post pushed her way through the band of braves and stood before their chief.

"'Listen,' said she. 'Have you come to rob the great company of its goods?'

"'No,' said Buffalo Horn. 'We have no quarrel with the great company.'

"She was a slip of a girl, to whom, in sickness and in health, McLeod had been unfailingly kind. She knew no fear, and in intelligence she was superior to all the other women of her race I have known.

"'Have you come to take the life of this man?' she went on, moving closer to Buffalo Horn, and looking deep into his eyes.

"'No,' said the chief, 'we have no quarrel with this man. He is a good man, but he will not deliver the murderer of my child.'

"'Will you take his life because of that?'

"'No; we will take his life because he will betray our part in the death of the white man whom he has tried to shelter.'

"'There are others who might betray you.'

"'And their lives, also,' said Buffalo Horn, composedly.

"All that had been implied was now expressed. He was to massacre us all to shield his tribe from the punishment that might follow the discovery of his revenge.

"'You will lay waste the fort,' said the interpreter's daughter, 'but will the ruins not accuse you to the great company which this man serves?'

"'We will be far away.'

"'And will you never care to return to the grounds you have hunted from childhood?'

"To this Buffalo Horn made no reply. He looked at the floor, his arms folded, and he was silent for a long time.

"'This man,' said the girl, touching McLeod on the shoulder, 'has dealt fairly by you. He has kept his faith with you. He said that he would provide you with food through the hard seasons. Has he not done so?'

"'He has kept faith with us,' said the chief. 'Therefore he is a good man.'

"'He is a good man because he has kept faith with you,' the girl said, eagerly. 'Would you, then, have him break faith with some other? He has said to the white man, "I will not give you up." Would you have him break the word he has passed? For if he breaks it once, will he not break it again? If he should yield up the white man, what security would you have that he would provide for you through the next hard season?'

"'He keeps his word,' said Buffalo Horn. 'He is a good man.'

"He made a sign to Red Feather to release McLeod. Then he gathered his braves about him, and stalking solemnly at their head, led them out of the shop, over the courtyard and through the gate. We were left alone.

"'Leave the gate open, Tobias,' said McLeod. 'Come, boy,' to me, 'let us get to work on the quarterly statement again. This interruption came at an awkward time. We'll have to make up for it.'"

That was the end of David's story.

THE GREAT CHARITY.

THE HOSPITAL FOR SICK CHILDREN, TORONTO.

It Takes Care of Every Sick Child in Ontario Who Cannot Afford to Pay For Treatment.

The Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, is not a local institution—it is Provincial.

MASSAGE FOR RHEUMATISM.

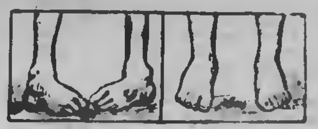
The sick child from any part of Ontario whose parents cannot afford to pay for treatment has the same claim and the same privileges as the Toronto child born within sight of its walls.

This is the reason that the Trustees appeal to the fathers and mothers of Ontario—for as their money goes out to help the Hospital so the Hospital's mercy can go out to help the children.

This is the 28th year of the Hospital's life. The story of the years is a wonderful one—for in that period 10,000 children have been treated, and over 5,000 cured and 3,000 improved.

Last year there were 868 boys and girls in its beds and cots, and of these 493 were cured and 247 improved.

Look at these pictures of club feet—before and after.



BEFORE AFTER

Of the 868 patients 293 came from 216 places outside of Toronto.

In three years the patients from different parts of Ontario, not Toronto, average 250—nearly a third of the entire number.

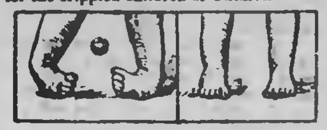
In six years 1,400 outside patients have been treated and for 20 years past they will average 100 a year.

The average stay of every patient was 54 days, the cost per patient per day 94c.

A dollar or two means a small lot of money out of your pocket, but it takes a big load of misery out of some little life.

The X Ray department gives wonderful results. A girl came in with a double thumb on one hand. She left with one thumb—a perfect hand.

See what the hand of the Surgeon does for the crippled children of Ontario.



BEFORE AFTER

Your money means mercy to somebody's child.

Your money can cheer some mother's heart by saving some mother's child.

Health and wealth. You give wealth to the Hospital, and the Hospital gives health to the children.

The Corporation of the City of Toronto gives $7,500 a year to the Hospital for the maintenance of every child, whether from city or country.

HE ENJOYS READING.

The citizens of Toronto contribute about $7,000 a year towards the maintenance of every patient in the Hospital, whether from city or country.

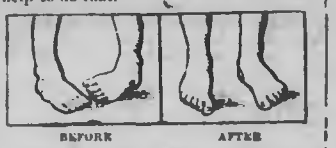
Toronto does its share in the good work, and the Trustees ask you to do yours.

The Newspaper Proprietors of Ontario have kindly helped the Hospital by inserting our appeals.

There are two newspaper cots, and boys and girls from the country are placed in the cots founded by the newspaper men.

Look at the pictures of "before and after." They tell their own story—surely you will help us in this good work.

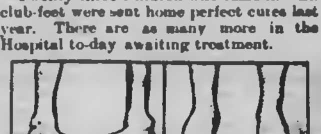
If your dollar could straighten the feet of a little boy or girl with club-feet you would gladly give it, and your dollar will help to do that.



BEFORE AFTER

Take off the handicap of deformity—give all children a fair start in the race of life.

Twenty-three children who came in with club-feet were sent home perfect cures last year. There are as many more in the Hospital to-day awaiting treatment.



BEFORE AFTER

If you know of a sick child—the club foot boy or girl—send his parent's name to the Hospital.

Please send your contributions to J. Ross Robertson, Chairman, or to Douglas Davidson, Sec.-Treas. of the Hospital for Sick Children, College Street, Toronto.

More American Enterprise.

How one dressmaker got her start in New York is the pet story of the woman who started her, says The New York Times.

"She rented two rooms on the first floor of a 95th street house," said the woman. "I occupied the floor above. I had seen her sign in the window for several weeks before I saw her. One day I met her in the hall. Two days later she called at my apartment.

"'I am in an awful pickle,' she said, 'and I am going to ask you to help me out. There are two women down stairs who want some dresses made, but before they give me the order they want to see some samples of my work. With the exception of my own clothes—and you could put all of them in a bandbox—I have nothing to show them. I find it awfully hard to drum up trade here. I haven't had a customer since I moved into this house, and I will lose those two women if I cannot make the raise of a few nice gowns to show them. Would you mind letting me have three or four of yours for a few minutes? I will return them as soon as the women go away.'

"The pure nerve of the girl staggered me. 'But you didn't make my gowns,' I said. 'They were made by a dressmaker who runs a very fashionable shop.'

"'So I suppose,' said my neighbor. 'Are they marked with her name?'

"'No,' said I, 'that woman's style is her trademark, and I ought not to give another the benefit of it.'

"The girl just stood there and looked at me, and the pitiful drooping of her eyes and mouth appealed to me more effectually than any words. The upshot of the matter was I loaned her five of my newest, best gowns. Naturally, the callers were delighted with them, and gave the girl a large order for summer clothes. I worried myself sick over the affair."

"'What will you do?' I said, 'if you turn out poorly-made garments? How will you square yourself?'"

"'I shall not need to square myself,' she said, confidently.

"And she did not need to. Her work, instead of being botchy, as I had expected it to be, was beautiful. All she needed was an introduction, and after she got that, through gowns made by a swell dressmaker, her reputation and a good income were easily made."

COUPLE HELD FOR MURDER

Man and Wife are Accused of Killing Woman's Mother

Bedford, Ind., Dec. 22—Joseph Weeks and Cora Weeks, his wife, were taken before the Lawrence circuit court yesterday to answer for the murder of Cora Weeks mother, Mrs. Susan Ireland, who was found dead, Sept. 7 with a bullet hole in her head. The case is a mysterious one. Mr. and Mrs. Weeks were the only witnesses of the woman's death, and they claimed it was suicide, but the coroner's verdict said murder.

RAN AWAY WITH MARRIED MAN

The End of the Norwich Elopement Case

Galt, Dec, 22—Miss Winnifred Dennis, who, it will be remembered, eloped some weeks ago with her brother-in-law, William Myers, of N. Norwich, will return to her home in Burgessville shortly. About one week ago, her father, Charles Dennis, learning that his daughter was living with Myers in Winnipeg, started out for the Western City, in the hope of inducing his daughter to return. A despatch from Winnipeg states that he has succeeded in locating the girl, having visited the home where she and Myers were living, and secured the daughter's consent to accompany him back to Woodstock. It is not known whether or not Meyers who was married to an older daughter of Mr. Dennis, and who deserted his wife and two children, will return to his home or not.

Equitable Gold Mining Co.

R. C. LANE, President. W. F. NORTON, Secretary and Treasurer.

Over $300,000 of development work already done. Main shaft 9 x 16 feet, down 700 feet. Over 3,000 feet of drifts, tunels and shafts showing immense ore body

Destined to become large and continuous dividend payer.

The Equitable Gold Mining Co.'s properties consist of three mines, known as the North Bonanza, Flowery and Kimbark. They are located in Six Mile Canon, less than four miles from Virginia City, Nevada, which is the nearest railroad station.

Years ago, over three hundred thous and dollars of development work was done upon the mines—so they are not mere "prospects" but actual mines. This work was done under the personal supervision of competent engineers, and was paid for by the owners of the mines themselves; thus giving double assurance that the work was well done and that the expenditure was justified.

The Main Shaft (triple compartment, 9x16 feet in the clear) is down seven hundred feet. From this shaft, running along the vein matter, east and west, are four drifts, at different levels, having a combined length (including the Rule winze and the tunnel) of 2,350 feet.

In addition to the above there are four small shafts, with a combined depth of about 300 feet; 535 feet of tunnels, and at least 500 feet of cross-cuts, up-rises, etc.

All told, there is 4,050 feet of underground work—the most of which is in ore. Here is nearly one mile of openings in mineralized rock.

It is conservatively estimated by competent and reliable engineers and practical miners that there is developed an ore body of at least One Million Five Hundred Thousand Tons!

As a further evidence of the large amount of work done there is from 75,000 to 100,000 tons of ore on the dumps at the different surface openings—ore that, with modern cheapened processes, can be converted into gold bullion at a profit.

THE TITLE

Title to the Flowery and North Bonanza mines is by patent from the United States government, while the title of the Kimbark is by location and possession.

The Equitable Company obtained the Flowery and North Bonanza mines, both of which are patented, by purchase—the payments therefore to be made out of a share of the net proceeds of the mines. The Company has a written contract, duly recorded, for a deed, and is in possession of the properties, and is now operating them. The sum of $2,000 was paid on the contract, September 30th, 1902, and partial payments have since been made. The Company is entitled to $6.25 per ton as cost of mining and milling. One-half of all over and above this $6.25 per ton goes to the former owners till they receive the total sum of $105,000, without interest. There is no stipulation as to amount of work to be done within any specified time—and no proceeds, no pay. The Company can therefore pay it in one year or it can pay it in ten years. With this exception the Company is free from debt. Its policy is to pay as it goes. In this way it has no fear of financial embarrassments. The title to the Kimbark is by "location," under the mining laws of the United States. Work enough has already been done to entitle the Company to a patent, which in due time will be obtained.

Recent Development Work

Since the Company acquired the property, it has put up poles and wires for a distance of one mile for the transmission of electric power from the Truckee River Electric Power Plant. By this means unlimited power for mining, hoisting and milling is obtained.

It has built a dwelling house for the manager, a large boarding house for the miners, a barn, a power house and blacksmith shop.

It has put an electric hoist and skip into the [illegible]-tunnell; has purchased ore cars and the necessary tools for mining purposes.

It has acquired the Kimbark ground, adjoining the Flowery and North Bonanza mines, and is now developing the property by driving a tunnel.

Within the last few months the Company has mined and milled over 800 tons of ore—realizing therefrom about $10,000 worth of gold bullion. The out-put is constantly increasing and all the Company needs is more mill capacity to handle its ore.

Storm King Group of Mines

TO CANADIAN INVESTORS

The property comprising what is known as the STORM KING GROUP OF MINES offers an attractive and safe investment. The property is the richest in the country and we believe it would be difficult to secure an investment that promises better returns. The following is a description of the mines written by Capt. A. M. Paul, whose reputation as an expert in mining matters is known far and near.

These properties are situated in the Cable Cove Mining District, about fifteen miles north of Sumpter, Oregon, and about one mile northwest of the Baby McKee mine, about two miles northwest of the Last Chance, the Alpine, the Imperial and the California mines.

The properties in this report consist of seven claims. The names of the seven claims being as follows: The Eureka and the Honest Dollar. These two claims are on the same vein. Adjoining these two claims and paralleling them on the northwest is another vein upon which there are two claims known as the Jessie and Golden Rule, and paralleling them on the northwest there is another vein upon which there are two claims, known as the Storm King and the Ozone. The last claim of this group lies to the northwest of the last two named, and is adjoining them. This claim is the Shannon Bell.

In making my report I will commence with the two first named claims of the group, the Eureka and Honest Dollar. The development on these claims consists of a tunnel ninety-seven feet in length, running along the course of the vein, showing two feet ten inches of ore in the top of the tunnel and a little over three feet in the bottom, which assays giving values of from $9.68 to $70 per ton in gold. About four hundred feet in a southwesterly direction there is a shaft on the vein ten feet deep, showing the vein to be from one to two inches wide on the surface and about twelve inches wide in the bottom of the shaft, in which assays give values of from $9.96 to $40 per ton in free milling gold ore.

This vein is exposed by small shafts and open cuts for a distance of fifteen hundred feet, and the course of this vein is north, ten degrees east, and the vein cuts the formation, showing it to be a true fissure, and the formation is granite. This vein shows in places a width of from ten to fifteen feet of mineralized matter, commonly called vein matter, but which is caused by hot solutions from below.

I will now pass to the Jessie and Golden Rule. There has been very little work done upon these two claims, there being one discovery shaft ten feet deep, showing ore on all sides of the shaft, and running in value of from $4 upwards. It is my opinion that with development, this, too, will prove valuable property.

The work on the Storm King and Ozone consists of a tunnel near the point of discovery and is driven along the vein for a distance of one hundred and eighty feet, showing ore all the way from the surface to the face of the tunnel, and averaging in width from six to eighteen inches. Three assays give the following values. $12.50. This being a general sample taken from the dump. The other two assays are $82.68 and $79.88 respectively, this being the assorted ore for shipment. The course of this tunnel and vein are north, ten degrees west, and the vein cuts the trend of the formation obliquely (which is granite) and by driving this tunnel five or six hundred feet on the present course it will intersect a quartzite reef (which is running north, twenty degrees east) which would make this a contact vein between granite and quartzite, and should produce a large body of ore, at the intersection of the contact.

The only work done upon the Shannon Bell, the last claim of this group, is the location work, and is not enough to allow of a report being made.

There is water for power purposes one mile from the property, and timber on the ground, of a very fine quality, sufficient to run the mine for many years to come.

All the assays mentioned in this report were made by the assayer, of the Imperial mine at my request, and the ore was taken by me from the properties mentioned.

I will state that I have been a practical miner since 1870, and am now the manager and superintendent of the Imperial mine in this district.

For The Extermination ot The "Piano Pest."

In Germany the attack on the promiscuous use of the piano and other noisy musical instruments at all times and places has assumed almost the phase of a crusade. The latest and most characteristic discussion of the problem is a determined protest made by Siegmund Auerbach, a leading physician of Frankfort-on-the-Main, in the Supplement of the Munich "Allgemeine Zeitung," No. 142, the oldest and probably most influential general scientific journal in the country. The publication of the protest in this journal is significant, indicating that the learned world of the Fatherland is taking the matter seriously. We translate and quote the following:

"The protest of thinkers against the piano pest is not new, nor have the protestants been the meanest among men. Both Goethe and Schopenhauer have virtually cursed the evil habit of their thoughtless neighbors that interfered with their work and comfort, and yet, comparatively speaking, their sufferings must have been small compared with that of most modern men. Still more recently the litterateur, M. Lessing, wrote a series of articles in the 'Nord und Sud,' in which he voiced the protest of nervous people against this evil. It is well known to what trouble Mrs. Carlyle went to save her husband from molestation of this kind, and how Richard Wagner bought peace at a high price from the distorting street rabble in Florence. The question itself has a history which prominent men have helped to make.

"The question has both a medical and a legal side. The effect of such noise on the finely-strung nerves of the thinkers and writers is very dangerous, and as a physician I can testify to this danger. Piano-players have no right to endanger the health of their neighbors, and, this being the case, it is the right and the duty of states and governments to protect their people against the pest. There are regulations that forbid crying out wares on the streets, that regulate the noise that may be made by hucksters and others; why should there not be regulations to protect people from the piano hammerer? Just how this is to be done it will be the business of our lawmakers to determine. But one way that seems to be good would be to determine that those who by their callings or by choice are bound to use the piano or the loud musical instruments hours and hours each day should be compelled to live in certain quarters of the city, or in certain squares in a street, or in certain sections of squares, just as in the railroad trains there are certain parts and portions where smoking is allowed and others where it is forbidden. In this way there would be unmusical places where other people could live undisturbed and be sure that the next moving-day would not bring the unwelcome pianos into the new neighborhood. But both medical and legal considerations call for an extermination of the 'piano pest.'"

Archie Shade's Watch.

"While picnicking with a crowd in the country the other day," says the Joplin "News-Herald," "Arch Shade accidentally dropped his watch in a spring, and, quite naturally, it has since refused to run. He took the timepiece to a jeweler, and the following conversation ensued:

"'Here's my watch; can you fix it?'

"'What's the matter? Did you break the spring?'

"'No; the spring broke the watch.'

"The man wondered, but proceeded to examine the injured article.

"'The spring is broken,' he finally announced.

"'No wonder,' said Arch; 'I dropped the watch in it.'

"It began to dawn upon the jeweler that the young man was certainly insane, and just as he was glancing around for some avenue of escape Arch explained the situation."

Artistic and Beautiful.

The use of electric light is becoming so general for house lighting in Toronto that it seems almost unnecessary to demonstrate the many beautiful effects which may be had by the use of electric lighting in the home. The Electric Light Company find, however, a very good purpose is being accomplished by having the art showrooms in their new office building in Adelaide street east thrown open to the public. It is their intention to have an exhibit of the latest things in electric fixtures there, in order that Toronto people may have the benefit of a large variety of beautiful pieces to select from. Their wish is that everyone who takes an interest in the artistic and beautiful should call and see their display.

Cockneyisms.

The following dialogue between a 'bus-driver and a droopy-looking youth with a well-watered silk hat who was handling the reins on the box of a brougham is a fair sample of the ready wit and the equally ready animosity of the London Jehu. The youth had evidently inconvenienced the 'bus-driver in some subtle way—a state of affairs in which each party, according to the other, is to blame.

'Bus Driver—'Ere; you ought to be drivin' cows in the country, you ought!

Droopy Youth—Garn! w'ere's the reg'lar man? The company don't know you're takin' 'is job, do they?

'Bus Driver—You're the man wot washes dahn the brougham, ain't yer?

Droopy Youth—No wonder you ain't got many passengers; they judges by the fice, yer know.

'Bus Driver—Fice! Wot d'you call that thing you've got? W'y, it only wants a 'andle to be a 'atchet.

Droopy Youth (whipping up his horse) — —— ——— ——!

'Bus Driver—That's right; you 'urry home; yer farver wants 'is 'at!

A Wise Man.

He was padding the hoof through a prosperous village, when, turning a sharp bend in the road, he nearly collided with a man running as if for his life, and a little farther saw a great smoke. He asked the fellow where he was going and whether the smoke was a house on fire. "No," he said, "that's a neighbor of mine burning weeds. She's a widow," he said, beginning to move on again, "and when I see a widow burning her weeds I'm off to a safer place," and with a wild howl he galloped away.

Mainly About People.

Once, on the first of April, Henry Ward Beecher found in his morning mail a letter containing only the words "April Fool." "Well! well!" he is said to have remarked; "I have received many a letter where a man forgot to sign his name; this is the first time I ever knew of a writer signing his name and forgetting to write a letter."

One of the best things Oscar Wilde ever said was his answer to a certain rather humdrum poet, when the latter was complaining of the neglect with which his lines were treated by the critics. "There seems to be a conspiracy of silence against me. What would you advise me to do?" he enquired of Wilde. "Join it," was the consoling reply.

The late Justice Armour, whom Mr. A. B. Aylesworth succeeded on the Alaska Commission, in a certain case was once disputed by a wrongheaded young lawyer, who said, when the judge remained firm against all his arguments: "Well, sir, if that's law I'll go home and burn my books." "Hadn't you better," said the judge, "go home and read them?"

A turn of the political wheel had placed the English Conservatives on top and lowered the Liberals. Not long afterward a young and presumptuous member of the ruling government, who was sitting opposite a member of the defeated party at a London dinner-party, took that time to say: "Well, Mr. Blank, how do you like being an ex?" "I should like it better if we had been succeeded by the y's" (wise), instantly retorted the Liberal.

Professor Ernest Huffcut of the Cornell Law School told an amusing story not long ago of a freshman who was called from the way of knowledge before his year was out. The students had been answering questions in moot-court, and the subject under discussion was a cow which had been killed by a railway train. Each student was required to fill out a paper on the case. "This brilliant youth," said Professor Huffcut, "wrote with all seriousness after 'Disposition of the Carcass': 'Mild and Gentle.'"

Glen MacDonough, who wrote the libretto for the comic opera, "Babes in Toyland," was sitting in a New York cafe recently with Victor Herbert, the composer, when a waiter approached to take his order. The waiter smiled at Mr. MacDonough, and said: "You don't remember me, do you? I used to sing in one of your companies." "I remember you very well," said Mr. MacDonough. "Are you surprised to see me here as a waiter?" asked the other. "Not a bit," replied the librettist, cheerfully; "you know I have heard you sing."

During the contest for the Presidency of the United States between Buchanan and Fremont in 1856, a country boy turned up at one of the Fremont meetings with a number of brindle pups, which he offered for sale as "Fremont pups." Some days later a gentleman who had bought one saw the same boy at a Buchanan meeting selling the same pups, which were, he claimed, of the Buchanan persuasion. "But you told me," objected the purchaser, "that these were Fremont pups." "Yes," retorted the boy, "that was before they got their eyes open."

Dickens, who never liked Thackeray, told a friend that he could see nothing to admire in one of the latter's novels, then being serially produced; and the friend, who knew both the great authors, with friendship's traditional "good-naturedness" reported the opinion to Thackeray. It must have rankled deeply, but all the comment Thackeray made was: "I am afraid I cannot return the compliment, for there is not a page that Dickens has written which I have not read with delight and admiration."

Franklin Pierce, at the time of his nomination for the Presidency of the United States, in 1852, was scarcely known to the public at large. When the news of his nomination reached Boston a well-known orator was addressing a Democratic meeting. The chairman whispered the name of the candidate to him. "Ladies and gentlemen," said he, "I have the honor to announce to you the nomination for President of that great statesman, that illustrious citizen, that noble man whose name is known wherever the flag floats—whose name is a household word—whose name—whose name"—(turning to the chairman) "what the dickens did you say his name was?"

Joaquin Miller, "the Poet of the Sierras," recently visited a friend in Boston. This friend, whose literary tastes run largely to Emerson, Browning and Maeterlinck, found the venerable poet in the library one afternoon deeply absorbed in a book. "What are you reading?" asked the Bostonian. "A novel by Bret Harte," replied the poet. The Hubbite sniffed. "I cannot see," said he, "how an immortal being can waste his time with such stuff." "Are you quite sure," asked Miller, "that I am an immortal being?" "Why, of course you are," was the unwary reply. "In that case," replied the Californian, grimly, "I don't see why I should be so very economical of my time."

BODILY WEAKNESS

A DISTRACTING CONDITION THAT IS PERMANENTLY CURED BY FERROZONE, A PLEASANT REMEDY IN TABLET FORM TO BE TAKEN AFTER EACH MEAL.

All fagged out ideas come as slow as molasses in January. You think of things just a minute or so too late. Snap is gone and the bouyancy and strength that makes life a pleasure, that's gone too.

The doctor would say that you are run down, and you don't eat or digest enough. Your stomach requires some aid, and probably your digestion needs a bracer. The blood should have phosphorus and iron to strengthen and purify it.

Now Ferrozone is a wonderful blood maker and nerve stimulant. It is really a food for the blood, nerves and vital energies and will improve your run down condition in a very short time.

Ferrozone will make you strong and capable of doing a heavy day's work without fatigue. It is a marvellous remedy and does marvellous things as the following testimonial proves.

"After my baby was born I was left in a weak, sickly condition, totally unfit for a mother's household duties. I was irritable and nervous, and trifling things bothered me very much. I somehow would not gain strength, although I took malt extracts and tonics all the time. A lady friend recommended Ferrozone which I used with splendid results. The first box helped quite a little, and when I had taken six boxes my former health, ruddy cheeks and good spirits were fully restored."

You can't spend 50c. to a better advantage than on a box of Ferrozone and the moment you get Ferrozone the sooner you will get well. Don't accept a substitute, but insist on your druggist supplying the genuine Ferrozone which sells for 50c. a box, or three boxes for $1.25. By mail from N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

LIGHT AT $35 PER LAMP

The Otonabee Power Company's Offer for Light is Still Open

Mr R. R. Hall was seen by The Times yesterday regarding the street lighting contract and stated that the offer of the Otonabee Power Company to supply modern street lights at $35 per lamp per year is still open.

The company is prepared to put up any reasonable amount of security that the contract will be carried out. They are also ready to install the lamp which the town engineer is said to have recommended as being the best, and is still prepared to carry out the contract to the letter.

AN INVESTIGATION BEGUN

Concerning the Sudden Death of Mr. Joseph Wilson's Baby

The sudden death on Monday of the infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wilson, (said to be in perfect health a short time before its demise) caused Coroner Gray to order an inquest. It appears the child was under the charge of Mrs. Trainer. It was taken suddenly ill and died before medical aid could be procured.

A jury was empannelled at 5 o'clock yesterday evening, and after instructing Dr. McClelland to hold a post mortem examination, they adjourned to meet in the Police Court on Monday night, when evidence will be taken.

DEATH OF ZETTA JAMIESON

A Bright and Promising Young Life Cut Short

Her demise will be deeply deplored by a very large circle of friends, for she was beloved by all who knew her. She was one of the brightest scholars in St. Luke's Sunday school, and teachers and scholars will feel her loss deeply.

The sympathy of the entire community is extended to the bereaved family in their great sorrow.

The funeral will take place this afternoon at 2.30 p.m., from Harvey street, to Little Lake cemetery.

Killed at Port Hope

George Floody, a laborer employed on the G.T.R. west of Port Hope was run down and instantly killed by the Montreal Express about six o'clock on Tuesday morning. The deceased was walking just east of the viaduct along the northerly or right-hand track. A run-off near Cobourg necessitated the use of the right-hand track for No. 3, westbound and Floody, who evidently took it for granted that the train was on the left-hand track, as usual, paid no attention to the approaching train. An inquest was considered unnecessary. The deceased leaves a widow and four small children.

ORDAINED TO THE PRIESTHOOD

Rev. Father Galvin, of Ennismore, Receives Holy Orders

His Lordship Bishop O'Connor yesterday conducted the ordination of Rev. Patrick Galvin, at the Roman Catholic church, Ennismore. There was a large congregation present to witness the ceremony, and hear the sermon by Rev. Father Fitzpatrick, parish priest, which was a very impressive one. Venerable Archdeacon Casey, of Lindsay, and Rev. Father McColl assisted his lordship, while Rev. Dr. O'Brien was master of ceremonies.

Rev. Father Galvin was born in Ennismore and attended the Collegiate Institute here. His classical course was taken at St. Anne's, Quebec, and Ottawa, and his philosophical and theological course at the Grand Seminary, Montreal. As his lordship stated on Sunday, Rev. Father Galvin is the sixteenth set apart in the diocese for the priesthood during the past fourteen years. The names of the reverend fathers are as follows, in order of ordination:

George Whibbs, Campbellford.
D. J Scollard, North Bay.
W. J. McColl, rector St. Peter's cathedral.
T. F Collins, Bracebridge.
M J. Calnan, deceased.
M. J. McGuire, Wooler.
M J. Fitzgerald, Ennismore.
P. J. O'Leary, Galway.
C. J. Phelan, Young's Point.
J. J. O'Sullivan, Victoria Road.
M J. O'Brien, St. Peter's cathedral.
F J. O'Sullivan, Lindsay.
J. J. O'Brien, St. Peter's cathedral.
T. J. Crowley, North Bay.
F J. Kelly and patrick Galvin.

Rev. Father Scanlon, of Grafton, is from Halifax, and Rev. A. F. Kelly, of Trout Creek, is from Ogdensburg. His lordship stated also that there were ten others ordained from the diocese, who were laboring in other fields, both in Canada and United States, some as the members of various religious orders.

Big Cut in Wages

Toronto, December 22 —The announcement was made today of a general reduction in the wages of employes of the Massey-Harris Company, the big implement manufacturers. They employ about 2,000 hands and the cut will be in no case less than ten per cent, and in some cases it will be higher. The move is causing great uneasiness among the men. Some years ago there was a union, but the company has steadily fought against organized labor. Today there is no organization.

BRITISH CAPITAL FEEDS COLONIES

Frenchman Says the Talk of Abandoning Mother Country is Nonsense

London, Dec. 21.—A prominent German State Minister has declared that Mr. Chamberlain's colonial zollverein will remain a chimera through his losing sight of the common enemy of Europe, the United States.

Leroy Beaulieu, a member of the French Institute, says Britain's colonies talk arrogantly, while British capital and prestige feed and maintain them. For them to talk of abandoning the motherland is idle nonsense.

Mr. Arnold White warns Englishmen that if Mr. Chamberlain becomes Premier, no one in the Empire can curb him but King Edward.

A Packed Jury.

John Burns, M.P., says Mr. Chamberlain's tariff commission is a packed jury.

A prominent city firm says a strong syndicate of German business men has been formed to supply the free trade party with unlimited funds to fight Mr. Chamberlain.

Lord George Hamilton informs the Ealing Conservatives that the opposition to protection is too strong for him to support Premier Balfour.

Winston Churchill, M.P., who is supporting the Liberal candidate in Ludlow, where a bye-election will shortly be held, says protection means a policy of brag and grab.

The Berlin Reichsbote declares that if the other British colonies adopt New Zealand's differential tariff, Germany will be shut out of the markets of the world.

R. Nash, of Sydney, Australia, replying to Mr. Chamberlain's question how to give the colonies a preference without putting a tax on foreign goods, says it can be done by cheapening ocean carriage.

Ask a healthy woman what she would sell her health for and she would tell you that the choicest diamonds in the world could not buy it. What use for diamond rings to emphasize the shrunken fingers, or earrings to light up the cheeks hollowed by disease?

Health is the first requisite to womanly happiness. General ill-health in women has its origin in local womanly disease. Cure the diseases of the delicate womanly organism and the general health is perfectly restored.

The remarkable benefits experienced from the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription are due to this medicine's perfect cures of womanly diseases. It establishes regularity, dries weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness.

"It affords me great pleasure to be able to say a few words in regard to the merits of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and his 'Golden Medical Discovery,' writes Mrs. Flora Arn, of Dallas, Jackson Co., Mo. "I was tempted to try these medicines after seeing the effect upon my mother. At an early stage of married life I was greatly bothered with painful periods, also a troublesome drain which rendered me very weak and unfit for work of any kind. I became so thin there was nothing left of me but skin and bone. My husband became alarmed and got me a bottle of 'Favorite Prescription.' After he saw the wonderful effects of that one he got me two more, and after I used them up there was no more pain, and I began to gain in flesh very rapidly."

"Favorite Prescription" makes weak women strong, sick women well. Accept no substitute for the medicine which works wonders for weak women.

THE PEOPLE WILL VOTE ON THE ST. RAILWAY AND LIGHTING BY-LAWS

Mayor Rogers Says He will Respect the Decision of the Electors, Street Railway By-Law Amended

The Town Council met in special session last night, when there were present Mayor G. M. Roger, and Aldermen Shortly, Morrison, H. Rush, O'Connell, Fincle, R. F. McWilliams Batten and Best.

The main business taken up was that of the Street Lighting and Street Railway bylaws, and after a prolonged discussion, in which Mr. R. R. Hall, representing the Otonabee Power Company, figured prominently, the Legal committee were empowered to appeal from the ruling of Judge Meredith that the Street Lighting bylaw be quashed, and a bylaw to amend the Street Railway bylaw as advised by the learned judge, passed its several readings. This action of the Council, however, does not settle the street railway question, as the motion to quash this latter bylaw is still before the court, which will sit again early in January. At that time the bylaw will again be taken into consideration in its amended form; but it does not necessarily follow that it must be sustained.

At the close of the discussion last night, which, by the way, resulted for the major part in a reiteration of the statements made at the committee meeting held on Monday night, and which was fully reported in The Times of Tuesday and Wednesday, Ald. McWilliams suggested that a vote of all the electors be taken on the following question; "Are you in favor of re-enacting the street railway contract passed on October 14th, 1903," and that a bylaw be prepared to authorize this step.

Subsequently a bylaw was produced which had already been prepared in anticipation of this step, but with the difference that it coupled the street lighting question with that of the street railway. This passed its several readings and consequently every qualified elector will have an opportunity to express his opinion at the polls on January 4th on the advisability of the town carrying out its agreements with the Peterborough Light and Power Company and the Peterborough Radial Railway Company.

Should the electors vote against one or both contracts, His Worship, the Mayor has pledged himself to respect the wishes of the citizens and take immediate steps to repeal the Street Railway bylaw passed last night, and will refrain from proceeding with the appeal against the quashing of the Street Lighting bylaw. In this way, according to His Worship's pledge, both questions are now in the hands of the electorate. Yes or No! which shall it be?

A communication was read from the Otonabee Power Company to the effect that their offer for street lighting at $65 a lamp is still good, and that they are prepared to give ample security for carrying out a contract on the lines previously laid down, to the letter. This was merely received.

COMMITTEE'S REPORT.

Ald. Morrison submitted the following:

Gentlemen,—Your Committee of the Whole Council beg leave to report and recommend as follows;

1. That the bylaw authorizing an agreement with the Radial Railway Company be amended as suggested by Mr. Justice Meredith.
2. That the Legal committee be authorized to appeal the case in regard to counsel may advise.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Ald. Morrison moved the adoption of the report, seconded by Ald. Rush.

Ald. Best and O'Connell thought that as the town had 30 days in which to appeal the Street Lighting bylaw, it would be better to leave the whole question for next year's Council to act on. They moved in amendment accordingly.

The amendment was lost and the report adopted as read.

Ald. McWilliams approved of the report. If the Street Railway bylaw is passed one of three things may happen, he said. The railway may be operated by Mr. Stuart, then the Town would get what the people are anxious for; or the the Peterborough Radial Railway Company may take it up irrespective of Mr. Stuart and they are now a good, sound financial concern, with a subscribed stock of $100,000 and $20,000 in the Ontario Bank. Should they even operate the road, irrespective of Mr. Stuart, the franchise calls for a service to Jackson Park, the south end of the town, and a good town system, in which event we should get a large part of what we want. Then in the event of the Radial Railway Company failing to operate the road by reason of Mr. Stuart withholding his support, we shall be $5000 to the good and be in a position to cancel every vestige of right now held by the company. At the worst there would only be a delay of six months. He was satisfied, however, that Mr. Stuart will take the matter up, and he did not want the town to do anything which would cause delay in getting the street railway, or offer any excuse for the contract not being carried out by July 4th next. As to the Street Lighting bylaw he thought the learned judge had given undue weight to the Otonabee Power Company's offer which came in at the eleventh hour. Neither did he give earnest attention to the difference between the contracts the exigencies of the case called for, especially when the necessity for a new line of poles which would be required by the Otonabee Power Company for street lighting purposes was taken into consideration.

Ald. O'Connell reiterated his arguments of Monday night in opposition to taking any further action on the bylaws. It was argued all along, he said, that we were dealing with the American Cereal Company who were establishing big works in town, contemplating an extension of these works, and bringing into Peterborough considerable capital, and our object in preparing these bylaws was to get those people further interested in the town by resuscitating and operating an up to date radial railway system, the difference between the two street lighting contracts was, it was claimed, to be spent by the Cereal Company in operating the railway. In knowing what we wanted, he continued, it was our duty to have discovered how that purpose could be legally effected, and I think we were somewhat derelict in our duty in allowing the matter to be delayed until the closing days of the year, and what is worse, the closing days of the lighting contract; which puts us in some measure at the mercy of the light and power companies. I understand that at the end of the Peterborough Light and Power Company's contract we can confiscate their poles or do something else with them. If we are giving a contract at $14,000 more for street lighting because we want the American Cereal Company to resuscitate and operate the street railway, and them only. What is that but a bonus? You may call it what you like, but it is remarkably like a bonus. I am not opposed to this, but I want the Town to make a binding agreement with Mr. Stuart. We are not in that position now, but have made a contract with the Peterborough Radial Railway Company, which is that concern with which the Town has had so much trouble and misfortune in past years, a company which has seriously mismanaged its affairs, and I might say, disgraced the town. And it has been denied that there is any understanding between Mr. Stuart and this Radial Railway Company.

Mr. R. R. Hall, for the Otonabee Power Company, said he was surprised and astonished when Mr. Moore informed him that the street lighting contract had been let on its own merits, and not coupled with that of the street railway franchise. He was further astonished to learn that neither Mr. Stuart, Mr. Cox or anyone associated with them had nothing whatever to do with the Radial Railway Company. He denied that there was any secret understanding between the two companies, and asked the Council as fair and honorable men not to stultify themselves by granting a contract for lighting at $14,000 more in ten years than was necessary. He urged them not to be mesmerized by Mr. Stuart and his smile that never comes off. Mr. Hall then went on to assert that if the Otonabee Power Company were offered the lighting contract on the same terms as the Peterborough Light and Power Company they would give in cash $7000 to the street railway, and would still save $6000. He strongly repudiated the reflections which had been cast on his company's financial standing, which was as good as that of the Peterborough Light and Power Company. The Otonabee Power Company have a paid up capital of $150,000, and free from debt, and are good for any contract. The lighting contract, he argued, should be taken on its merits; probably it would be wise if new tenders were asked for.

Ald. Morrison—"Are you prepared to put in writing a tender at your present price for open direct current 9 1-2 ampere lamps, or an exact duplicate of the lights at present in use?"

Mr. Hall—"No Council would ask a modern up to date company to put in an out of date rattle-trap lamp which are thrown on the scrap heaps of electric companies and may be bought at 10c. a piece.

Ald. Morrison—"I have come to the conclusion from observation of other lamps in London, Chatham, Hamilton and elsewhere, that the lamps on our streets are the best. They have the lamps I ask you to furnish in Toronto, and have no intention of throwing them on the scrap heap."

Mr. Hall—"If the contract is awarded to us, I will be willing to accept the judgment of the Council as to what lamp we shall install, because I feel confident they will be willing to accept the most modern lamp on the market."

The Mayor said that the railway franchise was put in the name of the Peterborough Radial Railway Company at Mr. Stuart's request for obvious reasons. The bargain the town has is with Mr. Stuart; he may or may not carry it out. Owing to regrettable delays, he may throw it up in disgust. His Worship then remarked that Mr. Hall had approached the other company to hold the town up.

Mr. Hall—I deny that, the proof of which is in the offer I have just made."

The Mayor—"Well, Mr. Dennistoun is my informant; you'll have to fight it out with him." He then went on to say that he thought the people could discriminate between the aldermen who were looking after the town's interests, and those people who were looking after their own interests.

To Ald. McWilliams Mr. Hall said his company would leave their offer open for three months if so desired. "We never had," he continued, "for one minute the thought of selling out to the American Cereal Company. The lighting of this town would be but a small part of our growing business."

Ald. Best here asked the Mayor why Mr. Robert Stuart's check for $5,000 had not been cashed and the money placed to the corporation's credit.

Mayor Roger—"I did not know until today that it had not been cashed." Then for Mr. Adam Dawson's information, His Worship gave a brief history of the negotiations on the lighting and street railway franchise, questions as already reported. The Street Railway bylaw, he said, stands exactly today as agreed to by Mr. Cox and Mr. Stuart; the franchise was put in the name of the Peterborough Radial Railway Company at these gentlemen's request. Mr. Stuart's check for $5,000 is the only guarantee that the franchise will be carried out; but I have not the slightest doubt that were the Otonabee Power Company's objections removed, arrangements would at once be made by Mr. Stuart to carry out his agreement in every way."

Adam Hall—"You gentlemen are not the only Council who have been deceived by gentlemen who had no intention of carrying out their agreements. You have my sympathy, Mr. Mayor."

Ald. Best—"The town has not $5000 cash guarantee. The check can be cancelled at any time."

Mayor Roger—"You know more than I do, then." Mr Stuart has put up a marked check, which is binding. If the contracts are offered to Mr. Stuart tomorrow and he refused them, then that check can be confiscated by the town. I shall be very unhappy if the town goes back on anything it has agreed to. The matter is in this shape today. We can free Mr. Stuart if we choose; and if we do not do so, we have every right to expect him to carry out his part of the agreement.

A little passage at arms here occurred between His Worship and Ald. Best, the former insinuating that the latter had all along acted in the interests of the Otonabee Power Company, and Ald. Best denying the insinuation and adding, "nor am I a servant of the Dickson Company."

A bylaw was then passed amending the Street Railway bylaw as Judge Meredith suggested.

A CELEBRATION.

Ald. Shortly, McWilliams and Batten were then named a committee to confer with Ashburnham Council on the question of fittingly celebrating the union of the two companies.

—The Presbyterian entertainment on Tuesday evening was quite a success.

—You all know about the hot bath, the cold bath, the shower bath, the Turkish bath, and other kinds of baths, but have you ever heard of a "slurry bath"? There is a man over at the Lakefield Cement Works who understands all about it. Last Saturday night, as he was walking through the mill, he accidentally tumbled into a huge vat of slurry. Fortunately he landed broadside, and managed to wiggle over to the opposite edge where he was pulled up. Slurry is a mixture of blue clay, water and marl, of the consistency of molasses. When the victim gained terra firma, and heard the hilarious shouts of the bystanders, his facial expression seemed to indicate that he was at a loss to know whether to smile or grow furious.

—Mr. Aubrey Kilbourn left Lakefield Wednesday morning for Toronto. From there he will go to Owen Sound to spend Christmas.

—Miss Ella Powers, of Douro, went to Toronto last Saturday on her vacation.

THE LOCAL HOG MARKET BOOMING

Higher Prices in the East Than in the West

IS THERE A COMBINE?

It Would Appear That Packing Establishments are Pulling One Way.

Now that a second extensive cold storage and pork packing establishment is being launched in Peterborough, when the demand for live hogs will be greatly increased, the following from the Toronto World will be read with interest:

East of Toronto the hog market is somewhat demoralized, owing to competition between the Matthews Packing Company of Peterboro, the Laing Packing Company of Montreal, and to a limited extent, the Davies Packing Company of Toronto, as well as the Collingwood Packing Company. It seems that the Laing Packing Company of Montreal, have been encroaching on the territory of all the above companies more or less, and considerably more than less on the ground of the Peterboro Company, hence the fight that is now in progress. On account of this fight it is reported that as high as $5.40 per cwt. was paid to farmers on the Peterborough market on Wednesday last. At many other points east of Toronto from $5.10 to $5.25 per cwt. is reported as having been paid. At points west of Toronto drovers report the following prices— Fearman, of Hamilton, $4.60, f.o.b.; White, of Stratford, $4.75, f.o.b. and Park, Blackwell, also are reported as paying $4.75, while the Collingwood Packing Company are reported as having paid $5 per cwt. at Newmarket. There is one thing certain and that is the farmers east of Toronto are reaping a rich harvest on account of this competition.

Parties Interviewed.

Mr. Laing of the Laing Packing Company of Montreal, one of the firms mentioned in the above report, was at the King Edward on Friday afternoon, in company with H. P. Kennedy of Peterboro, who is also interested in the trade east of Toronto, both being interviewed by a reporter of the World. Mr. Laing stated that he had read the report above mentioned and wished to take exception to that portion of it wherein it stated that the Laing Company was encroaching on the territory of the other companies mentioned. "The policy of the Laing Packing Company," he said, "was opposed to encroaching on any one's territory, or doing anything whatever to place prices above their proper value. There is no fight between the Laing Packing Company and the other Ontario dealers, their friendly relationship never having been strained. Never since 1852, the year in which we commenced business, have people ever said that the Laing Company were encroaching on the territory of others. The company is well known in the trade, but employs no buyers in the district mentioned. The fault, if fault there is, must be laid at the door of Mr. Kennedy, from whom my company has bought a large number of hogs at various times. When Mr. Kennedy offers hogs at a certain price, and the price suits, we buy from him, as well as others in the trade in the same way."

Market Reports.

Mr. Laing said the Toronto reports of the hog market are useless, being incorrect, because he knows that the Toronto dealers have and are paying $5.25 per cwt., instead of $5 per cwt., as reported in the papers during the past week.

"It would better the whole trade if the reports were more reliable. The first thing is to have things correct, no matter who suffers," said Mr. Laing. "Packers are bidding $4.75, f.o.b., west of Toronto, while prices east of Toronto as high as $5.10 and $5.40, are being paid by the same companies. I would like to see reports reliably stated in Canadian papers as they are in the United States great centres, such as Chicago, Kansas City, Omaha and other points.

"In American stock yards hogs are invariably weighed off after being fed and watered. But in Montreal and Toronto they are sometimes weighed off the cars, and sometimes after being unloaded, fed and watered. This gives a wide and most perplexing range of prices. It is in the interest of the packers to have the market quoted down instead of up, but this discrepancy which exists in prices puts us all wrong. If we had an established correct quotation we could refer to it, but the reports published in Montreal and Toronto papers are not reliable at all times."

Mr. Laing said in reference to dressed hogs that Montreal handles a large quantity and that he looks for a steady delivery all winter. The delivery will not be remarkably large, but as there is plenty of feed in Western Ontario he looks for a steady trade. In Western Ontario where Mr. Laing has been recently, there was a free delivery of dressed hogs from $6.15 to $6.25 f.o.b.

Mr. Kennedy's Statement.

H. P. Kennedy stated that he was not encroaching upon anybody's territory, as he had been dealing on the same ground for over ten years. "Of late years I have handled from 3000 to 4000 hogs every week. Mr. Laing is innocent of encroaching upon the territory of any of the Ontario companies. I sell hogs to other companies, but it just happened that I sold to Laing & Co., and Mr. Laing does not know where the hogs came from. I sold to the Laing Co. because Matthews, Davies and the other dealers in this district had a large supply on hand. They have all the hogs they need, and when they refused to buy I sold to Laing and others. I have in no way increased my trade in so doing. My sales remain practically the same. About Oct. 1 the Matthews and Davies Companies ceased to buy from me, although I have offered hogs to them. I also offered hogs to the Collingwood and Park-Blackwell Companies, but they refused them. I do not know for what reason those companies turned me down. Nor do I know why the Collingwood, Davies, Park-Blackwell Companies are putting prices higher in the country east of Toronto than in parts of Western Ontario." Mr. Kennedy stated that the above named companies had paid from $5.10 to $5.25 and $5.40 per cwt. at points east of Toronto f.o.b., while in parts of Western Ontario they were bidding $4.75 f.o.b.

Member at Every Poll

Toronto, Dec. 24.—A unique thing in Ontario politics will be seen in North Renfrew on election day, says the Toronto World. A Conservative member of the Legislature will be at every polling sub-division in the riding watching the interest of the Conservative candidate. There are 36 outside divisions and eight in Pembroke. If corruption is in evidence, the members of the House will be witnesses of it.

CANADA AND NEWFOUNDLAND

The Question of Union May Soon be Seriously Considered

Toronto, December 24—A Globe's Ottawa despatch says From what can be gleaned here the Dominion Government are in earnest in the desire for Newfoundland to enter the union, and would not be disposed to haggle unduly over the terms in any huckstering spirit. It is well known that, although there was at one time some opposition in Newfoundland to the idea of union with Canada, that feeling has to a great extent passed away. Perhaps it is not generally known that in 1869 the Council and Legislature of Newfoundland were willing to cast in their lot with Canada, and a conference took place at Ottawa, which resulted in terms being agreed upon. For some reason or other the whole thing was allowed to drop. As to the acquisition of Greenland, it would be reasonable to infer that the Danish Government are being asked whether they will part with the island or not. If Greenland will sell Canada will purchase. This unmistakably is the attitude of the Dominion Government in the matter.

MARGIN OF SAFETY IS GREATLY SHRUNK

Tone of Hopefulness in European Capitals Changes to one of Pessimism

Russia Reaching for Corea and Pe Chi Li—A Correspondent Describes the Preparations of the Bear to Hug the Dragon

London, Dec. 23.—"It is abundantly evident that the tension between Russia and Japan is perilously near the snapping point. A little more added to the strain and the guns may begin to go off of their own accord, though it is just possible, on the other hand, that things may grow a little worse before they begin to get better.

"But clearly the margin of safety has shrunk into very small dimensions. Optimism has vanished, even in those quarters of Europe where a pacific solution has been confidently prophesied, and in most capitals it seems to be understood that the situation has become exceedingly grave."

This extract from a leading article in yesterday morning's Daily Telegraph accurately represents the view which has been taken in London of the far Eastern situation since the closing days of last week.

Up to that time, deep as was the disquiet to which the news from Japan gave rise, a strain of hopefulness was maintained by despatches from Paris and Berlin, where confidence was expressed that hostilities would be avoided.

St. Petersburg's optimism was regarded here as of the made-to-order variety, but none the less it is held to be extremely significant that a change has come about in the Russian capital. Russia is taking up a more openly defiant attitude, and the Japanese reply to the last Russian note, while not an ultimatum, can hardly do otherwise than rub the Muscovite the wrong way.

A Tokio despatch in the Daily Telegraph dated yesterday afternoon, says;

"It is believed that Russia's latest reply practically ignored Japan's demands. Japan, however, is determined to still continue insisting on them and to ask Russia to reconsider the question. In the event of a rejection Japan will be compelled to take action."

Another despatch to the same paper from Nagasaki states that the army reserve men there are being warned to hold themselves in immediate readiness.

Another Gas Explosion

Hamilton, Dec. 24,— Word was received here that part of the roof of the Presbyterian church, in the Scotch Block, about six miles from here, was blown off by an acetylene gas tank explosion. So far as has been learned, no person was in the church at the time.

MANCHURIA THE STAKE.

Korean Problem Forms the Lesser Problem in Russian-Japan Negotiations

London, December 24—The European bourses, the best barometers in international controversies, show a tendency to stormy conditions in the far east. A higher degree of nervousness exists, but the resources of diplomacy are by no means exhausted.

The Corean problem now offers less difficulty than the Manchurian, although one of the questions yet to be settled "in principle," is said to turn upon the number of Japanese troops in Corea, and upon the interpretation of the convention concluded between Russia and Japan in 1896.

Briefly stated, the issue as to Manchuria appears to be as follows:

Russia wishes to formulate an agreement in strict accordance with her actual status there, although she calls that status temporary.

Japan, while not holding Russia strictly to treaty obligations, declines to consider the Manchurian status quo as a basis of agreement, but insists that Russia shall admit that Manchuria is not yet severed from China. Between the two propositions there is a deep gulf.

Sofia, Bulgaria, December 24—Keen interest is being manifested here in the fact that the Russian Government has granted General Bendereff permission to spend his approaching leave of absence in Bulgaria. Bendereff was the head of the conspiracy instigated by Russia in 1886, which resulted in the abdication of Prince Alexander, of Battenburg. Immediately thereafter he went to Russia and since the election of Prince Ferdinand in 1887 has never crossed the Bulgarian frontier. All this time he has been in the Russian military service.

Bendereff is acknowledged to be the first living authority on Macedonian military topography. No one doubts that his coming to this country after more than fifteen years' absence means that he is charged with some mission by the Russian Government. That mission many fear will prove inimical to the national prosperity of Bulgaria. It is regarded as an additional indication that Russia and Austria are cherishing a secret Balkan policy of which the world will hear much before the Macedonian trouble is much older.

RUSSIA'S PREPARATIONS.

London, Dec. 22.—Mr. Bennett Burleigh, veteran war correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, sends a long despatch describing a visit to Port Arthur and Mukden which, briefly summarized, is to the effect that Russia is already in possession of Manchuria, is reaching down the Pe-Chi-Li on the one side and into Corea, on the other; is constructing docks, forts, roads and railways, and spending millions in making Port Arthur impregnable and securing herself in the Liao-Tung Peninsula.

"Another year," he says, "and she will be planted there immovably, and will be able, if left undisturbed, to adopt a very different attitude toward Japan from that which circumstances now compel her to assume, for there are very grave elements of weakness in her present position."

Official confirmation is now forthcoming of reports regarding the watchfulness of the British Admiralty, which were cabled yesterday. The home fleet is to reassemble at Portland on December 29. It was originally intended that it should proceed or cruise to Portugal, but that order has been cancelled, and unless matters between Japan and Russia are satisfactorily arranged, the fleet will not be allowed to leave British waters.

As the destroyers belonging to the various instructional flotillas are now under orders of the vice-admiral commanding the home fleet, the officers and crews of these small craft were informed that they might be recalled from leave at very short notice. There has, however, been no restriction on the Christmas leave of the men of the Royal Navy.

VOLUNTEER FORCE FOR IMPERIAL NAVY

Colonies Likely to be Invited to Assist in Its Formation

London, December 24—World's Work says "While Mr. Chamberlain has been busy assuring us that the Empire will go to pieces unless wheat is taxed, a real danger to the Empire has sprung up and is receiving little or no attention. This is Laurier's demand for treaty-making power. Here then is the real danger. It is obvious that if Canada makes treaties independent of England, she must take the consequences of being independent of England. It is not to be expected that Canadians will approve the demand, but the matter is certainly one of great gravity.

AN OCEAN EXPRESS.

Mr Charles Lancaster, of Liverpool, a delegate to the Montreal Congress, speaking at a free trade demonstration, suggested the giving of a handsome subsidy to establish a fast ocean express between England and Canada. By this, he claimed, wheat could be carried from Fort William for two shillings nine pence per quarter, because it would come all the way by water. He also suggested that the Government help to improve navigation in the St. Lawrence.

ENGLAND AGAIN WINS.

In the cricket match at Melbourne between the English team and the Victorian Juniors the Englishmen won by an innings and 30 runs. The English team scored 416 in their first innings, to the Victoria's 124 in the first, and 196 in the second innings.

NAVAL VOLUNTEERS.

I understand that the Colonies will be invited to participate in the formation of a naval volunteer force. Depots for receiving and training the recruits will be established in the Colonies.

CANADIAN TURKEYS.

Poulty importers say that Canada is sending a very small number of turkeys to England.

Montreal, Dec. 24.—The Chinese are making an alarming descent on the country at the present time.

During the past two months close upon two thousand have reached Canada, via Vancouver and San Francisco.

The reason for the present influx is, of course, to be found in the fact that the $500 poll tax will become operative on January 1st.

But while Chinese are coming into the Dominion in large numbers, a considerable number are also returning to their native land.

The C.P.R today started 100 men on their journey westward. These were mostly from New York and Boston, but between fifteen and twenty were from the local colony.

A reporter having expressed surprise that the Chinese should have come to recognize so widely the disability under which they will labor with the coming of the new year, an official of the C.P.R. pointed out—a fact that is sometimes lost to sight—that there are large colonies of Chinese in Toronto, Ottawa, Winnipeg and Vancouver in addition to those in this city, and that not a few of these are able to speak and write English fluently. What more natural, he said, than that these, knowing what was coming, should advise their compatriots to hasten their coming.

London, Dec. 25—If Mr. Balfour is right in thinking that the "unsettled state of Balkan affairs is really the most disturbing question before the powers," as he has twice declared since September, the latest utterances of Count Goluchowski on the Macedonian troubles are momentous.

He told the members of Hungarian legations at the foreign office committee Wednesday that unless the Ottoman Government complied with the Austro-Russian demands, nothing could save the country from utter ruin.

"We do not propose an autonomous Macedonia under a Christian governor," explained the Austro-Hungarian minister of foreign affairs, "but if Turkey does not of her own accord execute the reforms we have indicated, we shall compel her to execute them, and that would mean her downfall."

Goluchowski is one of the most temperate of European statesmen, and his master is one of the most peaceful of monarchs.

Language of such unmistakable warning to Constantinople, employed on an occasion of strict official formality, has probably never before been used by a responsible minister.

It is understood in London that Lord Lansdowne and M. Delcasse are loyally supporting Goluchowski, and that, although Muscovite faithlessness and German intrigue assist the corrupt cabal at Yuldiz Kiosk, the combination of London, Paris and Vienna, will be increasingly effective and aggressive in the Balkans.

ARE COUNTING ON A SAFE MAJORITY.

Government Anticipates No Difficulty Re Railway Deposit

London, Dec. 24—Regarding Mr. C. M. Hays recent visit to London, it is understood that both the Grand Trunk and the Government anticipate no difficulty in securing the assent of the Canadian Parliament to an amendment, to the compact so that the five million dollars deposit of the Grand Trunk securities will be accepted instead of cash. Nor is an opposition anticipated to the amendment of the part of the act which is held to permit the government to withhold the whole subsidy until the road is finally completed. The Grand Trunk authorities say that this postponement of the payment of the subsidy is quite inadmissable.

The highest Grand Trunk authorities here still protest that they have no desire for the Canadian Northern, but those who look impartially upon the recent progress of events say that it is really only a question of price between the Canadian Northern and the Grand Trunk.

You Pay Only if Cured

Expects No Money Unless He Cures You—Method and Full Particulars Sent Free—Write For It This Very Day

A Detroit specialist who has 14 certificates and diplomas from medical colleges and boards, has perfected a startling method of curing the diseases of men in their own homes; so that there may be no doubt in the mind of any man that he has

DR. S. GOLDBERG,

The Possessor of 14 Diplomas and Certificates Who Wants No Money That He Does Not Earn.

both the method and the ability to do as he says, Dr. Goldberg, the discoverer, will send the method entirely free to all men who send him their name and address. He wants to hear from men who have stricture that they have been unable to get cured, prostatic trouble, sexual weakness, varicocele, lost manhood, blood poison, hydrocele, emaciation of parts, impotence, etc. His wonderful method not only cures the condition itself, but likewise all the complications, such as rheumatism, bladder or kidney trouble, heart disease, nervous debility, etc.

The doctor realizes that it is one thing to make claims and another thing to back them up, so he has made it a rule not to ask for money unless he cures you, and when you are cured he feels sure that you will willingly pay him a small fee. It would seem, therefore, that it is to the best interests of every man who suffers in this way to write the doctor confidentially and lay your case before him. He sends the method, as well as many booklets on the subject, including the one that contains the 14 diplomas and certificates, entirely free. Address him simply

Dr. S. Goldberg, 208 Woodward Ave., Room [illegible] Detroit, Mich., and it will all immediately be sent you free.

This is something entirely new and well worth knowing more about. Write at once.

MUNICIPAL REFORMS

Woodstock has under consideration an appeal through the council to the legislature in favor of municipal reform. It is desired that the municipal law be so amended that the term of an alderman shall be two years. Half the members of the council would retire each year.

"In twelve months," says the Sentinel-Review, "an ambitious council finds it difficult to carry out its programme and municipal effort becomes spasmodic. The tendency everywhere is to increase the length of service. When the charter of Greater New York was first adopted it provided for a four-year term. But this was found too long, particularly when Tammany was in control, and was afterwards reduced to two. As to the arrangement to half the aldermen elected by wards and half by the general vote, it is something like a return of the old restricted system. It would obviate the difficulties which have been urged against the complete abolition of the wards. Sectional interests would still be presented, while a better class of aldermen would be obtained as a result of the appeal that is made of the electors as a whole."

There is evidently a great diversity of opinion on the subject, and it is interesting. The average elector is doing a lot of thinking these days.

"KEEP AWAY" ADVERTISEMENTS

Any interference with an employer's right to hire labor at the price and under the conditions he pleases, so long as such price and conditions are compatible with the laws of the land, must, in the eyes of the law, be illegal. Various means have been used by labor bodies to interfere at times with the employment of labor. One method, in vogue of recent years has been the insertion of advertisements in the want columns of newspapers warning workmen to keep away from certain localities. That such an advertisement was contrary to the spirit of the law, has recently been demonstrated in Toronto.

During the spring of the present year a strike occurred in the carriage works of John Dixon at Toronto, which lasted for three months. To secure workmen, Mr. Dixon has recourse to the newspapers, in which he inserted a want advertisement. This step on his part was immediately counteracted by the carriage-makers union, which secured the publication immediately above his notice, of a warning to carriage makers to keep away from Toronto. As a result, while Mr. Dixon received many applications for work, from the rural districts, in nearly every case the applicant indicated that he feared there was trouble in Toronto and that he did not want to come if such was the case. Mr. Dixon held that the insertion of the warning in the Toronto papers constituted an unlawful interference with his right to employ labor. The Employers Association took the matter in hand and represented the gravity of the offence to the newspapers. All except the Globe agreed to withdraw the warning and refuse its further insertion. Legal steps were taken to compel the Globe to refrain from publishing the notice, and an interim injunction was secured to this end. By arrangement, the injunction still stands and it is unlikely that the Globe will ever take steps for its removal.

JAPAN AND RUSSIA

A correspondent of the Journal requests information as to the relative strength of the Japanese and Russian navies. The most recent information the Journal has seen on the subject was contained a few weeks ago in the London Times, according to which, Japan appears to be much overmatched. There are other considerations than the number of ships to be taken into account, however. According to the statistics in the Times, the numerical strength of the two navies, in sea-going vessels actually afloat is as follows,

	Japan.	Russia
Battleships, 1st class	6	13
Battleships, 2nd class	1	4
Battleships, 3rd class	1	1
Cruisers, armored	6	8
Cruisers, protected	16	11
Cruisers, unprotected	9	8
Torpedo Destroyers	17	48
Torpedo Boats	67	182

It will be seen that on paper Japan would appear to have a poor show. But more than half the Russian navy is in European waters, and can hardly be regarded as available in any early conflict with Japan. So that if war were to come suddenly, the conflict on the ocean would be a pretty equal one at present.

The longer Japan waits, the worse she will be off if war should break out. Japan has no battleships building. The Mikado's treasury is pretty empty. Russia, on the contrary, has eight first-class battleships building.

Roughly speaking, the Russian fleet of battleships is twice as strong numerically as Japan's, and will be three times as strong three years hence.

DISTRICT NEWS

NORTH MONAGHAN.

A pleasing programme was given by the pupils of S. S. No. 1, N. Monaghan, on Friday afternoon. At the close, their teacher was called to the floor, and while Miss Willma Dobbin made the presentation, Miss Ina Spillsbury read the following address.

Miss M. E. Payne,

Dear teacher,—On the eve of your departure from our midst, we, the scholars of this section, desire to show our appreciation of the services you have rendered us during the past year.

As a teacher you have endeavored by your kindness and thoroughness, as well as by example and precept to train us for our labors in the field of life,

It is needless to say we very much regret your departure from amongst us, but in your future calling, we one and all wish you God speed.

As a slight token of remembrance we ask you to accept this fountain pen and ink stand.

Signed on behalf of the school,

WILLMA DOBBIN,
PEARL HUSTIN.

Miss Payne was quite surprised, but made a suitable reply, thanking her pupils for their kindness now and during the year just past, and expressing her wish that they would ever be as kind, industrious and obedient as they had during the time spent with her. Sec.-Treas. Barnard addressed the gathering and expressed himself as highly satisfied with the afternoon. He complimented teacher and pupils on their success, expressed his regret at her departure, and wished her every success in the future.

A SAD CASE.

The following letter, addressed to the Secretary of the National Sanitarium Association, Toronto, from the Rectory, Norwood, Ont., and signed by Rev. J. McKee McLennan, a well-known Anglican minister of the province, needs no comment of ours. It reads: "I desire to secure the admission into the Free Hospital for Consumptives at Gravenhurst of a young woman, a member of my parish. The case is a very sad one, and if help can at once be given, a promising life can be saved. Three years ago the mother died of consumption. Since that time it has been my painful duty to bury two of the sons with the same disease. Now Annie, aged about seventeen, and a boy of fourteen, are all that remain of the family. The poor girl has been in Muskoka, boarding at a private house, waiting to be admitted. She returned home last week, and within twenty-four hours of her return her father dropped dead in his buggy while driving into Norwood. The case is surely one that must appeal to the sympathies of everyone, and yet, I fear, only one of the many that are constantly coming under your notice."

[Note.—Readers—and may their number be many—who desire to assist in this worthy work may send their gifts to Sir Wm. R. Meredith, Kt., Vice-President, National Sanitarium Association, Toronto, or Mr. W. J. Gage, Chairman of the Executive Committee, Toronto.]

Engineer's Report on the Hermina Mining Company's Property

Calumet, Michigan, September 3, 1903

Report on the Property of the Hermina Mining Company, Algoma, District, Ontario.

Gentlemen,—I herewith submit you my report on your property from my recent examination. The property is located on the south slope of the Algoma Mining range, in the township of Salter, Province of Ontario, Canada. Distance two and one half (2 1-2) miles from the Sudbury division of the C.P.R. The assays, which have been numerous, give values of from 30 to 40 per cent copper, 3 to 9 per cent. nickle, $2 to $4 per ton in gold, and from 5 to 6 per cent. cobalt. On vein No. 1 is an open cut about twenty feet long, 6 to 8 feet wide and 6 to 15 feet deep, from this small opening there is a stockpile of about ten tons of selected ore that will assay from 20 to 25 per cent. copper, 2 to 6 per cent. nickle, besides small gold and cobalt values.

The vein here has decidedly improved with development and stringers, which showed no trace of copper on the surface, have opened into very good pay ore at the present depth. I consider this opening the most promising on the property just now, and would recommend the sinking of a shaft here and unless the usual surface signs are misleading enough ore will be got out during the sinking to more than pay for the work. No. 2 vein is north of No. 1,, and has a shaft 30 feet deep which shows a well defined vein from 5 to 8 feet wide all the way down, and increasing with width at the bottom.

About three feet of this vein contains high values in bornite and recent assays show the vein to carry from 2 to 3 per cent. nickle and from 1 to 6 per cent. cobalt. This vein has been opened for over 500 feet in length by test pits and is plainly and distinctly traceable for the entire distance and wherever opened shows ore of the same nature and high quality as found in the shaft. Vein No. 2 is 2,000 feet distant from vein No. 1, and undoubtedly a different vein but parallel in direction.

Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives

☞ Not a single patient has ever been refused admittance because of his or her poverty.

FROM THE FUNDS

—From Bishop of Selkirk, Cariboo Crossing, Yukon: "The trifling remittance ($10.00) herewith enclosed, is intended to express our sympathy for the sufferers in other parts rather than imply a special need for your institution here."

CONFEDERATION LIFE ASSOCIATION

—J. K. Macdonald, Esq., Managing Director Confederation Life Association, in sending cheque for $500.00 from his Company, says: "I am pleased to be able to be the medium of helping on so good a work."

Funds Urgently Needed

The financial reports for the year just ending show that to keep the doors of the Free Hospital for Consumptives open, maintaining the number of patients for which accommodation has been provided, not less than $25,000 is required for the year now entered upon.

Since the Free Hospital was opened (18 months ago) 224 patients have been received. The help the institution has been to these people—all from the wage-earning and poorer ranks of life—cannot be estimated in human language.

—Edward B. Hedden, Solina, Ont., on leaving the Free Hospital, writes: "I cannot speak too highly of the institution from which I have received so much benefit. I can but tender my best thanks for the kindness shown."

—Minnie Linklater, Hamilton, writes: "I have spent over nine months at the Free Hospital for Consumptives. I believe I have been greatly helped, and shall never hesitate to use my influence to further that good cause."

There is no endowment, excepting the provision made by three life insurance companies for six beds for the current year. Only by the continued contributions of the Canadian public can the work be maintained.

Patients are accepted from every part of the Dominion, and there have been in residence during the past year patients from Prince Edward Island on the east to the Northwest Territories on the west.

Contributions may be sent to Sir W. R. Meredith, Kt., Vice-President National Sanitarium Association, or Mr. W. J. Gage, Chairman of the Executive Committee, Toronto, Can.

"On Trial for His Life"

shootin' him fer. I'm goin' to show him that sheep fust. Whar's that sheep, Daws?"

Daws led the way down the road, over the fence, across the meadow, and up the hillside where lay the slain sheep. Chad and Melissa saw them coming—the whole crowd—before they themselves were seen. For a minute the boy watched them. They were going to kill Jack where the Dillons said he had killed the sheep, and the boy jumped to his feet and ran up the hill a little way and disappeared in the bushes that he might not hear Jack's death shot, while Melissa sat where she was, watching the crowd come on. Daws was at the foot of the hill and she saw him make a gesture toward her, and then the sheriff came on with Jack—over the fence, past her, the sheriff saying kindly, "Howdy, Melissa. I shorely am sorry to have to kill Jack," and on to the dead sheep, which lay fifty yards beyond. If the sheriff expected Jack to drop head and tail and look mean he was greatly mistaken. Jack neither hung back nor sniffed at the carcass. Instead he put one forefoot on it and with the other bent in the air looked, without shame, into the sheriff's eyes, as much as to say:

"Yes, this is a wicked and shameful thing, but what have I got to do with it? Why are you bringing me here?"

The sheriff came back greatly puzzled and shaking his head. Passing Melissa he stopped to let the unhappy little girl give Jack a last pat, and it was there that Jack suddenly caught scent of Chad's tracks. With one mighty bound the dog snatched the rawhide string from the careless sheriff's hand, and in a moment, with his nose to the ground, was speeding up toward the woods. With a startled yell and a frightful oath, the sheriff threw his rifle to his shoulder, but the little girl sprang up and caught the barrel with both hands, shaking it fiercely up and down and hieing Jack on with shriek after shriek. A minute later Jack had disappeared in the bushes, Melissa was running like the wind down the hill toward home, while the whole crowd in the meadow was rushing up toward the sheriff, led by the Dillons, who were yelling and swearing like madmen. Above them the crestfallen sheriff waited. The Dillons crowded angrily about him, gesticulating and threatening, while he told his story. But nothing could be done—nothing. They did not know that Chad was up in the woods or they would have gone in search of him—knowing that when they found him they would find Jack—but to look for Jack now would be like searching for a needle in a haystack. There was nothing to do, then, but to wait for Jack to come home, which he would surely do to get to Chad, and it was while old Joel was promising that the dog should be surrendered to the sheriff that little Tad Dillon gave an excited shriek:

"Look up thar!"

And up there at the edge of the wood was Chad standing, and at his feet Jack, sitting on his haunches, with his tongue out and looking as though nothing had happened or could ever happen to Chad or to him.

"Come up hyeh," shouted Chad.

"You come down hyeh," shouted the sheriff, angrily. So Chad came down, with Jack trotting after him. Chad had cut off the rawhide string, but the sheriff caught Jack by the nape of the neck.

"You won't git away from me agin, I reckon."

"Well, I reckon you ain't goin' to shoot him," said Chad. "Leggo that dawg."

"Don't be a fool, Jim," said old Joel. "The dawg ain't goin' to leave the boy." The sheriff let go.

"Come on up hyeh," said Chad. "I got somethin' to show ye."

The boy turned with such certainty that without a word Squire, sheriff, Turners, Dillons and spectators followed. As they approached a deep ravine the boy pointed to the ground where were evidences of some fierce struggle—the dirt thrown up, and several small stones scattered about with faded stains of blood on them.

"Wait hyeh!" said the boy, and he slid down the ravine and appeared again dragging something after him. Tall Tom ran down to help him and the two threw before the astonished crowd the body of a black and white dog.

"Now I reckon you know whar Whizzer is," panted Chad vindictively to the Dillons.

"Well, what of it?" snapped Daws.

"Oh, nothin'," said the boy with fine sarcasm. "Only Whizzer killed that sheep and Jack killed Whizzer." From every Dillon throat came a scornful grunt.

"Oh, I reckon so," said Chad, easily. "Look thar!" He lifted the dead dog's head and pointed at the strands of wool between his teeth. He turned it over, showing the deadly grip on the throat and close to the jaws, that had choked the life from Whizzer—Jack's own grip.

"Ef you will jus' rickollect, Jack had the same grip the time afore—when I pulled him off o' Whizzer."

"By ——, that's so," said Tall Tom, and Dolph and Rube echoed him, amid a dozen voices, for not only Joel, but many of his neighbors, knew Jack's method of fighting, which had made him a victor up and down the length of Kingdom Come.

There was little doubt that the boy was right—that Jack had come on Whizzer killing the sheep, and had caught him at the edge of the ravine, where the two had fought, rolling down and settling the old feud between them in the darkness at the bottom. And up there on the hillside, the jury that pronounced Jack guilty pronounced him innocent, and, as the Turners started joyfully down the hill, the sun that was to have sunk on Jack stiff in death sank on Jack frisking before them—home.

A Country Editor's Plea.

Here is a heart-to-heart talk which a country editor, who evidently has troubles of his own, recently gave to his delinquent subscribers: "Good morning. Have you paid your subscription this year? Perhaps you owe for last year, or several years. Now, you understand, we don't need money; we have millions—to get. But it is really an imposition to let people go on carrying our money when we are strong and healthy, and so abundantly able to bear the burden ourselves. For this reason we ask anybody who has any of our money in his possession to leave it at the office, or send it by post, freight train, express, or any other way, just so it gets here. Silver and gold are heavy, and it would be a matter of life-long regret if anybody should get bow-legged carrying it about for us."

THE GREAT CHARITY.

THE HOSPITAL FOR SICK CHILDREN, TORONTO.

It Takes Care of Every Sick Child in Ontario Who Cannot Afford to Pay For Treatment.

The Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, is not a local institution—it is Provincial.

MASSAGE FOR RHEUMATISM.

The sick child from any part of Ontario whose parents cannot afford to pay for treatment has the same claim and the same privileges as the Toronto child born within sight of its walls.

This is the reason that the Trustees appeal to the fathers and mothers of Ontario—for as their money goes out to help the Hospital so the Hospital's mercy can go out to help the children.

This is the 28th year of the Hospital's life. The story of the years is a wonderful one—for in that period 10,000 children have been treated, and over 5,000 cured and 3,000 improved

Last year there were 868 boys and girls in its beds and cots, and of these 493 were cured and 247 improved.

Look at these pictures of club feet—before and after.

BEFORE AFTER

Of the 868 patients 293 came from 216 places outside of Toronto.

In three years the patients from different parts of Ontario, not Toronto, average 280—nearly a third of the entire number.

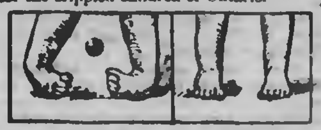
In six years 1,400 outside patients have been treated—and for 20 years past they will average 100 a year.

The average stay of every patient was 54 days, the cost per patient per day 94c.

A dollar or two means a small lot of money out of your pocket, but it takes a big load of misery out of some little life.

The X Ray department gives wonderful results. A girl came in with a double thumb on one hand. She left with one thumb—a perfect hand

See what the hand of the Surgeon does for the crippled children of Ontario.



BEFORE AFTER

Your money means mercy to somebody's child.

Your money can cheer some mother's heart by saving some mother's child.

Health and wealth. You give wealth to the Hospital, and the Hospital gives health to the children.

The Corporation of the City of Toronto gives $7,500 a year to the Hospital for the maintenance of every child, whether from city or country.

HE ENJOYS READING.

The citizens of Toronto contribute about $7,000 a year towards the maintenance of every patient in the Hospital, whether from city or country

Toronto does its share in the good work, and the Trustees ask you to do yours.

The Newspaper Proprietors of Ontario have kindly helped the Hospital by inserting our appeals.

There are two newspaper cots, and boys and girls from the country are placed in the cots founded by the newspaper men.

Look at the pictures of "before and after." They tell their own story—surely you will help us in this good work.

If your dollar could straighten the feet of a little boy or girl with club-feet you would gladly give it, and your dollar will help to do that.

BEFORE AFTER

Take off the handicap of deformity—give all children a fair start in the race of life.

Twenty-three children who came in with club-feet were sent home perfect cures last year. There are as many more in the Hospital to-day awaiting treatment.

BEFORE AFTER

If you know of a sick child—the club foot boy or girl—send his parent's name to the Hospital.

Please send your contributions to J. Ross Robertson, Chairman, or to Douglas Davidson, Sec.-Treas. of the Hospital for Sick Children, College Street, Toronto.

GOVERMENT WILL RAISE MEN'S WAGES

Substantial Increase Will be Given Trainmen on the Intercolonial

Moncton, N. B., Dec. 21.—Before leaving Moncton, Mr. Fielding, acting Minister of Railways, authorized publication of a statement pointing out that the impression prevailed that an indiscriminate increase of wages among Intercolonial Railway employees was probable, but adding that he was not at liberty to encourage such misimpression. Wages had been substantially increased, and individual cases would be dealt with as formerly. Mr. Fielding stated that he had been giving particular attention to the claims of the trackmen. He found that their duties were arduous, and involved considerable responsibility, but they hardly received as good wages as were being paid for the best classes of ordinary labor. He was willing to agree to an advance of ordinary wages for trackmen from one dollar and thirty cents to one dollar and forty cents per day. In case of trackmen employed in certain special yards, where the work is more than ordinarily responsible, the rate would be increased from one dollar and thirty cents to one dollar and fifty cents per day. Some increases would also be included to section workmen and mechanics in connection with maintenance of way. The number of men who will participate in these increases approaches one thousand.

CHINESE RUSHING TO ESCAPE THE TAX

Hundreds of Mongolians Entering Canada Prior of Imposition Poll Fee

San Francisco, Dec. 21.—Chinese laborers are rushing into Canada by the hundreds to evade the head tax of $500 on every Chinaman that enters Canada after January 1. They are now required to pay but $100. The steamer Doric, which recently arrived here from the Orient, brought 85 Chinese, who were immediately shipped to Victoria.

The Japanese liner Nippon Maru, just arrived, brought 89 Chinese, and the steamer Canfa carried 149 Mongolians, all of whom are in transit to Canada.

WILL TEST A HUNTING LAW

Courts to Pass Upon an Act of the Michigan Legislature

Marquette, Mich., Dec. 22—The new law passed by the last legislature, providing for the prosecution of the hunter who kills or wounds another while in quest of game is to be tested in the circuit court. On complaint of the widow Fred. Murray, son of a business man, has been arrested, charged with manslaughter, for killing David Pickett, a carpenter, who was in another hunting party. The maximum sentence under the law is imprisonment for ten years or a fine of $1,000.

CANADA CANNOT BUY GREENLAND

The Rumored Purchase from Denmark Not Within Range of Practical Politics

London, Dec. 21.—Lord Strathcona, the Canadian High Commissioner here, was interviewed to-day regarding a rumor cabled from Ottawa that the Canadian Government has under consideration negotiations for the purchase of Greenland from Denmakr, and the admission of Newfoundland into the Canadian confederacy. His lordship said the announcement that Canadd is about to purchase Greenland is premature, as such a move on the part of Canada is not within the range of practical politics at present.

Equitable Gold Mining Co.

R. C. LANE, President. W. F. NORTON, Secretary and Treasurer.

Over $300,000 of development work already done. Main shaft 9 x 16 feet, down 700 feet. Over 3,000 feet of drifts, tunels and shafts showing immense ore body

Destined to become large and continuous dividend payer.

The Equitable Gold Mining Co.'s properties consist of three mines, known as the North Bonanza, Flowery and Kimbark. They are located in Six Mile Canon, less than four miles from Virginia City, Nevada, which is the nearest railroad station.

Years ago, over three hundred thousand dollars of development work was done upon the mines—so they are not mere "prospects" but actual mines. This work was done under the personal supervision of competent engineers, and was paid for by the owners of the mines themselves; thus giving double assurance that the work was well done and that the expenditure was justified.

The Main Shaft (triple compartment, 9x16 feet in the clear) is down seven hundred feet. From this shaft, running along the vein matter, east and west, are four drifts, at different levels, having a combined length (including the Rule winze and the tunnel) of 2,050 feet.

In addition to the above there are four small shafts, with a combined depth of about 300 feet; 535 feet of tunnels, and at least 500 feet of cross-cuts, upraises, etc.

All told, there is 4,050 feet of underground work—the most of which is in ore. Here is nearly one mile of openings in mineralized rock.

It is conservatively estimated by competent and reliable engineers and practical miners that there is developed an ore body of at least One Million Five Hundred Thousand Tons!

As a further evidence of the large amount of work done there is from 75,000 to 100,000 tons of ore on the dumps at the different surface openings—ore that, with modern cheapened processes, can be converted into gold bullion at a profit.

THE TITLE

Title to the Flowery and North Bonanza mines is by patent from the United States government, while the title of the Kimbark is by location and possession.

The Equitable Company obtained the Flowery and North Bonanza mines, both of which are patented, by purchase—the payments therefore to be made out of a share of the net proceeds of the mines. The Company has a written contract, duly recorded, for a deed, and is in possession of the properties, and is now operating them. The sum of $2,000 was paid on the contract, September 30th, 1903, and partial payments have since been made. The Company is entitled to $6.25 per ton as cost of mining and milling. One-half of all over and above this $6.25 per ton goes to the former owners till they receive the total sum of $105,000, without interest. There is no stipulation as to amount of work to be done within any specified time—and no proceeds, no pay. The Company can therefore pay it in one year or it can pay it in ten years. With this exception the Company is free from debt. Its policy is to pay as it goes. In this way it has no fear of financial embarrassments. The title to the Kimbark is by "location," under the mining laws of the United States. Work enough has already been done to entitle the Company to a patent, which in due time will be obtained.

Recent Development Work

Since the Company acquired the property, it has put up poles and wires for a distance of one mile for the transmission of electric power from the Truckee River Electric Power Plant. By this means unlimited power for mining, hoisting and milling is obtained.

It has built a dwelling house for the manager, a large boarding house for the miners, a barn, a power house and blacksmith shop.

It has put an electric hoist and skip into the 265-tunnell; has purchased ore cars and the necessary tools for mining purposes.

It has acquired the Kimbark ground, adjoining the Flowery and North Bonanza mines, and is now developing the property by driving a tunnel.

Within the last few months the Company has mined and milled over 800 tons of ore—realizing therefrom about $10,000 worth of gold bullion. The out-put is constantly increasing and all the Company needs is more mill capacity to handle its ore.

Dry Placer Miner, formerly of California.

This company has the right, without royalty payments, to use the new patent machine upon all the land it may own, acquire by lease, or operate, in Arizona. We invite special attention to the great commercial value and profit of this machine, and what can be accomplished by it.

What This Machine Will Do.

For the first time in the history of gold mining a machine has been invented which will handle the dry placer gold gravel without water, and in large quantities. This machine will save 98 per cent of all the gold in the gravel, and will do it at a lower working cost than by any existing process. It is operated by a small, compact engine, using crude oil as fuel. A complete plant, capable of handling 200 tons per day will weigh less than 1,200 pounds.

To secure this gold only those placer lands could be worked, which could command large supplies of water, hence the immense bodies of dry placer lands remote from water have never been worked.

Fifteen Hundred Millions in Gold

The United States has yielded nineteen hundred millions in gold, of which fifteen hundred millions—or more than 75 per cent.—were the product of its placers.

Ninety per cent. of the world's total gold supply has been taken from placers by processes which have admittedly lost the bulk of the values.

Simplicity of Machine — Its Method of Operation

The machine is so extremely simple in construction and operation that any intending investor can operate it instantly. He can take a peck or more of sand, either ordinary house or sea sand, or such as is found in the placer lands of Arizona and California, put into this sand ten or a hundred pieces of gold as small as the point of a toothpick, and from that to the head of an ordinary pin, mix the sand and the gold thoroughly, turn them into the hopper or feed of the machine, and in a few seconds the machine will separate the gold from the gravel and recover from 98 to 100 per cent of the gold. It is an absolute, infallible, ocular demonstration of the merits of the machine. It has solved the problem of handling sand or gravel containing gold in regions remote from water.

Cost of Handling Material

Each plant is portable, weighs less than 1,200 pounds and can be easily moved by a few laborers.

The two greatest authorities in the world on the moving of material are "Haswell" and "Trautwine." They say in their Standard publications that a laborer can shovel horizontally, 12 feet, vertically 6 feet for 50 feet haul 17 cubic yards in 10 hours.

A well known engineer in his work for the U. S. Government at Sandy Hook, moved 12 cubic yards, 100 feet haul in 10 hours at a cost of 10 cents per cubic yard, paying laborers $1.75 per day.

The dry placer gold-bearing sands of California, Arizona and New Mexico are handled quite as easily as those of Sandy Hook.

Ten laborers can easily supply one machine with 204 cubic yards of gravel in 12 hours, working at the same speed as shown by Haswell, Trautwine or at Sandy Hook.

Placer work on above basis would cost about 11 1-2c. per cubic yard.

Do You Want Monthly Dividends?

We make a special offer of a limited number of shares of stock at this time, because the company requires immediately sufficient to build several machines to operate in the field.

Every machine at work will increase the intrinsic value of the stock.

Twenty machines in the field will increase the price and value of the stock more than double the present offering, and every additional machine means a further increase in price and value.

The Company intends to divide its net earnings every month, so that the stockholders may count absolutely on receiving monthly dividends in proportion to monthly earnings.

On Trial for His Life.

By John Fox, Jr.

The following episode is taken from John Fox, jr.'s, exquisite story, "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come," a book published this fall. Chad, a boy, the hero of the story, returns home to find that his dog Jack has been accused of sheep-stealing. The Turners are the people with whom he lives. The Dillons are the enemies of the Turners. Whizzer is the Dillons' dog.

By degrees the whole story was told Chad that night. Now and then the Turners would ask him about his stay in the Bluegrass, but the boy would answer as briefly as possible, and come back to Jack. Before going to bed, Chad said he would bring Jack into the house.

"Somebody might pizen him," he explained, and when he came back he startled the circle about the fire:

"What's Whizzer?" he asked, sharply. "Who's seen Whizzer?"

Then it developed that no one had seen the Dillon dog since the day before the sheep was found dead near a ravine at the foot of the mountain in a back pasture. Late that afternoon Melissa had found Whizzer in that very pasture when she was driving old Betsy, the brindle, home at milking time. Since then, no one of the Turners had seen the Dillon dog. That, however, did not prove that Whizzer was not at home. And yet——

"I'd like to know whar Whizzer is now!" said Chad, and after, at Joel's command, he had tied Jack to a bed-post—an outrage that puzzled the dog sorely—the boy thrashed his bed for an hour, trying to think out a defence for Jack, and wondering if Whizzer might not have been concerned in the death of the sheep.

It is hardly possible that what happened next day could happen anywhere except among simple people of the hills. Briefly, the old Squire and the circuit-rider had brought old Joel to the point of saying the night before that he would give Jack up to be killed if he could be proven guilty. "But," the old hunter cried with an oath, "you've got to prove him guilty." And thereupon the Squire said he would give Jack every chance that he would give a man—he would try him; each side could bring in witnesses; old Joel could have a lawyer if he wished, and Jack's case would go before a jury. If pronounced innocent, Jack should go free; if guilty—then the dog should be handed over to the sheriff to be shot at sundown. Joel agreed.

It was a strange procession that left the gate of the Turner cabin next morning. Old Joel led the way, mounted, with "old Sal," his rifle, across his saddle-bow. Behind him came Mother Turner and Melissa on foot, and Chad with his rifle over his left shoulder, and leading Jack by a string with his right hand. Behind them slouched Tall Tom with his rifle, and Dolph and Rube, each with a huge, old-fashioned horse-pistol swinging from his right hip. Last strode the schoolmaster. The cabin was left deserted, the hospitable door held closed by a deerskin latch caught to a wooden pin outside.

It was a strange humiliation to Jack thus to be led along the highway, like a criminal going to the gallows. There was no power on earth that could have moved him from Chad's side, other than the boy's own command, but old Joel had sworn that he would keep the dog tied, and the old hunter always kept his word. He had sworn, too, that Jack should have a fair trial. Therefore, the game—and the schoolmaster walked with his hands behind him and his eyes on the ground; he feared trouble.

Half a mile up the river and to one side of the road a space of some thirty feet square had been cut into a patch of rhododendron and filled with rude benches of slabs, in front of which was a rough platform on which sat a home-made, cane-bottomed chair. Except for the opening from the road, the space was walled with a circle of living green, through which the sun dappled the benches with quivering disks of yellow light, and high above great poplars and oaks arched their mighty heads. It was an open-air "meeting-house" where the circuit-rider preached during his summer circuit, and there the trial was to take place.

Already a crowd was idling, whittling, gossiping to the road, when the Turner cavalcade came in sight—and for ten miles up and down the river people were coming in for the trial.

"Mornin', gentlemen," said old Joel, gravely.

"Mornin'," answered several, among whom was the Squire, who eyed Joel's gun and the guns coming up the road.

"Squirrel huntin'?" he asked, and as the old hunter did not answer, he added sharply:

"Air you afeerd, Joel Turner, that you ain't a-goin' to git justice from me?"

"I don't keer whar it comes from," said Joel, grimly, "but I'm a-goin' to have it."

It was plain that the old man not only was making no plea for sympathy, but was alienating the little he had, and what he had was very little, for who but a lover of dogs can give full sympathy to his kind? And then Jack was believed to be guilty. It was curious to see how each Dillon shrank unconsciously as the Turners gathered—all but Jerry, one of the giant twins. He always stood his ground, fearing not man nor dog—nor devil.

Ten minutes later the Squire took his seat on the platform, while the circuit-rider squatted down beside him. The crowd, men, women and children, took the rough benches. To one side sat and stood the Dillons, old Tad and little Tad, Daws, Nance, and others of the tribe. Straight in front of the Squire gathered the Turners about Melissa and Chad and Jack as a center—with Jack squatted on his haunches foremost of all—facing the Squire with grave dignity, and looking at none else save, occasionally, the old hunter or his little master.

To the right stood the sheriff with his rifle, and on the outskirts hung the schoolmaster. Quickly the old Squire chose a jury, giving old Joel the opportunity to object as he called each man's name. Old Joel objected to none, for every man called he knew was more friendly to him than to the Dillons, and old Tad Dillon raised no word of protest, for he knew his case was clear. Then began the trial, and any soul that was there would have shuddered could he have known how that trial was to divide neighbor against neighbor, and mean death and bloodshed for half a century after the trial itself was long forgotten.

The first witness, old Tad—long, lean, stooping, crafty—had seen the sheep rushing wildly up the hillside "'bout crack o' day," he said, and had sent Daws up to see what the matter was. Daws had shouted back:

"That damned Turner dog has killed one of our sheep. Thar he comes now. Kill him!" And old Tad had rushed indoors for his rifle and had taken a shot at Jack as he leaped into the road and loped for home. Just then a stern, thick little voice rose from behind Jack:

"Hit was a God's blessin' fer you that you didn't hit him."

The Squire glared down at the boy, and old Joel said kindly:

"Hush, Chad."

Old Dillon had then gone down to the Turners, and asked them to kill the dog, but old Joel had refused.

"Whar was Whizzer?" Chad asked, sharply.

"You can't axe that question," said the Squire. "Hit's er-er-irrelevant."

Daws came next. When he reached the fence upon the hillside he could see the sheep lying still on the ground. As he was climbing over, the Turner dog jumped the fence and Daws saw blood on his muzzle.

"How close was you to him?" asked the Squire.

"'Bout twenty feet," said Daws.

"Humph!" said old Joel.

"Whar was Whizzer?" Again the old Squire glared down at Chad.

"Don't you axe that question again, boy. Didn't I tell you hit was irrelevant?"

"What's irrelevant?" the boy asked bluntly.

The Squire hesitated. "Why—why, hit ain't got nothin' to do with the case."

"Hit ain't?" shouted Chad.

"Joel," said the Squire testily, "ef you don't keep that boy still, I'll fine him fer contempt o' court."

Joel laughed, but he put his heavy hand on the boy's shoulder. Little Tad Dillon and Nance and the Dillon mother had all seen Jack running down the road. There was no doubt but that it was the Turner dog. And with this clear against poor Jack, the Dillons rested. And what else could the Turners do but establish Jack's character and put in a plea of mercy—a useless plea, old Joel knew—for a first offence? Jack was the best dog old Joel had ever known, and the old man told wonderful tales of the dog's intelligence and kindness, and how, one night, Jack had guarded a stray lamb that had broken its leg until daybreak, and he had been led to the dog and the sheep by Jack's barking for help. The Turner boys confirmed this story, though it was received with incredulity.

How could a dog that would guard one lone, helpless lamb all night long take the life of another?

There was no witness that had aught but kind words to say of the dog, or aught but wonder that he should have done this thing—even back to the cattle-dealer who had given him to Chad. For at that time the dealer said—so testified Chad, no objection being raised to hearsay evidence—that Jack was the best dog he ever knew. That was all the Turners or anybody could do or say and the old Squire was about to turn the case over to the jury when Chad rose.

"Squire," he said, and his voice trembled, "Jack's my dog. I lived with him night an' day for 'bout three years, an' I want to axe some questions."

He turned to Daws.

"I want to axe you ef thar was any blood around that sheep."

"Thar was a great big pool o' blood," said Daws, indignantly.

Chad looked at the Squire.

"Well, a sheep-killin' dog don't leave no great big pool o' blood, Squire, with the fust one he kills. He sucks it." Several men nodded their heads.

"Squire, the fust time I come over these mountains, the fust people I see' was these Dillons—an' Whizzer. They sicked Whizzer on Jack hyeh, and Jack whooped him. Then Tad thar jumped me and I whooped him." (The Turner boys were nodding confirmation.) "Sence that time they've hated Jack an' they've hated me, an' they hate the Turners partly fer takin' keer o' me. Now, you said somethin' I axed just now was irrelevant but I tell you, Squire, I know a sheep-killin' dawg, and jes' as I know Jack ain't, I know the Dillon dog naturely is and I tell you if the Dillons' dawg killed that sheep and they could put it on Jack—they'd do it. They'd do it—Squire an' I tell you, you—orten't—to let—that—sheriff—that—shoot my—dog — until the Dillons answers what I axed—" the boy's passionate cry rang against the green walls and out the opening and across the river—

"Whar's Whizzer?"

The boy startled the crowd and the old Squire himself, who turned quickly to the Dillons.

"Well, whar is Whizzer?"

Nobody answered.

"He ain't been seen, Squire, sence the evenin' afore the night o' the killin'!" Chad's statement seemed to be true. Not a voice contradicted.

"An' I want to know if Daws seed signs o' killin' on Jack's head when he jumped the fence, why them same signs didn't show when he got home."

Poor Chad! Here old Tad Dillon raised his hand.

"Axe the Turners, Squire," he said, and as the schoolmaster on the outskirts shrank, as though he meant to leave the crowd, the old man's quick eye caught the movement and he added:

"Axe the school teacher!"

Every eye turned with the Squire's to the master, whose face was strangely serious straightway.

"Did you see any signs on the dawg when he got home?" The gaunt man hesitated, with one swift glance at the boy, who almost paled in answer.

"Why," said the schoolmaster, and again he hesitated, but old Joel, in a voice that was without hope, encouraged him:

"Go on!"

"What was they?"

"Jack had blood on his muzzle, and a little strand o' wool behind one ear."

There was no hope against that testimony. Melissa broke away from her mother and ran out to the road—weeping. Chad dropped with a sob to his bench and put his arms around the dog; then he rose up and walked out of the opening, while Jack leaped against his leash to follow. The schoolmaster put out his hand to stop him, but the boy struck it aside without looking up and went on; he could not stay to see Jack condemned. He knew what the verdict would be, and in twenty minutes the jury gave it, without leaving their seats.

"Guilty!"

The sheriff came forward. He knew Jack and Jack knew him and wagged his tail and whimpered up at him when he took the leash.

"Well, by——, this is a job I don't like, an' I'm damned ef I'm agoin' to shoot this dawg afore he knows what I'm

Storm King Group of Mines

TO CANADIAN INVESTORS

The property comprising what is known as the STORM KING GROUP OF MINES offers an attractive and safe investment. The property is the richest in the country and we believe it would be difficult to secure an investment that promises better returns. The following is a description of the mines written by Capt. A. M. Paul, whose reputation as an expert in mining matters is known far and near.

These properties are situated in the Cable Cove Mining District, about fifteen miles north of Sumpter, Oregon, and about one mile northwest of the Baby McKee mine, about two miles northwest of the Last Chance, the Alpine, the Imperial and the California mines.

The properties in this report consist of seven claims. The names of the seven claims being as follows: The Eureka and the Honest Dollar. These two claims are on the same vein. Adjoining these two claims and paralleling them on the northwest is another vein upon which there are two claims known as the Jennie and Golden Rule, and paralleling them on the northwest there is another vein upon which there are two claims, known as the Storm King and the Osage. The last claim of this group lies to the northwest of the last two named, and is adjoining them. This claim is the Shannon Bell.

In making my report I will commence with the two first named claims of the group, the Eureka and Honest Dollar. The development on these claims consists of a tunnel ninety-seven feet in length, running along the course of the vein, showing two feet ten inches of ore in the top of the tunnel and a little over three feet in the bottom, which assays giving values of from $9,65 to $30 per ton in gold. About four hundred feet in a southwesterly direction there is a shaft on the vein ten feet deep, showing the vein to be from one to two inches wide on the surface and about twelve inches wide in the bottom of the shaft, in which assays give values of from $9,25 to $40 per ton in free milling gold ore.

This vein is exposed by small shafts and open cuts for a distance of fifteen hundred feet, and the course of this vein is north, ten degrees east, and the vein cuts the formation, showing it to be a true fissure, and the formation is granite. This vein shows in places a width of from ten to fifteen feet of mineralized matter, commonly called vein matter, but which is caused by hot solutions from below.

I will now pass to the Jennie and Golden Rule. There has been very little work done upon these two claims, there being one discovery shaft ten feet deep, showing ore on all sides of the shaft, and running in value of from $4 upwards. It is my opinion that with development, this, too, will prove valuable property.

The work on the Storm King and Osage consists of a tunnel near the point of discovery and is driven along the vein for a distance of one hundred and eighty feet, showing ore all the way from the surface to the face of the tunnel, and averaging in width from six to eighteen inches. Three assays give the following values. $12,50. This being a general sample taken from the dump. The other two assays are $62,68 and $73,08 respectively, this being the assorted ore for shipment. The course of this tunnel and vein are north, ten degrees west, and the vein cuts the trend of the formation obliquely (which is granite) and by driving this tunnel five or six hundred feet on the present course it will intersect a quartzite reef (which is running north, twenty degrees east) which would make this a contact vein between granite and quartzite, and should produce a large body of ore, at the intersection of the contact.

The only work done upon the Shannon Bell, the last claim of this group, is the location work, and is not enough to allow of a report being made.

There is water for power purposes one mile from the property, and timber on the ground, of a very fine quality, sufficient to run the mine for many years to come.

All the assays mentioned in this report were made by the assayer, of the Imperial mine at my request, and the ore was taken by me from the properties mentioned.

I will state that I have been a practical miner since 1870, and am now the manager and superintendent of the Imperial mine in this district.

(Signed) CAPTAIN A. M. PAUL.

SIR WILFRID ASK FOR MORE FREEDOM

Premier Wants the Power to Arrange the Preliminaries Only to Treaties

King Keeps Veto Power—Need not Lead to Separation as Imperial Ministers Would still have Control

London, Dec. 24.—The London Daily Mail publishes an interview with Sir Wilfrid Laurier by H. W. Lucy (famous under the nom de plume of "Toby, M.P.") regarding Canada and her demand for the treaty-making power.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said that at the instance of Britain Canada had consented to an inquiry into the Alaska boundary dispute, and had looked for that inquiry to be conducted by jurists free of partisan prejudice. Canada had entered a protest against the pronounced type of American partisan commissioners, but the complaint had received scant consideration at the Foreign Office.

Canadians were so certain of the justice of their case and the impartiality of Lord Alverstone that they were confident of a favorable judgment upon the two points. His countrymen would not get get over their disappointment, and were unanimous that a repetition of the Alaska boundary incident would be rendered impossible by Canada having treaty-making powers

Preliminaries Only.

This would not lead to separation as the Dominion did not demand absolute treaty-making powers, but desired the arrangement of the preliminaries of all treaties affecting her trade and territory, leaving to the sovereign the responsibility of vetoing them if the Imperial Ministers think desirable in the interests of the Empire. The question was not new, but something would come of it now that Canada was mightier than in 1882, when the point was moved by Mr. Edward Blake.

To-day nearly six millions of Canadian people have a passionate conviction that they have the right to determine matters regarding their own commerce and boundaries. Canada had besought the Imperial Government to bring Canada's just claims before the court in the Alabama case, but Britain afraid of offending the Americans, had left her colonies in the lurch. Much the same had happened in the Alaska case. Had Canada had the right to arrange the preliminaries in the Alaska matter the result of the inquiry would have been very different.

Will Hear More of It.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said that in the next few weeks he would enlarge upon the subject of the necessity of Canada having treaty-making powers in view of the demand acclaimed throughout the Dominion.

The London Daily Mail, commenting upon the interview editorially, says: "There seems to be good reason for Canada's contention, but we none the less hope that she will see her way to modify the demand."

A Wedding As Natural.

There was a wedding yesterday in Graceless Church.

Lord Baldknob of Kiltshire, England married Miss Sallie Panhandle of East Pittsburg.

The bridal party, including the attorneys for both sides, formed in the alcove promptly at 11.30.

At 11.45 the real estate in the bride's name was transferred to his lordship.

At 11.50 a million dollars in legal tender changed hands.

At high noon all the railroad first mortgage bonds known to be in the bride's possession were handed over.

A vote of thanks was then passed to his lordship for leaving the bride's father enough to live on comfortably until the next rise in Wall street, which is predicted for next spring.

At 12.15 two bishops, four clergymen, two real estate lawyers and a barrister, representing the plaintiff, pronounced the benediction.

The groom will pass the next three weeks with his bride at his estates in England, after the roof has been repaired.

After this, it is understood, they will separate and enter society.—"Life."

To Start a Balky Horse.

Says a horseshoer: "When a horse balks, no matter how badly he sulks or how ugly he is, do not beat him; don't throw sand in his ears; don't use a rope on his forelegs or even burn straw under him.

"Quietly go and pat him on the head a moment; take a hammer or even pick up a stone in the street; tell the driver to sit still, take his lines and hold them quietly, while you lift up either front foot, give each nail a light tap and a good smart tap on the frog; drop the foot quickly, and then chirp to him to go.

"In 99 cases out of 100 the horse will go right on about his business, but the driver must keep his lines taut and not pull or jerk him back. If I have tried this once I have tried it 500 times.

"This may make you smile, but a horse has more common sense than most people are willing to give him credit for. The secret of this little trick is simply diversion. I am a firm believer that with kindness and proper treatment a horse can be driven with a string."

A SPLENDID PROPOSITION

The Bannie Gold Mining and Milling Company offer Block of Stock

Elsewhere will be found the advertisement of the above proposition, which is worthy of the attention of Canadian investors. The Company is splendidly officered by men of probity and high character.

The Broker and Stockholder says:

There has been considerable action in the stock of the Bannie Gold M. & M. Co. during the past month and nearly all of it that has been available locally at inside prices has been picked up through local brokers. The company has not been pushing the sale of its treasury stock recently, although it can be had from them at 60 cents a share, which is the office price. As a result of the excellent showing and new strikes of high grade ore which have lately been made on this property opportunities to secure the shares at bargain figures have been taken advantage of by investors, and curb quotations have advanced several points. The Bannie is a good mine without question. Considerable of the loose stock that had been floating around was bought by parties directly interested in the Bannie Co., and when the few lots that are yet offered are placed, a noticeable advance will likely occur in quotations on this stock and it is doubtful if any of it can be bought at a less figure than the company's present selling price. Quite a number of Eastern investors have been buying Bannie stock recently, through the Arizona brokers.

THAWED DYNAMITE IN OVEN OF STOVE

The House was Demolished and an Infant was Killed in Adjoining Cottage

Vancouver, Dec. 23.—Thomas Plincik, a Slavonic miner of Michel, discovered dynamite could be quickly thawed by placing it in the cook-stove oven. He scarcely had time to congratulate himself upon his discovery when stove and cottage soared skyward, and the explosion shook the town. Plincik was rendered totally deaf; his wife was battered by a bruising rain of bricks; the baby was found beneath a heap of debris, fatally injured; a sleeping compatriot dropped from his floor above unharmed. In an adjoining cabin an infant was killed.

CATARRHOZONE

The Only Cure for Catarrh endorsed by the Medical Profession

Physicians boldly state that every requirement of a perfect cure for Catarrhal diseases is fulfilled in Catarrhozone, and on this account it is prescribed by almost every intelligent doctor.

It is the most powerful antiseptic known. When the lungs are filled with its germ-killing vapor the microbes which cause and maintain the unhealthy condition of the mucous membrane die immediately. Disease germs cannot exist where Catarrhozone is used.

Although very penetrating, Catarrhozone is a soothing and healing treatment. It quickly heals the raw spots and allays irritation and congestion of the mucous membrane.

When using Catarrhozone you don't have to wait all day for relief; it comes with every breath taken through the Inhaler. Head and throat are cleared and cleansed almost at once. Droppings in the throat, headache, coughing, and spitting, and all other disagreeable symptoms of catarrh are banished by a few days' use of this superior remedy.

Catarrhal diseases of every description yield without much difficulty to Catarrhozone. When used for Bronchitis, Lung Trouble and Colds, it affords not only instant relief, but cures in a very short time.

Croup, Whooping Cough and Winter Ills simply won't live any time if Catarrhozone is inhaled four times daily, and as a safeguard for Pneumonia and Consumption it has no equal.

Better get a Catarrhozone Inhaler; use it occasionally, and you won't have a cough or cold in the head or catarrh. These afflictions can be prevented by Catarrhozone as well as cured. Complete outfit, full two months' treatment, costs $1. Small size, 25 cents. Sold by all druggists and N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

THE STOCK OF THE

BRET HARTE GOLD MINING COMPANY

IS THE BEST MINING INVESTMENT TO-DAY

This is a strong statement, but facts substantiate it. The work on the mine has proven its value. The promoters have shown their confidence in it by using their own money for development work.

The Company's Property is Six Claims, Patented Land

$60,000 worth of ore blocked out and mine ready for mill.

Mine can be cheaply and economically worked.

Dividends positively guaranteed in sixty days after mill is in operation.

Treasury Stock only for sale, and only sufficient stock will be sold to supply machinery.

The mine lacks but one thing—machinery, and to purchase this a small block of stock will be sold at 15 cents per share. When machinery is paid for no more stock will be sold.

PROSPECTUS INFORMATION FREELY GIVEN

This proposition is better than that of many companies selling stock at 50 cents a share, and will stand a thorough investigation.

BRAIN POWER

HOW IT MAY BE STRENGTHENED AND INCREASED

The brain is a great nerve battery that presides over all the powers and impulses of the human body.

Very frequently as a result of poor blood, it becomes enfeebled, and a general weakness of the entire system follows.

No remedy possesses the marvelous brain strengthening power that Ferrozone has demonstrated in thousands of cases.

It contains an abundance of phosphates and iron which are essential to the formation of red, vitalizing blood, and in this way supplies the brain with extra power to perform its numerous and important duties.

Ferrozone is the best preparation for brain workers, and those inclined to a sedentary life. It improves the appetite, insures good digestion, regulates the bowels, and helps the stomach to do its work.

Lawyers, ministers, and those whose occupation entails much thinking and brain labor, will find Ferrozone of immense value, because of its power to stimulate mental activity. Students who take Ferrozone regularly, find it not only clears the brain and makes it more receptive, but makes them strong in body as well as mind.

A medical student of Toronto University, who has proved the good qualities of Ferrozone says: "On my study table there is always a place for Ferrozone. I find by keeping my digestion in perfect order, and maintaining a splendid appetite, it enables me to accomplish a great deal of hard work. I consider Ferrozone at the same time food for the brain, the blood and the nerves and can highly recommend it."

Very few are so strong and healthy that a course of Ferrozone would not benefit. It is good for the young and old alike, and is prepared in convenient tablet form, price per box 50cts., sold by all druggists and N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

WM PRINGLE, Principal.

Opposite Post Office.

Immense Rush a Post Office

Probably never before have the postal officials, the express companies, and the customs department been so rushed as they are at the present moment. The outgoing mails in every direction are among the heaviest on record, while the incoming mails are keeping the clerks busy. The express matter, both inward and outward, is blocking up the offices, while the delivery vans are working after hours to catch up. The railways have put on extra mail and express cars in order to cope with the traffic.

Wedding Bells

A quiet wedding was solemnized yesterday afternoon at the Murray street church parsonage, Rev. J. Bastow officiating, when Mr. Robert Chatten, of Otonabee, and Miss Bessie Arnold, of town, were united in marriage. The groom was assisted by his brother, Mr. John E. Chatten, while Miss Carrie Deviney, of Ashburnham, was bridesmaid. Mr. and Mrs. Chatten will reside at 300 1-2 Hunter street. Their many friends will wish them a long and prosperous life.

Married at the Manse

A very quiet and unostentatious wedding took place yesterday afternoon at St. Andrew's manse, when Rev. J. G. Potter united in marriage Mr. Joseph Elliott, of Smith, to Miss Levina, youngest daughter of Mr. Robt. Frazer, Cardiff. The bride was attended by her cousin, Mrs. Thomas Allen, while Mr. Robert Allen, a brother of the bridegroom acted as groomsman. At the conclusion of the ceremony the happy couple left on a visit to the bride's parents in Cardiff, after which they will take up their residence in Smith.

Mrs. M. Lyle Honored

Mrs. M. Lyle, who for eleven years has most acceptably and efficiently filled the position of Treasurer of the Ladies Aid Society of the Charlotte street Methodist church, was on Tuesday evening last presented with a dinner set and an address setting forth the society's high appreciation of her services. After a suitable acknowledgment by Mrs. Lyle, an enjoyable social time was spent. During the afternoon contributions of a suitable Christmas nature were received by the ladies and afterwards distributed to the poor of the congregation.

MAYOR ROGER ON HIS DEFENSE

His Worship Objects to the Term "Revelations" Being Applied

Mayor Roger is out with an article in the evening papers, in which he objects to the words "Revelations in town railway agreement," and "Aldermen discover that contract was not given to Mr. Stuart," in an evening contemporary. The Mayor says that these statements are calculated to mislead and to convey the impression that there was something secret or underhand in the dealings referred to. His Worship goes on to say that the details of the street railway franchise was discussed at a meeting of the Council and Messrs. Stuart Richards and Dennistoun, on the 6th of July last, and again on July 30th, when Senator Cox was also present. At this meeting the details were settled. Notice was then published by poster, and in The Times for four weeks, that the franchise was open to examination, that the Council proposed to pass the bylaw on 8th September, when an opportunity would be given to any person "who desires to be heard."

The Mayor might have added that these meetings were of the star chamber variety, the press being excluded. However, on September 8th, His Worship goes on to say, the Council met and no person appeared to object, and after reading the first time the further readings were postponed until after publication of the bylaw in full, which was done in all the town papers, and on 14th September, all the members except Messrs. McWilliams and Edgcumbe being present, the bylaw was given its second and third readings.

The form of the contract so far as parties were concerned, was the same on every occasion. Mr Stuart subsequently gave his personal cheque for $5,000.00 deposit, which, the Mayor states, is still in the hands of the town treasurer as guarantee of his good faith.

HOGS COME HIGH

High Prices Being Paid for Hogs on the Peterborough Market

On our public market this week farmers have been receiving from $5.40 to $5.50 per cwt. for their hogs, and deliveries have been quite free. In another column of to-day's issue we publish an article, taken from the Toronto World, which no doubt, partially explains the situation. The farmers of this district must certainly feel like congratulating themselves that they are receiving 25 cts. per cwt. more for their hogs than the drovers are receiving delivered on Toronto Market, and we would naturally suppose, taking the margin it would take for the drovers to deliver these hogs in Toronto, that the farmers of this district are realizing from 50 to 75 cts. per cwt. more than the farmers in Western Ontario.

This is another case in which Peterborough is certainly showing up in the lead as far as being a good live town and a good public market for the Midland district.

WEDDING AND CHRISTENING

A Unique Feature of a Wedding Yesterday Afternoon

A pretty home wedding was solemnized yesterday afternoon at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. George Campbell, 352 Charlotte street, when his youngest daughter, Miss Margaret, was united in marriage to Mr. Wm. Douglas, in the presence of about twenty-five of the immediate relatives and friends of the contracting parties. Rev. J. H. Shephard, of Coldwater, assisted by Rev. W. L. Armitage, performed the marriage ceremony. The bride was charmingly attired in a dress of white point de esprit, over Indian lawn, trimmed with satin ribbon and valenciennes insertion. Miss Eva Elliott, the bridesmaid, wore white lawn trimmed with insertion lace and ribbon. The groom was supported by Mr. Geo. Campbell, brother of the groom. The bride was given away by her father. Mendelssohn's wedding march was played by Mrs. Walter McGee.

The nuptial knot was tied beneath an arch of evergreen and holly, from which was suspended a flower bell. The parlor was charmingly decorated with carnations and ferns.

A large number of beautiful and costly presents testified to the popularity of the bride. The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a gold crescent pin, and the groomsman a pearl pin.

After the ceremony a delightful wedding dejeuner, Mr. H. Long being the caterer, was partaken of. Mr. and Mrs. Douglas left on the 5.45 G.T.R. train for a trip to the west, and will reside in town on the conclusion of it. The Times extends its hearty congratulations.

At the conclusion of the ceremony, and after congratulations had been extended to the happy couple, Rev. Mr. Shepherd, assisted by Rev. Mr. Armitage, administered the sacrement of baptism to the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Campbell, and niece of the bride.

Resident of State of Delaware Wants to Come to Peterborough

The Times is in receipt of the following letter from Georgetown, Deleware, under date of Dec. 21st, and which speaks for itself:

Sir,—Will you please let me know if there are any real estate agents in your town and what their names are. I would like to buy a farm in Peterborough. Is that section good for growing wheat, potatoes clover, &c? What is the price of eggs? How long and how cold are the winters? Are they ever broken up by thaws? Is that climate and locality healthful? How cold has it been there this winter up to date?

Please send me a copy of The Times with subscription rates.

IN OLD AGE the question of health becomes mainly a question of nutrition. If the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition are kept in a healthful condition there will be a well-nourished body, and little liability to disorders of the liver, bowels or such other disorders as may result from innutrition and lack of exercise.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition, and also diseases of other organs which are caused by the diseased condition of the stomach. By enabling the perfect nutrition of the body it increases the vital power and promotes a vigorous old age.

"I was a sufferer from chronic diarrhea for five years," writes Mrs. Mary A. Aaron, of Belle, Phelps Co., Mo. "I tried different remedies, which would give me relief for a short time only. My trouble would return as bad as ever. I consulted you in July, 1900, and by your advice commenced using Dr. Pierce's remedies. I took two bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' three vials of the 'Pellets,' and some of the 'Extract of Smart-Weed,' as you advised. I have not had any return of my trouble since using your medicines. Am now seventy-one years old and I never had anything to relieve me so quick. I think Dr. Pierce's medicines the greatest on earth. Should I ever have any return of my trouble shall use your medicine. My thanks to you for your advice and thanks to Almighty God for restoring me to health through your hands."

Accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery." There is nothing "just as good" for diseases of the stomach, blood and lungs.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, the best laxative for old people. They cure constipation and biliousness.

GREAT BRITAIN WANTS JAPAN TO STRIKE NOW

Russia Talks Peace But is Steadily Preparing for War--Advocates of Peace

Tokio, December 25—Confidence is felt in high official circles that Russia will modify its arrogant pretensions respecting Manchuria and Corea before all prospect of peace is extinguished. Should this confidence prove groundless Japan is ready and determined to command its army and navy to deal with the aggressor. The Mikado and his cabinet have been assured by Baron Shibusawa, the foremost business man and banker of the Empire, that the moneyed interests of the country are willing to face any sacrifice rather than see the claims of Russia allowed. The Baron's action is significant in the highest degree, since he would suffer more than any other dozen men in Japan by a financial crisis. Moreover, Baron Shibusawa's devotion to peace is proverbial. He is the man who said to President Roosevelt when the American President referred to the splendid military qualities of the Japanese nation, "Mr. President, I should be sorry to think our chief glory military. We should prefer a reputation for love of industry, mental and moral progress and peace."

Shibusawa holds that Japan's financial resources immediately available are sufficient to prosecute war for several months and that additional money can be secured when the present supply is exhausted.

According to reliable information communications sent by the British Minister Sir Claude Macdonald, to his Government, represent Japan's patience as dangerously overstrained and its mind fully made up.

BELIEVES WAR IS IMMINENT.

New York, December 25—The World prints the following special from Washington:

"The Administration believes that war between Russia and Japan is imminent. The beginning of hostilities within a short time would not surprise the President or Secretary Hay.

"Their conviction that war cannot long be averted is based on reports from Minister Conger and from other sources which few people have seen. These reports show that Russia, whose demands have daily grown more exacting and insistent, is determined to force Japan to declare war without delay.

"If the acceptance of the Czar's challenge is not as prompt as desired, the advices to the State Department plainly say that Russia will begin hostilities. War within a few days would be a fulfilment of the predictions of Minister Conger and would be just what the British Foreign Office looks for."

AS VIEWED IN BERLIN.

Berlin, December 25 — The German Foreign Office, in estimating the probability of war in the Far East, fixes its attention at this moment on Great Britain, rather than on Japan, for it is recognized that Japan is only waiting for Great Britain to give the word before beginning hostilities. A new and even portentous element in the situation, as it is looked on here, is the rising feeling in these: Britain that Russia must yield or Japan and Great Britain ought to fight her. It is learned from the highest diplomatic source that the German Government, while still refusing to believe that war is certain, is convinced now that if war between Russia and Japan comes Great Britain will take part in it, because the British Government looks upon war as possible the only means of saving and reestablishing her position in the East.

Sir Frank Lascelles, the British Ambassador who returned here from England three days ago, is understood to have imparted his impression unofficially to the German Government that the British Cabinet apprehended that war would result if Russia persisted in her present attitude toward Japan.

The leading financiers know nothing of any Russian overtures to float a loan of $125,000,000 in Germany, and the report to that effect published by the Tageblatt in a despatch from St. Petersburg is regarded as unfounded.

IRISH FACTIONS WILL UNITE

After Twenty Years of Dissension in New York Harmony is Assured

New York, Dec. 25—After twenty years of dissension the two bodies of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, the board of America, and the board of Erin, have amalgamated. Instead of two parades, there will be only one demonstration next St. Patrick's Day.

Over 100,000 men and 150,000 women are affected by the union. Daniel H. Clancy, county corresponding secretary of the board of America, said today,—"The settlement of this dispute is the most important move we have made in our history. The split which has existed in our order for twenty years has caused us much injury. Now that differences are patched up, I feel sure that thousands of sons of Erin in this country will desert the smaller organizations and become members of our order.

"The dissension arose at our national meeting in Cleveland, O., in 1884. The question whether it would be right to admit the children of members who had intermarried with other nations, arose. Nearly all of the members voted in favor of admission, but the balance, who held that only full-blooded Irishmen should belong to the organization and that the head power should be on the other side, remained steadfast, and formed the board of Erin."

One of the reasons given for the reunion is that the board of America intends to erect a large building on Fifth Avenue at One Hundred and Sixteenth street, where they own land valued at $120,000, which will be thrown open to all Irish societies. The building is to cost over $250,000.

A LUMBER SHORTAGE

And the Price of Lumber May Soar Next Season

The Dickson Company, which is the largest lumbering concern in this section, have as many men in their camps as usual this year. This may also be said of the Rathbuns. But in the Ottawa and Georgian Bay districts there is not the same activity reported.

To such an extent are the operations being curtailed that a shortage of more than a hundred million feet of the estimated lumber cut of Ontario for the season is the report of Messrs. Moore, and Roe, inspectors of the National Lumber Trust of Chicago, who have just arrived in Toronto from the logging camps. Mr. Roe stated that the shortage was very marked in chopping due to lack of men. The yield of the Georgian Bay Limber Company alone would be reduced this year to 60,000,000 feet, as compared with over 80,000,000 last year. With the other large companies the falling off was even worse. He said that no satisfactory explanation could be given for the scarcity of choppers. An abel-bodied man could earn $2.50 a day with his board, but there was some dissatisfaction among the men as to the methods of payment, and the treatment they received from sub-bosses. Unreliable companies had made pledges to induce men to go into the woods, which they had afterwards failed to carry out, and the effect was very injurious to the business.

THE SALVATION ARMY

Tribute to the Brave Soldiers of the Cross for their Charitable Work

The following has been sent The Times for publication and refers to the collections on the streets and elsewhere in aid of the charitable work of the Salvation Army, during Christmas season:

I

"Keep the pot a-boilin' " for the Army, fellers—they
Whose regiments are marchin' in the
 Hallelula way;
The captains and the comrades—all embattled for the fray,—
 "Keep the pot a-boilin' " for the Army!

II.

"Keep the pot a-boilin' " for the Army
 fellers—lo!
They tread the trackless deserts—they climb the Alps of snow!
Upon the path of Poverty they train
 God's flowers to grow,—
 "Keep the pot a-boilin' " for the Army!

III.

Starved lips cry "Blessing on them!"
 —they kneel beneath God's skies
Near the hovels of the wretched, where the world its love denies;
And the light of hope falls splendid on the dim despairing eyes,—
 "Keep the pot a-boilin' " for the Army!

IV.

"Keep the pot a-boilin' " for the Army
 fellers fine,
In the white way of Salvation, with the brave brigades in line!
Humanity the watchword, and Love the countersign,—
 "Keep the pot a-boilin' " for the Army!

THE GHOULS' STRIKE

Labour Unionism Has Run Mad in Chicago

Chicago, December 24—There is no sign of peace in the livery drivers strike. Ambulances have come under the ban of the striking pickets, and police may be necessary to man the conveyances of the sick. Efforts to settle the strike were made by outside influences yesterday. The parties refused to meet each other direct, and efforts were confined to arranging a conference at second hand.

Picketing of houses from which funerals are to start, whether peaceful or violent, by union livery drivers, who went on strike four days ago, is to be prevented by the police under orders issued by Chief of Police O'Neil.

J. B. Wadsworth, secretary and Chas Stevens, business agent, of the Liverymen's Union were summoned before Chief O'Neil and told that they must settle their differences away from houses of mourning.

"This picketing of the homes from which funerals are being held is beyond the toleration of a civilized community," said Chief O'Niel. "Your zeal has carried you beyond the pale of endurance, and such unheard of performances as the carrying of labor troubles to the houses of the dead will not be allowed by the police."

"Law or no law, picketing of any kind around these houses will have to stop. I shall take my chances with the courts on the question if my conduct is questioned by any court."

Chief O'Neil then issued a general order instructing officers to accompany funerals in carriages if circumstances seemed to require it, and see that the last rites of the dead be in no way interfered with.

While the courts have inclined to the permitting of peaceful picketing, Chief O'Neil's order prohibits picketing of any kind around houses of mourning. He declares that in his opinion no court could be found which would fail to sustain his act.

On top of Chief O'Neil's order came the announcement that peace plans had been launched, through the efforts of the Chicago Board of Arbitration.

PRESENTATION AND ADDRESS

Mr. Jas. C. Hyde was Honored by Those of His Department

A pleasing event took place Wednesday night at the Oriental Hotel, when an address and presentation, a gold headed cane, were made to Mr. James C. Hyde, foreman of the Test Department of the C.G.E. Mr. Hyde has held this position for the past three years, during which time he has popularized himself to a high degree with those working in this department, and each year they have given evidence of the high esteem in which he is held by them. Mr. Hyde made a suitable reply, in which he returned thanks for the honor done him.

He came from Youngstown, Ohio, and his family are on the road to this city to join him for the holiday season.

SHOOTS THREE MEN

Exciting Event at a Wedding Festival in Baltimore

Baltimore, Dec. 25 —The elopement and marriage of Henrietta Scott, seventeen years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Scott, and Walter H. Smith, nineteen years old, culminated Saturday night at Frohsinn Hall in a shooting affray. Beverly N. Sparks, a reporter on a morning newspaper here, used a revolver when he was attacked. He wounded William H. Collins, Lewis Gardner and Philip Stackrath.

Collins was shot twice in the leg, Stackrath once in the back and Gardner through the left forearm. The couple were married early in the evening, and after obtaining parental forgiveness, proceeded to summon friends, and have a dance.

Sparks, according to his statement, went to the hall to get an account of the affair for his paper. After he had obtained the facts he asked a young woman to dance with him and she consented. Collins, it is alleged, later accused the reporter of making a remark derogatory to the girl's character, and an altercation ensued. Sparks was knocked down and several men began to pummel him.

Sparks says he backed into a corner and fired upon his assailants. Sparks was put in jail, but not until he had telephoned his report to his paper.

This is the Demand of Uncle Sam in Alaska

Washington Official Finds Practice of Owning Serfs is General in the Island off Alaska

Washington, Dec. 25 — Dr. Sheldon Jackson, general agent of the national bureau of education has received a letter from William B. Davis, superintendent of the public schools at Unalaska. Aleutian islands, who declares that slavery exists among the population of the islands. Superintendent Davis says that slavery has been common in the islands from time immemorial, and that it is still general.

He gives a number of instances of orphans and waifs being held as slaves and says that he has been unable to make the owners give up their "property." He asks for instructions as to how to deal with the condition.

Dr. Jackson said this morning that he had known for some time that slavery existed in the islands, and that Gov Brady, of Alaska, had taken steps to remedy the evil. He said the principal offending slave owners were not the native Aleutians, but foreigners who had married native women, and among whom the possession of slaves was considered a mark of wealth.

RECTOR SEEKS A DIVORCE

Strange Action of a Well Known and Popular Minister

Tacoma, Wash., Dec. 25—The Rev. C. A. Horne, an episcopal clergyman, has resigned at Lewiston, Idaho, and admits his intention to marry Mrs. W. J. Kellinger as soon as he can obtain a divorce from Mrs. Horne, and Mrs. Kellinger gains her release from her husband.

Horne is 35 years old, a graduate of Harvard, and of the Cambridge school of Theology. He came to Lewiston four years ago from Wilmington, Del., where he was rector of a large church.

Five years ago, in New York, Horne married an accomplished young woman who had been court stenographer and private secretary of Colonel Waring, Commissioner of Street Cleaning. Last summer Mrs. Horne went to New York on a visit. While she was away Mr. and Mrs Kellinger made their home with the Rev. Mr. Horne.

When Mrs. Horne returned in September. Horne informed her, and Mrs. Kellinger told her husband, of their love for each other, begging that they might be allowed to obtain divorces and marry. The injured wife and husband endeavored unsuccessfully to dissuade them.

Kellinger has taken his seven-year-old son to Eastern relatives, Mrs. Kellinger has gone to California.

WILL INTERVIEW HON. A. J. BALFOUR

Deputation from Montreal Congress to Wait Upon Premier

TO PRESENT RESOLUTION

Passed by the Congress of Congress In Favor of an Imperial Reciprocity Commission

London, Dec. 25—The resolution passed at the Montreal Congress in favor of imperial reciprocity and also urging the appointment of a special commission composed of representatives of Great Britain and her Colonies, has been brought to the notice of Mr. Balfour, and he has been asked to receive a deputation in support of the resolution. I believe Mr. Balfour has agreed, but the date is not yet fixed.

Miss Rhona Adair, the English golf champion, who visited Montreal late this autumn, in an interview says she found the heat in the United States trying. In Canada, though obliged to wear two jerseys which made her feel clumsy and awkward, she had the quite novel experience of playing in the snow, when the cold was so intense that it was necessary to carry a muff to keep her hands warm enough to handle the clubs.

SIR EDWARD ERRS.

St. James Gazette says that Sir Edward Clarke has completely misconceived the functions of the new body, in saying that the tariff commission could only deal with Mr Balfour's proposals, and had no reference to the relations between the Colonies and the Mother Country.

Henry Norman, M.P., sailed on the White Star steamer Majestic today to visit Canada, where he will investigate the question of the preferential tariff. He will return in time for the opening of Parliament.

London, Dec. 22—The coroner's jury, in the case of Patrick Upton, returned a verdict at Strathroy this morning that the deceased was attacked by Fanny McGarvey, while the latter was mentally deranged.

Wm McGarvey, a brother of the woman, said she frequently arose in the middle of the night and wanted him to go to Uptons, as she feared Upton might have fallen into the hands of the Clan na Gela.

A medical man, who knew Fanny McGarvey for some time past, expressed the opinion that she was insane.

The prisoner will now be arraigned on charge of murder.

COLONIES STRENGTH GROWS IN ENGLAND

Sir Edward Clarke Favors Acceding to Colonial Wishes

PURCHASE TO GREELAND

Denmark Does Not Take Suggestion of Sale to Canada Seriously

London, December 25 — Sir Edward Clarke, speaking before the Carlton Conservative Club at Manchester yesterday said the tariff commission had nothing to do with the relation of the Colonies to the Motherland. At present England had no preference to give them. The questions which England spent much money on in different parts of the Eastern world were insignificant when compared with maintaining the splendid Canadian loyalty. England should be keen in helping Canada to secure Newfoundland and Greenland. He hoped Colonial questions would be dealt with without waiting for a decision on the fiscal reform and they could not be niggardly in dealing with Colonial wishes.

SALE OF GREENLAND.

The Morning Post's Copenhagen correspondent wires that the report that Canada is anxious to obtain Greenland is not seriously taken there. The Danish Government would not give it a willing ear if the proposal was made.

A leading Copenhagen paper demands that the Danish minister of foreign affairs distinctly disavow the idea of selling Greenland.

A CHRISTMAS ANTHEM

I.

O blessed town of Bethlehem
  Within thy gray-green shade,
Ringed round with terraced vineyard
  And depth of olive glade;
There on thy high green pastures
  The shepherds watch their sheep,
The low large moon shines glimmering
  O'er all the upland steep.

II.

What music of the heavens—
  What magic song of bliss—
What vision of the night-tide—
  What mystic light is this?
The silly sheep are blinded,
  The shepherds in amaze
Stand awestruck, all the hillside
  With glory is ablaze!

III.

The angels' joyous chorus
  Rings out into the night,
O Gloria in Excelsis!
  Sing praises in the height,
Sing praises, men of Bethlehem,
  Sing praises here below,
For Peace on earth and good-will
  He doth on you bestow.

IV.

For on this day is born there
  Within your little town
A child who Christ the Lord is
  Yet wears no earthly crown.
He bringeth joy and gladness
  To you and all mankind,
Yea Peace on earth and good-will
  To men of equal mind.

V.

O blessed town of Bethlehem,
  How happy is they state!
How blest above all palaces
  The stable at thy gate!
For there in manger-cradle
  (Oh true the angel-word!)
As King enthroned of all the worlds
  Reigns Jesus Christ the Lord.

—Very Rev. Chas. W. Stubbs, D.D.

THE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT

Those of older growth recognize that the Christmas spirit is gaining impetus with every succeeding year. From a feast and frolic for the children, from the days when gifts were confined almost exclusively to those of tender years, it has grown to be an occasion of remembrance for the entire family and large circles of friends.

Christmas in these later years has become the festival that cements friendships, which recalls friends and which induces those better fixed in this world's goods to remember the less fortunate. The habit of giving is growing; few are so poor that they have nothing to bestow.

It is a pleasing custom, and the spread of this feeling has improved mankind. It recalls pleasing recollections; it lifts the heart above selfishness and lends a touch of human pity. Upon the corners of every principal street and in dozens of stores, are persons and boxes gathering contributions with which to provide Christmas dinners for the poor and unfortunate. It is the touch of true humanity which the Christmas spirit engenders, which makes such collections possible and the contributions so liberal.

To all The Times wishes a merry Christmas and a truly happy and prosperous New year.

CANADA'S GREAT FOREIGN TRADE

The growth of the foreign commerce of Canada in recent years has been one of the most remarkable features of that rapidly developing land. Between 1896 and 1903, the combined exports and imports increased from 239 millions to 466 millions, or 95 per cent. In that same way the United States showed an increase of only 32 per cent. That this rapid growth is still continuing is shown by the figures just published for the five months July to November, during which the gain over the corresponding five months of 1902 was more than 12 per cent.

How huge Canada's foreign commerce is appears more clearly still when we take into comparison the size of the population. In 1903 this trade amounted to about $86 for each Canadian, while in the United States the corresponding figure was only $30 per capita.

Still more striking is a comparison with Mexico, which has more than twice the population of Canada and less than half the foreign trade. The figure is about $14 per capita. But even this includes huge exports in silver, and in addition counts all merchandise exports at their silver value. Leaving out the precious metals, and estimating the remaining trade in gold values, the Mexican foreign trade amounts to something less than $6 per capita.

THE BOER AND PROGRESS

Of course the Boers are not yet happy, but there can be no doubt that their defeat was a good thing for what is called progress. For instance, at the close of the year 1902 there were completed and in operation in South Africa no less than 2,818 miles of railroad, representing an investment of more than $135,000,000. During this year work has been done on twenty-seven new lines, having a total mileage of 1,282, so that before the end of 1904, there are likely to be in operation nearly, or quite twice as many miles of railroad in South Africa as were in use one year ago. But this is far from being the whole story. Thirty-three other projects are now under consideration, with a total mileage of 4,857, making the great aggregate of 8,065 miles of line building or projected. Within a comparatively brief period the railroad systems of South Africa will have been extended from 2,600 miles, which was about the total at the end of the war with the Boers, to nearly 10,000 miles.

The Boers will ride on the new railroads and use them in their business, but they will feel that they could have got along without them.

Making of a Newspaper.

"The Romance of The Daily Mail" (the famous London newspaper), was the subject of a lecture given at St. James' Hall, London, on November 12. Mr. J. C. Foulger, the lecturer, showed, with the aid of lantern views, the inception, publication, rise and progress of The Daily Mail. The chief aim of its founder, he said, was a paper that should be compact and concise, and should yet give the important news of the whole world. He had hoped to reach a daily circulation of 100,000 copies in the course of twelve months, but on the first day of publication—May 4, 1896—397,215 copies were sold. On the occasion of the death of Queen Victoria the record sale of 1,404,000 copies of a single issue was reached. Mr. Foulger went on to state that The Daily Mail costs £1,000 a day to produce, that the bill for paper alone is £150,000 a year, and that the printing machines swallow up 252 miles of paper (or fifty-five tons) every day. In a single year the sum of £20,067 was paid to one telegraphic cable company for the mere transmission of messages bringing news from distant parts of the earth. The staff of editors, sub-editors, reporters, leader-writers, printers, and others totalled 600 persons, all engaged daily on the production of the paper. Among the information exclusively secured by The Daily Mail the lecturer mentioned the reporting of the terrible Drummond Castle disaster, the interview with Lord Rosebery on his resignation, and the first announcement to the world of the conclusion of peace in South Africa.

Their Leader Beaten.

British papers of Nov. 12 contain the summary of a publication issued by the German general staff on experiences in non-European wars in recent times. It expresses the opinion that General Buller's failure at Colenso was due to bad leadership. . . . "His mind did not prove elastic enough to take account of the change in the situation; he thrust General Clery aside and tried to interfere and put matters right himself. At a rapid pace he hastened to the batteries, which were still firing, although shortly afterwards they had to cease their fire owing to lack of ammunition. Confidence in himself and anything like calm reflection had vanished. He is now no longer the commander, but only one of the combatants; no longer the General, but only the officer in charge of a battery. Personally a brave man, he physically succumbs to the impressions of the battlefield. His whole procedure is governed solely by the thought that he must not let the guns fall into the hands of the enemy. . . . When at last he himself is hit, when physical fatigue on this day of burning heat begins to tell upon him, when bad news arrives from other parts of the field, his energy flags. He gives way because he does not think that he can now find any issue out of the difficulty; he determines to break off the battle begun upon entirely different assumptions, and he gives the order to retire. The brave troops were not beaten, but only their leader."

The work characterises Lord Methuen's leadership at Magersfontein as dogged. It showed, it is added, that he held persistently to the old notions about frontal attacks, but he proved himself a thoughtful leader, who was prepared for battle and was not disheartened by minor failures. He rightly decided to continue the fight after the repulse of the Highlanders, but his methods of execution were faulty. It is maintained that the English frontal attacks both at Colenso and Magersfontein might have succeeded if the leaders had not felt that they were physically defeated.

The moral drawn is that every new war opens with surprises, rendering a change in offensive methods necessary. Under European conditions frontal attacks are still feasible and to be reckoned with.

They were uttering the tender nonsense that succeeds the great question.

"And," said the girl, bravely, "if poverty comes, we will face it together."

"Ah, dearest," he replied, "the mere sight of your face would scare the wolf away."

And ever since he has wondered why she returned the ring.

CHRISTMAS GAMES.

Various Ways in Which Young Folks May Enjoy the Famous Holiday.

THE happiness of children can be greatly promoted on Christmas by the introduction of games. Perhaps the Christmas presents may include enough of these to fully occupy the attention of the little folks. If not, some of the following may answer:

Coasting. — For outdoor sport nothing surpasses coasting in the estimation of young people. The game of "coasting" consists simply in seeing which boy can drive his sled farthest from the starting point at the top of a convenient hill. A running start is allowed. The hill should have a level stretch at the bottom, and the course should be as smooth as possible.

Bubble Blowing.—This game requires a long, narrow table, which may be simply a board five feet long and eighteen inches wide. The board must be covered with woollen cloth; an old shawl will do. Two stakes, twelve inches high and eight inches apart, must be set up one foot from the end of the board. Bubble blowing can be played by any number of children, and they may divide into two equal parties. Each player is armed with a pipe, and a bowl of soapsuds is placed handy. Each player in turn blows a bubble, tosses it on the table, and tries to blow it between the stakes at the other end. Three trials are allowed each player. Bubbles that break before the bowler has started them do not count. When a bubble is sent through the goal the player scores one. For single players the game is three, but it may be increased to any number desired. Generally the score is three times the number of players.

Comic Historical Tableaux. — The company must divide into two parties. One party decides what event in history they will represent, and then forms a tableau to illustrate the event, making it as ridiculous as possible. The other party must try to guess what the tableau is. If they fail, they take their turn in producing a tableau.

Blind Man's Buff.—This favorite old game needs no description. But it may be varied for a Christmas evening. The person blinded is designated as "Santa Claus." A small sack, stuffed with cotton, wool or paper, is provided. One of the players strikes "Santa Claus" with this saying: "Santa Claus can't find his sack." Santa Claus pursues, and the sack is passed from hand to hand, each player in turn striking Santa and repeating the phrase. The object is for Santa to grab the sack or bag, when the player who holds it becomes Santa Claus in turn.

The Fairy Hunt.—This game is much the same as hunt the slipper. Various articles, such as nuts, candy, fruit, toys, or other suitable gifts, are wrapped in tissue paper and hidden in all parts of the house. The game is one that all children will delight in, and, introduced at a Christmas party, will cause no end of merriment.

British Subject, Expell from Cripple Creek, Complains to Consul

Denver, Col., Dec. 23—James A. Baker of Slocan, B.C., a member of the executive committee of the Western Federation of Miners, who went to Cripple Creek last week for the expressed purpose of establishing a cooperative store for the benefit of the strikers, was arrested by the military and after being detained ten hours at headquarters, was released on his promise to leave the district. He came to Denver and today laid the matter before H. V. Pearce, the British Consul, who promised to transmit his complaint to the British Government.

Federation is Proposed

Rome, December 24—The idea of a Catholic Federation in the United States has again been ventilated, especially after the Most Reverend Sebastian Messmer was appointed Archbishop of Milwaukee, when attempts were made to see how the movement would be received at the Vatican and by the Propaganda. Opinions here are much divided. The supporters of the movement think they have Cardinal Martinelli, former papal delegate in the United States, on their side.

Cold in the Head

What's the sense in sneezing and Sniffling, dosing with purgatives or bothering with atomizers?

Catarrhozone

A convenient inhaler treatment is the proper remedy to cure quickly and pleasantly

Sensible people long ago abandoned the idea of "working off" a cold by means of laxatives and purgatives for the single reason that the cure is as bad as the disease itself.

To cure a cold in about ten minutes' time use Catarrhozone. It is aromatic delightful to inhale, clean and very simple to use.

Catarrhozone is a vegetable antiseptic and perfectly safe and harmless. Even children and infants can use it. The vapor is inhaled at the mouth, and after passing through the respiratory organs is exhaled slowly through the nostrils.

Catarrhozone never disappoints, it stops sneezing, coughing and running at the eyes, by a few inhalations. Inflammation, congestion and all irritation disappear under the influence of Catarrhozone more quickly than can be told.

C. B. College, of Clarence Street, London, says: "I had a continuous cold in the head for years, and never used anything with such quick results as I derived from five minutes' use of Catarrhozone. I am delighted to find a remedy that cures colds in a few minutes. Catarrhozone cures every time."

To carry a Catarrhozone Inhaler in the pocket means you won't have colds, catarrh or any lung trouble. It keeps these diseases away and is warranted to protect you against all the ills of winter. Complete outfit, with Hard Rubber Pocket Inhaler costs $1.00. Small size, 25 cents. Druggists or N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

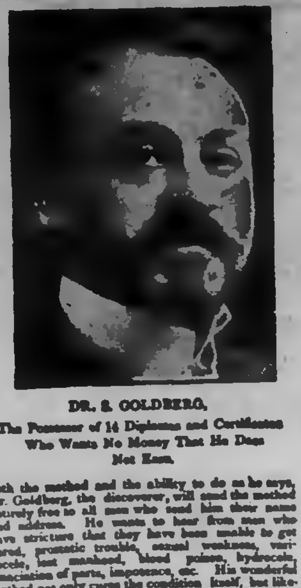
Detroit Specialist Discovers Something Entirely New for the Cure of Men's Diseases in Their Own Homes.

You Pay Only if Cured

Expects No Money Unless He Cures You—Method and Full Particulars Sent Free —Write For It This Very Day

A Detroit specialist who has 14 certificates and diplomas from medical colleges and boards, has perfected a startling method of curing the diseases of men in their own homes; so that there may be no doubt in the mind of any man that he has



DR. S. GOLDBERG,
The Possessor of 14 Diplomas and Certificates Who Wants No Money That He Does Not Earn.

both the method and the ability to do as he says, Dr. Goldberg, the discoverer, will send the method entirely free to all men who send him their name and address. He wants to hear from men who have stricture that they have been unable to get cured, prostatic trouble, sexual weakness, varicocele, lost manhood, blood poison, hydrocele, emaciation of parts, impotence, etc. His wonderful method not only cures the condition itself, but likewise all the complications, such as rheumatism, bladder or kidney trouble, heart disease, nervous debility, etc.

The doctor realizes that it is one thing to make claims and another thing to back them up, so he has made it a rule not to ask for money unless he cures you, and when you are cured he feels sure that you will willingly pay him a small fee. It would seem, therefore, that it is to the best interests of every man who suffers in this way to write the doctor confidentially and lay your case before him. He sends the method, as well as many booklets on the subject, including the one that contains the 14 diplomas and certificates, entirely free. Address him simply

Dry Placer Miner, formerly of California.

This company has the right, without royalty payments, to use the new patent machine upon all the land it may own, acquire by lease, or operate, in Arizona. W invite special attention to the great commercial value and profit of this machine, and what can be accomplished by it.

What This Machine Will Do.

For the first time in the history of gold mining a machine has been invented which will handle the dry placer gold gravel without water, and in large quantities. This machine will save 98 per cent of all the gold in the gravel, and will do it at a lower working cost than by any existing process. It is operated by a small, compact engine, using crude oil as fuel. A complete plant, capable of handling 200 tons per day will weigh less than 1,200 pounds.

To secure this gold only those placer lands could be worked, which could command large supplies of water, hence the immense bodies of dry placer lands remote from water have never been worked.

Fifteen Hundred Millions in Gold

The United States has yielded nineteen hundred millions in gold, of which fifteen hundred millions—or more than 75 per cent—were the product of its placers.

Ninety per cent. of the world's total gold supply has been taken from placers by processes which have admittedly lost the bulk of the values.

Simplicity of Machine—Its Method of Operation

The machine is so extremely simple in construction and operation that any intending investor can operate it instantly. He can take a peck or more of sand, either ordinary house of sea sand, or such as is found in the placer lands of Arizona and California, put into this sand ten or a hundred pieces of gold as small as the point of a toothpick, and from that to the head of an ordinary pin, mix the sand and the gold thoroughly, turn them into the hopper or feed of the machine, and in a few seconds the machine will separate the gold from the gravel and recover from 98 to 100 per cent of the gold. It is an absolute, infallible, ocular demonstration of the merits of the machine. It has solved the problem of handling sand or gravel containing gold in regions remote from water.

Cost of Handling Material

Each plant is portable, weighs less than 1,200 pounds and can be easily moved by a few laborers.

The two greatest authorities in the world on the moving of material are "Haswell" and "Trautwine." They say in their standard publications that a laborer can shovel horizontally, 12 feet, vertically 6 feet for 50 feet haul 17 cubic yards in 10 hours.

A well known engineer in his work for the U. S. Government at Sandy Hook, moved 18 cubic yards, 100 feet haul in 10 hours at a cost of 10 cents per cubic yard, paying laborers $1.75 per day.

The dry placer gold-bearing sands of California, Arizona and New Mexico are handled quite as easily as those of Sandy Hook.

Ten laborers can easily supply one machine with 204 cubic yards of gravel in 12 hours, working at the same speed as shown by Haswell, Trautwine or at Sandy Hook.

Placer work on above basis would cost about 11 1-2c. per cubic yard.

Do You Want Monthly Dividends?

We make a special offer of a limited number of shares of stock at this time, because the company requires immediately sufficient to build several machines to operate in the field.

Every machine at work will increase the intrinsic value of the stock.

Twenty machines in the field will increase the price and value of the stock more than double the present offering, and every additional machine means a further increase in price and value.

The Company intends to divide its net earnings every month, so that the stockholders may count absolutely on receiving monthly dividends in proportion to monthly earnings.

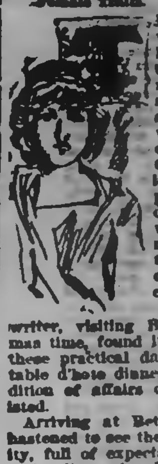
CHRISTMAS IN JUDEA.

OBSERVANCES AT THE SACRED SEPULCHRE.

Curious Scenes About the Place of Nativity—The Stable a Grotto—Religious Observances—The People of Bethlehem—Female Traits.



THE poet Lamartine, writing of the Holy Land in his "Meditations" sixty odd years ago, tells of buying an arsenal of pistols, sabres and other weapons to arm his company against the Greek pirates who infested the Archipelago Sea and of divers other dangers which made the journey to the scene of the nativity and life of Christ adventurous and lively.

A recent French writer, visiting Bethlehem at Christmas time, found it hard to believe, in these practical days of railroads and table d'hote dinners, that such a condition of affairs could ever have existed.

Arriving at Bethlehem, he says, I hastened to see the scenes of the nativity, full of expectation and yet ready to be disappointed, for that had been my lot so often in Palestine. The Mount of Olives, Golgotha, the Sacred Sepulchre, all were in my eyes spoiled for the want of that exquisite simplicity which had filled my childish visions. Everywhere the ardor of the faithful has shown itself in upsetting and improving things in a deplorable manner. So I asked myself with apprehension how I would find the stable where Mary brought her child into the world and laid him in the manger because there was no place for them at the inn.

Passing through the narrow and crooked street which cuts Bethlehem into two parts we finally reached the extremity of the burg and found ourselves in an oblong square, which in its turn opened into an esplanade paved with stone, here and there showing openings into cisterns which served for baptisms and for ablutions among former generations of Christians. In those days it was the usage to wash before entering the sanctuary.

A curious scene is here on the very border of the place of the nativity. On one side a burial ground with white tombs; on two other sides rows of bare, high walls, like a fortress or a prison. Here and there windows pierce the walls, but no doors. One looks about him mystified, but finally discovers a black hole in and out of which people are passing almost on all fours, so low is it. This is the chief entry to the sanctuary of the nativity. Having passed through this hole one finds himself in a large hall divided by four colonnades and surmounted by a roof flanked by heavy beams. People stand about talking and smoking, children play, Turkish soldiers sew up their uniforms, women give suck to their infants, fakirs offer oranges, beads and candles for sale, while Greek and Franciscan monks hurry about as if on business of pressing importance. Formerly, I am told, the Arabs used to stable their sheep here.

But this is not the stable where Jesus was born, and one is some time in discovering it. On the left two Turkish soldiers with rifles are stretched lazily on a bench. One is asleep, the other yawns. They are evidently not there from personal preference. In front of them a circular stairway goes down to a door which seems to indicate a crypt. The door passed, one continues the descent by a narrow staircase until he comes to two other Turkish soldiers, this time standing up, with guns on the floor, and on the left, lighted by hanging lamps, is the following inscription: "Hic de Virgine Maria, Jesus Christus, natus est" (Here Jesus Christ was born of the Virgin Mary). We are in the stable.

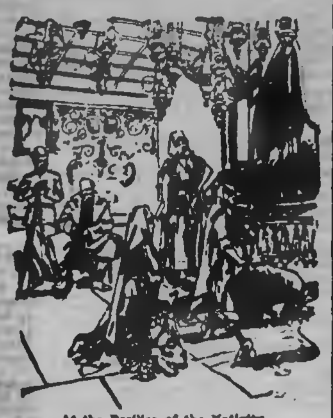
This discovery is much of a surprise, and one's first movement is for protestation, for the simple reason that nothing at all like a stable is apparent.

Esplanade in Front of the Basilica.

We are in a grotto. To this objection the reply is made that in olden times it was the custom in Palestine to use grottos for stables. Unfortunately, even this explanation seems unsatisfactory, so much has the appearance of the grotto been changed. The walls are covered with marble, and countless lamps hang down from a ceiling richly decorated with gold and purple hangings. The effect is that of a pretentious hallway in some Oriental museum. There is nothing which calls to mind the poverty in which Jesus was born, and the manger, which is seen at the right in a space supported with marble columns, is also made of marble. Finally one sees, also fashioned in marble and a little further to the right, a circular orifice marking the place where God caused a spring to burst forth when the holy family was sheltered in this refuge.

Of course Christmas is the great fete day at Bethlehem. On Christmas eve the French Consul comes from Jerusalem to Bethlehem to take part in the ceremonies of the great Christian night. The Turkish authorities place at his disposal a detachment of cavalry, and two officers with drawn sabres accompany him. Surrounded by his eight cawas on horseback in their striking Levantine costume of blue and gold, the Consul goes with the procession, which includes many pilgrims, through the holy place. About half way there, near the rock of Eli, mentioned above, the sheiks of Bethlehem and other rich people of the city wait for the Consul on horseback and accompany him to his destination, while the whole population turn out along the streets, the women and children along the terrace and at the windows, and welcome the visitors with cries and cheers. Upon the esplanade before the basilica the Turkish garrison stands at arms, while the music of the Catholic orphan asylum sounds the "Marseillaise," and then the cortege passes on to the Franciscan monastry, where the prelates of the Latin Church, the patriarch himself, who is the chief dignitary in Palestine, being present, receive the guests.

At night the Christmas service begins at 10 o'clock with a pontifical mass celebrated at the Franciscan Church near the basilica. The richest vestments are worn for this office, these having been presented in the name of the French Republic by Marechal MacMahon. This first ceremony is concluded about midnight, and then a long procession with candles in hand moves towards the grotto of the nativity. First comes the cross bearer, followed by Franciscan monks and members of other religious bodies. The patriarch comes last, and directly behind him, at the head of the laymen, walks the French Consul with his attendants. Only those who precede the patriarch carry candles, but that dignitary bears in his hand with infinite precaution a beautiful little child in wax, which, with sweet smile, seems almost on the point of crying out. The divine child rests in a manger on silken cushions, rose colored and embroidered with gold.



At the Basilica of the Nativity.

The cortege, having traversed the transcept of the basilica and descended into the grotto of the patriarch, stops in front of the spot where the child Jesus was born. The patriarch places the manger and child in the hands of one of his followers and begins to chant the story of the Nativity as told by St. Luke. Then the prelate takes the child again and placing it upon a silver star continues the service, with modifications of the sacred text appropriate to the occasion and the special surroundings. As the prelate says the words which tell how the Holy Mother brought into the world her first born son he takes the child again, wraps it in fine laces and chants:

"And here they wrapped it in clothes."

Then he walks to the marble manger and places in it the image of the new born child, at the same time chanting the words:

"And here they laid it in a manger because there was no place for them at the inn."

This service often lasts until 2 o'clock in the morning, and is finished by a "Te Deum" and "God Save the Republic." All Bethlehem watches this sight, and the people, men, women and children, remain until day breaks with lighted candles in their hands in the neighborhood of the basilica.

Bethlehem is of all the cities in the Orient or in Palestine the most Christian. In a population of a little more than 6,000 inhabitants there are hardly 100 Mohammedans. It is a fact not generally known that the Bethlehemites are lineal descendants of the crusaders. They prove it to you by long parchments in which their genealogy is traced out elaborately. Indeed, there is no need of such proof, for the Ayrian type is plainly seen in their features. Under their Oriental garb one is surprised to find yellow hair and blue eyes which in no way resemble the typical Arab or Syrian. These peculiarities are not found in Jerusalem, which city was too great to be absorbed by the crusaders, whereas the little burg of Bethlehem was entirely peopled by them and has remained the residing place of their descendants until the present day.

Not only are the people of Bethlehem unique in the matter of physical traits but they have the spirit of enterprise and activity of mind and economy which are not less rare in the East than are the blond hair and blue eyes. They devote themselves almost entirely to the fabrication of pious souvenirs, which are carried away in immense quantities by tourists and pilgrims.

It is literally true that in most of their domestic customs, such as marriages and funerals, the same practices are in use to-day as existed in biblical times. The woman of Bethlehem wears a costume which is most picturesque, a long garment without fastening at the waist colored in stripes of blue, red, yellow and green, and covered at the throat with fine embroidery under which are shown short brick-colored vests embroidered with arabesque figures in yellow. Her head dress is not less striking, being composed of a red colotte, spangled with pieces of silver, which, together with necklaces formed in the same way, make up her dowry. The woman of Bethlehem is also famous for her beauty, with regular and fine features, a skin where pink and white struggle for the mastery, and an expression at once demure and grave, which seems peculiarly appropriate for those fair descendants of the Blessed Virgin.

THE GREAT WORK GOING ON IN MUSKOKA.

1,000 Patients Treated in the Two Muskoka Hospitals—the Sanatorium and the Free Hospital for Consumptives.

Surprising Decrease of 25 Per Cent. in the Last Three Years in Deaths from Consumption.

Fifty-five Different Trades and Professions Represented by the Patients Admitted to the Free Hospital for Consumptives.

Two Pavilions have had to be Closed Owing to Lack of Funds, and the Number of Patients Reduced from 75 to 50.

$25,000 Wanted this Year to Carry on this Great Work.

With a view of helping to bring to the attention of the public the needs of the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives, we have pleasure in publishing the following letter, in which an appeal is made for funds.

Dear Friend,—

It again becomes necessary to make an urgent appeal for funds for the Free Hospital for Consumptives.

A very heavy debt is pressing upon the trustees.

In addition to this, funds must be provided for the maintenance of patients. Last month there was a deficiency of nearly $1,500 over and above receipts from all sources.

The Free Hospital for Consumptives was opened eighteen months ago. 225 patients have been admitted.

No patient has ever been refused admission because of his or her poverty.

1,000 patients have been cared for in the two Muskoka Hospitals, the Sanatorium and the Free Hospital for Consumptives.

The majority of these have either been cured, or so helped that they have been enabled to again become bread-winners for the family.

The public are beginning to find evidence of our work.

Already there has been a decrease of nearly 25 per cent. in the death-rate from consumption in the Province of Ontario.

The last report of the Secretary of the Provincial Board of Health shows that in the last three years the deaths from consumption in Ontario have decreased from 3,481 to 2,694, a decrease of 790, or nearly 25 per cent.

This is the more gratifying when we remember that for a number of years previously the same report showed a steadily increasing death-rate prior to 1899.

Who will doubt that the work of our two Hospitals in Muskoka, and the persistent educational campaign carried on, has not helped to secure this surprising result?

In what better way can your gifts bring so good a return?

We have no endowment, excepting the provision recently made by Canada Life, Confederation Life, and North American Life Insurance Companies for maintenance of 2 beds each for a year.

We can only rely on the philanthropy of our people and a knowledge of our needs.

Last year we asked $20,000 to reduce the debt and to pay for care of patients. We had a generous response, receiving $10,000, gifts coming from Halifax on the east and Yukon on the west. This year our needs are greater than ever. We will require $25,000.

The Bishop of Selkirk, Caribou Crossing, Yukon, sending $10.00, writes: "The trifling remittance I send is intended to express our sympathy for the sufferers in other parts, rather than to imply a special need for your institution here."

We are grateful for the large gift. We are grateful for the small gift; all gifts are helpful.

On account of our pressing needs, will you not make this your special charity?

During the year, for lack of funds, we had to close several pavilions, reducing the number of patients from 75 to 50.

The sorrowful part of our work is that nearly all of those in the Free Hospital are young men or women who were striving to make a place for themselves in the world. Many of them have wife, or child or husband anxiously watching the struggle for life.

Your gift will help to bring gladness to so many. Will you have the joy of giving?

Very truly yours,

W. J. Gage

Toronto, December 10, 1903.

Sir Wm. R. Meredith, Kt., or Mr. W. J. Gage, Toronto, will receive and acknowledge any contributions made.

YE ANCIENT CHRYSTEMAS.

It was an ancient harper man,
And he sang of Christmas time,
In the good old days of the knightly age,
And he sang in uncouth rhyme:

"Oh, a goodlie Knighte was bold Sir Rude,
And he lived in a lordlie halle;
And greate was his bountie to alle goodl souls,
For he fed both greate and smalle.

"Ye hinde he ploughed the valley land,
And he toiled both earlie and late;
For ye good Knight took one-half his store
To feed the poor at his gate.

"Ye shepherde, he kept his flocks on the hill,
But no lambe or mutton ate he;
For ye good Knighte spoiled what the gaunt wolf left
To give it in charitie.

"Ye merchant rode forth with well-filled purse,
But he came home stripped and leane;
For ye good Knighte met him along the roade,
And his hand was heavy, I ween.

"Ye outcaste Jew had stores of gold,
And he hid it most secretlie;
But ye torture chamber opened his lips
To tell where the gold might be.

"Oh, a goodlie Knighte was bold Sir Rude,
And he kept the Chrystemas tide;
Whoever might come to the open feaste,
Departed well satisfied.

"There was ale, and wine and meats galore,
And much Chrystemas jollitie;
But ye hinde, ye shepherde, ye merchant and Jew,
Came not to the Chrystemas tree."

Ye harper man hath gone to his rest,
Ye good Knighte likewise he;
And the good old days have long gone by
With their deeds of charitie.
—G. H. Benedict.

Christmas Mistletoe.

Christmas in America in 1621.

The chronicles of the Pilgrims, describing their arrival in Cape Cod Bay, in December, 1620, refer briefly to the first Christmas spent by them in America; and what was done in Plymouth village the next Christmas is described in the quaint language of Governor Bradford:

"On ye day called Christmas-day, ye Govr. call'd them out to worke (as was used), but ye most of this new company excused themselves and said it went against their consciences to work on ye day. So ye Govr. told them that if they made it matter of conscience, he would spare them till they were better informed. So he led away ye rest and left them, but when they came home at noon from their worke, he found them in ye streets at play, openly, some pitching ye barr, and some at stoole-ball, and such like sports. So he went to them and took away their implements and told them that was against his conscience, that they should play and others worke. If they made ye keeping of it mater of devotion, let them kepe their houses, but there should be no gaming or revelling in ye streets."

CHRISTMAS SMILES.

"Now I am in holiday humor."—Shakespeare.

Everybody should be forgiving at Christmas.

The worst thing about mince pie is the nightmare afterwards.

It was an experienced child that said: "Give me something useless next Christmas, auntie."

There is one consolation in footing the Christmas bills—there is no Easter bonnet to pay for.

"This is the worst give-away I ever suffered," as the young man said when he sent his sweetheart a present of jewelry.

"Do you know, how I'd like to keep Christmas, mamma?" "No, my boy." "Why, I'd like to keep it the year round."

"I think," remarked the poet, "that a smile is peculiarly appropriate to such a cheerful festival as Christmas." "I agree with you," said the local editor. "Let's go out and smile."

Immense Rush a Post Office

Probably never before have the postal officials, the express companies, and the customs department been so rushed as they are at the present moment. The outgoing mails in every direction are among the heaviest on record, while the incoming mails are keeping the clerks busy. The express matter, both inward and outward, is blocking up the offices, while the delivery vans are working after hours to catch up. The railways have put on extra mail and express cars in order to cope with the traffic.

THE BEAUTIFUL TALE.

When the still earth is wrapped in the Christmas-time snow,
My thoughts wander back to the long, long ago,
When I was a wee, wonder eyed child,
And all life to me was a beautiful wild
Of sunshine and daisy fields, snow or no snow—
No matter how cold might the winter winds blow.

I used to climb up on my grandfather's knee,
And look in his eyes, just as grave as could be,
And ask him to tell me the wonderful tale
Of the Shepherds asleep in the Bethlehem vale,
And the star of the East, as it burst on their sight,
And dazzled their eyes with its marvellous light.

How it led them along o'er the Nazarene hills,
By the white sleeping flocks and the low singing rills,
To the dear little Baby asleep on the hay
In the manger—and, up to this worldly-wise day,

I think it the sweetest tale ever was told!
I still to its beauty and tenderness hold!

And, even to-night, were my grandfather here,
I'd creep to his breast, and look into his dear
Old credulous eyes, and say, "Tell me the tale
Of the Shepherds asleep in the Bethlehem vale,"
And once more a child, I'd look out through the snow
On the daisy-field meadows of long, long ago.
—Belle Hunt.

CHRISTMAS DON'T.

Don't forget the poor.

Don't make the Christmas feast the cause of a doctor's visit.

Don't present your husband, brother or lover with a box of cigars.

Don't make rich gifts when simple ones will answer the purpose.

Don't forget that it is wrong to send costly gifts which may invite an expensive return from those unable to afford it.

Don't set punch or wine on your table. Christmas is particularly a children's holiday, and their appetites should not be tempted with alcoholic drinks.

FOR A BACHELOR.

"A Christmas gift for a bachelor bold,
One not too young and not too old,
What would you give?" I asked sweet May.
She blushed and pouted—the charming elf—
"I'd give—I'd give—I hardly dare say;—
But if you won't tell
I'll confess that—well,
Were he rich and handsome, I'd give him—myself."

TO THE AFFLICTED.

Dear Reader,—Are you a sufferer from any of the following ills: Lack of ambition, nervous exhaustion, [illegible] confused, irritability of temper, impairment of memory, despondency, general debility, liver not right, kidneys out of order, rheumatism, dyspepsia or indigestion, dizzy or fainting spells? Scarecrows.

The term is almost a misnomer, nowadays. For the "century-living crow" has been schooled by experience. The scarecrow doesn't scare him. Investigating ornithologists say that he can tell a gun from a stick and can count up to seven. Evidently the crow has progressed from the ignorance of his ancestry.

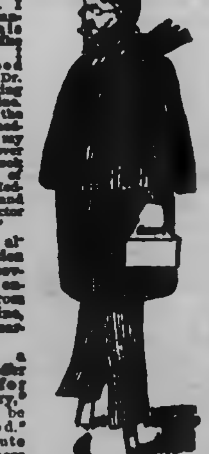
The crow is in some things in advance of the human family. There are scarecrows which scared our grandfathers, and which are just as fearsome to us. In spite of the fact that some scientific investigators say, "There's nothing to be afraid of. A scarecrow can't hurt you," the bulk of men and women still believe the scarecrow is a powerful and destroying fetish. This attitude is most marked in relation to certain forms of disease. In diseases of the lungs and respiratory organs, for instance, it is the custom to assume that there is no cure for the cough, no help for the hemorrhage, no healing for the lungs. The scarecrow, Consumption, is set up, often taking the form of some inexperienced and unskillful practitioner who denies hope or help to the victim of disease.

Yet the records go to show that stubborn coughs have been cured, that persistent hemorrhages have been stopped, and that weak lungs have been made strong by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

TESTIMONY TALKS.

All the claims in the world for the curative virtues of a medicine will not equal one testimony to the actual fact of cure. Thousands of testimonials like the following have been received from persons cured of lung "troubles," bronchitis, hemorrhage, obstinate coughs, etc., by "Golden Medical Discovery:"

"I was very sick indeed," writes Mrs. Mollie [illegible], of Felton, Kent Co., Delaware, "and my family doctor said I had consumption. I thought I must die soon, for I felt so awfully bad. Had a bad cough, spit blood, was very short of breath; in fact, could hardly get my breath at all sometimes. I had pains in my left and right lung, also had dyspepsia. Before I took your 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pleasant Pellets' I was so weak I could not sweep a room, and now I can do a small washing. I worked in the canning factory this fall, and I feel like a new person. I thank the good Lord, and also Dr. Pierce for making this good medicine. I believe that the Lord and your medicine have saved my life. I was sick over two years. I took thirteen bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and four vials of Doctor Pierce's Pellets."



"There is no alcohol in "Golden Medical Discovery" and it is entirely free from opium, cocaine, and all other narcotics.

Sometimes a dealer will offer a substitute for the "Discovery," claiming it to be "just as good." The substitute pays him more profit, that's why. Protect yourself from unscrupulous dealers by insisting on Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

Equitable Gold Mining Co.

R. C. LANE, President. F. F. NORTON, Secretary and Treasurer.

Over $300,000 of development work already done. Main shaft 9 x 16 feet, down 700 feet. Over 3,000 feet of drifts, tunels and shafts showing immense ore body

Destined to become large and continuous dividend payer.

The Equitable Gold Mining Co.'s properties consist of three mines, known as the North Bonanza, Flowery and Kimbark. They are located in Six Mile Canon, less than four miles from Virginia City, Nevada, which is the nearest railroad station.

Years ago, over three hundred thousand dollars of development work was done upon the mines—so they are not mere "prospects" but actual mines. This work was done under the personal supervision of competent engineers, and was paid for by the owners of the mines themselves; thus giving double assurance that the work was well done and that the expenditure was justified.

The Main Shaft (triple compartment, 9x16 feet in the clear) is down seven hundred feet. From this shaft, running along the vein matter, east and west, are four drifts, at different levels, having a combined length (including the Rule winze and the tunnel) of 2,850 feet.

In addition to the above there are four small shafts, with a combined depth of about 300 feet; 585 feet of tunnels, and at least 500 feet of cross-cuts, upraises, etc.

All told, there is 4,650 feet of underground work—the most of which is in ore. Here is nearly one mile of openings in mineralized rock.

It is conservatively estimated by competent and reliable engineers and practical miners that there is developed an ore body of at least One Million Five Hundred Thousand Tons!

As a further evidence of the large amount of work done there is from 75,000 to 100,000 tons of ore on the dumps at the different surface openings—ore that, with modern cheapened processes, can be converted into gold bullion at a profit.

THE TITLE

Title to the Flowery and North Bonanza mines is by patent from the United States government, while the title of the Kimbark is by location and possession.

The Equitable Company obtained the Flowery and North Bonanza mines, both of which are patented, by purchase—the payments therefore to be made out of a share of the net proceeds of the mines. The Company has a written contract, duly recorded, for a deed, and is in possession of the properties, and is now operating them. The sum of $2,000 was paid on the contract, September 30th, 1902, and partial payments have since been made. The Company is entitled to $6.25 per ton as cost of mining and milling. One-half of all over and above this $6.25 per ton goes to the former owners till they receive the total sum of $105,000, without interest. There is no stipulation as to amount of work to be done within any specified time—and no proceeds, no pay. The Company can therefore pay it in one year or it can pay it in ten years. With this exception the Company is free from debt. Its policy is to pay as it goes. In this way it has no fear of financial embarrassments. The title to the Kimbark is by "location," under the mining laws of the United States. Work enough has already been done to entitle the Company to a patent, which in due time will be obtained.

Recent Development Work

Since the Company acquired the property, it has put up poles and wires for a distance of one mile for the transmission of electric power from the Truckee River Electric Power Plant. By this means unlimited power for mining, hoisting and milling is obtained.

It has built a dwelling house for the manager, a large boarding house for the miners, a barn, a power house and blacksmith shop.

It has put an electric hoist and skip into the 265-tunnell; has purchased ore cars and the necessary tools for mining purposes.

It has acquired the Kimbark ground, adjoining the Flowery and North Bonanza mines, and is now developing the property by driving a tunnel.

Within the last few months the Company has mined and milled over 800 tons of ore—realizing therefrom about $10,000 worth of gold bullion. The out-put is constantly increasing and all the Company needs is more mill capacity to handle its ore.

Storm King Group of Mines

TO CANADIAN INVESTORS

The property comprising what is known as the STORM KING GROUP OF MINES offers an attractive and safe investment. The property is the richest in the country and we believe it would be difficult to secure an investment that promises better returns. The following is a description of the mines written by Capt. A. M. Paul, whose reputation as an expert in mining matters is known far and near.

These properties are situated in the Cable Cove Mining District, about fifteen miles north of Sumpter, Oregon, and about one mile northwest of the Baisy McKee mine, about two miles northwest of the Last Chance, the Alpine, the Imperial and the California mines.

The properties in this report consist of seven claims. The names of the seven claims being as follows: The Eureka and the Honest Dollar. These two claims are on the same vein. Adjoining these two claims and paralleling them on the northwest is another vein upon which there are two claims known as the Jessie and Golden Rule, and paralleling them on the northwest there is another vein upon which there are two claims, known as the Storm King and the Ozone. The last claim of this group lies to the northwest of the last two named, and is adjoining them. This claim is the Shannon Bell.

In making my report I will commence with the two first named claims of the group, the Eureka and Honest Dollar. The development on these claims consists of a tunnel ninety-seven feet in length, running along the course of the vein, showing two feet ten inches of ore in the top of the tunnel and a little over three feet in the bottom, which assays giving values of from $9.06 to $30 per ton in gold. About four hundred feet in a southwesterly direction there is a shaft on the vein ten feet deep, showing the vein to be from one to two inches wide on the surface and about twelve inches wide in the bottom of the shaft, in which assays give values of from $3.76 to $40 per ton in free milling gold ore.

This vein is exposed by small shafts and open cuts for a distance of fifteen hundred feet, and the course of this vein is north, ten degrees east, and the vein cuts the formation, showing it to be a true fissure, and the formation is granite. This vein shows in places a width of from ten to fifteen feet of mineralized matter, commonly called vein matter, but which is caused by hot solutions from below.

I will now pass to the Jessie and Golden Rule. There has been very little work done upon these two claims, there being one discovery shaft ten feet deep, showing ore on all sides of the shaft, and running in value of from $4 upwards. It is my opinion that with development, this, too, will prove valuable property.

The work on the Storm King and Ozone consists of a tunnel from the point of discovery and is driven along the vein for a distance of one hundred and eighty feet, showing ore all the way from the surface to the face of the tunnel, and averaging in width from six to eighteen inches. Three assays give the following values, $12.50. This being a general sample taken from the dump. The other two assays are $63.64 and $73.06 respectively, this being the assorted ore for shipment. The course of this tunnel and vein are north, ten degrees west, and the vein cuts the trend of the formation obliquely (which is granite) and by driving this tunnel five or six hundred feet on the present course it will intersect a quartzite reef (which is running north, twenty degrees east) which would make this a contact vein between granite and quartzite, and should produce a large body of ore, at the intersection of the contact.

The only work done upon the Shannon Bell, the last claim of this group is the location work, and is not enough to allow of a report being made.

There is water for power purposes one mile from the property, and timber on the ground, of a very fine quality, sufficient to run the mines for many years to come.

All the assays mentioned in this report were made by the assayer, of the Imperial mine at my request, and the ore was taken by me from the properties mentioned.

I will state that I have been a practical miner since 1870, and am now the manager and superintendent of the Imperial mine in this district,

(Signed) CAPTAIN A. M. PAUL.

Roosevelt and the Senate.

President Roosevelt called an extra session of Congress for the purpose of passing the Cuban reciprocity bill, an act demanded by "national honor," etc. The House passed the bill, but the Senate decided not to take final action until December 16, by which date the regular session should be well under way. To the appeals of the Speaker, the President and the criticisms of the Congressmen the Senators turned deaf ears. They proposed to adjourn on Wednesday last until it was time for the regular session of Congress to commence, but the House balked that plan, and adjournment was made until yesterday only. All sorts of plans are being matured to "bring the Senators to time," one being to adjourn for three days at a time and still calling it an extra "session," until the Senators surrender, but it looks as though they will have their own way. The Washington correspondent of The New York Times several days before the adjournment of Wednesday sent to his paper the following story of the situation, which loses nothing of its interest, because it was much in the nature of a prediction. So far the prediction has been fulfilled to the letter:—

The "true inwardness" of the three-cornered controversy between the President, the Senate and the House over the question of adjournment next Wednesday has been that some of the Senators desired to put the President "in a hole," that the Speaker desired to protect him from the experience, and that the President has recognised the futility of opposing the wishes of the Senate, and has yielded. The President called an extra session of Congress to pass the Cuban reciprocity bill. The House passed it. The Senate decided not to pass it until the regular session. The Speaker opposed this on the ground that it would convey to the country the impression that there never had been any reason for an extra session, and that the President had acted rashly and without sufficient consideration in calling one. That is just the impression which those responsible for the adjournment programme wished to convey. There has been a feeling among many Senators and Representatives that the call for one was a case of unnecessary "strenuosity," and that the bill could just as well have been passed in a regular session. This feeling has not been so widely diffused in the country at large as some Senators would like to have it.

The present programme is to have the extra session adjourn sine die on Wednesday. Then the bill is to be voted upon and passed in the Senate on December 17 (December 16 was the date decided upon), ten days after the regular session opens. In this way the gentlemen originally responsible for the adjournment will, they hope, have made another demonstration of Mr. Roosevelt's tendency to perform official acts out of mere desire to be "always doing something," as Senator Gorman puts it. The plan originated with the Democratic Senators, and the Republican Senators are about to avow that they had no hand in it, and would have liked to remain in session until the bill was passed, if the Democrats had only permitted them to do so. Nobody can produce absolute proof that this is not true, but the fact that the Republican side is fairly honeycombed with Senators who enjoy nothing more than "teaching the President a lesson," as they put it, lends color to the belief that their instantaneous surrender to the Democratic demands was not very painful to them. It is, in fact, a united Senate which has carried through the adjournment programme. The Democratic ultimatum was simply that if Congress was kept in session, they, the Democrats, would talk up to the time of the adjournment, and that therefore the bill could not be passed at the extra session anyway; but that if an adjournment was taken they would offer no opposition to the taking of a vote early in the regular session. The Republican leaders promptly agreed, and all arrangements were being made accordingly when the Senate struck a snag in the quarter where one was least expected—the House.

Speaker Cannon flatly declared that Congress should not adjourn. The deferential submission of the House to the Senate in past years has been such that the Senators were astonished at the revolt, but found no way to overcome it. It was a perfectly plain proposition that the Senate could not terminate the session against the will of the House, and the plan to hold the President up to the country as an unduly strenuous person seemed in danger of collapsing. The Speaker took his stand purely as a defender of the President. He told the Senators that it was very nearly an insult to the President, when the latter had summoned Congress to transact certain business, to adjourn twelve days before the time for convening the regular session without making even an attempt to transact that business.

"The House," he said, "has done its part. The Senate should at least make an attempt to do its part."

Argument with the Speaker failed. He told the Senators that he would not permit the President to be so cavalierly treated, and that only by getting Mr. Roosevelt's consent to the plan could they change the attitude of the House. The result was a number of conferences, in which the President, the Speaker, and the Senate leaders participated. At first the President stood by the Speaker, but he gradually came to take the Senate view that there was no use in keeping Congress here when it was certain that nothing could be done. The President, having given up his opposition, the Speaker no longer had any reason for standing out, and the adjournment programme will be carried through. The only extra session called in President Roosevelt's Administration will adjourn without having enacted any legislation whatever, and the legislation which he recommended will come up in the regular session.

Walking Round the World.

M. Consigny, one of the enterprising fourteen competitors who set out from Paris in March, 1899, to walk round the world, has reached England with his trainers, according to papers of the week beginning November 15. The race was organized by the Touring Club de France, and the route laid down was to Marseilles, thence by steamer to Cape Town, and then to Spain, Morocco, Algiers, Tunis, Turkey, Russia, Germany, Austria, the Balkans, Italy, Switzerland, Belgium and England. M. Consigny is the first of the competitors to reach London, and the second man is reported to have proceeded only as far as Austria. M. Consigny now has to make his way to Liverpool, where he will embark for Philadelphia. From Philadelphia he walks to San Francisco, thence he goes to Buenos Ayres, finally shipping to Havre for the last stage to Paris. A prize of £1,160 awaits the winner of the race if he completes the course before the end of March, 1905.

REAL DANGER TO BRITISH EMPIRE

While Chamberlain Talks Taxes Sir Wilfrid Asks Treaty Making Power

London, Dec. 23.—World's Work in its last issue says: "While Mr. Chamberlain is busy assuring us that the Empire will go to pieces unless our wheat is taxed, a real danger which has lately sprung up is receiving little or no attention. It appears in Sir Wilfrid Laurier's demand for the treaty-making power. Here lies the real danger to the Empire, for it is obvious that if Canada is to make treaties with foreign countries independently of England, she must take the consequences also independent of England. It is not to be expected that Canadians generally will approve their Premier's demand, but the matter nevertheless is certainly one of great gravity."

Coroner and the Newspapers.

The death of Miss Hickman, the London lady doctor whose disappearance caused intense excitement in the metropolis, and whose body was found weeks afterwards in the undergrowth of Sidmouth plantation, part of the Duke of Cambridge's estate, was due to her own act, according to the verdict of the jury. At the inquest the Coroner summed up at great length. He quoted Dr. Gardiner's evidence to the effect that there could be no doubt death was not due to violence. That was the opinion of a man who knew what he was talking about, and it was supported by Professor Pepper. He mentioned this because of the many unauthorized statements which had been made that the death was due to crime. The Coroner also stated that the hospital officials and the police had given him every facility to investigate the case, and he could not, therefore, understand the assertions that Mr. Hickman had been obstructed. They were not dealing with fads or fancies or speculations. They had to deal with facts that had been sworn to. Having made up their minds as to the cause of death, were the jury satisfied that the poison was self-administered, and, if so, what was the state of deceased's mind?

The jury after a short deliberation returned a verdict that the deceased died from poisoning by morphine sulphate self-administered, while temporarily insane. They expressed deep sympathy with the family.

The coroner said that the vote of condolence was greatly deserved, as he personally knew of the many letters that had been sent to the bereaved family containing all kinds of suggestions. He also highly praised the conduct of the police, and said that certainly a special recommendation should be made on their behalf to the Commission of Police.

The evidence, such as the finding near the body of an empty bottle labelled poison, the purchase by Miss Hickman of the poison and so on, was particularly strong. Owing to the many wild theories and stories set afloat by people interested in the case, and fostered by newspapers of the more sensational class, there was a grim satisfaction in the fact that the jury was able to return such a verdict.

'Opes it Won't go Off.

Bankers of London are so alarmed by what seems to be the growing lawlessness of the age, says The City Press, that one of the largest banks has just decided to arm all its messengers with revolvers.

The messenger: "I only 'ope as this thing won't go off and 'urt nobody."

The London Star depicts "the new terror" in the manner shown in the accompanying illustration.

"IMPOSSIBLE, for you to enjoy the happiness of motherhood," says the doctor. Sometimes he qualifies the statement, and says: "Impossible without an operation." Yet both these "impossibles" have been made possible by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Many times the hindrances to motherhood are to be found in womanly diseases or weaknesses, which are perfectly and permanently cured by "Favorite Prescription."

This great medicine for women cures irregularity and dries debilitating drains. It heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

"I wish to add my testimony to hundreds of others as to the value of Dr. Pierce's medicines," writes Mrs. Ida M. De Ford, of Latona, Hubbard Co., Minn. "Have doctored with a great many physicians—some specialists; have twice been in a hospital for treatment. My case has been regarded as a hopeless one, and they knew not what the trouble was. Heart was bad; stomach all out of order; tired out; severe pains in all parts of the body; sinking spells, and nearly every ailment a woman could have. I took many a bottle of 'patent medicines' without effect. I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and ten months afterward I gave birth to a ten-pound boy. All physicians had stated as a fact that I never could bear a child. Both the baby and myself were strong, and I got along splendidly—thanks to your medicine."

CONSERVATIVES WIN NORTH RENFREW, DUNLOP ELECTED BY ABOUT 400

Returns are Incomplete But It is Conceded That Dunlop's Majority Over That of His Opponent, Mr. Hale will Be Close Unto 400

(SPECIAL TO THE TIMES)

Pembroke, Dec. 26.—The result of the bye-election in North Renfrew comes with a surprise to both Liberal and Conservative parties alike. That the successful candidate would win by a small margin was generally conceded, as both parties were working with might and main. The big guns have been in the riding for the past two weeks, and great interest was shown at the many meetings held in the different constituencies. Mr. R. R. Gamey appeared to be the leader for the Conservatives throughout the campaign, all eyes being centered upon him, chiefly owing to the famous charges made by him against the Government and the Provincial Secretary, Hon. J. R. Stratton, who also took a prominent part in the fight for the Government. For many miles around the people came, not as supporters of the Conservative party, but out of curiosity to see and hear the man from Manitoulin.

Following is the returns up to a late hour Saturday night. The returns came in slowly. The Town of Pembroke gave a Conservative majority of 104. In the last election, Munro (Liberal) had a majority of 61. Cobden Village last election gave a majority of 70 for the Conservative. This year it gives 35. Douglas gave a Liberal majority last year of 43. That has been cut to five now. Pembroke Township increased a Conservative majority from 34 to 60. Ledgerwood Schoolhouse increased a Conservative majority from 6 to 23. Beachburg gave 56 for Dunlop, but this is so large that the Conservatives can not bring themselves to credit it. Forester's Falls last election gave Munro a majority of 14; this year it goes Dunlop by a majority of 30.

The returns are not complete, but it is believed that Dunlop (Conservative) is elected by about 300.

Returns received by Bulletin by The Times:

The first returns received were from Cobden Village giving Hale 70, Dunlop 85, an increase for the Conservatives of 5, and from Ross Township, division 1, Hale 40, Dunlop 71, an increase of 10.

Ross Township, No. 2, Forester's Falls), gives Hale 74, Dunlop 127, Conservative gain of 67, reversing an adverse majority of 14.

Westmeath, No. 1 (Beachburg), gives Dunlop 56 majority, reversing a Liberal majority of 23, the vote standing Dunlop 163, Hale 107. It was in Beachburg that Gamey opened his part of the campaign.

Douglas Poll (Bromley, No. 2), gives Dunlop 106, Hale 111; last election, Munro (Lib.) 119, White, (Con.) 76, Conservative gain of 38.

Bromley Township shows Dunlop 62, Hale 127, a Conservative gain of 19.

Point Alexander, Rolph Division No. 1, gives Hale 31 majority, as against 32 last year.

Alice, No. 2, gives a majority for Dunlop of 40, as against a Munro majority of 9.

Pembroke Township gives Dunlop a majority of 60, a gain of 35.

The following comparison of the vote in North Renfrew at the election when Munro deceased defeated White, and at Saturday's by-election will be read with interest.

THE UNITED STATES IS NOW AT WAR?

The Panama Interference Being Resented

WARSHIPS UNDER STEAM.

A Leading American Newspaper Regards the Situation as Very Serious

New York, December 26—The conditions on the Isthmus of Panama are suchthat the Times is moved to ask if the United Colombia.' If they continue as at present the navy department has concluded to send reinforcements. For this purpose a new battalion of marines has assembled at Philadelphia, and Gen. Elliott has been given "a field command." Of the announcement already referred to in these columns that "the navy department deems it inadvisable longer to announce the plans of the department, with the freedom shown during the past few weeks." Teh Times says— "This must surely be war. In time of peace the Navy Department exercises no such caution. The public is freely and fully informed, purely as a matter of routine, of the orders given, and of the movements of the ships of war. During the Spanish war the plans and operations determined upon by the War Board were, of course, kept secret. But we were then avowedly at war. Are we now really at war without avowing it? "The expeditions of reconnoisance despatched by Admiral Coghlan to the coast of Colombia would bring on war very quickly if Colombia were of "our size." Absolutely the only right or duty we have upon the Isthmus under the treaty of 1846 is to protect the freedom of transit over the Panama Railroad and along the line of the proposed canal. We have no better right or authority to despatch warships to the distant Colombian coast and to send naval officers ashore to hunt for Colombian troops than we have to take similar measures upon the coast of France, England or Germany. The operations of Admiral Coghlan, under orders, of course, and the conferences and conclusion of the Secretary of the Navy and the Chief of the Bureau of Navigation give unexpected points and force to Senator Morgan's resolution declaring that the action of the President amounts to a declaration of war against Colombia. The President has no constitutional authority to make or declare war without the consent of Congress.

"Should the new treaty with Panama be ratified by the Senate, however, the position will be changed. Article 1 of that instrument declares: "The United States guarantees and will maintain the independence of the Republic of Panama." This is a much broader grant of authority. It implies the assumption of a far more serious obligation than there is warrant for in the old treaty with New Granada. The protection of transit over the Panama Railroad involves no necessity for distant expeditions to the Colombian coast. If we undertake to guarantee, not merely peace and order within a narrow zone along the railroad, but the independence of the entire Republic of Panama, the President will have much better reasons than he has now for despatching war ships carrying armed marines to the territorial waters of the Republic of Columbia. The War Department could then call upon Congress for appropriations to defray the cost of maintaining a considerable standing army on the Isthmus. To such policies, to such rights, and such expenditures we shall stand committed if the Panama treaty is ratified.

"It is going to be an enormously costly canal before we are through with it, much more costly than the Nicaragua Canal. We are to pay Panama $10,000,000, and we are to pay the Frenchmen $40,000,000. According to the lowest estimate of the Isthmian Commission it will cost us $144,000,000 to complete the work of construction. This prediction is made on good authority that we really know nothing about the cost of finishing the canal. We have before us at least $200,000,000 of expenditure "in sight." Warned by the experience of De Lesseps, we must take into consideration the possibility that it may cost, not $144,000,000, but twice that sum to carry the ditch to completion. Beyond that, we have the cost of war operations by sea and land, and "present conditions on the Isthmus" Admonish us that we must by no means leave that item out of account. Altogether we may find ourselves "in for" an expenditure of $400,000,000, which is the amount the Frenchmen have already sunk in this ill-starred undertaking."

LOCAL EXPERT APPOINTED

Mr. C. E. Brown One of a Commission to Investigate New Smelting Process

A dispatch from Ottawa says;—"The Government has appointed a commission to go to Europe to inspect the various plants that use the thermo-electric process for the smelting of iron ores and the making of steel. The commission consists of Dr. Haanel, Superintendent of Mines, and Mr. C. E. Brown, assistant and works engineer for the Canadian General Electric Co., Peterborough. A steel expert and a draughtsman will be added to the commission, but they will be selected in Europe.

There are five establishments in Europe where pig-iron and steel are commercially produced by electricity."

Mr. Brown, who was seen by a Times reporter on Saturday, states that he expects to leave for Europe about January 11, and will be away three or four months.

MAJORITY RULES

Questions Being Submitted to the Municipal Candidates

The Toronto Federation for Majority rule, authorized to secure the adoption of the people's vote by referendum and the direct initiative in the city government is submitting five questions on the subject to municipal condidates. The aim of the federation is, as was explained by Mr. Roebuck in his address in Peterborough recently, that any bylaw or resolution relating to certain subjects shall wait thirty days in the City Council before being finally passed. If during that time five per cent. of the electors by petition ask for its submission to a popular vote, it shall be so submitted, and the decision of the voters shall be obeyed by the Aldermen. Following are the subjects: Granting, amending, or renewing franchises, application for legislation to change the city's government, application for legislation to raise money, granting exemptions from taxation. It is also desired that if eight per cent. of the electors by petition present to the City Council any by-law or resolution and the Council declines to pass it, then it must be submitted to a vote of the people.

Peterborough, December 24, 1903.

Thos. Fortye, Manager Peterborough Lock Mfg. Co.;—

MANCHURIA WONDERLAND

Marvelous Development of Country by Russians, says Consul Davidson

London, Dec. 28—James W. Davidson, American consul at Tamsui, Formosa, has arrived here after a four months tour of Manchuria and Corea. He said that the development of the industries of Manchuria has been so rapid that in a very short time the country will be independent of all outside supplies of wheat and beef.

Every place of importance on and off the railroad is held by Russian troops, on the ground that if withdrawn, the Chinese officials would foster brigandage. As soon as brigandage is suppressed the Russian occupation will be limited to the railroad.

There is no evidence that the Russians are importing agricultural immigrants, except for a small colony in the north.

Cities are rising along the railroad. Kharbin is commercially the foremost. It is only three years old, but the Russian population exceeds 40,000.

Large flour mills and wholesale warehouses give the place a stability which promises to make it in a few years the greatest market in the Far East.

Mr. Davidson says that the Russian occupation of Manchuria does not affect the British trade as seriously as the American, because the British imports are largely such as are not produced in Russia, whereas Russia is a large producer of four of America's staple items, kerosene, cotton goods, flour and lumber.

The wheat production is increasing in an extraordinary manner.

It is much cheaper than American and Russian wheat and the manufacture of flour is very profitable.

Mr. Davidson, while admitting the possibility that Russia has arranged the Yalu timber concession partly from political motives, said that the Yalu company produces timber so abundantly and successfully that it is now meeting the demand formerly supplied by the United States.

PARALYZED SHIP

Terrible Experience of Ocean Liner in a Severe Gale

New York, Dec. 26—A number of the passengers who were on the Atlantic transport Menominee, bound for this port when she was struck by a hurricane, December 7, disabled so that she drifted at the mercy of the storm for five days, arrived here today on the Cedric. They told a thrilling story of their experience.

The Menominee left London December 3. Four days later she ran into a terrible gale, and a huge wave, sixty feet high, struck the ship, throwing her on her beam ends. It came with such force as to crush in the heavy deadlights in the cabin part of the starboard side and the staterooms were flooded. Most of the passengers were in bed when the wave hit the ship. They were thrown from their births to the floor with bedding and everything movable on top of them. The utmost confusion prevailed for a time among the passengers, according to the story told today, and the officers had difficulty in quieting them.

When the ship righted, it was found that her rudder-post had been snapped off, leaving the steering-gear disabled, and the ship helpless. One sailor was caught in the backwash of the wave and dashed against the bulwarks, receiving injuries from which he died an hour later.

Three other seamen were seriously injured by waves which broke over the ship while they were trying to make repairs to the shattered steering gear. Because of the excitement it became necessary to lock the passengers in the cabin. Oil was used to still the waves, but with little effect. For five days the ship rolled in the trough of the sea, Captain Lucas and his officers remaining on the bridge day and night, without sleep. Finally at noon on the fifth day a temporary steering-gear was rigged and the ship limped back to Falmouth, where the passengers were sent to Liverpool, and such of them as chose were sent to New York on the Cedric.

FEARS WINTER WITHOUT EQUAL

Goose Bone Weather Prophet Sees Frigid Days in Near Future

Reading, Pa., Dec. 28—Elias Hartz, the veteran goose bone weather prophet made today what he declares will be his last prediction. He said: "I have seen eighty nine winters, but this will be the severest of them all. I don't know of any that begun as this one did. It began early and was cold from the start. It changed from intense to severe cold and has remained cold. In other years it would be cold for four or five days and then for the same length of time it would moderate considerably. This winter surpasses all others, and I warn people to be on the lookout."

ROBS HER HUSBAND'S BANK

Wife of President of Institution at Scotland, S. D., is Caught

Soux City, Iowa, Dec. 28—While C. G. King president of the First National bank of Scotland, N.D., was in Minneapolis yesterday his wife called at the bank and asked the cashier, the only occupant of the room, to go to the postoffice for her. During his absence she took $2,000 from the safe. Shortly afterwards she disappeared with her 4-year-old boy and orders came from the husband to arrest her. She was caught at Jefferson, S.D., and the money found sewed in her clothing. She was taken back to Scotland, and her husband said later she would not be prosecuted. Their life together has not been very happy of late.

ALL MINES GROW RICHER

Deep Tunnels at Silverton Strike Improved Quality of Ore

Silverton, Col., Dec. 28—Local gold-mining interests are receiving a vigorous boom owing to the fact that shaft after shaft, tunnel after tunnel, as it progresses deeper into the mountain's vitals develops better ore and richer quartz. For fifty years it has been the axiom of gold miners everywhere that the permanency of a mining camp depends on the staying qualities of the shaft —in other words, that a falling off in the quality of the ore as the tunnels sink deeper means the doom of the towns around the mines. This danger is past, so far as Silverton is concerned. Each excavation strikes better ore as it sinks farther, and the "pay dirt" is richer with every added foot of digging. This naturally delights Silverton possible recommendation which this region could gain as a mining center.

A TEST CASE

Attacks the Constitutionality of the Licence Act

Quebec, December 25—A very important point of constitutional law in connection with the wholesale liquor business has been raised before Judge Choquette, at Arthabaskaville. Simeon Dubuc has attacked the validity of the prohibitive by-laws adopted by the Corporation of Sainte Anastasie, in accordance with which the Antasia. In accordance with the legislation neither wholesale or retail liquor selling is permitted within the limits of the corporation. He also attacks the constitutionality of that portion of the Quebec license act, under the provisions of which the corporation by-laws in question have been passed, contending that the province has not the right to interfere with the wholesale liquor business, which belongs entirely to the Federal domain. Incidentally he urges that the by-laws in question cannot have been approved as the law requires, by a majority of the electors of the place, because only 64 electors have voted on the by-law out of a total of 250. Mr. J. E. Perrault appeared for the Government in this case, and Mr. Methot for Mr. Dubuc.

NEXT YEAR'S COUNCIL

Last Count of the Vote for Mayor and Aldermen

MAYOR ROGER LEADS BY 25

With Ald. Best Second and Ald. Rush Third—First Twelve Names Are Very Desirable Ones, but there are Others Following

Nomination day is here, and with it the last count in the municipal voting contest. Mayor Roger has won out from Ald. Best for the Chief Magistrate's seat, with, however, but 25 votes to the good. As to the other three candidates named in this list for Mayor, it is extremely doubtful whether either of them would accept nomination. In fact, Alderman Best has not yet expressed his willingness to contest the Mayoralty election and himself gives considerable weight to the unwritten law that a Mayor should be given a second term unopposed, always providing, of course, that he has been guilty of no wilful disregard of the Town's interests, and has proven himself a capable Chief Magistrate and presiding officer. This was the case with Mayor Roger's predecessors, ex-Mayors Denne, Kendry, Davis and Yelland.

For Aldermen, the twelve leading names are very desirable ones, although other good men could be selected lower down on the list. If one thing pleases us more than another with this preliminary campaign, it is the fact that our readers have followed our advice, and brought prominently to the front two men from Ashburnham as worthy of sitting on the first Council board of Greater Peterborough. We trust this gracious act will be consummated at the nominations today, and again fully endorsed at the elections Monday next.

Now that it is an assured and a regrettable fact that ex-Mayor Denne will not again accept nomination for Water Commissioner, it behooves the electorate to be extremely careful in their selection for this very responsible and important office. Remember that the cheapness and efficiency of this water service depends on the firmness, judgment and business capability of those three men in whose control is placed over $300,000 of municipal property. Four names have been mentioned for Water Commissioner, those of V. Eastwood W. H. Moore, Ald. Best and A. McDonald.

ADMIRES O'CONNELL.

A ratepayer writes: "I vote for Ald. O'Connell, who, when he sees he is at fault, admits it like a man. He voted on the street lighting by-law, understanding that it was in the nature of a bonus to Mr. Stuart for the street railway, and now he finds Mr. Stuart is not legally bound to take up the street railway franchise, and that Judge Meredith had ruled that the Council had no right to pay $14,000 more for street lighting than tendered for by an opposition company, without first submitting the whole question to the ratepayers, he, in a manly way, admits that he, with others, has been derelict in his duty. There is good stuff in any man who can suffer defeat and admit an error."

FOR MAYOR ROGER.

A merchant writes: "I regret that the two bylaws should have put Mayor Roger and the majority of his colleagues in a hole, at this time of the year particularly. His Worship, however, I believe to be acting in good faith that Mr. Stuart will operate the street railway as agreed upon, in guarantee of which he (Mr. Stuart, and not the Peterborough Radial Railway Company) has put up a duly marked check for $5,000. However, the whole question is now before the people in the shape of a referendum. The Mayor has pledged himself to respect the wishes of the electorate, should he be honored with a second term and in this he has, to my way of thinking, shown his honesty of purpose in the whole transaction.

FOR ALD. BEST.

A labor unionist writes: "I will support any man who advocates municipal ownership of public works. We are able to operate our own water works, and why not our own street lighting, providing it can be done as cheap as by a private company. Ald. Best takes this stand, and he has won a good many friends by it. I vote for him for Mayor."

FOR ALD. McWILLIAMS.

A citizen writes: "For a young man in his first term of office as Alderman I consider Ald. R. F. McWilliams to have devoted commendable energy and attention to the claims upon his time in the public's service. He has never shirked the responsibilities of office, and has shown marked interest in the community's welfare. In fathering the resolution to submit the street railway and lighting muddle to the people, he did, I consider, the best thing under the circumstances. We cannot afford to lose him from our Council board.

FOR ALD. MORRISON.

A merchant writes; "Ald. Morrison's work in the Council has been of a very indefatigable nature, and his energy should commend him to all citizens. Supposing he has erred in judgment in the street railway and street lighting measures, we are none of us infallible. Then he was but chairman of a committee, the recommendations of which were endorsed by the whole Council but two. He believed the people wanted the street railway resuscitated, and accepted what he considered a favorable opportunity of accomplishing that purpose. As to the legality of the street lighting contract, well there were three lawyers on the civic board to advise him, together with a town solicitor. Irrespective of these bylaws muddle, Ald. Morrison has done good work in the Council, and I'm going to support him. The street lighting contract and street railway franchise is now in our own hands, to vote for or against them."

FOR ALD. RUSH.

A professional man writes: "We cannot afford to lose Ald. Rush from the counsels of our City Fathers. I don't suppose he'll run for Mayor, but it is to be hoped he won't retire from the field of Alderman. I'm sure his admirable work as Chairman of the Finance committee is admitted by all, while his proposition to purchase the Hilliard estate for town purposes shows commendable judgment in the Town's requirements and interests.

ANOTHER KING IN BRITIAN

Ruler of Bardsey Island Pays no Taxes Catches Crabs and Serves People

London, Dec. 28—Another sovereign besides King Edward rules within the British Isles. His Kingdom is Bardsey Island, situated three miles south of the Carnarvonshire Peninsula, in Wales, where he rules with autocratic sway. The inhabitants number seventy-three, including the king and queen, the former being the direct descendant of a long line of monarchs who have reigned in the island from time immemorial. The language spoken is an archaic form of Welsh, and is totally unintilligible to the people on the mainland.

The king, in the intervals between regal duties, acts as doctor, schoolmaster and registrar of births, marriages and deaths, and does not consider himself to important to dig potatoes and gather crabs when occasion requires. He owes no allegiance to England and consequently pays no taxes. The people live on home grown barley bread, butter and milk, while the rocks afford an inexhaustible supply of crabs and lobsters, which they are glad to retail to the wandering stranger for the small sum of 1 penny each.

They know nothing of the outside world, as newspapers never penetrate to their isolated kingdom. The ears of which will admit vessels of about forty- the island is about 370 acres, and on the southeast side there is a small harbor, five tons. In the quaint cottages many exquisite examples of old Welsh carving are to be found, and the beautiful ruins of the Abbey of St. Mary are of particular interest to the antiquarian.

THE BRITISH INVASION OF FORBIDDEN LAND

Uncertainty as to the Reception of the Expedition by Thibetans Causes Anxiety in London

London, Dec. 28.—There is considerable anxiety in military circles as to the character of the reception of the British expedition which is now invading Thibet. Reports have been received from Lhassa that an armed resistance by the Thibetans may be expected, and that a large number of rifles have been distributed for this purpose. The influence of Russian agents in stirring up the populace, and the probable attitude of Russia, is causing additional uneasiness.

The British disavow any purpose more serious than to compel Thibet to fulfil its treaty obligations and remove commercial conditions that are intolerable. The French press does not accept this explanation, but prefers its own theory which is that fear of Russian ascendency in Thibet is the impulse leading to the invasion. Some of the French newspapers have referred to the British campaign as "another Jameson Raid," although they fail to add that it probably will not meet the prompt and overwhelming grief that overtook the raiders.

ROSEBERY SENDS AGENTS TO CANADA

To Investigate Canadian Feeling Regarding the Preference

Quebec, Dec. 28—Messrs. B. Herbert and E. S. Montague, of London, England, arrived in Quebec on Friday last. These gentlemen, it appears, are agents of Lord Rosebery, and the anti-Chamberlain party in England, who have been sent out to Canada to obtain a thorough knowledge of Canadian sentiment in regard to Mr. Chamberlain's fiscal police. Messrs. Herbert and Montague have letters of introduction to prominent Canadians in every part of the country and they express a desire to visit every politician, and all the heads of Canadian commercial interests in regard to Mr. Chamberlain's fiscal policy. Messrs. Herbert and Montague called on a number of Quebec's leading merchants to whom they made known the purpose of their mission and laid before each one a paper containing a series of questions, on Mr. Chamberlain's proposed fiscal policy. The questions have been left with the Quebec business men with the request to study them and fill in their answer and forward the same to Messrs. Herbert and Montague who have chosen Ottawa as their headquarters.

London, Dec. 28—Lord Headley, who has just come prominently before England in connection with his refusal to accept the terms offered by his tenants in the county of Kerry, Ireland, for the purchase of their holdings, probably because owing to the embarassed condition of his property he would have derived no financial benefit therefrom, is an Irish peer who has done much prospecting in Montana, Dakota, Idaho, Wyoming and other Western states.

At one time he was so hard up that he was reduced positively to being without shelter and obliged to take his night's rest in the open air on the seats of the Thames embankment.

He has seen much service in England's petty wars, as well as in the great Franco-German struggle.

SIXTY-THREE KILLED IN A RAILWAY WRECK

And the Death Roll will be Increased from Among those Injured

Connellsville, Pa., Dec. 24.—With a terrible crash and a grinding noise, the Duquesne Limited, the fastest through passenger train from Pittsburg to New York, on the Baltimore and Ohio, plunged into a pile of tibers at Laurel Run at 7.45 o'clock last evening, and 63 lives were lost and 30 persons were injured.

The train was in charge of Engineer Wm. Thornley, of Connellsville. When passing Laurel Run, which is a particularly fine piece of roadbed, the train was running at a high rate of speed. Suddenly the passengers were thrown from their seats by the lightning-like application of the air brakes, and a moment later there was a terrific crash. The train was made up of two baggage cars, two day coaches, one sleeper, and one dining car, and was carrying 150 passengers.

The train plowed along for a considerable distance, and the cars were torn to pieces, passengers jumping, screaming from the wreck as it tore along. Suddenly the engine swerved to the left, and the coaches plunged down over the embankment to the edge of the Youghiogheny River.

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 28—Frank Jennette, late proprietor of the Davenport House, Windsor, who will appear before Judge Horne to answer a charge of non-support, preferred by his wife, at present living with her two small children in Detroit, has begun a suit for two thousand dollars damages against Patrolman R. Elliott, whom he accuses of alienating his wife's affections. Elliott, who is one of the most popular patrolmen in Windsor, denies all connection with the affair. Detroit Specialist Discovers Something Entirely New for the Cure of Men's Diseases in Their Own Homes.

You Pay Only if Cured

Expects No Money Unless He Cures You—Method and Full Particulars Sent Free—Write For It This Very Day

A Detroit specialist who has 14 certificates and diplomas from medical colleges and boards, has perfected a startling method of curing the diseases of men in their own homes; so that there may be no doubt in the mind of any man that he has

DR. S. GOLDBERG,
The Possessor of 14 Diplomas and Certificates Who Wants No Money That He Does Not Earn.

both the method and the ability to do as he says, Dr. Goldberg, the discoverer, will send the method entirely free to all men who send him their name and address. He wants to hear from men who have stricture that they have been unable to get cured, prostatic trouble, sexual weakness, varicocele, lost manhood, blood poison, hydrocele, emaciation of parts, impotence, etc. His wonderful method not only cures the condition itself, but likewise all the complications, such as rheumatism, bladder or kidney trouble, heart disease, nervous debility, etc.

The doctor realizes that it is one thing to make claims and another thing to back them up, so he has made it a rule not to ask for money unless he cures you, and when you are cured he feels sure that you will willingly pay him a small fee. It would seem, therefore, that it is to the best interests of every man who suffers in this way to write the doctor confidentially and lay your case before him. He sends the method, as well as many booklets on the subject, including the one that contains the 14 diplomas and certificates, entirely free. Address him simply

Dr. S. Goldberg, 208 Woodward Ave., Room [illegible], Detroit, Mich., and it will all immediately be sent you free.

This is something entirely new and well worth knowing more about. Write at once.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

As far as facilities for technical education go Germany depends upon state aid, which has been liberally supplied. America, to a large extent, upon personal contributions, while England is in the unfortunate position of having little state aid and no large benefactions. There is now a prospect that this will be remedied, as one of the effects of Chamberlain's eye-opening campaign.

A report recently submitted to the French Chamber of Deputies by M. Ruau gives some interesting information concerning the progress of horticulture, and agricultural pursuits in France. Notwithstanding the competition from Italy and Spain, France still holds her own as a fruit growing country. Without including the apple crops, it is estimated that she now produces 130,000,000 francs worth.

An authority on the matter, states that when every other remedy against rats fails, deprive them of water, and they will leave not being able to survive twenty-four hours without a drink. But how can you keep water from the animal, while there is any running through lead pipe. He will gnaw through lead piping and enjoy it. To gnaw is as much of a necessity to the rat creation as water. Their teeth grow so fast and sharp that they must be constantly filed to prevent involuntary suicide.

The two little islands which Lord Alverstone is charged with presenting to the States, and which Mr. Aylesworth believed to be strategically important, are found to be of "no consequence." They are twenty miles from Port Simpson, and our big island of Prince of Wales commands them. If a fort were erected upon Sitklan a gun of the Canadian heights adjacent could knock it into smithereens. So all the fuss was about a fallacy. The moral is not to get excited over troubles that can never materialize.

The Channel tunnel scheme is still very much alive, though dormant during the reign of bad feeling on the continent toward Great Britain. The late Sir Edward Watkin was rushing it to a head when Lord Wolseley wrote a letter of warning that the tunnel might afford an easier way of invasion than the sea route. The new area of good feeling between England and France, brought about by the King, has witnessed a revival of enthusiasm for the tunnel on both sides of the Channel.

We had been thinking that the summer rates on the London and Port Stanley Railway were the lowest railway rates on record, but they are beaten by the Trans-Siberian Railroad. By that route an emigrant can buy a ticket which will allow him to travel 6,000 miles, which takes nearly three weeks, for about $3.

The chemical trade war between English, German and American manufactures of bleaching powder, which has severely depressed the industry during the past twelve months, has been ended, a working agreement having been arranged. The price has risen to from $30 to $35 per ton, as against anything from $10 upwards.

A novel and appealing venture is projected at the head of the lakes. A company has been formed to stock Lake Superior with seals under the direction of a Russian expert sealer, and it is estimated that ten males and forty females will increase and multiply within a short space of ten years up to 1,000. The Apostle islands and Isle Royale, familiar to summer resorters in the Northwest are said to be ideal breeding places and all in all, the scheme certainly has a most promising not to say seductive appearance. At any rate, it will help some at Christmas season, when the dear wife asks for a new sealskin jacket, to be able to thump yourself patriotically on the chest, while maintaining a tight grip on your waning wad, and say: "Dearest, I prefer to wait until I can patronize our home-grown, hand-dyed and super-glossed seals, if it takes ten years."

William Nelson Cromwell, representative of the French Panama canal commission, recently called on President Roosevelt in Washington. Mr. Cromwell is something of a sportsman and during the interview he told the President a sporting anecdote.

"Some years ago," he said, "I spent a week in Germany shooting small game. To a German acquaintance I happened to remark that I preferred to shoot in Africa, because there was a spice of danger in the sport there."

"'Ach,' said my friend, 'you like a spice of danger mit your sport, eh? Den you go oud shooting mit me. De last time I go I shoot mine bruder-in-law in the leg.'"—Boston Post.

A certain hotel proprietor chanced to glance out of a rear window and saw his new waiter chasing a chicken about the yard.

"Mushrooms," responded the new waiter. "Der's a gentleman dat wants chicken smothered wid mushrooms, en Ah'm tryin' to smother him, sah."—Chicago News.

Patrolman Accused

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 23—Frank Jeanette, late proprietor of the Davenport House, Windsor, who will appear before Judge Horne to answer a charge of non-support, preferred by his wife, at present living with her two small children in Detroit, has begun a suit for two thousand dollars damages against Patrolman R. Hobbled Six Years

Cured in Six Weeks of Chronic Rheumatism By Ferrozone

Hundreds, aye thousands of cures have been put on the market for Rheumatism during the past few years, but a remedy with power to cure Chronic Rheumatism, Ferrozone excepted, in the estimation of Mr. Cullen, of Sturgeon Bay, does not exist.

Mr. Cullen says: "As everyone knows I have been simply tortured for years with Muscular Rheumatism, not the ordinary kind that bothers most people, but the kind that ties one up so that they can't move.

"For six years I hobbled about like a cripple, unable to move without crutches and canes. I used quantities of liniments, special baths and so forth, but they didn't help me very much.

"On the advice of a Presbyterian minister I used Ferrozone, gave it a good trial at first and when I saw it was helping, I bought six boxes and took one tablet at the close of each meal. I am perfectly cured and am today as spry as a youngster of ten. I am convinced that my recovery is entirely due to the marvellous action of Ferrozone."

Mr. Cullen's case is a fair example of the kind of cures that Ferrozone is effecting every day. In severe cases of Neuralgia, Sciatica, Rheumatism, and Lumbago, it acts with surprising alacrity, and no case is recorded where it failed.

Ferrozone cures these diseases because it is a solvent for uric acid in the blood. It removes all traces of it and other poisons from the blood in from two to ten days. Then it builds up and invigorates the system, and makes weak, sickly people strong and well enough to resist and ward off disease.

The best Rheumatism remedy that one can buy is Ferrozone. It relieves quickly and cures so perfectly that the disease never again returns. After all other remedies fail, it cures, and that is the sort of medicine you want. Ferrozone price 50c. per box, or three boxes for $1.25. Sent to your address by mail if price is forwarded to N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

THE LAW OF CHRIST.

REV. HENRY EVERTSON COBB, D. D., West End Collegiate Church, New York.

Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ.—Galatians, vi., 2.

I take it that no man's life can be consistent or can accomplish anything worth while unless it follows a law, unless it obeys some principle, clearly understood, firmly grasped, faithfully adhered to. I take it, too, that no man's life is understandable unless you go beneath the surface and discover this law. It is the law behind the outward life which gives color and character to everything a man does.

Now, what was the dominating impulse, the ruling principle of Christ's life, manifesting itself through everything He said and did? Add incident to incident, examine into each, and what is apparent? It is that Jesus felt Himself standing underneath the burdens of the world into which He had come. As He went His way, meeting people of all sorts and conditions, His quick sympathy transferred all their sorrows and cares and infirmities to Himself.

In Peter's house, in the house of Jairus, in the home at Bethany, He made the burdens of the household His own. By Jacob's Well He finds a woman who seems to us at first flippant and careless. But our Lord recognizes that the light laugh disguises a deep concern about her spiritual condition and He makes that concern His concern. Every yoke that galled humanity chafed His shoulders. It was a burden-bearer that Israel's great prophet thought of Him when he said: "The Lord hath laid on Him the iniquity of us all." It was as a burden-bearer that John the Baptist spoke of Him, "Behold the Lamb of God, who beareth away the sins of the world." The law of Christ was to bear others' burdens. He came to do the will of God by bearing the burdens of men.

When we speak of Christ as the Son of Man we mean that He is the representative man. When St. John speaks of Him as the Word of God he means that He is the expression of God's intention for each of us. The will of God for Him, then, must be the will of God for us. The law of His life must be the true law of every life. Your life is fitted, in God's providence, to grow and flower and bear fruit only under this law of Christ. Deny that law, evade it, and you must suffer the penalty which comes from broken law—a crippled and limited existence. Bring your life into correspondence with it and your life must take on something of the beauty and dignity and power which you find in the life of Christ.

When things are uncongenial, when you cannot get along with people, when they irritate you—before you find fault with your environment look within yourself. Ask yourself whether you are fulfilling Christ's law for your life. Are you bearing the burdens of these people? "In a sense I am," you say. "They make life a burden for me." But that is not the question. There is no more virtue in bearing burdens you cannot help than in paying taxes or catching measles. Are you fulfilling this law in the sense in which Christ fulfilled it, voluntarily and sympathetically? Penetrate these lives, get at their unknown burdens, get underneath them, and the chances are you will find that God has evidently put you where you are that you might fulfill the law of your life.

What gives character to your life is the law that lies behind it. How does your life centre? If it centres in self it is not obeying the law of its nature and must be dwarfed and stunted. Your business is dragged down into a mean and sordid thing. You cannot climb to any high honor that this law of selfishness will not make that honor contemptible. But if your life centres in others, if it obeys the law of Christ, there is no business so poor and little that this law will not glorify it. If your life is bound to the bench or to the wheel for the good of others, if you are a slave that they may be free, if you are struggling under burdens that their burdens may be lightened, then your dull and uninteresting business is transfigured into a holy sacrament. There is nothing romantic about the blundering, half-starved bookkeeper, who works for Scrooge, in Dickens' "Christmas Carol." But when you are introduced to the little cripple in his home and see how it is for Tiny Tim that old Bob Cratchit is starving and freezing and bearing patiently and cheerfully the hard service of his miserly employer, this poor little man is transformed into a hero. He is brother to the knight who set his lance in rest to make the cause of the weak his own.

The bearing of others' burdens is the secret by which we find our own lives. There are people so engrossed with their own burdens that they have no eyes for others more heavily burdened than they. It is a pity; for to help them bear those burdens would be to lighten their own. This is Christ's law—"Take my yoke upon you"—the burdens of others, their infirmities and sorrows and sins—"and ye shall find rest."

No one who has tried raising and feeding turnips to sheep can have a full appreciation of the benefits derived from this cheap food and in the increased thrift of their stock. There can be no doubt of the advantage of the English method of feeding compared with ours. If we compare their immense fat muttons with ours and in all the feeding districts of the English provinces turnips are fed in immense quantities.—Philadelphia Record.

The new book, "When Patty Went to College," by Webster, is undoubtedly the best selling book of the season. Just the book for a Xmas present.

I treated with a dozen doctors, who all promised to cure me. They got my money and I still had the disease. I had given up hope when a friend advised me to consult Drs. K. & K., who had cured him. Without any confidence I called on them, and Dr. Kennedy agreed to cure me or no pay. After taking the New Method Treatment for six weeks I felt like a new man. Dry Placer Miner, formerly of California.

This company has the right, without royalty payments, to use the new patent machine upon all the land it may own, acquire by lease, or operate, in Arizona. W invite special attention to the great commercial value and profit of this machine, and what can be accomplished by it.

What This Machine Will Do.

For the first time in the history of gold mining a machine has been invented which will handle the dry placer gold gravel without water, and in large quantities. This machine will save 98 per cent of all the gold in the gravel, and will do it at a lower working cost than by any existing process. It is operated by a small, compact engine, using crude oil as fuel. A complete plant, capable of handling 200 tons per day will weigh less than 1,200 pounds.

To secure this gold only those placer lands could be worked, which could command large supplies of water, hence the immense bodies of dry placer lands remote from water have never been worked.

Fifteen Hundred Millions in Gold

The United States has yielded nineteen hundred millions in gold, of which fifteen hundred millions—or more than 75 per cent.—were the product of its placers.

Ninety per cent. of the world's total gold supply has been taken from placers by processes which have admittedly lost the bulk of the values.

Simplicity of Machine—Its Method of Operation

The machine is so extremely simple in construction and operation that any intending investor can operate it instantly. He can take a peck or more of sand, either ordinary house or sea sand, or such as is found in the placer lands of Arizona and California, put into this sand ten or a hundred pieces of gold as small as the point of a toothpick, and from that to the head of an ordinary pin, mix the sand and the gold thoroughly, turn them into the hopper or feed of the machine, and in a few seconds the machine will separate the gold from the gravel and recover from 98 to 100 per cent of the gold. It is an absolute, infallible, ocular demonstration of the merits of the machine. It has solved the problem of handling sand or gravel containing gold in regions remote from water.

Cost of Handling Material

Each plant is portable, weighs less than 1,200 pounds and can be easily moved by a few laborers.

The two greatest authorities in the world on the moving of material are "Haswell" and "Trautwine." They say in their standard publications that a laborer can shovel horizontally, 12 feet, vertically 6 feet for 50 feet haul 17 cubic yards in 10 hours.

A well known engineer in his work for the U. S. Government at Sandy Hook, moved 18 cubic yards, 100 feet haul in 10 hours at a cost of 10 cents per cubic yard, paying laborers $1.75 per day.

The dry placer gold-bearing sands of California, Arizona and New Mexico are handled quite as easily as those of Sandy Hook.

Ten laborers can easily supply one machine with 234 cubic yards of gravel in 12 hours, working at the same speed as shown by Haswell, Trautwine or at Sandy Hook.

Placer work on above basis would cost about 11 1-2c. per cubic yard.

Do You Want Monthly Dividends?

We make a special offer of a limited number of shares of stock at this time, because the company requires immediately sufficient to build several machines to operate in the field.

Every machine at work will increase the intrinsic value of the stock.

Twenty machines in the field will increase the price and value of this stock more than double the present offering, and every additional machine means a further increase in price and value.

The Company intends to divide its net earnings every month, so that the stockholders may count absolutely on receiving monthly dividends in proportion to monthly earnings.

For the Knowledge Thereof.

A LOVE TALE.

BY ADAM ADAMS.

"HOW does a man know when a woman loves him?"

"Asks her," responded Layton, between puffs.

Burritt's smile was composite: ironical, amused, bitter.

"Um—I'll change the phraseology. How can I know?"

"You, old man?" Layton removed his pipe and held it lovingly between his long, shapely fingers. "You? Ah!"

"A complex proposition, now, eh—Layton?"

"Rather."

"And a blamed hard one, Kurt. If I hadn't lost faith in woman's disinterestedness I might stumble into happiness all right. As a man thinks—you know. But I've seen the sordid side of them so long I'll be jiggered if I'm sure they have any other."

"That we have; include paterfamilias, also, Burritt. Human faults and virtues have no sex."

Burritt did not heed Layton's homily. "I'm pretty hard hit. If she only loved me—but how can I know?"

"Are you talking about Louie Adams?"

"Are there twenty-four hours in a day?" retorted Burritt, irritably.

"I only wanted to be sure. Pronouns are such deuced impersonal things. Once I was telling a man about——"

"Cut it short. It is Louie Adams. Have you any helpful suggestions?"

Layton fingered his pipe again, reached out his long legs and ran one hand thoughtfully over his thick blond hair.

"You want too much for your money. You should not bargain so finely. Louie had a grandfather, a great-grandfather, a great-great-grandfather. The blood of governors, secretaries of the cabinet, generals, senators, runs in her veins. Mrs. Adams was a Morton, Adams pere was the least of the illustrious Adamses, yet he—pardon me, old man—would have considered himself very democratic, very politic, in election times, to have drunk his whiskey and water alongside Dad Burritt. The Burritt millions to wed the Adams blue blood should be enough. Our girls don't ask for sentiment when they buy dukes and lords."

Burritt gave his mustache a vicious jerk. "I don't care a hang for her blue blood. It's the girl herself, and it must be the man for himself. I want a woman who loves me, not a wife to do honor to my millions. I've never cared for any woman but her. Now I've got it about as bad as it comes. I've done nothing for a year but follow her about. I bought this place, gave this house party, was agreeable to a lot of dopes, just to get her here. I'm a good gambler ordinarily, but this isn't a thing for hazard. If she doesn't love me I don't want her. But if she does? Well—it's all the heaven I'd ever want."

"Um," said Layton, dryly. "To love like that, yet doubt your dear one's honor! I would take the word of the woman I love for good and aye."

Burritt reddened. "You've not had my experience. Either women are the most mercenary of creatures or myself the most irresistible thing that ever came down the pike. They have swarmed after me like bees. I've been angled for, baited, hunted, coaxed, cajoled, any way to get me to offer my hand and—heart or millions; is there much doubt which? I am sceptical. I've been through fire and sword, alias invitations and smiles, till I'm a veteran. I love Louie Adams. I—look here, Kurt, I tremble like a bashful boy every time she looks at me. I would literally eat her if I could get her in my arms!"

"Trust her, Burritt," said Layton, insistently. "Louie's true blue. She won't sell herself. If she said she loved me I would know she did."

"You? Yes. But—by Jove, Kurt, do you know the temptation of millions? I've seen men, men on whose integrity I would have staked my life, turn traitors in an hour. It's a disease, a terrible, clutching, desperate sickness. I've seen things on 'Change that— Look here, Kurt, if I did have faith I'd be fit subject for an asylum."

Layton filled his pipe again. "Perhaps. Still, I'd trust Louie."

"Wait till you're in love," said Burritt, sharply. "You'll be assailed by all the doubts of Thomas then."

"I'm in love now, have been for five years, and expect to be for an indefinite period. It's reached the chronic stage."

Burritt wheeled about.

"You?"

"Incomprehensible, but true," said Layton, nonchalantly. "How I have managed to sustain myself and the grand passion is rather remarkable. The problem of how to satisfy a dollar-and-a-half appetite on a twenty-five-cent dinner would seem to run amuck of hungering for the sight of a pair of blue eyes and the dearest smile in the world. You won't ask your beloved because you're too rich, and I—" he shot an amused glance at Burritt's perturbed countenance, "I would ask mine in a jiffy if I could figure out how to feed her. She's quite plump now; 'twould be harrowing to see those precious pounds vanish into nothingness."

Burritt gazed at his friend, stunned. They had been to Princeton together, chummed, been fast friends then and ever since, and never before had he realized Layton's straitened circumstances. Always well dressed, perfectly groomed; not extravagant, but a good fellow at all times; doing his part so gracefully its simplicity was unnoted. Kurt Layton had been considered—if thought were given to it at all—as a man of comfortable means. He had taken the law course, been admitted to the bar, and for five years had practised in the city. Always the same handsome, courteous, humorously good-natured man, indolently indifferent to conventions, an easy, interesting talker, an intelligent listener, he was naturally much liked. Burritt had a real affection for him. He gave him a swift, comprehensive glance.

Layton smiled knowingly.

"You're thinking of those piled-up millions, old man. Don't. I'm not a Socialist. Moreover, I have all the comforts and not a few of the luxuries of this opulent age. I'm deuced well fixed for a bachelor. It was pretty hard pulling at one time, just when I started to practise, but it's clear sailing now."

"For a bachelor," said Burritt.

Layton laughed. "Yes; my canoe won't carry double. A wife is more than a luxury—she's an extravagance."

"And she loves you," said Burritt, in the same musing voice.

"She?" Layton whistled softly. "Um—I don't know. I've never asked her. She's not the sort a man would make love to idly. No; it's a one-sided affair. I've learned to enjoy her as one does a beautiful sunset or a Titian. I shall probably be best man at her wedding soon. I'll kiss her then—by gad!" He gazed at Burritt almost with a grin. "He oughtn't to begrudge me that—eh? Just one kiss to remember for all the years to come."

Burritt laughed, relieved. There was something contagious in Layton's merriment.

"He'd be an ass if he did."

"Allow it or begrudge it, which, Burritt?"

"Begrudge it, of course. You can be best man at my wedding and kiss the bride, sure."

"Thanks, awfully, old man. When is it to be?"

Burritt swore roundly. "By heavens!" he completed, "I would give $100,000 gladly, this very hour, to know whether she loves me or not."

Layton gazed at him a moment, his expression changing rapidly. He turned to the desk and wrote for a couple of minutes, then handed the written page to Burritt.

"There, old man. I've taken you at your word. Sign this, and the thing'll be done in an hour."

Burritt read aloud:

"In consideration of positive information to be furnished me this day, by the assistance of Kurt Layton, concerning the sentimental attitude of a woman dear to me, i. e., whether she loves me or does not love me, I hereby agree to pay to the said Kurt Layton the sum of one hundred thousand dollars ($100,000).
(Signed) "

"What? Eh? How?" Burritt stammered, looking at Layton, openmouthed.

Layton took him by the arm and swung him toward the window.

"See that bunch of cedars. Well, you saunter that way and sit you down on the farther side. I'll meander that way with Louie in a bit and—you get your information and I my hundred thousand."

For an instant the proposition staggered Burritt. Then his keen business mind began to adjust itself to the commercial side of the transaction. Why not? Layton could do it easily—he had known Louie for years—he would not bungle the matter. Burritt could trust him for that. Did she not love him (Burritt) she need never know of his affection for her; they could be better friends afterward than if he proposed and was rejected. Did she love him he would know the blessed truth; there would be no torturing doubts to poison his happiness. It was easily worth the price.

"Done" he said, gripping Layton's hand. "Shake, old man. A brilliant idea." With a quick hand he affixed his name, "Edwin H. Burritt."

As he waited behind the cedars he smiled at his sudden tranquillity. In this as in all his momentous affairs he had become as iron, not a nerve unstrung. Yet no other affair had ever meant to him what this did. He had cared nothing for women till he met Louie Adams. They had amused him; their pretty vanities and alluring sweetness, their petty tricks and cold calculations, had entertained him. They had made him smile, sometimes grimly, again happily but never beyond the moment. Despite their lavish demonstrations he read them aright. Not one of all the feminine host who had laid siege to his heart had really cared for him. This he knew. And it was this knowledge that made him so unhappy in his love for Louie. For what grounds had he to hope that the most beautiful, glorious, adorable woman in all the world should love him, he repeated, miserably. And he could find no reason save the same old consolation with which lovers of all ages have tricked themselves—the strength of his devotion, the mighty power of his affection, must win her love, draw it forcibly from out her being.

Through an opening between the trees he saw her coming, a tall, athletic girl whose free, swinging gait kept pace with that of the man beside her. The sun's rays fell on their uncovered heads; Layton's almost golden in the bright light, the girl's a burnished copper, both faces fair and sunburned, both pairs of eyes the blue of the sky. As like as brother and sister, mused Burritt. Somehow the thought pleased him.

"Sit here, Louie," said Layton, throwing himself on the grass. With one hand he supported his chin, an elbow resting on the other.

But the girl stood still, and gazed before her, over the long stretches of green sloping to the slender river, which sparkled and gurgled beneath the shade of bended trees, to the hills beyond covered with waving grain.

She reached out her arms involuntarily, beautiful arms, round and bared from the elbow. White mull, girlishly simple, gowned the gracefully erect figure: ribbons and filmy lace swayed softly as she moved. As she seated herself she faced Layton and—Burritt, whose keen eyes drank in thirstily the girl's winsome loveliness.

"This is fairyland, Kurt," she said, softly. "I don't want to leave here one little bit."

"Then don't," said Layton. "You're a good fisherman—land Burritt. He ought to bite at your throw."

She bent her eyes to his, inquisitively.

"If Mr. Burritt had said that it would have sounded vulgar; what's the difference, I wonder?"

"He wouldn't have said it. Burritt's the prince of good fellows."

"Do you really like him so much? Truly, now."

"Do I? Had I a sister I'd ask no better fortune for her than to marry Burritt. The man himself."

"Then you advise me to—land him?"

"If you can. I don't imagine he'll be easy even for you."

Thick lashes stood out for a moment over great, speaking eyes; red lips curved indignantly.

"Perhaps you can tell me how to go about it. What tactics do you intend to pursue to land your big fish—Miss Loomis or Rutger, or the pick of the Mead girls? Is there a book of systems, or does one do it instinctively?"

"Let not thy angry passions rise," soothed Layton, flashing a smile into her mutinous eyes. "Especially as you intend to marry Burritt. Because, forsooth, if you don't, why do you accept his invitations and go everywhere he does?"

"I go where he does? I? Do you mean that I am following him about crying out my wares? Going—going—two blue eyes, mouth, cheeks and nose in prime condition, sound in limb and body, height five feet six, weight 132 pounds. Good disposition, will not bite nor kick— Here sir, examine for your

Hamilton, Dec. 23—Samuel Stevenson, a foreman at the Steel Plant of the Hamilton Steel and Iron Company, met a horrible death this morning. His coat-sleeve caught in the cogs of a big roller and his arm was dragged in. His head was battered into pulp against the rolls. He came from Youngstown, Ohio, and his family are on the road to this city to join him for the holiday season.

THE GREAT WORK GOING ON IN MUSKOKA.

1,000 Patients Treated in the Two Muskoka Hospitals — the Sanatorium and the Free Hospital for Consumptives.

Surprising Decrease of 25 Per Cent. in the Last Three Years in Deaths from Consumption.

Fifty-five Different Trades and Professions Represented by the Patients Admitted to the Free Hospital for Consumptives.

Two Pavilions have had to be Closed Owing to Lack of Funds, and the Number of Patients Reduced from 75 to 50.

$25,000 Wanted this Year to Carry on this Great Work.

With a view of helping to bring to the attention of the public the needs of the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives, we have pleasure in publishing the following letter, in which an appeal is made for funds.

Dear Friend,—

It again becomes necessary to make an urgent appeal for funds for the Free Hospital for Consumptives.

A very heavy debt is pressing upon the trustees.

In addition to this, funds must be provided for the maintenance of patients. Last month there was a deficiency of nearly $1,500 over and above receipts from all sources.

The Free Hospital for Consumptives was opened eighteen months ago. 225 patients have been admitted.

No patient has ever been refused admission because of his or her poverty.

1,000 patients have been cared for in the two Muskoka Hospitals, the Sanatorium and the Free Hospital for Consumptives.

The majority of these have either been cured, or so helped that they have been enabled to again become bread-winners for the family.

The public are beginning to find evidence of our work.

Already there has been a decrease of nearly 25 per cent. in the death-rate from consumption in the Province of Ontario.

The last report of the Secretary of the Provincial Board of Health shows that in the last three years the deaths from consumption in Ontario have decreased from 3,481 to 2,691, a decrease of 790, or nearly 25 per cent.

This is the more gratifying when we remember that for a number of years previously the same report showed a steadily increasing death-rate prior to 1899.

Who will doubt that the work of our two Hospitals in Muskoka, and the persistent educational campaign carried on, has not helped to secure this surprising result?

In what better way can your gifts bring so good a return?

We have no endowment, excepting the provision recently made by Canada Life, Confederation Life, and North American Life Insurance Companies for maintenance of 2 beds each for a year.

We can only rely on the philanthropy of our people and a knowledge of our needs.

Last year we asked $20,000 to reduce the debt and to pay for care of patients. We had a generous response, receiving $10,000, gifts coming from Halifax on the east and Yukon on the west. This year our needs are greater than ever. We will require $25,000.

The Bishop of Selkirk, Caribou Crossing, Yukon, sending $10.00, writes: "The trifling remittance I send is intended to express our sympathy for the sufferers in other parts, rather than to imply a special need for your institution here."

We are grateful for the large gift. We are grateful for the small gift; all gifts are helpful.

On account of our pressing needs, will you not make this your special charity?

During the year, for lack of funds, we had to close several pavilions, reducing the number of patients from 75 to 50.

The sorrowful part of our work is that nearly all of those in the Free Hospital are young men or women who were striving to make a place for themselves in the world. Many of them have wife, or child or husband anxiously watching the struggle for life.

Your gift will help to bring gladness to so many. Will you have the joy of giving?

Very truly yours,

W. J. Gage

self. Sire, Adams; dam, Morton. Pedigree back to 1245. Going—going——"

Her bell-like voice rang out scornfully. Layton laughed.

"How much will you knock down for Lu? It sounds good—I might bid myself."

Her arms fell listlessly; she glanced down at him, her eyes wistfully tired.

"We've had enough nonsense, Kurt," she said, simply.

His eyes, instantly serious, raised to hers.

"Would it be possible for you to love Burritt, Louie? He's downright good. He's educated, clever, loyal, and would idolize you. He admires you greatly, and if you loved him——"

"Don't!" Her voice was sharp, piteous.

"Forgive me," he breathed.

"Perhaps he's all you say. I think he is. Then he's so awfully rich, and wealth is a wonderful thing. But—but not so wonderful as—love."

She spoke slowly, her voice shaking a little with its bravery.

"What would love do, Louie?" he whispered.

She caught her breath sharply, the lovely face suddenly womanly and angelically tender, the blue eyes deep and serious, the sweet lips a little firmer still.

"It would make a man and a woman," she uttered, in low, vibrant voice.

"And he is not a man now," he muttered.

"No; nor has she been a woman till just now. She was childishly afraid of him. Weakly she let him plan their lives apart. She was not sure he loved her; she—she—is not sure—now; but——"

"He does, Louie. She is the summum bonum of his life—he has never dreamed of giving her up. He believed it, but it would be easier for him to tear his heart out. Louie, tell me you love me—I must hear it— Ah-h! It has been hard."

"Wait, Kurt." Her voice was unconsciously plaintive. "We will have to live so differently. For the last year mamma and I have lived on Aunt Jennie's bounty, I to repay her when I married. This was their doing—I fought it bitterly, because, you see, I knew—we—couldn't, you and I."

"My blessed girl!"

"Mamma can live with Aunt Jennie, but——you, dear, and—I—we've been so selfish. Can we give up things we really want—for—for each other? You can't live so beautifully, nor can I."

He drew himself up beside her and took her hands in his. He entirely forgot Burritt and the hundred thousand dollars.

"I've thought it out a hundred times, darling, have spent hours looking at flats and furniture; have priced groceries and interviewed butchers and employment agencies. I know just how many evenings the cook wants out, and the number of chops in a pound, cut both thick and thin. Know just what I shall have to renounce, and the things you will have to do without—so many, dear, I dared not speak before. Against Burritt and this"—his eyes swept the magnificent stretch of ground—"it—well, it is impertinence in me, after all."

"And — yourself . . . you don't mind. . . . You love me enough . . . I couldn't be happy—if—if—you——"

His eyes held hers.

"We're a couple of fakirs, dear. We have sampled about all the good things life gives, know just what they're worth. And we're hungry for each other, starved out of our selfishness for the blessed joy of loving. Oh, my sweetheart, how did I ever wait so long?"

She drew back, blushing, laughing. "Oh, Kurt! They—someone'll see."

Not even then did he think of Burritt.

"Come," he cried, springing to his feet. "We'll put the trees between us and possible onlookers. You can't do me out of a multitude of kisses, sweetheart."

"Do I want to?" she flashed, curving her red lips.

He laughed blissfully, the first ecstatic kiss passed into history, then—he saw Burritt.

"Good heavens!"

The dismay on his face was so metamorphosing it caused Burritt almost a smile. He stepped forward.

"I have been but a few moments on the spot; I think this is the right conclusion." He held out his hand. "Congratulations, old man. Your hand, Miss Adams. You're both in luck."

"Thank you," said the girl, joyously, raising her happy blue eyes to his. "We've just——"

"Entered the Kingdom of Heaven," completed Layton, in low, deep tones. His eyes sought Burritt's, fearless, frank, speakingly sympathetic, almost pleading for forgiveness.

"This changes things, Burritt," he said, rapidly. "Our—our little business deal is off. It was a fair proposition then, old man. Now—"

Burritt looked at the girl standing beside her lover, a glorious blush rose, sweet with love's morning, fragrant with heaven's life-giving breath. He gazed long, devouringly, forgetful of the man.

She flushed a little, the sweet, resolute mouth losing its blissful smile, the radiant blue eyes growing very, very tender.

"We've loved each other so long," she faltered, unconsciously excusing. "Perhaps people will think we're foolish now," her thought rushed to herself and Kurt again, "but we'll have each other."

He laughed easily, and only Layton detected the effort he made.

"So you're even willing to love in a Harlem flat. No wonder Kurt looks so happy. Too bad, but it can't be so romantic, Miss Adams. Fate wills that you shall not sacrifice even a ribbon on love's altar. Kurt and I invested a few pennies some time ago in a mine, a veritable gamble, for it was nothing but a hole in the ground, but my broker writes me to-day that we've sold out at a profit of $200,000. One hundred thousand each—not so bad, eh, Kurt? Moreover, my lawyer has decided to be Secretary of War—for the honor, of course. What idiots some men are—so I'll hand my law business over to Kurt. It amounts to about $12,000 a year, old man."

And the girl he loved, her face illumined, gave a great, sobbing laugh, and held out her hands—to Layton.

"Oh, Kurt! I'm so—glad—for—you!"

Burritt met Layton's swift, imploring glance reassuringly, and walked away, the supreme all of his life denied him.—"Town Topics."

"Well, John," said the eminent personage, who was now an invalid, "who is it wishes to see me now? My biographer?" "No, your excellency," replied the butler, "your physician." "Ah! Almost the same thing. He's at work upon my life, too."—Philadelphia "Press."

THE SAVOR OF OUR DAILY SPEECH

By REV. JOHN J. DOLAN,
Pastor Church of the Nativity,
Brooklyn, N. Y.

Let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with salt.—Col., iv., 6.

No gift belongs so peculiarly to man as speech. Many of the irrational creatures surpass us in the gifts we hold in common, but speech is the glory of man alone. As this gift is so truly remarkable, for the use of it we shall be held strictly accountable. "By thy words thou shalt be condemned;" and "For every idle word men shall speak they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment.

But it is not of the abuse of speech I would speak, but of its use in our social intercourse with one another, of its proper employment by Christians, whose tongue is mostly utilized in discourse about the passing things of the day, and who look forward to the time when, before His thone, this same tongue shall announce His praise.

How, then, can Christians carry out the Apostolic injunction mentioned in the text? Can there be grace or savor discovered in the conversations of daily life Can our ordinary speech be not only free from blame, but can it also have in it that which is good to the point of edification?

Yes. "There is One that holdeth His peace, that is found wise;" One who lived thirty years in ordinary life and whose tongue gave no offence. He made doors and bars to His mouth and kept His tongue from evil, and in every word was pleasing to His Father. While the Evangelists have given us no account of our Lord's words during those thirty years, yet there are three instances related that unfold to us a fact that our Lord mingled freely in social intercourse with others—first, when he tarried behind after the festival in Jerusalem; next, at the marriage feast in Cana, and then the words "The Son of Man came eating and drinking." These instances show that our Lord did not shun social meetings with His neighbors. For all that, He was in no way odd, but chose to be like unto the mass of His brethren and to pass through life as most of us have to pass through. He took part in all things not sinful in which our daily lives are spent, and thereby gave us the comforting assurance that our lowliness and earthliness need not make us sinful, either. He proved conclusively that we need not separate ourselves from our ordinary calling to be acceptable to God.

So Jesus Christ walked with men for many years without separating Himself from them in speech, for His speech was "always with grace, savored with salt." Surely we can learn a lesson after the manner of Christ! Many honest-minded persons have an erroneous idea that conversations cannot be righteous unless religious topics are spoken of, and they regard all who are not prompt in such speech as unspiritual. How unlike Christ is this class! For thirty years Christ drew others toward what was good, yet it was so done as not to attract extraordinary attention to Himself; so done that He seemed to those to whom He spoke as none other than what His outward condition betokened Him, "the carpenter's son." This class, however, constantly attract attention to themselves by placing too much value on religious talk in every day life.

The action of Christ, on the other hand, suggests that our ordinary conversations are vastly more important than our direct religious comments, or, in other words, it is of greater consequence that we watch over our common talk on ordinary matters than that we be often talking religiously, for there is no need for religious conversations to reveal the true inwardness of a man. What is really in a man will be felt in his ordinary discourse. "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. A good man, out of a good treasure, bringeth forth good things, and an evil man, out of an evil treasure, bringeth forth evil things." For a truly religious man will have his words always "seasoned with salt."

As in our ordinary meals a little salt, though it does not appear, yet savors the food, so, too, without protruding itself the influence of a good man who has the love and fear of God in his soul will be felt. On the contrary, the man who talks religion, constantly dwelling especially upon himself, his feelings, his experiences, his fitness to teach and guide others, has his speech overseasoned with salt and leaves an unpleasant savor; for if any man think himself religious, "not bridling his tongue, but deceiving his own heart, this man's religion is vain."

Let us strive, then, to use aright this gift of speech, so that in the resurrection, amid the perfections of the future state, our tongues may be deemed worthy to be everlastingly employed in giving glory, honor, praise and thanksgiving to Him who sits upon the throne, and let our prayer be the words of the Psalmist, "Set a watch, O Lord, before my mouth and a door around my lips," forever bearing in mind that "a peaceful tongue is a tree of life, but that which is immoderate shall crush the spirit."

FREE THE SLAVES

Washington Official finds Practice of Owning Serfs is General in the Island of Alaska

Washington, Dec. 26 — Dr. Sheldon Jackson, general agent of the national bureau of education has received a letter from William E. Davis, superintendent of the public schools at Unalaska, Aleutian Islands, who declares that slavery exists among the population of the islands. Superintendent Davis says that slavery has been common in the islands from time immemorial, and that it is still general.

He gives a number of instances of orphans and waifs being held as slaves and says that he has been unable to make the owners give up their "property." He asks for instructions as to how to deal with the condition.

Dr. Jackson said this morning that he had known for some time that slavery existed in the islands, and that Gov Brady, of Alaska, had taken steps to remedy the evil. He said the principal offending slave owners were not the native Aleutians, but foreigners who had married native women, and among whom the possession of slaves was considered a mark of wealth.

SHOOTS THREE MEN

Exciting Event at a Wedding Festival in Baltimore

Baltimore, Dec. 26 —The elopement and marriage of Henrietta Scott, seventeen years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Scott, and Walter E. Smith, nineteen years old, culminated Saturday night at Frohman Hall in a shooting affray. Beverly N. Sparks, a reporter on a morning newspaper here, used a revolver when he was attacked. He wounded William H. Collins, Lewis Gardner and Philip Stackrath.

Collins was shot twice in the leg, Stackrath once in the back and Gardner through the left forearm. The couple were married early in the evening, and after obtaining parental forgiveness, proceeded to summon friends, and have a dance.

Sparks, according to his statement, went to the hall to get an account of the affair for his paper. After he had obtained the facts he asked a young woman to dance with him and she consented. Collins, it is alleged, later accused the reporter of making a remark degratory to the girl's character, and an altercation ensued. Sparks was knocked down and several men began to pummel him.

Sparks says he backed into a corner and fired upon his assailants. Sparks was put in jail, but not until he had telephoned his report to his paper.

Equitable Gold Mining Co.

R. C. LANE, President. G. F. NORTON, Secretary and Treasurer.

Over $300,000 of development work already done. Main shaft 9 x 16 feet, down 700 feet. Over 3,000 feet of drifts, tunels and shafts showing immense ore body

Destined to become large and continuous dividend payer.

The Equitable Gold Mining Co.'s properties consist of three mines, known as the North Bonanza, Flowery and Kimbark. They are located in Six-Mile Canon, less than four miles from Virginia City, Nevada, which is the nearest railroad station.

Years ago, over three hundred thousand dollars of development work was done upon the mines—so they are not mere "prospects" but actual mines. This work was done under the personal supervision of competent engineers, and was paid for by the owners of the mines themselves; thus giving double assurance that the work was well done and that the expenditure was justified.

The Main Shaft (triple compartment, 9x16 feet in the clear) is down seven hundred feet. From this shaft, running along the vein matter, east and west, are four drifts, at different levels, having a combined length (including the Rule winze and the tunnel) of 3,850 feet.

In addition to the above there are four small shafts, with a combined depth of about 300 feet; 535 feet of tunnels, and at least 500 feet of cross-cuts, uprises, etc.

All told, there is 4,650 feet of underground work—the most of which is in ore. Here is nearly one mile of openings in mineralized rock.

It is conservatively estimated by competent and reliable engineers and practical miners that there is developed an ore body of at least One Million Five Hundred Thousand Tons!

As a further evidence of the large amount of work done there is from 75,000 to 100,000 tons of ore on the dumps at the different surface openings—ore that, with modern cheapened processes, can be converted into gold bullion at a profit.

THE TITLE

Title to the Flowery and North Bonanza mines is by patent from the United States government, while the title of the Kimbark is by location and possession.

The Equitable Company obtained the Flowery and North Bonanza mines, both of which are patented, by purchase—the payments therefore to be made out of a share of the net proceeds of the mines. The Company has a written contract, duly recorded, for a deed, and is in possession of the properties, and is now operating them. The sum of $2,000 was paid on the contract, September 30th, 1902, and partial payments have since been made. The Company is entitled to $6.25 per ton as cost of mining and milling. One-half of all over and above this $6.25 per ton goes to the former owners till they receive the total sum of $105,000, without interest. There is no stipulation as to amount of work to be done within any specified time—and no proceeds, no pay. The Company can therefore pay it in one year or it can pay it in ten years. With this exception the Company is free from debt. Its policy is to pay as it goes. In this way it has no fear of financial embarrassments. The title to the Kimbark is by "location," under the mining laws of the United States. Work enough has already been done to entitle the Company to a patent, which in due time will be obtained.

Recent Development Work

Since the Company acquired the property, it has put up poles and wires for a distance of one mile for the transmission of electric power from the Truckee River Electric Power Plant. By this means unlimited power for mining, hoisting and milling is obtained.

It has built a dwelling house for the manager, a large boarding house for the miners, a barn, a power house and blacksmith shop.

It has put an electric hoist and skip into the 265-tunnel; has purchased ore cars and the necessary tools for mining purposes.

It has acquired the Kimbark ground, adjoining the Flowery and North Bonanza mines, and is now developing the property by driving a tunnel.

Within the last few months the Company has mined and milled over 800 tons of ore—realizing therefrom about $10,000 worth of gold bullion. The out-put is constantly increasing and all the Company needs is more mill capacity to handle its ore.

Storm King Group of Mines

TO CANADIAN INVESTORS

The property comprising what is known as the STORM KING GROUP OF MINES offers an attractive and safe investment. The property is the richest in the country and we believe it would be difficult to secure an investment that promises better returns. The following is a description of the mines written by Capt. A. M. Paul, whose reputation as an expert in mining matters is known far and near.

These properties are situated in the Cable Cove Mining District, about fifteen miles north of Sumpter, Oregon, and about one mile northwest of the Baby McKee mine, about two miles northeast of the Last Chance, the Alpine, the Imperial and the California mines.

The properties in this report consist of seven claims. The names of the seven claims being as follows: The Eureka and the Honest Dollar. These two claims are on the same vein. Adjoining these two claims and paralleling them on the northwest is another vein upon which there are two claims known as the Jessie and Golden Rule, and paralleling them on the northwest there is another vein upon which there are two claims, known as the Storm King and the Osone. The last claim of this group lies to the northwest of the last two named, and is adjoining them. This claim is the Shannon Bell.

In making my report I will commence with the two first named claims of the group, the Eureka and Honest Dollar. The development on these claims consists of a tunnel ninety-seven feet in length, running along the course of the vein, showing two feet ten inches of ore in the top of the tunnel and a little over three feet in the bottom, which assays giving values of from $9.66 to $50 per ton in gold. About four hundred feet in a southwesterly direction there is a shaft on the vein ten feet deep, showing the vein to be from one to two inches wide on the surface and about twelve inches wide in the bottom of the shaft, in which assays give values of from $9.76 to $40 per ton in free milling gold ore.

This vein is exposed by small shafts and open cuts for a distance of fifteen hundred feet, and the course of this vein is north, ten degrees east, and the vein cuts the formation, showing it to be a true fissure, and the formation is granite. This vein shows in places a width of from ten to fifteen feet of mineralized matter, commonly called vein matter, but which is caused by hot solutions from below.

I will now pass to the Jessie and Golden Rule. There has been very little work done upon these two claims, there being one discovery shaft ten feet deep, showing ore on all sides of the shaft, and running in value of from $4 upwards. It is my opinion that with development, this, too, will prove valuable property.

The work on the Storm King and Osone consists of a tunnel near the point of discovery and is driven along the vein for a distance of one hundred and eighty feet, showing ore all the way from the surface to the face of the tunnel, and averaging in width from six to eighteen inches. Three assays give the following values. $12.50. This being a general sample taken from the dump. The other two assays are $41.68 and $78.08 respectively, this being the assorted ore for shipment. The course of this tunnel and vein are north, ten degrees west, and the vein cuts the trend of the formation obliquely (which is granite) and by driving this tunnel five or six hundred feet on the present course it will intersect a quartzite reef (which is running north, twenty degrees east) which would make this a contact vein between granite and quartzite, and should produce a large body of ore, at the intersection of the contact.

The only work done upon the Shannon Bell, the last claim of this group, is the location work, and is not enough to allow of a report being made.

There is water for power purposes one mile from the property, and timber on the ground, of a very fine quality, sufficient to run the mines for many years to come.

All the assays mentioned in this report were made by the assayer, of the Imperial mine at my request, and the ore was taken by me from the properties mentioned.

I will state that I have been a practical miner since 1870, and am now the manager and superintendent of the Imperial mine in this district.

For the Farmer.

The process of tearing down, or what is commonly termed "wearing out" our land, has been the work of generations, and the building up must necessarily be the effort of years. On the ordinary farm, with its five or six year rotation, each particular tract is reached and worked only six or seven times in one generation, which should prompt us to make as much improvement as possible when opportunity offers.

Sheep are necessary on some farms in order to save much of the waste materials. Sheep will eat many plants that other animals will not touch. It may not be profitable for some farmers to keep large flocks of sheep, but a dozen sheep will cost almost nothing. The same may be said of one or two pigs, which give a profit because they consume materials that would otherwise go to the manure heap, but too many sheep or pigs may make the item of labor too costly to allow of a profit.

Value of Shredded Fodder.

Ask men who have made a practice of feeding shredded foder why they do it, and they will tell you that they feed it because their cattle, horses and sheep like it so well and thrive so well upon it, and because they cannot afford to let it go to waste and feed hay which could be sold for two or three times as much as the prepared fodder costs. When the farmer computes the cost of cutting and shredding his fodder it looks high, but he must remember that, although it does cost him from $2.50 to $3.50 per ton, it takes the place of hay which has a market value from two to three times that amount. Men who have made a practice of feeding shredded fodder state that it costs from $3 to $5 an acre to prepare it, and that an acre of average corn will yield from one and one-half to two and one-half tons of dry fodder. They say further that a ton of fodder has as much or perhaps more feed value than a ton of average hay. Corn used for shredding is bound and shocked when the grains are well dented and glazed over, but before the stalk has shown many signs of ripening. When thoroughly dry it is run through the husker and shredded and stowed away in the mow.—Iowa Agriculturist.

Double Yolked Eggs.

Many poultry dealers are proud that their hens produce double-yolked eggs, and I have known numerous cases in my experience of hens laying eggs with three yolks. The habit, however, is one to be discouraged in every possible way, says a writer in London Farmer and Stockbreeder, for it is not an indication of productiveness, but rather of disease. It is caused either by some sudden disturbance from the ordinary conditions of life, as a severe fright, or else it is due to weakness of the egg organs—the natural process of formation not being gone through properly and regularly. In almost every case this condition is brought about by overfeeding—a too rapid development of the yolks causing more than one to leave the ovary at a time to enter the oviduct. A hen which once gets into this habit will always be liable to illness, which usually takes the form of loss of power in the legs, even if an actual rupture does not occur internally. Such a hen should therefore be put at once on short rations with a view to checking for the time being the development of eggs. It is not the hen which lays a double-yolked egg occasionally that is a profitable hen. What the poultry farmer should aim at is a higher general standard in egg production—a better average size and more regular laying. Some hens only lay once every two or three days. These are the "unprofitables," and they are often the birds which are addicted to the "double yolk" evil.

Great Demand for Poultry.

The Dominion Department of Agriculture has received communications from British dealers who desire to purchase Canadian poultry. One of the dealers, Mr. James Blackburn of Manchester, Eng., is at present in Canada negotiating for the shipment of poultry. For four years the Department of Agriculture has exported the chickens fatted at the illustration stations to Mr. Blackburn. The dealings have been perfectly satisfactory, and the prices obtained for the chickens have been profitable. Mr. Blackburn said that he would like to handle 3,000 cases of chickens per week.

Mr. Hare, chief of the Dominion Poultry Division, states that prices offer substantial inducements to Canadian exporting firms to ship poultry to Great Britain. The poultry should be forwarded in a steamship equipped with cold storage. The railway and steamship companies will inform shippers when suitable steamships will leave St. John or Halifax. Even on small consignments of poultry the freight charges will not be over one cent per pound.

The chickens fatted at the illustration stations have been sold in Toronto, Montreal, St. John, N.B., Halifax, N.S., Sydney, C.B., and Charlottetown, P.E.I., and also to dealers in other smaller cities. The price obtained for fatted chickens in Toronto was 11c per pound, in Montreal 13c per pound, and in the cities in the Maritime Provinces, with the exception of Charlottetown, 11c per pound. The chickens were sold in Charlottetown at 10c per pound.

The fatted chickens sold to the merchants gave perfect satisfaction, and it would be to the interest of farmers to fatten their chickens before they are marketed. The department could have sold several times as many fatted chickens if an extra number could have been bought from the farmers in the vicinity of the fattening stations. A Charlottetown merchant stated: "We have a reply from the party to whom we shipped the last lot, and he speaks of them as being very fine, and expressed surprise that we could produce such chickens in this country." Almost any farmer in this country can produce fatted chickens equal to the Government chickens at little extra expense for labor and feed.

Cross Bulls.

We once knew a man who lived among his fellow-farmers with the reputation of being morose, surly and unsociable. One neighbor, who had known him from childhood, accounted for his peculiar traits by saying that "he was brought up unsocially as a boy."

There is something in this when applied to men, and we believe it to be true when applied to bulls. As a rule, the bull is kept in a separate apartment, away from all social contact with his kind. He is not made to work and consequently misses this powerful influence for the promotion of the spirit of obedience and docility. He is given but little exercise, is fed well and what wonder is there if he soon becomes charged with all the power of the cartridge of dynamite and about as ready to go off on slight provocation.

We have never had a cross bull that we had reared to full service ourselves. At the present time there stands at the head of our herd two young Guernsey bulls nearly two years of age, who graze together in the same paddock and who take their turn, night and morning, on the tread power in separating the milk. In the stable these bulls stand alongside of the cows.

It is astonishing how civilized a member of society it makes of a bull when he has to work like other folks, and is not shut away from his fellows as though he was a criminal.

By this, however, we do not mean to be understood as saying that every bull should be not handled with a full idea that he is liable at any time to become vicious. But the chances of such a collapse are reduced fully 75 per cent. if he is reared in a kind, firm and industrious manner. Half of the deviltry among men and bulls occurs because of a lack of employment. We have often noticed that with boys, for instance, one hour's work was worth two hours of preaching to keep them out of mischief.—Hoard's Dairyman.

Professor Roberts of the Cornell station claims that to fatten calves successfully on skim milk and grain to supply the butter fat, the calves should first be fed a moderate amount of new milk for a few days, and then skim milk should be gradually substituted so that at the end of a few weeks the calves would be fed entirely on skim milk. If seven pounds of corn meal is mixed with one pound of linseed meal, old process preferable, he finds it will make a fairly good substitute for the butter fats of the new milk.

There is no monopoly in the sheep business, nor is it dependent upon the efforts of any particular individual. What the farmers should do is not to become discouraged, but endeavor to improve their flocks and get larger profits. Should wool remain low the farmer may gain the difference in price by adding to the weight of the carcass. The difficulty with our flocks is that they are composed of small sheep. Wool has absorbed all the attention, and yet it is not the only source of revenue to be derived from sheep.

Twenty years ago Kansas had but 471,548 milch cows, and scarcely a creamery worthy the name, and their product was unsought. Ten years ago Kansas had 567,353 milch cows; creameries of a better class were being slowly established, but their output begged a market. To-day Kansas has 802,738 milch cows, or more than at any previous time, and many high-grade creameries and cheese factories, including the largest creamery in the world, hundreds of contributory receiving and skim stations, and their product is not only favorably known in the principal markets, but sought beyond the supply. "Brains in the man and blood and feed in the cow," observes Secretary F. D. Coburn of the State Experiment Station, "are essential to success in Kansas, as elsewhere."

Graveyard Coughs and Colds

Cured Quickly by Catarrhozone

A cough or cold this season of the year paves the way for pneumonia or consumption. The best remedy is "Catarrhozone." It eases a cough in five minutes, and colds cannot exist but a few hours where it is used. Mrs. H. L. Cassowith, residing at Glendive, Montana, was worried by a "graveyard" cough. In the following letter she tells how Catarrhozone cured her in one week:

"I had a bad cough for several months last fall that settled on my lungs. I was worried very much to think that nothing I used could shake it off, but reading in the Halifax "Presbyterian Witness" of the wonderful cures Catarrhozone was effecting, I decided to try it. The irritability and soreness was taken out of my throat in a few days, and in less than one week it entirely cured my cough.

"It is with great gratitude and pleasure that I recommend Catarrhozone. I am sure it will benefit and cure all who use it."

(Signed) Mrs. H. L. Cassowith.

The reason Catarrhozone always cures is that it goes right to the sore spot, which it heals and makes well quickly. It is antiseptic and destroys disease germs in every part of the system. For Coughs, Colds and Bronchitis, nothing compares with Catarrhozone. It is very simple to use, contains no injurious drugs, and is warranted perfectly safe to use. Catarrhozone Inhaler is suitable to use in a street car, theatre, church any place at any time. Complete outfit costs but $1.00 and is guaranteed to cure or your money back. Trial size, 25c., sold by druggists, or by mail, from N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

The Times has been requested to state that the Social committee of the Y.M.C.A. invite all young men and citizens generally who are interested in the work to call at the building on New Year's Day, January 1st. Merry Wedding Bells

On Christmas eve a very pretty wedding took place at 600 Aylmer street, the residence of Mr. George Curtis, when his daughter, Miss Alice Patience, was united in marriage to Mr. Newton Theodore Switzer, of Toronto. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. P. Wilson, pastor of the George street Methodist church. Miss Alice Fairly was bridesmaid while Mr. Walter Kilkey, of Toronto, supported the groom. There were about forty guests present.

Mr. and Mrs. Switzer will reside in Toronto.

A Clincher

The following item was handed to The Times for publication.

A couple of lads, who looked as though they had come from the country, were standing inside the Ontario Bank, waiting for their father, who had business there.

"Do you know that sometimes there's a lot of pizen microbes in money?" said one of the boys.

"Yaas," replied his companion, "but you can't make me believe it. The idea of a pusson gettin disease that way! Look at Mr. Crane—he's over forty years old."

East Peterborough Liberals

Norwood Register:—A meeting of the Norwood Liberal Association was held on Friday evening last for the purpose of re-organizing and arranging for the next general election. Mr. H. G. Buck was re-elected president; Mr. M. H. Knox, secretary, and Mr. P. W. Reynolds, treasurer. Committee for No. 1 polling division: Messrs. A. J. Robertson, P. W. Reynolds and John McMillan; No. 2 division: Messrs. Hiram Fry, S. B. Girven and Fred Fry. From the tone of the meeting there seemed to be a strong feeling in favor of the selection of an eastern man as the party candidate in the next general election. The names of Reeve Finlay, Mr. H. G. Buck, and Mr. W. Buck were mentioned. The two last named gentlemen, however, thought that Mr. Finlay should be the coming man.

Winter Fishing

A Peterborough fisher who knows the sport thoroughly, said to The Times yesterday: "People think because the lakes and rivers and ponds are frozen over, that fishing is all over, too. But that is a mistake. Some of the best fishing I ever enjoyed took place in the winter, through the ice. The fish are all there still, always, excepting those that have been caught during the regular season. Those that were small last spring and summer are much larger now and more worth while taking. And they are hungry, too, far more so than during the summer when the chances of getting food were much better. When a hole is made in the ice, you can soon expect fish around, anticipating food, or if for no better reason, they will come to get fresh air. They will accept almost any kind of food, and if you can manage to keep within the law, or evade the fishery inspector if you happen to break the statute as well as the ice, you will have fun in fishing this way that you never knew during the balmy days of summer. The sport is excellent, but if you don't look out it may come high."

SEIZED THE BODY

FUNERAL PROCESSION STOPPED BY LINDSAY CONSTABLE

On its Way to the Grave Fred Conway's Baby was taken Charge of by Authorities.

Lindsay Watchman-Warder—Sensations thicken. What of them cannot be supplied by this town need not be sought elsewhere. The startling episodes of the living reach a climax in an episode of the dead. Having arrested the delinquents animate, the police proceed to corral a corpse.

Now a funeral is in solemn procession it is regarded with respect, treated with deference, to it all else accords the right of way. It is the occasion of sympathy, moralizing and requiescats. Let it pass. God rest the dead.

Not so. Along comes the sombre cortege, hearse, mourners, and their heavy-gaited following. They are on route for the tomb. Out rushes an official waving a legal paper. Stop! He halts the leading rig. "I command you to go no further. I have authority to take charge of the corpse. I forbid the funeral. Turn back."

This was on Thursday afternoon, over near Mills' store. The corpse was that of Mr. Fred. Conway's infant, the officer Constable Short.

The explanation: On the night on Sunday, Nov. 22nd, Mr. and Mrs. F. Conway, drove over the embankment of a gravel pit. Their child was injured. It had been ill ever since, and the parents talked of an action against the town. To fortify itself for such an action, council had had doctors to examine the little sufferer. When it died, these doctors advised a post-mortem examination. Coroner Burrows was consulted by the Mayor, and, it appears, somewhat irregularly, and unknown to His Worship, prepared papers, providing for calling a jury. These he gave to Constable Short, with the remark that there was not much time to lose. Supposing he was required and had authority to stop the funeral, the constable proceeded as above described. After all it was decided not to hold an inquest, and the body was buried next day. Last night the council settled in full with Mr. Conway for $175.

A Pretty Souvenir

Mr. A. J. Hall showed The Times a very pretty souvenir received by him from the Mayor of Capetown, South Africa. These souvenirs are being sent to every soldier who served during the Boer war, about 20,000 in number. A very clear view of Capetown and the harbor is shown, with the great mountains in the background. Below are the following lines:—

Capetown joins with the Empire
In feelings of heartfelt thanks
For the signal services which Her Majesty's
Citizen soldiers have rendered in upholding
The Imperial authority in South Africa.
The Empire is justly proud of the gallant conduct
Of the volunteer forces during the engagements
Throughout the campaign, and Capetown congratulates
The Volunteers upon the consummation of a service
Which has resulted in the consolidation of the Empire
And which has cemented the ties of affection
Between the Colonies and the Mother Country.
The citizens of Capetown wish you a prosperous voyage
And a happy homecoming where our hearts
Will join in the rejoicing welcomes which await you.
God Save The Queen.

The man on the stage who does the trick of escaping from firmly tied ropes, submits to the bonds with a smile. He knows he can get out of the ropes that are being knotted. Put the same man in the woods and let Indian captors bind him to a tree for torture and he would struggle to the last against the bonds.

When the stomach is diseased there are bonds being woven every hour about the organs dependent on the stomach—heart, lungs, liver, kidneys, etc. The folly of mankind is to passively submit to the fastening of these bonds with no effort to escape until the pain they cause arouses fear.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It cures diseases of heart, liver, lungs, kidneys and other organs, when these diseases, as is often the case, have their origin in the diseased stomach.

"For a long time I was suffering and was hardly able to get about," writes Mr. Andrew J. Jennings, of Thomas, Tucker Co., W. Va., Box 194. "Was bothered with kidney trouble and my whole system was out of order; had no appetite. A friend of mine told me to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I did so and the first bottle restored my appetite. I took six bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and some of the 'Pleasant Pellets' and feel like a new person."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cleanse the clogged system from impurities.

DRAWS RUSSIA'S IRE, GREAT BRITAIN HATED MORE THAN JAPAN

Russia Believes That England Is Urging Japan on to War Against the Former

THE ATTITUDE OF THE ENGLISH PRESS

Powerful British Fleet Ready for Action If War Breaks Out, Czar Now Backs Down

London, Dec. 28—From latest advices from St. Petersburg it appears that the feeling of hostility toward Great Britain is even greater than that toward Japan. England is looked on as the real power behind Japan and is accused in the Russian capital of trying to force a war in the belief that it will give the British a chance to reestablish their waning prestige in the east. The Russian newspapers are displaying the liveliest irritation at the British press, whose anti-Russian attitude in the present dispute has aroused great public animosity.

On the supposition that Great Britain, as a last resort, might threaten to forcibly interfere, the United States naval attache, Captain Charles H. Stockton pointed out to a press representative that Great Britain's extraordinary naval mobilization at the present moment was a great factor toward peace.

Powerful British Fleet Ready.

"The Mediterranean fleet," said Captain Stockton, "hovering toward Japan, is powerful. It is around Suez, half way. The British fleet now in the far east could quickly be reenforced by part or possibly even the whole of the Mediterranean fleet, whose duties would then be taken up by the channel squadron, leaving the home squadron in British waters. Great Britain never had so many ships in commission or men as she has today."

The United States military attache, Major James H. Beacom, similarly pointed out that if Great Britain insisted on peace she has "behind any such demand more men of campaigning age who have been under fire than any nation on earth a military advantage which doubtless is not overlooked by any European power."

Japanese Ministers in Consultation.

A dispatch to Reuter's Telegram Company from Tokio, says Premier Katsura and War Minister Terauchi visited Marquis Ito, president of the privy council and Marquis Yamagata, chief of the council of field marshals at their villas this morning, two hours distant by rail from Tokio. The meetings are believed to have been connected with important developments in the Russo-Japanese situation. The ministers returned to Tokio this evening.

The Japanese press is urging the immediate dispatch of troops to Corea, where, it is asserted, Japanese interests are menaced by Russian military pressure in the north and Russian intrigues at Seoul. The impression is growing in the best informed circles that the adoption of such a policy is now inevitable.

Think Russia Will Give Up.

Berlin, Dec. 28—An intimation has reached the Japanese legation here that Russia will concede Japan's requests. The British government, it is understood from another source, has represented to the Czar that Great Britain deems Japanese demands just and earnestly expects that Russia will grant them. This representation is supported by the utterances of the British ambassadors here and in Paris and Vienna, who have informed the respective governments to which they are accredited, that Japan, in the opinion of the British government, will fight, if Russia holds to the position taken in her recent note.

The Russian ambassador here has for several days been freely asking the opinions of the diplomatic corps.

Better Feeling in St. Petersburg.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 28—The hopefulness in official circles of a pacific settlement of the Russo-Japanese fleet was reflected today on the bourse, which has largely recovered from the nervousness which has prevailed for several days.

United States to Send Warship.

Washington, Dec. 28—At the request of the state department, Secretary Moody today sent a cablegram to Rear Admiral Sterling, commanding the Asiatic squadron, the despatch a warship to Chemulpo, Corea, to protect American interests there.

Russia Pouring in Troops.

Victoria, B.C., Dec. 28—Advices were brought by the steamer Olympia of increased reenforcements arriving in Manchuria from Russia. Correspondents at Mukden tell of the transport of troops to the southern borders, towards the Corean frontier, at the rate of twenty or thirty railway carriages a day. The total number transported towards the beginning of December was 17,000 all of whom had newly arrived from Europe. Reenforcements which had arrived at Liao-Yang had arbitrarily taken up winter quarters in Chinese temples and mercantile houses, causing great indignation and considerable suffering among the Chinese.

Orders also have been sent to hurry the Russian fleet now coming from Russia to Port Arthur, and consisting of the battleship Oslabya, cruisers Dmitri, Donskoi and Alwaz, several destroyers and ten torpedo boats.

Washington, Dec. 28— the warlike instincts of some of President Roosevelt's advisers were quickened today when the discovery was made that the Chinese emperor had not ratified the recent negotiated commercial treaty with the United States. By the terms of that treaty, this country is guaranteed free access to the ports of Mukden and Shantung, in Manchuria. The senate ratified it about a week ago before adjournment for the holiday recess, and it was taken for granted that that was the only ceremony required to give its terms force and effect.

Minister Conger was communicated with concerning the senate's action, and instructed to inform the officials of the Chinese foreign office that the United States were prepared to take immediate advantage of their rights under the treaty. Mr. Conger's reply was disconcerting. It was to the effect that there had been no formal ratification of the treaty by China and could be none until the emperor had issued an edict to that purpose.

Sees Russia's Hand in Delay.

Evidently Mr. Conger's message conveyed important information bearing upon the cause of the emperor's failure to discharge his obligation to the United States. State department officials refused to discuss the matter today, but it is known that they are in communication with Mr. Conger and that the minister is endeavoring to ascertain the reasons for China's delay.

It is strongly suspected at the department that Russian influence is responsible for the delay. Russia does not cordially indorse our original efforts to negotiate the treaty. An official of the department intimated tonight that if it could be shown conclusively that Russia was interfering in any manner to prevent Chinese ratification of the treaty, there would be an exchange of notes between Washington and St. Petersburg that would at least be memorable.

Pleases Hay and Great Britain.

Secretary Hay and his subordinates are delighted over this latest turn of events. They are hoping that Minister Conger will ascertain that Russia has been intriguing to prevent Chinese ratification of the treaty, for then the secretary's cherished plan to mix up in the Asiatic affair will be realized. This is exactly what Great Britain has been desirous of bringing about for months, and it is presumed that the Secretary of State is desirous of pleasing Great Britain.

The belief among officials in Washington is that war between Russia and Japan is inevitable. It is their belief also that the conflict cannot be delayed much longer.

JAPAN WANTS SHIPS

Negotiating For Two Vessels Built in Chili

Minister to London Says War is Inevitable Unless Russia Modifies her Position

London, Dec. 28—Japan is negotiating for the purchase of two Chilian warships, the armored cruiser Esmeralda, and another, probably the battleship Captain Pratt, which are for sale. It is now only a matter of price. Negotiations with other South American governments for the purchase of warships are in progress.

Baron Hayashi, the Japanese Minister, to Great Britain, said to-day, relative to these negotiations:

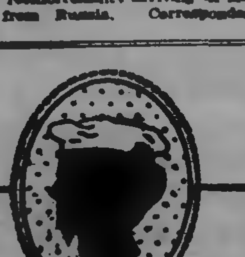
"We want more ships. Of course, this is only a precautionary measure, and it may be a lot of expense all for nothing."

"I have no indication of the nature of the Russian reply. There is no truth whatsoever in the report that Japan's last note stipulated the time limit."

Asked about the despatch from Berlin, of December 24, saying the British Government had represented to the Czar that Great Britain "deemed Japan's demands just, and earnestly expected that Russia would grant them," Baron Hayashi, while he was not aware of the precise action taken by Great Britain at St. Petersburg, said "The British Government is well aware that Japan will be obliged to go to war unless Russia modifies the position she has taken up in her last note."

At the Foreign Office here nothing is yet known of the probable nature of the Russian reply.

Berlin, Dec. 28— It was definitely decided today that the automobile races for the James Gordon Bennett Cup will take place, June 12, 1904.



When you stop to think that tea biscuit made at home with cost but five cents per dozen, is there any reason for buying at the bakers?

Cleveland's Baking Powder

FARMERS SHY OF MONEY

Because About $200,000 is Locked Up in Cheese

Woodstock, Dec. 28— The townspeople, for the most part, seem to have lots of money to spend. With the farmers, however, it is a little different. In explanation of this one farmer said yesterday that he knew of three factories, which had about $60,000 worth of cheese locked up, unsold. Another man, using this figure as a basis, estimated that something like $200,000 worth of cheese was being held by the various factories in the country. This all means of course, that there was just that much cash less to spend at Christmas time.

WOULD HELP CANADA

A War would Largely Increase the Price of Grain

Toronto, Dec. 28—The grain men of Toronto are convinced that the trouble between Russia and Japan is at a critical stage. A prominent dealer stated that the foreign cables for grain had been so far in excess of previous orders as to lead to a conference of the various exporters. The orders were for the most part from the north coast of Britain, although there were several unusual orders from Germany and France.

The cable orders for grain yesterday at Montreal and Toronto exceeded two million dollars. The prices offered were in line with prevailing quotations, but not a single order was filled, the grain men being confident that the present complications will lead to a higher price for Canadian grain

SET PRINCESS ALICE FREE

German Court Grants Divorce from Prince Frederick

Dresden, Dec. 27—The court has dissolved the marriage of Prince Frederick and Princess Alice of Schoenburg-Waldenburg. The court simply announced the decree of divorce, without explanation of the reasons. The proceedings were in entire privacy, though no concealment was made of the fact that each side accused each other of infidelity.

The princess, who is a daughter of Don Carlos, the Spanish pretender, was reported some time ago to have eloped with her coachman, an Italian of the name of Emilio Maberni. This was denied from several sources, and she began divorce proceedings against Prince Frederick on the ground of bodily injury and forcible deprivation of her liberty. The prince and princess were married by the present pope while he was patriarch of Venice and the princess expects that the pontiff will agree to this dissolution of the marriage.

THE SPEECHES.

Mayor Roger was the first to speak. He appreciated the honor of again being nominated for Mayor. Had it not been for the circumstances existing at present, he would have felt disposed to give up the onerous duties attached to the office. The year had been one in which the Mayor and Aldermen had received considerable buffeting. It had been a year of very great interest—every line of business has been very prosperous and the Council had done what it could to keep the town to the front. Among the important matters that marked the year, he referred first to the union of Ashburnham, which he said had been happily consummated. He was impressed with the benefits of union as very much beyond those existing in a separate municipality. The feelings and susceptibilities of Ashburnham should be considered, however, until the separate interests were merged into the interests of the whole, and everything satisfactorily arranged. The village should have a fair representation; it was only entitled to one member as being only one ward, but the Mayor said that they should have two in order that a feeling would be inspired that the South Ward was being carefully looked after. He referred to the street lighting and street railway bylaw. Before Mr. Stuart's proposition had been made to the Council that gentleman had told him that he was considering the union of street railway and lighting interests, the idea being that the latter should carry the former until it should become a paying institution. The opinion was that $50,000 would be sufficient for the resuscitation of the railway, and, proceeding in the matter, Mr. Stuart, with whom was associated Hon. Geo. A. Cox, had estimates and plans prepared of a radial railway line. The proposition was made to the Council, that if the old lighting contract was renewed with the Peterborough Light & Power Co. at $80 a lamp per year for 10 years the street railway would be revived and operated. The Otonabee Power Co. made an offer of $35 a lamp. This was done and Mr. Stuart's proposition was taken up. The Council considered with him and his associates the terms of the agreement, and finally they were settled satisfactorily. Mr. Stuart required that it be put in the name of the Peterborough Light & Power Co., with whom he had an understanding, and he put up a guarantee of $5,000 that he would carry out the proposition. Mayor Roger said that considerable delay had been caused by the Otonabee Power Co., but he was sure Mr. Stuart was still ready to proceed with the matter. The entire question would be submitted to the people and they would have opportunity of deciding.

Mr. Yelland was next called upon, and he criticised the Council, first, because they had voted the Scotch curlers $300 or $200 "to have a booze around town." While he was Mayor or connected in any way with the Council, he had tried to do what was right. He thought there should have been more light given on the street railway and lighting bylaws. The people, he said, should have known all about it. Mr. Stuart, he thought, knew really nothing about the thing. "If I'm Mayor," said Mr. Yelland, "I'll be straight up and down, like the front leg of a dog."

Mr. Henry Best, the next nominee, was called but was not present. His nominator, Mr. J. W. Metheral, was asked to speak. He had heard that Mr. Best was prepared to run, and he thought he was one of the men whom the ratepayers should support. He had stood up in the Council time and again against all opposition for the interests of the people. Mr Yelland, he said, had also stood up for the town, and the manner in which he had opposed action looking to the raising of taxes had shown that he had the backbone of a whale. Last year, Mr. Metheral said, he had supported young men, who, as soon as they had taken their seats in the Council, supported expenditure that increased the debt of the town.

Ald. McWilliams presumed that in referring to young men, Mr. Metheral had meant him, and he asked for some more explicit statement.

Mr. Metheral stated that he had good reasons in support of the statement he made.

Mr Wm. Montgomery asked Mr. McWilliams if he was party to the fixing of the C.G.E. Co. assessment at $100,000, which had not been allowed because it was not submitted to the people.

Ald McWilliams stated that he knew nothing about the matter, that he had not supported the raising of the rates, and was not on the committee to arrange a reception to the Scotch curlers.

Mr. John Sawers, as a nominator, was then heard, and he criticised the Mayor and Council because in the street railway deal it had not been assured that Mr. Stuart or the Cereal Company would proceed in the matter once the agreement was secured. He held that if the Peterborough Radial Railway Company secured the control, they would continue to keep the road underground. Mr. Sawers was of the opinion that the lighting of the town could be improved, no matter who had the contract. The Council, he said, was going to ask the people to make a bylaw which the judge held was no good. He favored the granting of the lighting contract to the Otonabee Power Co. "You may say they are sharp," he remarked, "but the Peterborough Light & Power Co. can look after themselves." Mr. Sawers also gave some history about the C.G.E. Co. exemption, and said Ald. McWilliams had nothing to do with it. He wished his audience a prosperous New Year.

GREAT BRITAIN'S WAR ON THIBET

This Country will be the Next to Come Into the Empire

London, Dec. 28—The advance of a small British expedition into Southern Tibet is the latest of a sequence of events which date back to 1886.

In that year a Tibetan force invaded the state of Sikkim, an Indian principality under the suzerainty of Britain. The government of India tried to get it out by negotiations, not only with the Tibetans but with China, which is supposed to control Thibet. These failing, a British armed force drove the Tibetans out of Sikkim in 1888. Frontier relations continued strained, and Britain pressed for a formal treaty, which might end the touble. This treaty was obtained in 1890, whereby the Tibetans agreed to allow peaceful trade between India and Tibet; and in particular to make the city of Yatung in Tibet a 'free port' so to speak.

But the treaty did not do what was expected. The Tibetans are stated to have paid no attention to it. They are accused by the British Government of neither respecting the frontier, nor permitting trade. The matter was hardly one that the government of India could neglect. Tibet is not, as some may imagine, a country vastly distant from the important points of India. A spur of Tibetan territory runs south to within 400 miles of Calcutta—little over the distance from Montreal to Toronto, or from Ottawa to Quebec. Britain could not well afford to allow her prestige to suffer in Tibetan eyes, with Russia just at the other side. The government of India accordingly called on the Tibetan rulers to send envoys to meet British delegates, with a view of arriving at a better understanding regarding the treaty. The Tibetan government appears to have agreed to send envoys, and then not done it. Col. Younghusband entered Thibet to meet these envoys. Failing to find them, he seems to have been ordered to proceed towards Lhassa, the Tibetan capital, and for that purpose his original escort of 200 men has been augmented by a couple of Sikh regiments, and is stated now to total 2,800. Their present destination is Gyantsee, a large town 150 miles short of Lhassa.

The fact that so small a British force should be sent into the heart of Tibet seems to indicate that Tibet is no very great potentate, politically speaking, except as a pawn in the Asiatic game of chess between Britain and Russia. It is merely that the safety of India requires a certainty that Tibet shall understand that Britain is not to be trifled with.

ENGLISHMEN ARE MOSTLY AT PEACE.

Only One Little War Darkens the Christmas Festivities

London, December 26 — Once again Christmas finds Englishmen at home singing "Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men," in every church, while Englishmen abroad are busy killing their fellow creatures. This year it is in East Africa, and no doubt, things being as they are, the slaughter cannot be helped. The Times finds consolation in the fact that England's armed foes this Christmas are only savage tribesmen in Somaliland, not members of any great Christian communion. Gen. Egerton is following in Somaliland the driving tactics, by which Lord Kitchener at last cornered the Boers, and the War Office assures the world that everything has been done which care and forethought could suggest.

Just such self-confidence presaged many disasters in South Africa, but the Somaliland cloud seems to Englishmen small indeed, when compared with the threatening position in the far east. The Spectator strikes today a most pessimistic note, and is quite prepared for war. It sees especial peril for England. It is indeed obvious to every thinking Englishman that the Anglo-Japanese alliance has missed its mark as a threat to Russia, and the imminent risk of British embroilment is for the first time compelling the English people seriously to reflect whether this fighting compact with a yellow people, whom Englishmen do not begin to understand, against a white people whom at least, they should know from long experience, is quite the thing for England. Even the Spectator, anxious as it is to make friends with the Balfour ministry outside the fiscal controversy, describes the alliance as but rash. Any idea of American entanglement in the far East conflict is evidently dismissed by English critics. Says one review writer today: "Diplomacy to be successful, must ultimately rest on the implication of force. The beginning and end of Mr. Hay's diplomacy is despatch writing. He must feel his final impotence when he reflects that American opinion will support him only so long as he spills ink, not blood." But even Hays cannot bluff for ever, and the writer anticipates that he will find himself one of these days manoeuvred into a position essentially similar to that of the French at Fashoda.

THE COLOMBIAN SITUATION.

Of the Colombian situation, the weekly reviews say nothing. The Times' New York correspondent is apparently whistling to the wind in his diurnal diatribes against Colombia, and what he is pleased to call her chief organ, namely, the Evening Post. British public opinion still fails to take President Roosevelt's Panama with becoming seriousness.

WILL BE MISTRESS FROM THE LAKE TO THE POLE

Canada will Brook No Interference from the United States at Hudson Bay

London, Dec. 28.—The Morning Leader, referring to Mr. McGrath's articles regarding Hudson Bay, says the situation suggests Dogberry and the watchman in "Much Ado About Nothing." If however, as is not unlikely, Washington insists on the old ground in regard to coast disputes, Britain will have great difficulty in maintaining the wholly British character of Hudson Bay.

Mr McGrath tells the simple truth in stating that if the bay was opened to general commerce it would divert great quantities of grain from United States seaports. Canada is not troubling her head about fiscalities or any similar point, but that she owns Hudson Bay, and she will be mistress from the lake to the pole or know the reason why.

PANAMA PRAISES THE KING

Colon, Dec. 28.—Colon is joyful over the official news that the British Government has recognized the Republic of Panama. The foreign population of Colon is largely composed of natives of Great Britain. Governor Melendez, accompanied by a band and a military escort and joined by a great crowd of the inhabitants, assembled in front of the British Consulate, where the band played old English airs. A torchlight procession was afterwards formed, the crowd marching through the streets singing "God Save the King."

GNAWED BY PIGS

Body of an Indian Found Near Lynden Ont.

Brantford, Ont., Dec. 28—Last night the body of an Indian, named Carpenter was found five miles from Lynden badly eaten by pigs. Carpenter was in Brantford on Saturday, with a team and endeavoring to sell five pigs, but did not dispose of them, and, returning home, got on the railway cattleguard, near Cainsville, with his horses, and but for the timely notice of some Cainsville citizens, who stopped an approaching train, Carpenter would have been killed. He was put on the right road for home, and nothing more was heard of him until two young men going along a side road which Carpenter had taken, discovered the rig turned over, and his body pinned underneath. The horses, it is supposed, were there from Saturday night, until last night, without any food, starving. The pigs, when discovered, were eating Carpenter's body. An arm, leg, and part of the head was gone. The coroner was notified, but decided no inquest necessary.

EXPECT ENGLAND TO FIGHT

German Officials Think Great Britain will Back Up Japan

Berlin, Dec. 28—The German foreign office in estimating the probabilities of war in the far east, fixes its attention at this moment on Great Britain rather than on Japan, for it is recognized that Japan is only waiting for Great Britain to give the word before beginning hostilities. A new and even portentious element in the situation, as it is looked on here, is the rising feeling in Great Britain that Russia must yield or Japan and Great Britain ought to fight her.

It is learned from the highest diplomatic source that the German government, while still refusing to believe that war is certain, is convinced now that if war between Russia and Japan comes, Great Britain will take a part in it.

Rome, Dec. 28—The situation in the far east is being followed with great interest here. The rumor, which gained wide currency in Rome that war had been declared between Russia and Japan was promptly contradicted by Mr. Ohoyama, the Japanese minister to Italy, who in an interview today said that Japan had the complete sympathy of the United States which desired the independence and pacific development of Corea.

The Employees of the Cordage Co. Make Liberal Gifts

Thursday was a busy day at the Cordage Works. Mr. A. L. Sykes, the popular manager, was the recipient of a handsome ebony gold-headed cane; Mr. T. P. Connor, superintendent, a pair of fur gauntlets, Mr. E. B. Fowler, accountant, a gold-headed umbrella; while Miss Slater and Miss Grady, stenographers, each received a choice basket of bon-bons. The foremen of the different departments were also impressed with the generosity of Santa Claus. Mr. Jas. McCurdy, of the spinning room, acknowledges with thanks the receipt of a Morrice chair; Mr. M. Mellis, of the machine shop, a gold-mounted fountain pen; Mr. J. S. Noyes, of the preparation room, a hat rack; Mr. John Cater, of the rope room, a fountain pen; Mr. Stanley Jones, a brush and comb case, and Mr. Jas. Dessutel, the office boy, a new dollar bill.

ROYAL VISIT TO IRELAND.

The King and Queen go to Ireland again next year. A Nationalist leader, when asked what this second visit meant answered: "It means that the King is a friend to Ireland. We drink the King's health now as we never did, and we drink it standing. We like him, that's all, and he likes us. He says and does just the right thing just at the right moment. We know, too, that all his influence is on the side of common sense and sympathy in British legation. Yes, the British sovereign will get a real Irish welcome."

STILL CONSIDERING.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 28.—The Russian Government is still considering the reply of the Japanese Government. A reconsideration is considered as a matter of course here. The Russian Foreign Office has always insisted that the Russian proposals were so liberal that it would be scarcely possible to conceive any further concessions.

Detroit Specialist Discovers Something Entirely New for the Cure of Men's Diseases in Their Own Homes.

You Pay Only if Cured

Expects No Money Unless He Cures You—Method and Full Particulars Sent Free—Write For It This Very Day

A Detroit specialist who has 14 certificates and diplomas from medical colleges and boards, has perfected a startling method of curing the diseases of men in their own homes; so that there may be no doubt in the mind of any man that he has

DR. S. GOLDBERG.

The Possessor of 14 Diplomas and Certificates Who Wants No Money That He Does Not Earn.

both the method and the ability to do as he says, Dr. Goldberg, the discoverer, will send the method entirely free to all men who send him their name and address. He wants to hear from men who have stricture that they have been unable to get cured, prostatic trouble, sexual weakness, varicocele, lost manhood, blood poison, hydrocele, emaciation of parts, impotency, etc. His wonderful method not only cures the condition itself, but likewise all the complications, such as rheumatism, bladder or kidney trouble, heart disease, nervous debility, etc.

The doctor realizes that it is one thing to make claims and another thing to back them up, so he has made it a rule not to ask for money unless he cures you, and when you are cured he feels sure that you will willingly pay him a small fee. It would seem, therefore, that it is to the best interests of every man who suffers in this way to write the doctor confidentially and lay your case before him. He sends the method, as well as many booklets on the subject, including the one that contains the 14 diplomas and certificates, entirely free. Address him simply Dr. S. Goldberg, 208 Woodward Ave., Room [illegible], Detroit, Mich., and it will all immediately be sent you free.

THE WAGES SYSTEM

In an address before the Philadelphia Society of Ethical Culture Carroll D. Wright, United States Commissioner of labor, was inspired by the spirit of prophecy.

Under this inspiration he said: "The wages system will pass away. In its stead, I believe, there will come a system which will be composed of the profit-sharing and co-operative ideas."

If men with capital and men without capital choose to get together on a profit-sharing basis, there is nothing to hinder. They are free to make any arrangement of the kind they may wish to make.

If men with small capital choose to combine their capital under a co-operative plan there is nothing to hinder. Small capitalists can organize as corporations if they like as well as large ones.

There may be more profit-sharing and more cooperation in the future, though the success of the ventures which have already been made does not seem to have awakened a widespread enthusiasm in the minds of working people. Certain it is that the trades unions are not abandoning the "wages system" for co-operation to any extent and that they are not wildly striking to force profit-sharing upon employers.

It is equally certain that neither profit-sharing nor cooperation will become universal, and that the "wages system" will pass away, as Mr. Wright predicts, until business and industrial enterprises involving great and prolonged risk of loss and needing the assistance of labor pass away.

In a great many cases, even in well-established branches of industry and trade, new ventures are attended with losses for long periods of time, sometimes for years.

Of course, there can be no profit-sharing where there are no profits, and workmen are not going to share losses with employers who risk their money in hazardous ventures, in which they may lose much money. It is evident, too, that there will be no cooperation or that it will be very shortlived if attempted in ventures where large sums must be invested and heavy losses must be sustained before there can be returns.

Mr. Wright says that the wages system "depends too largely for its equities upon the generosity and great-mindedness of employers."

That is not so, as the facts in the cases above referred to clearly show. The "equities" are cared for chiefly by the law of demand and supply and very little by the generosity and great-mindedness of anybody. Under the natural condition which is improperly called "the wages system," the capitalist takes the risk and bears the losses, while the man who works for wages is practically sure of his pay, no matter how much his employer may lose.

This is most fortunate for the man who works, not only because it shields him from losses but because every risky venture made by capital increases the demand for labor and tends to advance wages. This mode of paying the laborer is, on the whole, to his advantage, and is not likely to pass away very soon.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

This is the third day since the North Renfrew election.

There was a Hale storm in North Renfrew on Saturday. There is no truth in the rumor that Dunlop got his tyre punctured.

Mr. James Findlay, of North Renfrew, says he is still a member of the great Liberal party, but he does not seem to be sinfully proud of the fact.

A lumberman of an enquiring disposition walked into the Copeland House, Pembroke, on Thursday, and expressed a desire to see the Machine.

The Conservatives engaged twelve lawyers to watch the scrutineers in North Renfrew. By a singular omission nobody was engaged to watch the lawyers.

The London Chamber of Commerce is promoting the study of foreign languages from a commercial point of view. Classes in Spanish, French, Italian, German, Dutch and Russian are already in a flourishing condition, and instruction in other languages is provided as soon as students present themselves. Three pupils have entered for a course in Chinese, and classes in Japanese, Hausa, Hindustani and Portuguese are in prospect.

The Engineering News prints a searching report on the typhoid fever epidemic at Butler, Pennsylvania, which is made by Dr. George A. Soper, who visited the locality for the purpose. Pollution of the city water supply is admittedly the cause, and the local board of health and the Butler water company come in for severe handling as the responsible powers. Of the two, the private water company is called the chief offender, but the board of health was so negligent as to have kept only an indifferent record of typhoid cases, and thus made easier the contamination of the water. There was lax sanitary administration all around with such terrible consequences as the record shows to date.

PANAMA PLEASES THE BRITISH

Colon, Dec. 28.—Colon is joyful over the official news that the British Government has recognized the Republic of Panama. The foreign population of Colon is largely composed of natives of Great Britain. Governor Melendez, accompanied by a band and a military escort and joined by a great crowd of the inhabitants, assembled in front of the British Consulate, where the band played old English airs. A torchlight procession was afterwards formed, the crowd marching through the streets singing "God Save the King."

THE ILLS OF WOMEN

A RELIABLE AND SAFE CURE FOR WOMANLY ILLS IS FOUND IN FERROZONE. A REMEDY THAT ALWAYS GIVES SATISFACTION AND NEVER DISAPPOINTS

If troubled with painful irregularities, dizziness, faintness, excitability, nervousness, remember there is a remedy that if regularly and persistently used, will cure all these ills. Its name is Ferrozone.

It is used by thousands of women who have experienced its great strengthening powers, and they would not be without it for ten times its price.

Ferrozone is primarily a blood maker. It drives all impurities from the crimson fluid, makes it strong and capable of supplying nourishment to the body. It quiets the nerves, banishes excitability and headache.

By taking Ferrozone regularly you can keep free from those dreadful sackaches, and monthly sickness will pass off regularly and without pain or distress. Being prepared in tablet form, Ferrozone is both convenient and simple to use, and no uncertainty as to the proper quantity or dose can ever arise.

A Montreal hospital nurse who has used Ferrozone herself, and has seen also the benefit that other suffering women have derived from it, writes: "I have nursed and treated all forms of female disorders, and from my personal experience, must say that Ferrozone is a remedy about which all womankind should know. It is reliable and sure, and will give prompt and satisfactory results. As a builder of muscle and tissue, I know nothing to equal Ferrozone. I have found it good to build up a weak appetite, and consider it a splendid medicine for the blood and nerves. I have no hesitancy in endorsing Ferrozone."

Don't continue to exist in a state of misery and weakness any longer. Ferrozone will make you strong and well just as it has done for thousands before you. All druggists recommend and sell Ferrozone, at 50c. a box, or 6 boxes for $2.50. Get a box to day from your druggists, or N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

KEEPING THE HEART TENDER.

Louis Albert Banks, D.D., Grace Methodist Episcopal Church, New York.

Rejoice with them that do rejoice, and weep with them that weep.—Romans, xii., 15.

The Christian is to be no hermit, no recluse who draws his heart into his shell and goes self-absorbed along the way of life, thinking only of his own affairs. His heart is to be open to the cries of joy as well as sorrow. He is to have a tender heart, easily reached with the gladness or the sorrow of his neighbor. "Rejoice," says Paul, "with them that do rejoice, weep with them that weep."

The way this command is put robs it of all possible selfishness. We are to rejoice with other people in their joy. A great many selfish people envy the joy of others and would if they could rob them of it and leave them bare, carrying all the joy away for themselves. But the Christian idea is to rejoice with the one who is glad and thus reinforce and increase his gladness. And we all know how much there is in that. Every man who has had a sudden gladness come upon him has had the desire to tell it to some-one else. The joy of any great vision, such as a splendid waterfall or a glimpse of a great snow mountain or some scene of wild beauty in the forest, is a small thing, if one has the experience alone, compared to what it is if you have a congenial soul with which to share it. Such sharing, instead of dividing and subtracting from your own delight, multiplies it many times. And the same law holds good in all other joy. We have a desire to impart it, a desire to talk about it with others, and we often have the opportunity of greatly increasing the joy of another by listening and putting ourselves into sympathetic touch with the gladness which has come to his soul.

You know some lonely man or woman who has few joys and few friends, and when a letter or some little experience that seems trifling to you with your many friends and your numerous sources of happiness comes to that man or that women it is a real opportunity given of God to you to listen with kindling eye and appreciative face and word while they talk to you of their joy. Such a privilege to them is a little foretaste of heaven, where all selfishness will be banished and everyone will be seeking to give joy to others.

There is no more regrettable mistake for any Christian to make than to permit himself to become so self-absorbed, no matter how great his work may be, that he shall become a kill-joy to weak and ordinary people who look to him for appreciation in the gladness which comes to their lives. Jesus Christ was never so self-absorbed in His sublime mission for the world's salvation that He could not enter with sympathetic heart and tender appreciation into the joys as well as the sorrows of others He cast no dark shadow at the wedding feast, but added to its gladness. Surely we have no right to be above our Lord and hold it beneath our dignity to bestow our smiles on the wholesome gladness that has come to any soul.

But we must not only keep our hearts tender in appreciation of the joys of others, but in sympathetic relation to their sorrows as well. We should be so sensitive in our relation to our fellow-men that it will be impossible for us to see a sad look on any face and our own heart not feel something of the flow of it. How sensitive Jesus was to the petition of the blind, to the lonely wail of the leper, to the silent shame of the disgraced woman, to the anxious appeal of the father whose child was sick, to the quiet tears of the poor widow following her only son to the grave! In these and countless other cases Christ's heart mourned as though He Himself were blind, or leprous, or anxious, or a mourner behind the bier. He entered with perfect sympathy and fellowship into the sorrows of the people with whom He lived. His heart was so tender that every breath of human sadness swept His soul as though it had been a harp. So we must keep our hearts tender.

Do you ask me how we can do this? The answer is very simple: By putting ourselves constantly in helpful relations to others. Do the kind deed on every opportunity, and you may be very sure that the kind feeling will soon come to be natural to you. The difficulty is that we often curb our kind feelings and restrain them. We shut back the sympathetic word that is on our lips until our tongues become dumb to that kind of speech. Give your heart a chance to show its gladness. Give your lips the opportunity to speak the sympathetic word. Give your hands and feet free will to go on their missions of kindness and cheer, and you will soon see that your heart is growing tender and mellow, so that none rejoice and you are not glad, and none are sorrowful and you are not stricken.

Away From the Office.

As a proof of what soldiers in the field can do when not hampered by the civilian element at the War Office, Lord Wolseley, in his book, "The Story of a Soldier's Life," instances the case of his Red River expedition—his first independent command:—

"I believe it was the cheapest operation we have carried out, when what was accomplished is fairly weighed and considered. The total expense was under £100,000. For that sum about 1,400 men were sent by rail and steamer . . . and then in canoes and boats for six hundred miles through a wilderness of rivers, lakes, forests and rocks, where, as no food was to be obtained, everything required had to be taken with us and transported on the soldiers' backs over difficult portages for many miles. I attribute this economic result to the fact that it was planned and organized far away from all War Office and meddling."

Berlin, Dec. 28— It was definitely decided today that the automobile races for the James Gordon Bennet Cup will take place, June 17, 1904.

Russia Hurries Two Thousand Picked Recruits to Port Arthur

Moscow, Dec. 28.—One of the volunteer fleet's transports, on route to Port Arthur from Odessa, carried 2,000 picked recruits, also several Black Sea nava officers, and a party of fifty nava gunners and engine room artificers.

Tokio, Dec. 28.—The indications are that Japan will soon take active steps to assert and consolidate her position in Corea. As one of such steps the Government, without awaiting the consent of the Diet, will guarantee the principal and interest on the Seoul-Fusan Railway funds for the purpose of completing the line next year, instead of in 1906.

STILL CONSIDERING.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 28.—The Russian Government is still considering the reply of the Japanese Government. A reconsideration is considered as a matter of course here. The Russian Foreign Office has always insisted that the Russian proposals were so liberal that it would be scarcely possible to conceive any further concessions.

Nevertheless, he said should the Emperor declare war the nation would be found ready to give him unanimous support.

Berlin Dec. 28—Three years' solitary confinement has transformed Prince Prosper Arenburg into a raving maniac and he will shortly be removed from the prison to a madhouse. The prince, who is thirty years old, was sentenced to life imprisonment in 1900 for atrocious murders of natives in German southwest Africa.

THE GREAT WORK GOING ON IN MUSKOKA.

1,000 Patients Treated in the Two Muskoka Hospitals—the Sanatorium and the Free Hospital for Consumptives.

Surprising Decrease of 25 Per Cent. in the Last Three Years in Deaths from Consumption.

Fifty-five Different Trades and Professions Represented by the Patients Admitted to the Free Hospital for Consumptives.

Two Pavilions have had to be Closed Owing to Lack of Funds, and the Number of Patients Reduced from 75 to 50.

$25,000 Wanted this Year to Carry on this Great Work.

With a view of helping to bring to the attention of the public the needs of the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives, we have pleasure in publishing the following letter, in which an appeal is made for funds.

Dear Friend,—

It again becomes necessary to make an urgent appeal for funds for the Free Hospital for Consumptives.

A very heavy debt is pressing upon the trustees.

In addition to this, funds must be provided for the maintenance of patients. Last month there was a deficiency of nearly $1,500 over and above receipts from all sources.

The Free Hospital for Consumptives was opened eighteen months ago. 225 patients have been admitted.

No patient has ever been refused admission because of his or her poverty.

1,000 patients have been cared for in the two Muskoka Hospitals, the Sanatorium and the Free Hospital for Consumptives.

The majority of these have either been cured, or so helped that they have been enabled to again become bread-winners for the family.

The public are beginning to find evidence of our work.

Already there has been a decrease of nearly 25 per cent. in the death-rate from consumption in the Province of Ontario.

The last report of the Secretary of the Provincial Board of Health shows that in the last three years the deaths from consumption in Ontario have decreased from 3,481 to 2,694, a decrease of 790, or nearly 25 per cent.

This is the more gratifying when we remember that for a number of years previously the same report showed a steadily increasing death-rate prior to 1899.

Who will doubt that the work of our two Hospitals in Muskoka, and the persistent educational campaign carried on, has not helped to secure this surprising result?

In what better way can your gifts bring so good a return?

We have no endowment, excepting the provision recently made by Canada Life, Confederation Life, and North American Life Insurance Companies for maintenance of 2 beds each for a year.

We can only rely on the philanthropy of our people and a knowledge of our needs.

Last year we asked $20,000 to reduce the debt and to pay for care of patients. We had a generous response, receiving $10,000, gifts coming from Halifax on the east and Yukon on the west. This year our needs are greater than ever. We will require $25,000.

The Bishop of Selkirk, Caribou Crossing, Yukon, sending $10.00, writes: "The trifling remittance I send is intended to express our sympathy for the sufferers in other parts, rather than to imply a special need for your institution here."

We are grateful for the large gift. We are grateful for the small gift; all gifts are helpful.

On account of our pressing needs, will you not make this your special charity?

During the year, for lack of funds, we had to close several pavilions, reducing the number of patients from 75 to 50.

The sorrowful part of our work is that nearly all of those in the Free Hospital are young men or women who were striving to make a place for themselves in the world. Many of them have wife, or child or husband anxiously watching the struggle for life.

Your gift will help to bring gladness to so many. Will you have the joy of giving?

Very truly yours,

W. J. Gage

Mostly Men.

The writer, a Manitoban, and an Anglo-Indian bound for Penang were seated in the smoking-parlor of a Canadian Pacific Pullman car. The Manitoban was a cheery optimist; the Anglo-Indian a pessimist with a liver, who said he believed Canada's future lay with the United States. This my Manitoban resented, and when the Anglo-Indian ended a remark with a pious hope that Manitoba might some day be a desirable country, in spite of her severe winter, my Manitoban did not try to conceal his contempt.

"Huh!" he ejaculated. "I tell you, it's pretty prosperous right now, sir, winters and all, and don't you forget it. A fur coat's a lot cheaper than malarial fever anyway." (The Malay peninsula had been described.)

"Oh, yes! it's prosperous enough I dare say," replied the Anglo-Indian disdainfully; "but really when you talk of the Canadian North-West supplying the British wheat market . . ." and he shook his head pityingly.

"See here," said my Manitoban, "how much wheat did Great Britain import in 1902, anyway?"

The Anglo-Indian shook his head again. "Really," he began, "I'm not able to state offhand——"

"Well, I am," interrupted the other. "Great Britain imported in 1902 one hundred and fifty-one million bushels of wheat. In 1902 Manitoba's crop of all grains was one hundred million bushels, and the total wheat crop was fifty-three million bushels."

"And how much of that fifty-three million bushels found its way to England?" asked the Anglo-Indian sarcastically.

"That's all right," nodded the Manitoban; "little enough, maybe. But I'm coming to that. During the year ending June 30, 1902, the whole Dominion exported to Great Britain twenty-five and one-quarter million bushels of wheat and three-quarters of a million barrels of flour out of a total export of twenty-six million bushels and one million barrels. Now, sir, that fifty-three million bushels was raised on two million acres of land. By 1910 Manitoba may have six million acres of land under wheat cultivation—the land is there all right—and similar conditions to 1902 would mean a crop of one hundred and fifty-nine million bushels, or the total consumption of wheat in Great Britain for last year. And take notice, please, I am not saying a word about the millions of acres of rich soil in the North-West Territories awaiting colonization."

"Why is there so much unoccupied land in Manitoba?" I asked, watching the Anglo-Indian ponder on the figures quoted as I spoke. "Are they 'free' lands?"

"No, sir," replied the Manitoban; "you bet most all the free land that's any good has been taken up in Manitoba. The railways, the land companies, syndicates, private individuals, own thousands of acres of land in Manitoba, and they are selling them every day, cheap, too."

"What do you call cheap?" asked the Anglo-Indian.

"Ten dollars to twenty dollars, £2 to £4 per acre," replied the other. "Why, land which is not nearly so productive in Ontario sells from $40 to $60 per acre. The West is still supposed to be 'wild,' I guess," and he laughed merrily. "Last year the official average of wheat per acre in Manitoba was given at 26 bushels. Take an average price of 50 cents per bushel, and you have a gross return of $13 per acre. Farming by figures is easy—and delusive—so let's cut this return in half (and that provides for every contingency except annihilation) and you have a gross return of $7.50 per acre, which leaves a profit, after expenses, sufficient to warrant the price of good lands going to $50 per acre within a year or two."

"And what is the reverse side of this picture?" asked the Anglo-Indian, interested in spite of himself.

"Oh, that's there all right," laughed the Manitoban. "We've had bad crops, frozen crops, dry seasons. We get a six months' winter which is gen—u—ine winter, all right. In the early days we had to team our wheat twenty-five to fifty miles to market, and that was no picnic when the thermometer was at 40 degrees below zero. Then the mosquitoes in summer, they worry a tenderfoot some, and . . . oh, dang it! that's about all, I reckon. But still," and he waved his hand out towards the darkness, "I tell you, sirs, it's a fine country, whether it's yellow with ripening wheat or white under the bright winter stars. Its men are mostly men—those who count are—and its women know how to make a farmhouse on the prairie a pretty good place for a fellow to get home to. It's a clean, healthy life, gentlemen, and a man keeps young on the prairie a long time after he has passed the 50-mark.

"We're a long way from the center of things up here, I guess, and maybe we are a bit rough, but that doesn't count. I've often watched the twilight steal along so gently it's like a dream, and the Northern Lights shoot across the sky like a mist of flame. And it's good to smell the spring rains when they start the old earth into greenness, and to hear the houk! houk! of the geese overhead, saying they are pleased to get home to the Northland again. You bet, gentlemen, it's a good country to live in and work in, and I guess it's all right to sleep in when the work is well done. Here's my station, and I'll bid you good-night, and I hope I haven't tired you with my talk."

And the Manitoban stepped off the car as we pulled up at a station.

The moving train had resumed its steady thud! thud! thud! before the Anglo-Indian spoke.

"The Canadian Government mayn't know of him," he said, "but that man is the best sort of emigration agent they have got." He rose and yawned. "I think I'll turn in," he said. "Good-night."

But I sat and smoked for a while, thinking of the Manitoban and the life he had sketched. And the train rushed steadily forward through the night, and I thought of the unseen and as yet untilled prairie stretching to the horizon on either hand, and tried to imagine its broad acres peopled with "men who were mostly men."—H. T. Munn in "Outlook."

Branch at Omemee

The Bank of Toronto has opened a branch at Omemee, with Mr. Amys, of Port Hope, as manager. During the past two years, such is the competition among banking institutions, that branches of chartered banks have been established in many places in this district, including Fenelon Falls, Lakefield, Omemee, Millbrook and Havelock.

Paris's Greatest Scientist.

Since the death of Pasteur in 1895, M. Elie Metchnikoff is probably the most distinguished scientist in Paris. He is a Russian by birth, as his surname makes evident, and possessed of all the naivete and large-hearted simplicity of his race. As a scientific writer he is most refreshing. His new book, "The Nature of Man," has been pronounced by English scholars the most important contribution to science since Darwin's "Origin of Species," and yet it can be read with "ease, profit and pleasure by the most casual amateur." Among the dry-as-dust specialists, M. Metchnikoff is as a pioneer in an untried country, and perhaps a bit of an adventurer. He demonstrates enthusiastically and by the most approved scientific methods, that people should live a hundred and thirty-odd years. A man who expires at seventy or eighty is the victim of accident, cut off in the flower of his youth! M. Metchnikoff gives very good advice about simple living in a charming and piquant way, and if his prophecies will probably not greatly prolong our day and generation, we still may add something to our span of life by studying his entertaining precepts.

Needed a Change.

When the tired man entered the office says the Philadelphia "Ledger," he told the doctor he did not know what ailed him, but he needed treatment; he was pretty well worn out.

The physician put on his eye-glasses, looked at the man's tongue, felt his pulse, sounded his chest, and listened to the beating of his heart. "Same old story!" exclaimed the doctor, who was of the new school of fresh air. "Man can't live hived up in an office or house. No use trying. Now I could make myself a corpse, as you are doing by degrees, if I sat down here and did not stir."

"I——" began the patient.

"You must have fresh air," broke in the doctor. "You must take long walks and brace up by staying out-of-doors. Now I could make a drug store out of you and you would think I was a smart man, but my advice to you is to walk, walk, walk."

"But, doctor—" interrupted the man.

"Now, my dear man, don't argue the question. Just take my advice. Take long walks every day—several times a day—and get your blood into circulation."

"But my business——" said the patient.

"Of course, your business prevents it; everybody says that. Just change your business so you will have to walk more. By the way, what is your business?"

"I'm a letter-carrier," meekly replied the patient.

The Czar is Not a Cad.

The Czar of Russia has a keen sense of justice, which displays itself occasionally in an unexpected but praiseworthy manner, as the following true story will serve to show: A Russian officer receiving but a slender salary was one day seen riding in a tram. The other officers of the regiment were furious at what they called an insult to the uniform, and intimated to the culprit that he had the option of either sending in his papers or being ostracized, and the unlucky subaltern chose the former alternative. Before he had time to do so, however, the Czar heard of the affair, and, without a moment's delay, donned his colonel's uniform of the regiment in question, and, sauntering out of his palace, hailed a tram and, entering it, sat calmly down till it stopped in front of the barracks. He desired the officers to be called, and when they were assembled, addressed them thus: "Gentlemen, I have just ridden from the palace in a tram, and I wish to know if you desire me to send in my papers. I presume I have disgraced my uniform."

"Sire," replied the major, nervously, "your majesty could never do that."

"Then," replied the Czar with a smile, "as I have not degraded the uniform, Lieutenant D—— cannot have done so, and will thus retain his commission in this regiment, even if he, like me, dares to ride in a tram."

The New Little Girl.

A female child approached me not long ago on the street. An air of refinement and good breeding attended her. I paused and pleasantly observed her.

"Hello, grandpa!" exclaimed the child. "Has anybody seen our cat?"

I made no reply.

"Speak up," said the child, "if you don't happen to have amputated your voice. I've lost kind of a tall cat, done off in a tortoise-shell finish. Her feet don't track, but she's sound and kind, city broke, stands without hitching, and answers to the name of Laura Jean Libbey. Where is she?"

"Young woman," said I, "I am not aware that I have the honor of your acquaintance."

"Don't let that cause you any insomnia, grandpa," said the female child. "I'm not trying to make a hit with you. Either you've seen my cat or you haven't. If you haven't, we'll part in a friendly way, with no clothes torn. If you have, I'd like you to produce, dig up and relinquish the cat. Is it a go? Is there anything doing in the feline way?"

"No," said I.

"Then so long," said the female child.

Ballet Skirts.

Ballet-dancers, brought up in two centuries of tradition, fight against "skirt dancing," and favor the lamp-shade costume. Our best and most graceful dancer, Mlle. Genee, is in favor of tradition. During my second directorship of the Alhambra I had immense difficulty with Mlle. Legnani, my principal dancer, to persuade her to do a "skirt-dance" in a ballet. I succeeded, and she succeeded, much to her astonishment.—John Hollingshead in "Pall Mall Gazette."

MANCHURIA WONDERLAND

Marvelous Development of Country by Russians, says Consul Davidson

London, Dec. 28—James W. Davidson, American consul at Tamsui, Formosa, has arrived here after a four months tour of Manchuria and Corea. He said that the development of the industries of Manchuria has been so rapid that in a very short time the country will be independent of all outside supplies of wheat and beef.

Every place of importance on and off the railroad is held by Russian troops, on the ground that if withdrawn, the Chinese officials would foster brigandage. As soon as brigandage is suppressed the Russian occupation will be limited to the railroad.

There is no evidence that the Russians are importing agricultural immigrants, except for a small colony in the north.

Cities are rising along the railroad. Kharbin is commercially the foremost. It is only three years old, but the Russian population exceeds 40,000.

Large flour mills and wholesale warehouses give the place a stability which promises to make it in a few years the greatest market in the Far East.

Mr. Davidson says that the Russian occupation of Manchuria does not affect the British trade as seriously as the American, because the British imports are largely such as are not produced in Russia, whereas Russia is a large producer of four of America's staple items, kerosene, cotton goods, flour and lumber.

The wheat production is increasing in an extraordinary manner.

It is much cheaper than American and Russian wheat and the manufacture of flour is very profitable.

Mr. Davidson, while admitting the possibility that Russia has arranged the Yalu timber concession partly from political motives, said that the Yalu company produces timber so abundantly and successfully that it is now meeting the demand formerly supplied by the United States.

Wife of President of Institution at Scotland, S. D., is Caught

Sioux City, Iowa, Dec. 28—While C. G. King, president of the First National bank of Scotland, S.D., was in Minneapolis yesterday his wife called at the bank and asked the cashier, the only occupant of the room, to go to the postoffice for her. During his absence she took $2,400 from the safe. Shortly afterwards she disappeared with her 4-year-old boy and orders came from the husband to arrest her. She was caught at Jefferson, S.D., and the money found sewed in her clothing. She was taken back to Scotland, and her husband said later she would not be prosecuted. Their life together has not been very happy of late.

Equitable Gold Mining Co.

R. C. LANE, President. P. F. NORTON, Secretary and Treasurer.

Over $300,000 of development work already done. Main shaft 9 x 16 feet, down 700 feet. Over 3,000 feet of drifts, tunels and shafts showing immense ore body

Destined to become large and continuous dividend payer.

The Equitable Gold Mining Co.'s properties consist of three mines, known as the North Bonanza, Flowery and Kimbark. They are located in Six Mile Canon, less than four miles from Virginia City, Nevada, which is the nearest railroad station.

Years ago, over three hundred thousand dollars of development work was done upon the mines—so they are not mere "prospects" but actual mines. This work was done under the personal supervision of competent engineers, and was paid for by the owners of the mines themselves; thus giving double assurance that the work was well done and that the expenditure was justified.

The Main Shaft (triple compartment, 9x16 feet in the clear) is down seven hundred feet. From this shaft, running along the vein matter, east and west, are four drifts, at different levels, having a combined length (including the Rule winze and the tunnel) of 2,250 feet.

In addition to the above there are four small shafts, with a combined depth of about 300 feet; 585 feet of tunnels, and at least 500 feet of cross-cuts, upraises, etc.

All told, there is 4,650 feet of underground work—the most of which is in ore. Here is nearly one mile of openings in mineralized rock.

It is conservatively estimated by competent and reliable engineers and practical miners that there is developed an ore body of at least One Million Five Hundred Thousand Tons!

As a further evidence of the large amount of work done there is from 75,000 to 100,000 tons of ore on the dumps at the different surface openings—ore that, with modern cheapened processes, can be converted into gold bullion at a profit.

THE TITLE

Title to the Flowery and North Bonanza mines is by patent from the United States government, while the title of the Kimbark is by location and possession.

The Equitable Company obtained the Flowery and North Bonanza mines, both of which are patented, by purchase—the payments therefore to be made out of a share of the net proceeds of the mines. The Company has a written contract, duly recorded, for a deed, and is in possession of the properties, and is now operating them. The sum of $2,000 was paid on the contract, September 30th, 1902, and partial payments have since been made. The Company is entitled to $6.25 per ton as cost of mining and milling. One-half of all over and above this $6.25 per ton goes to the former owners till they receive the total sum of $105,000, without interest. There is no stipulation as to amount of work to be done within any specified time—and no proceeds, no pay. The Company can therefore pay it in one year or it can pay it in ten years. With this exception the Company is free from debt. Its policy is to pay as it goes. In this way it has no fear of financial embarrassments. The title to the Kimbark is by "location," under the mining laws of the United States. Work enough has already been done to entitle the Company to a patent, which in due time will be obtained.

Recent Development Work

Since the Company acquired the property, it has put up poles and wires for a distance of one mile for the transmission of electric power from the Truckee River Electric Power Plant. By this means unlimited power for mining, hoisting and milling is obtained.

It has built a dwelling house for the manager, a large boarding house for the miners, a barn, a power house and blacksmith shop.

It has put an electric hoist and skip into the 200-tunnel; has purchased ore cars and the necessary tools for mining purposes.

It has acquired the Kimbark ground, adjoining the Flowery and North Bonanza mines, and is now developing the property by driving a tunnel.

Within the last few months the Company has mined and milled over 800 tons of ore—realizing therefrom a [illegible],000 worth of gold bullion. The out-put is constantly increasing and all the Company needs is more mill capacity to handle its ore.

Dry Placer Miner, formerly of California.

This company has the right, without royalty payments, to use the new patent machine upon all the land it may own, acquire by lease, or operate, in Arizona. W invite special attention to the great commercial value and profit of this machine, and what can be accomplished by it.

What This Machine Will Do.

For the first time in the history of gold mining a machine has been invented which will handle the dry placer gold gravel without water, and in large quantities. This machine will save 98 per cent of all the gold in the gravel, and will do it at a lower working cost than by any existing process. It is operated by a small, compact engine, using crude oil as fuel. A complete plant, capable of handling 200 tons per day will weigh less than 1,200 pounds.

To secure this gold only those placer lands could be worked, which could command large supplies of water, hence the immense bodies of dry placer lands remote from water have never been worked.

Fifteen Hundred Millions in Gold

The United States has yielded nineteen hundred millions in gold, of which fifteen hundred millions—or more than 75 per cent.—were the product of its placers.

Ninety per cent. of the world's total gold supply has been taken from placers by processes which have admittedly lost the bulk of the values.

Simplicity of Machine — Its Method of Operation

The machine is so extremely simple in construction and operation that any intending investor can operate it instantly. He can take a peck or more of sand, either ordinary house of sea sand, or such as is found in the placer lands of Arizona and California, put into this sand ten or a hundred pieces of gold as small as the point of a toothpick, and from that to the head of an ordinary pin, mix the sand and the gold thoroughly, turn them into the hopper or feed of the machine, and in a few seconds the machine will separate the gold from the gravel and recover from 98 to 100 per cent of the gold. It is an absolute, infallible, ocular demonstration of the merits of the machine. It has solved the problem of handling sand or gravel containing gold in regions remote from water.

Cost of Handling Material

Each plant is portable, weighs less than 1,200 pounds and can be easily moved by a few laborers.

The two greatest authorities in the world on the moving of material are "Haswell" and "Trautwine." They say in their standard publications that a laborer can shovel horizontally, 12 feet, vertically 6 feet for 50 feet haul 17 cubic yards in 10 hours.

A well known engineer in his work for the U. S. Government at Sandy Hook, moved 15 cubic yards, 100 foot haul in 10 hours at a cost of 10 cents per cubic yard, paying laborers $1.75 per day.

The dry placer gold-bearing sands of California, Arizona and New Mexico are handled quite as easily as those of Sandy Hook.

Ten laborers can easily supply one machine with 204 cubic yards of gravel in 12 hours, working at the same speed as shown by Haswell, Trautwine or at Sandy Hook.

Placer work on above basis would cost about 11 1-2c. per cubic yard.

Do You Want Monthly Dividends?

We make a special offer of a limited number of shares of stock at this time, because the company requires immediately sufficient to build several machines to operate in the field.

Every machine at work will increase the intrinsic value of the stock.

Twenty machines in the field will increase the price and value of the stock more than double the present offering, and every additional machine means a further increase in price and value.

The Company intends to divide its net earnings every month, so that the stockholders may count absolutely on receiving monthly dividends in proportion to monthly earnings.

'Henry Fielding's Dream'

By CORTLAND MYERS.

CHAPTER 1.

Stopped by a Strange Question.

"Would Christ belong to a labor union?" was the question that almost startled Henry Fielding as it met his eyes at the corner of the street on the church bulletin. He was on his way to work in the early morning, and had already been detained at home, and also a moment by a friend on the way; but he could not pass on without pausing in front of that peculiar question and reading the smaller letters beneath it.

It was an announcement of the services for the next day in the church. The special sermon, the minister's name, the attractive music and a warm welcome for all.

"Well," said he, "I have not been to church for so long a time that I would not know how to act, but I would like to hear what he has to say about that. If I live until to-morrow, I am going to change the Sunday program and go to church.'

He hastened on and turned around to glance at the other side of the bulletin.

"That is not such a strange subject after all," thought he. "The strange thing about it is that the preacher and the church are asking it."

Henry Fielding was a noble fellow in heart and purpose. He had an unselfish disposition; his ambitions were kingly, but they were thwarted by circumstances. No young man ever came out of a more truly religious home. His early life was enriched by the family prayer, the church service and the Sunday school. He had learned whole chapters of the Bible for prize and pleasure both. His home was among the hills of Vermont. A small farm, a small mortgage, a continuous struggle, and a rigid economy on the part of his parents were the environment of those boyhood days. His father had died when Henry was but ten years of age, leaving his mother broken-hearted and in broken health to fight the hard and continuous battle alone. He was the eldest of three children— a sister, Elsie, of eight, and a brother, Will, of six. Those years of his responsibility and his mother's heroism made an impression upon him never to be obliterated. The mortgage became no less; rather, as most mortgages go, it became more. The interest had to come, and the eggs and butter sold instead of eaten. Each year made him understand that he must bear more of the burden.

It brought him into manhood before his time, and drew some of the sweetness and necessity out of real life. It is the tragedy of life to be an old young man.

The natural and the ideal are to come with the years and not force them. But circumstances swung the sceptre and said, "Give up school; cover your eyes in front of other opportunities. Know not envy and thrust your jack-knife into the very heart of dissatisfaction. Stand by your mother!" The years passed by, and never saw his courage fail.

Will came to be a young man of eighteen, and seemed to have more liking for the farm than his brother had ever been able to force into his heart or activity.

Then Henry began to make his plans to go to the great city, learn a trade, become skilled, save his money, make an invention, have a manufactory of his own, get rich, help his sister, care for his mother, and forget forever bare feet, mortgage, butterless bread, etc.

Oh, what dreams we have in the daytime! Almost as strange as at night, and almost as far from reality. Yet it is better to dream than not.

He now had been in the city several years, and worked hard and without any flagging zeal or determination, but a haze had been creeping across the star of hope in his sky.

This part of his life was not just as he had planned or wished, but he had enough of the divinity of mankind in him not to be easily conquered. He did not try to push back the current, but he was not the one to be drowned in its waters.

One day as he stood at his work, the man nearest him heard him say, "to-morrow."

He said, "Henry, what are you talking about?"

"I did not know that I was talking about anything," said Henry; "but I do know that I was keeping up a serious kind of thinking."

"Well, you were thinking aloud this time. I heard a part of it, anyway."

"I am not afraid to tell you what I was thinking about. I was getting gloomy and almost in a fit of despondency. Plans fail so quickly and completely, and to-day seems especially dark to me. In the secret silence of my soul I was saying over and over again 'There'll be another day.' If you heard me say 'to-morrow,' that is the reason."

His sister Elsie had written him a letter the day before telling him of her deep desire to secure some advantages which the country did not furnish, and which she never could receive unless she could come to the city and have the best of training. She was in a kind of prison up there in the mountains, and there was no future for her. Her friends told her that she had a wonderful musical talent if it could only be cultivated. She played the organ for them in their little church, and often sang as no one else there could sing. She seemed the larger part of the church service.

All this had only been the fuel on the burning desire already in her heart to know more and be more.

Mother said she would sell the farm; but that would not help—rather it might hinder. Henry was the only one to ask what could be done.

This was the hard problem in his hand now. That letter was for a moment more puzzling and important to him than the map of Europe to Napoleon before the battle of Waterloo. At last he stamped his foot and declared that this was more necessary than anything else, and ought to be done at once, even if all the other plans of the years' making should be opposed or even destroyed by it.

He was careful in the use of his pronouns, and uttered the "you" a score of times where once he spoke the "I." Elsie was told to come to the city, and he would furnish two rooms. She could keep house for him and herself, and take her music lessons. It would require all his earnings and destroy the possibility of saving, but the great lesson he had learned in the school of life had already taught him what it was to save—that hoarded treasure might not be saving.

"This," he said, "is the best method of saving, to place it in the bank of my sister's life and let it draw interest forever. If I cannot get what I had planned, let her secure the object of her life. Perhaps in her ambition attained is the realization of my own."

Elsie had come to the city. The plans had been perfected, the two rooms were furnished, or rather fixed so that a brother and sister who loved each other and understood the object of their toil and sacrifice, could live in them.

The one had to be parlor, kitchen, sitting-room, library and Henry's sleeping room. A lounge at one side was his bed, a small stove was sufficient for heating the rooms and the cooking of their food, a few chairs and a table, some pictures, and everything without an atom of dust upon it and spotlessly clean.

Elsie's training made two rooms the same as a palace to her, and taught her that there was no economy in dirt out of its place.

It was Saturday night. The familiar step was heard on the stairway. The door opened. Elsie was in the other room, but shouted, "Hello!" before Henry had closed the door behind him. She hastened out to arrange the table as attractively as she possibly could. She asked him all about his day, and if he was tired; then for a moment sat at the table looking directly at him; her great eyes full of admiration for him. He was almost her idol; at least, her ideal.

Suddenly he said: "Elsie, I am going to church to-morrow."

"What," said she, "do you mean it? I am so glad. What makes you say that? Why, I would think you were perfect if you would only go to church every Sunday."

"I won't promise you that, but I will go to-morrow morning if you will go where I want you to."

"Why, certainly, I will go wherever you would like, and I will give up my church any time if you would only attend some other one with me. Really Henry, this has been the only bitter drop in all my cup— you having nothing to do with the church."

"Well, we won't discuss that now," said Henry; "but, anyway, I will go to-morrow. Perhaps it is only curiosity, but I will be there just the same, and that will in itself please you."

"What is the object of your curiosity, and where do you want to go?"

"I am going to that church on the corner of North avenue and Thirteenth street. The minister's name I have almost forgotten. The last name is Dowling, and I think the first name is David. That is a small matter, anyhow. I never notice the ministers' names, and I had never heard of him until this morning; in fact, I don't know any of them, and don't know as I care to."

"Oh, Henry, do not say that! You don't understand either yourself or them."

"I know enough about the churches and ministers to know that they have lost the spirit of the Bible, and have no real relation to the greatest needs of to-day."

"Wait a minute, Henry. They are trying to save the people, and that is the greatest need of this and all other days. What does saving people mean? If it does not mean saving them here and now, and saving the society in which they live, it does not mean anything."

FEARS WINTER WITHOUT EQUAL

Goose Bone Weather Prophet Sees Frigid Days in Near Future

Reading, Pa., Dec. 28—Elias Hartz, the veteran goose bone weather prophet made today what he declares will be his last prediction. He said: "I have seen eighty nine winters, but this will be the severest of them all. I don't know of any that begun as this one did. It began early and was cold from the start. It changed from intense to severe cold and has remained cold. In other years it would be cold for four or five days and then for the same length of time it would moderate considerably. This winter surpasses all others, and I warn people to be on the lookout."

Storm King Group of Mines

TO CANADIAN INVESTORS

The property comprising what is known as the STORM KING GROUP OF MINES offers an attractive and safe investment. The property is the richest in the country and we believe it would be difficult to secure an investment that promises better returns. The following is a description of the mines written by Capt. A. M Paul, whose reputation as an expert in mining matters is known far and near.

These properties are situated in the Cable Cove Mining District, about fifteen miles north of Sumpter, Oregon, and about one mile northwest of the Baby McKee mine, about two miles northeast of the Last Chance, the Alpine, the Imperial and the California mines.

The properties in this report consist of seven claims. The names of the seven claims being as follows: The Eureka and the Honest Dollar. These two claims are on the same vein. Adjoining these two claims and paralleling them on the northwest is another vein upon which there are two claims known as the Jengle and Golden Rule, and paralleling them on the northwest there is another vein upon which there are two claims, known as the Storm King and the Osone. The last claim of this group lies to the northwest of the last two named, and is adjoining them. This claim is the Shannon Bell.

In making my report I will commence with the two first named claims of the group, the Eureka and Honest Dollar. The development on these claims consists of a tunnel ninety-seven feet in length, running along the course of the vein, showing two feet ten inches of ore in the top of the tunnel and a little over three feet in the bottom, which assays giving values of from $9.60 to $[illegible] per ton in gold. About four hundred feet in a southwesterly direction there is a shaft on the vein ten feet deep, showing the vein to be from one to two inches wide on the surface and about twelve inches wide in the bottom of the shaft, in which assays give values of from $9.50 to $40 per ton in free milling gold ore.

This vein is exposed by small shafts and open cuts for a distance of fifteen hundred feet, and the course of this vein is north, ten degrees east, and the vein cuts the formation, showing it to be a true fissure, and the formation is granite. This vein shows in places a width of from six to fifteen feet of mineralized matter, commonly called vein matter, but which is caused by hot eruptions from below.

I will now pass to the Jengle and Golden Rule. There has been very little work done upon these two claims, there being one discovery shaft ten feet deep, showing ore on all sides of the shaft, and running in value from $4 upwards. It is my opinion that with development, this, too, will prove valuable property.

The work on the Storm King and Osone consists of a tunnel near the point of discovery and is driven along the vein for a distance of one hundred and eighty feet, showing ore all the way from the surface to the face of the tunnel, and averaging in width from six to eighteen inches. Three assays give the following values. $12.50. This being a general sample taken from the dump. The other two assays are $41.60 and $73.60 respectively, this being the assorted ore for shipment. The course of this tunnel and vein are north, ten degrees west, and the vein cuts the trend of the formation obliquely (which is granite) and by driving this tunnel five or six hundred feet on the present course it will intersect a quartzite reef (which is running north, twenty degrees east) which would make this a contact vein between granite and quartzite, and should produce a large body of ore, at the intersection of the contact.

The only work done upon the Shannon Bell, the last claim of this group is the location work, and is not enough to allow of a report being made.

There is water for power purposes one mile from the property, and timber on the ground, of a very fine quality, sufficient to run the mines for many years to come.

All the assays mentioned in this report were made by the assayer, of the Imperial mine at my request, and the ore was taken by me from the properties mentioned.

I will state that I have been a practical miner since 1870, and am now the manager and superintendent of the Imperial mine in this district.

(Signed) CAPTAIN A. M. PAUL.

Thebitian Customs.

A British-Indian expedition is about to start—perhaps has already started—for Thibet, to insist upon the carrying out of commercial and other treaties which those in authority in that strange country have refused to comply with. The expedition is also undoubtedly intended to make it quite clear to Russia, which power, it is said, contemplates advances in Thibet by virtue of recent treaties with China, that Britain intends her influence to be paramount there. A recent copy of The London Daily Mail, from which the accompanying illustrations are taken, says:—Thibet is the one land of mystery which remains in the world, for, although every other part of the globe has been explored, there is still this one great, mysterious, semi-savage land, guarded by stupendous mountains, from which the innovating white man is fiercely excluded. It seems as if all the strangest and most fantastic customs on earth had taken refuge in this last retreat, for there one woman has many husbands, the ruler is a child, who dies before he comes of age, the inhabitants wash themselves with grease, and praying is done by machinery. Lhassa is the capital, and within the walls of this city, which is the mystery of mysteries, where the Grand Dalai Lama dreams away his sacred but brief existence, only three white men are known to have set foot. In 1811 an Englishman named Manning entered disguised as a lama, and in 1844 two French priests did the same thing, but no one has penetrated the stronghold since then, and if the British mission to Thibet, which is about to advance into the country as far as Gyangtse, within 150 miles of the capital, should ever succeed in making an entrance there will be some interesting stories to tell.

Thibet has an absolutely religious Government, or theocracy, the head of which is supposed to be the Grand Dalai Lama, looked upon as an incarnation of Buddha although the real ruler is a person named "The Gyalpo, or temporal chief. The Grand Lama is usually chosen at the age of five or six. He is kept in the palace at Lhassa and is never seen by the outside world. The Gyalpo has entire charge of him, and at the age of fifteen or sixteen he dies of some mysterious disease, when it is announced that his spirit has passed to another infant who will be found at a certain place in a certain family. No doubt this is arranged for by the Gyalpo and his assistants, for the child is always found as directed and duly installed with great pomp and many weird ceremonies.

There are curious marriage laws in the country by which a woman is allowed to have as many husbands as she likes, although a man may only have one wife. The women are very fond of decorating themselves with turquoises, which are found in large quantities, though not of the pure blue quality familiar to us. The Thibet gems are like rough pebbles varying in size from a pea to a hen's egg, and they are full of black specks and veins. The women literally cover themselves with the stones, and often all their worldly wealth is invested in the jewels, so that they go about carrying all the property they have.

One of the most curious religious customs is the use of prayer wheels. These are somewhat in the shape of a barrel, and the prayers are written all round them. The person who wishes to pray merely gives the wheel a turn—it is swung upon an axle, and the prayers are supposed to be said for him as long as the motion continues, while he is able to get on with any employment he happens to be engaged on. The process by which a Buddhist passes through various forms of incarnation before he becomes fit to enter Nirvana—heaven—may be accelerated by prayer. It is said that devout men in Thibet have a number of prayer wheels works, by wind and water, and in this way make progress that would otherwise occupy millions of years of incarnations.

Of the many weird religious ceremonies, the most curious is the one which takes place in the spring at the Thibetan Gumpa, or monastery, which is situated to the left of the Indus, about twenty-five miles beyond Leh. Every spring the inhabitants of the surrounding country gather there to hold a kind of huge fair, the chief feature of which is a Miracle Play given by the monks, who take this opportunity of appealing to the fears and superstitions of the people. The monks came on the stage with wild antics and dressed in yellow robes with peaked hoods. When these hoods fall back hideous masks are disclosed. In this costume they rush madly about, beating drums and tambourines. It is thought they are intended to represent some of the ugly forms that meet the dead man's soul in space. From time to time a crowd of strangely painted naked figures rush on the stage: these are supposed to represent the souls of the dead men. At another stage of the performance a number of yellow twigs are handed to the dancing monks. Each twig is blessed by a priest, who flicks them with a red feather dipped in holy water. They are then flung on the ground outside the gate of the monastery, to which they are supposed to become a protection by keeping out the evil one. Later the actors, to keep off the evil eye, wear brass visors, and arm themselves with "sacred bells," "holy thunderbolts," skull drums, and many other weird instruments.

The appearance for the first time in the navy list of the name of "Cochrane" among the new cruisers is a final if tardy acknowledgment of the supreme greatness as a sailor and fighter of the famous Lord Cochrane, grandfather of the present Earl of Dundonald. Cochrane was second only to Nelson among his contemporaries, but his rugged honesty made him an awkward man for officialism to recognize.—London Star.

The largest British mail ever handled in the Toronto postoffice was that of Saturday, which arrived per steamer Cedric, via New York, and which consisted of 155 bags.

Canadian Sea Question May Have Serious Consequences

London, Dec. 28.—The Express, referring to the bill before the Dominion Parliament to change the name Hudson's Bay to "The Canadian Sea," and the objects of the Government expedition on the Neptune, says that Canada is facing with resolute intention a new dispute (regarding Hudson's Bay) with the United States, and possibilities than the Alaskan question.

Colonel George T. Denison writes to The Times that Canadians are astonished at a prominent English politician declaring that the colonies are not on Chamberlain's side. Canada is overwhelmingly in favor of a preference, and the politicians must not listen to the cry of a few Canadians, and one or two renegade Canadians in England, that Canada is against a preference. Every open or secret enemy of the Empire he says, is against Chamberlain.

The Morning Post says that Sir Richard Cartwright's great speech at Toronto, was distorted to please the free trade journals in Britain. It calls his favoring a tax on food export from the United States to Britain a remarkable argument in favor of Mr. Chamberlain's policy, and adds that Sir Richard's statement as to the relation of such an increase to the respect held by the United States for Great Britain and promising Canada's help was the most eloquent of all speeches on behalf of Mr. Chamberlain.

The Post also says it is curious that no Canadian statesman sees the necessity of Canada's seaboard trade requiring protection in time of war, though the necessity of maintaining naval stations in the vicinity of the trade routes is already understood in Australia, South Africa, New Zealand, and even Newfoundland.

Good Things to Know.

When tired, drink hot water as a tonic. When hot and thirsty drink it as a cooler, for it never disappoints, says The Philadelphia Press.

Headache almost instantly yields to the simultaneous application of hot water to the feet and back of the neck.

A strip of flannel or towel folded several times lengthwise and dipped in hot water, then slightly wrung out and applied to the neck of a child suffering with an acute attack of croup will usually relieve the sufferer in the course of ten minutes if the flannel is kept hot.

A towel folded, dipped in hot water, quickly wrung out and applied quickly over the seat of pain will in most cases promptly relieve.

There is no domestic remedy that so promptly cuts short congestion of the lungs, sore throat or rheumatism as hot water when applied promptly and thoroughly.

Many eminent bacteriologists call attention to the power of fruit juices to kill disease germs. Lemon juice and apple juice are especially mentioned, the one containing citric acid and the other malic acid. Cholera germs are killed in fifteen minutes by either, and typhoid germs in half an hour.

If a lemon be squeezed into a glass of water containing cholera germs, the water may be drunk with perfect safety if allowed to stand fifteen or twenty minutes. A fruit diet will cleanse the stomach and the alimentary canal and drive off any of the germs that cause disease.

Simple Toys Best.

A little girl in the Horace Mann Kindergarten in New York was asked by her mother what she would like for a birthday present, says Ethel McKinney in Good Housekeeping. She had so many things, beautiful toys and all else a child could wish, that what to give her next became a problem. After thinking a minute she said: "In school we have some boxes with little square blocks inside. Could I have one of those to play with all the time?" She had had fun building things with those cubes. It seemed greater bliss to have them at home to play and invent with, unhindered, than to possess any costly and perfect "boughten" toy, good for nothing but just to sit and look at.

Why is it that children prefer sticks and corncobs to French dolls and take more comfort in a house made out of a pasteboard box than in an electric-lighted doll's palace? Friedrich Froebel discovered that children's minds are not empty vessels, to be filled up by a judicious pouring in, but that they possess a wonderful force, "creative self-acting." So he invented a series of playthings, the "gifts' of the kindergarten to-day. They are absolutely simple, but they gave the child something to do, to invent with, to exercise his own thought and self-activity upon.

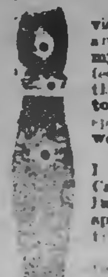
BRONCHITIS CURED

For fifteen years Mr. John Pearson of Melvern Square suffered from Bronchitis and throat irritation. Doctors failed [illegible] but Catarrhozone cured quickly

The remarkable recovery of Mr. Pearson, who for years was principal of Melvern Square High School, is convincing evidence of the exceptional curative powers possessed by Catarrhozone.

"For fifteen years," writes Mr. Pearson, "I constantly suffered from Bronchitis and Throat Irritation. Until quite recently I was able to keep up my teaching, but my bronchial trouble became so annoying that I was forced to resign.

"For months I doctored with different physicians and was not benefited. My trouble grew more severe and extended to the lungs, and I feared I would end in decline.



"Providentially I was advised to use Catarrhozone, and I believe it really saved my life. Its immediate effect was to relieve the throat trouble sufficiently to give me perfect ease in speaking. Within one short week all symptoms of [illegible] had disappeared. I can fervently recommend Catarrhozone. I know it has no equal as a sure and speedy cure for throat trouble and bronchitis."

Every air cell and air passage, all parts of the breathing organs are reached [illegible] by the antiseptic vapor of Catarrhozone. It soothes and heals the inflamed mucous surfaces, stops the cough, clears the nose and throat, and drives every symptom of bronchitis right out of the system.

To purify the blood of all poisons, and to build up the system, Ferrozone Tablets, which are included in every Catarrhozone outfit, are very highly recommended. This local and constitutional treatment in Bronchitis, Catarrh, and Consumption cannot be equalled.

Catarrhozone is endorsed by physicians and ministers and thousands it has cured. Two months' treatment costs $1. Small size, 25 cts. Sold by all Druggists or N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

Dunn, 427 Water street this morning, at 9 o'clock, and proceed to St. Peter's cathedral, and thence to the Roman Catholic cemetery for interment.

Broke All Canadian Records

The Winnipeg Tribune published on Saturday Dec. 19th, an Xmas number which for size and quantity of advertising outrivalled all Canadian competitors. This big issue contained sixty regular size pages of news, special Xmas numbers and holiday features, and had a handsome lithograph frontispiece. The advertising pages contained 282 columns of advertisements, which is the largest amount of advertising ever carried in a single issue of any Canadian newspaper. The paper was gotten out by the regular staff and printed on the Tribune's big Hoe press.

Wanted No Talk.

A blustering, self-important citizen, walked into Hall's barber shop on Charlotte street, the other day, and wanted his hair cut. The modest and unpretentious gentleman in the shop attempted to explain, but was roughly told to go ahead without a word. After the job was finished the man who knew everything looked in the glass and was horrified at his appearance. He fairly stormed, and asked the party of the second part if he called that a hair cut. The mild gentleman meekly replied: "I don't know. You must ask the barber. He'll be in presently. I'm the editor of one of the town papers and was waiting for a hair cut myself, but you wouldn't give me a chance to explain.'

Died From Acute Pneumonia

The jury empanelled to enquire into the circumstances connected with the death of the infant child, May Wilson, returned the following verdict at the council chamber last night, based upon the report of the post mortem examination:—That the said infant, May Wilson, died from acute pneumonia.

HOCKEY

The first hockey match of the season will take place tonight, when the Lindsay Collegiate Institute team and the Peterborough Junior O.H.A. team will cross sticks. This should be an interesting game, as the local team is playing as good hockey as that which won the Junior O.H.A. championship. The Collegiate team is a fast bunch, and there is good reason for believing that the opening game of the hockey season in Peterborough will furnish excitement and interest.

The T.A.S hockey team will go to Lakefield on Monday night, and have arranged for a game with Keene the same week.

JOINT INSTALLATION

Of the Officers of Corinthian and Peterborough Lodges A. F. and A. M.

The joint installation of the officers of Corinthian Lodge, No. 101, and Peterborough Lodge, No. 155, held in the Masonic Temple, last night, was one of the most enjoyable functions of this kind participated in in Peterborough for some years past. A large number of visitors were present, including brethren from Lakefield, Middleburg, N.Y., Ottawa, Warkworth, Trent, and several members of Scottish lodges now resident in town. V. W. Bro. H. C. Winch officiated as installing master, assisted by Rt. Wor. Bro. H. Rush and Rt. Wor. Bro. W. H. Walkey. At the conclusion of the installation ceremonies, a recherche menu, catered by W. J. McCallum, was served in the spacious dining hall. The toast list proved of a specially pleasing character, and was agreeably interspersed with vocal music.

The late Dr. Thomas Hoyt, after preaching his last sermon as pastor of the Chambers-Wylie Church, was entertaining President Patton of Princeton; Henry C. Minton, Moderator of the General Assembly, and other eminent men, at dinner. The guests were speaking in strong praise of the sermon the minister had just preached on the different religions, and those versed in theology were discussing the doctrinal points he had brought out. Dr. Hoyt's son was sitting at the table and Dr. Minton, turning to him, said: "My lad, what did you think of your father's sermon? I saw you listening intently."

All waited to hear the boy's reply. Mr. Hoyt smiled cordially.

"I guess it was very good," said the boy, languidly; "but there were four mighty fine places where he could have stopped."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Among the company, says The Essex Weekly News, at the West Field, Grays, to witness the distribution of prizes to the Shaftesbury boys were two brothers of the cloth, who, though differing in denomination, got on well together as clerics should. At length, as the scent of a fine Havana was wafted to his nostrils, one pulled out a well-seasoned pipe. "Ah, brother," said his friend, "when shall I cure you of that bad habit of smoking?" With a twinkle in his eye the other replied through a cloud of smoke, "There are two places to smoke, you know. One is this world; the other is the next. I'm going to get mine done in this. You can do as you like."

Discussing the difficulty of young and unknown playwrights in getting manuscript read, David Belasco said the other day:

"In a majority of cases the plays are not read, nor even looked at. But the managers like to make a man think his play has been read, even if they have to reject it. When I was a young man I went with manuscripts to a manager to whom I afterwards sold several plays. My copy was tied up in a neat roll, with a knot of pink tape. I knew that knot, and I knew that the manager or his reader couldn't tie another one like it if he tried.

"'Come in two weeks,' he said.

"I went, and the play was handed back.

"'Have you read it?' I inquired.

"'Sure,' said the manager. 'Read it myself. Sorry it won't do.'

"I untied the knot, unrolled the manuscript and laid on the manager's desk sixty-four pages of white paper without a mark on it."—New York Times.

TO THE AFFLICTED

The following testimonial may be read with interest to sufferers from skin eruptions or eczema:

January 20th, 1903

Dear Sirs,—I notice your advt. in a paper about your wonderful eczema cure and I feel it my duty to tell you, that I was induced to try it as I had been afflicted with skin trouble in my hands for 14 years. I have tried several doctors and they done me no good. I only used one box of Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Eczema. It has made a complete cure. I recommend it to all suffering from skin disease. My hand was so bad that the nails used to come off. You can use my name if you wish.

Yours truly,
MR. JOHN WOOD,
Peake Station, P.E.I.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills are a positive and certain cure for rheumatism, asthma, paralysis, coughs, lame back, indigestion, all stomach and liver troubles, female complaints, even when the diseases have been standing for many years; the most stubborn cases will yield. Peter D. McFayden, Riverdale, P.E.I. writes: "I am very busy, but just drop a line to say I highly recommend your catarrh cure. It has done grand work for me. I am so much better."

Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Catarrh is also one of the best remedies on the market. We are daily in receipt of letters telling how much they have done for the afflicted. Miss Sarah Hill, 412, Front Street, Traverse City, Mich., writes "I have been wonderfully helped by the use of your catarrh cure; send me another dollar's worth."

Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Catarrh and Clarke's Sure Cure for Eczema, same price. $100 will be paid for any case that it will not permanently cure.

Health is a magnet which irresistibly draws the man to the woman in life's mating time. A great many women covet beauty and are constantly seeking means to beautify themselves. Let a woman first seek perfect health.

There can be no general good health for women while there is disease of the delicate womanly organism.

$500 REWARD — FOR WOMEN WHO CANNOT BE CURED.

Backed up by over a third of a century of remarkable and uniform cures, a record such as no other remedy for the diseases and weaknesses peculiar to women ever attained, the proprietors of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription now feel fully warranted in offering to pay $500 in legal money of the United States, for any case of Leucorrhea, Female Weakness, Prolapsus, or Falling of Womb which they cannot cure. All they ask is a fair and reasonable trial of their means of cure.

"I used four bottles of your 'Favorite Prescription' and one of 'Golden Medical Discovery,'" writes Mrs. Elmer D. Shearer, of Mounthope, Lancaster Co., Pa., "and can say that I am cured of that dreaded disease, uterine trouble. Am in better health than ever before. Everyone who knows me is surprised to see me look so well. In June I was so poor in health that at times I could not walk. To-day I am cured. I tell everybody that Dr. Pierce's medicines cured me."

AMERICAN EAGLE POISING TO SWOOP, THREE REVOLUTIONS ARE RAGING

United States Warship Has Been Dispatched at Full Speed to San Domingo--Appeals Made to the American State Department for Aid, More Ships to Follow

Washington, Dec. 30.—With three revolutions raging on the island, the forces of Jiminez within four hours of San Domingo city, and excitement prevailing, United States Minister Powell thinks the situation demands the presence of an additional warship, and in a telegram dated yesterday appeals to the American State Department for aid. In anticipation of the crisis which appears to have arrived, the State Department has already taken steps to send another warship to San Domingo, and at its request Secretary of the United States Navy Moody yesterday cabled Rear-Admiral Lamberton, commanding the South Atlantic squadron, now at Trinidad, to despatch one of his vessels to San Domingo at full speed to assist the gunboat Newport in protecting American and other interests.

Shortly after Panama's declaration of independence a semi-official warning was issued from Washington that the United States would tolerate but little longer the state of lawlessness and insurrection in San Domingo. She is evidently determined to protect the interest of her citizens in that country, and the Imperialistic party at Washington is urging an extension of American influence, with this protection as an excuse.

THE KAISER'S TOAST

Paris Gives Credit for Waterloo to British Tenacity

New York, December 30 — The Paris correspondent of the New York Tribune cables as follows The German Emperor's recent toast, "I raise my glass to the German legion that saved the British army from defeat at Waterloo," has revived with extraordinary animation the discussion of the strategic and tactical controversy over that battle. General Andre, Minister of War, expresses the opinion that the most masterful and most lucid summary of the Waterloo campaign is due to the American writer, the late John C. Ropes, of Boston. General Andre agrees with Mr. Rope's conclusions that if the result of the battle was due to the Prussians the glory of it belongs to the British. Henry Houssaye, the French Academician and the foremost authority on Waterloo literature in France says: "Emperor William's toast contains an incorrect statement. It is not true that the German legion saved the British army. The victory of the Allies was due, above all else, to the bulldog tenacity with which the British army obeyed to the letter Wellington's orders to hold the position to the last man, for had they not done so the arrival of Blucher and his Prussians would have been too late."

LABOR LEADERS OBJECT

Will Fight Against Anarchist's Deportation

New York, December 30.—The New York Express today says: "After an animated debate, the Central Federated Union decided yesterday, in the face of protests from a small minority, to father the movement in this city to prevent the deportation of John Turner, the English labor leader and "philosophic anarchist," who was seized by the United States Immigration authorities upon his arrival here and is now on Ellis Island, awaiting probable deportation.

Since the seizure of Turner was made, the anarchists and other radicals, it is remarked, have been trying to force organized labor to take a hand in the fight. In Boston the Turner case was taken to the attention of the American Federation of Labor. That organization decided to have nothing to do with the controversy. Having failed there, the "Reds" and radicals, it is said, decided, if possible, to agitate among the central labor bodies in all the cities. The Central Federated Union recently voted to permit the use of its name to sanction a second mass meeting to be held in Cooper Union soon, under the auspices of the Free Speech League, which recently held a meeting on the same subject.

AFTER TWENTY YEARS

Notorious Grave Robber Killed by his Enemies

Philadelphia, December 30 — After being pursued for more than twenty years by the fear that death waited him at the hands of some negroes, the graves of whose dead he had violated, Frank McNamee, one of the most notorious ghouls of America, and head of a syndicate which two decades ago stole scores of bodies from Lebanon cemetery, was found with his head crushed on Saturday night. He died yesterday morning without regaining consciousness. Strenuous efforts were made at the hospital to restore him so that he might tell who assaulted him, but without avail. McNamee and his fellow ghouls despoiled scores of negro graves in Lebanon cemetery to furnish bodies for dissecting purposes. Before they were caught they had taken more than 200 bodies, one lot alone having been robbed of fifty-five. The syndicate had contracted to supply the professor of anatomy of one of the colleges with bodies at $8 each, when McNamee and his gang were sentenced to two years imprisonment. Great indignation was expressed at the lightness of the sentence, and at that time it was said that a price was put upon McNamee's head. When he left prison he was shadowed by negroes. For years McNamee lived in terror, expecting a shot or stab that would end in his death.

WASHERWOMEN'S UNION

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 28.—Washerwomen of Kirkwood, Webster Groves and the neighborhood have organized a union. They hav eofficers, a walking delegate, rules, requirements, and dues. As one result of the organization, the scale of wages has been increased from an average of $1 a day, soap, starch, and bluing furnished, to $1.50 a day, while the hours have been shortened from ten to six.

THE STRIKE EVIL

Chicago's Street Car Lines May be Again Tied Up by Unionist

Chicago, Dec. 30—Threats of another strike on the line of the city railway company have been made by business agents of the organization that are endeavoring to secure new agreements with the Traction company. They have formally notified General Manager McCullough of company, that unless he concedes their demands by Jan. 1, the stationary firemen, steam engineers, electricians and teamsters employed by the company, will be ordered to quit work. It was also announced that when the classes of workmen named were called out an appeal for sympathetic strike action would be made to the street car men.

The demands of the business agents, which were practically an ultimatum, were ignored by General Manager McCullough, who declared that he could not even consider the question of signing new agreements with the unions, which the agents represented. These organizations are the ones that are accused of having broken their contracts with the Traction Company when they joined in a sympathetic strike of the trainmen.

MEDIEVAL BARBARISM

Practiced by Alabama Mob Burned Negro with Kerosene

Pinaapple, Ala., Dec 30—In their efforts to hide the lynching of Arthur Stewart, a colored prisoner, whom they secured from the local jail here last night, a mob is thought to have set fire to the jail which was destroyed together with eight stores, two warehouses and the post office. Rewards have been offered for the arrest of the guilty persons. It is learned that on Wednesday, P. Melton, a prominent young white man, had a quarrel with some negroes and one of them shot him. Christmas day, a negro was arrested and placed in jail, charged with the shooting. A mob broke into the jail, early today and after knocking the negro on the head, poured kerosene over his body and set it afire. The flames quickly spread to adjoining buildings. The excitement continues intense tonight. The citizens in mass meeting today passed a resolution requiring the immediate presence of Solicitor Quarles and a special term of court to try members of the mob, who will be arrested. A special term will probably be ordered.

SAMPLES OF CHOICE GRAIN FOR THE IMPROVEMENT OF SEED.

To the Editor of The Times:

Dear Sir,—By instruction of the Hon. Minister of Agriculture another distribution will be made this season of samples of the most productive sorts of grain to Canadian farmers for the improvement of seed. The stock for distribution is of the very best and has been secured mainly from the excellent crops recently had at the branch Experimental Farm at Indian Head in the Northwest Territories. The distribution this spring will consist of samples of oats, spring wheat, barley, Indian corn and potatoes. The quantities of oats, wheat and barley to be sent this year will be 4 lbs. of oats and 5 lbs. of wheat or barley, sufficient to sow one-twentieth of an acre. The samples of Indian corn and potatoes will weigh 3 lbs. as heretofore. Every farmer may apply, but only one sample can be sent to each applicant, hence if an individual receives a sample of oats, he cannot also receive one of wheat, barley or potatoes, and applications for more than one sample for one household cannot be entertained. These samples will be sent out free of charge through the mail.

Applications should be addressed to the Director of Experimental Farms, Ottawa, and may be sent in any time before the 1st of March, after which the lists will be closed, so that all the samples asked for may be sent out in good time for sowing. Parties writing should mention the sort of variety they would prefer, and should the available stock of the kind asked for be exhausted, some other good sort will be sent in its place.

WM. SAUNDERS,
Director Experimental Farms
Ottawa, December 18, 1903.

IMPERIAL EDUCATION

London, Dec. 28.—The Times prints a long article pleading for Imperial education, and says it is better that a laborer's son should never hear of Russia than leave school without learning something of the wheat crops of Canada. History should be taught so as to be of practical use to a boy disposed towards emigration to the colonies.

MULLAH IS CORNERED

Rome, Dec. 28.—Captain Bisco, commander of the Italian squadron off Somaliland, arrived at Obbia on the flagship Christophero Colombia. He sent emissaries to the interior, having been given to understand that the Mullah was disposed to treat with Great Britain through the Italians. The Mullah is believed to b win an almost desperate condition.

WORK UNHINGED HIS MIND BOYD SHOT WIFE AND SELF

Track Walker in St. Clair Tunnel Commits Murder And Suicide

Sarnia, Dec. 29— Joseph Boyd, a track walker on the St. Clair tunnel, this morning shot his wife, and then put a bullett into his own head. The screams of their three little ones attracted the attention of neighbors. Mrs. Boyd was found lifeless in the kitchen, dish towel in hand, and in a front room lay Boyd, clasping a 32-calibre pistol. The bullets had instantaneous effect, passing through both skulls.

Boyd was 40 years old. He came home from work in his usual good spirits this morning, and the authorities and the neighbors are unable to find a cause for the crime. Two years ago Boyd built the comfortable two storey home in which he lived, and his neighbors without exception give testimony to his industrious and exemplary behaviour. The family of five had had no sickness, and the father had steady employment. But friends think that Boyd's mind was affected by the conditions of his occupation. Severe exposure to the atmosphere in the tunnel at times has been known to have a weakening effect on the intellect for various periods, and doctors do not hesitate to say that Boyd was thus demented when he committed this terrible deed. Boyd carried no insurance, but Mrs. Boyd lately joined the Lady True Blues. She has no relatives, but three brothers of Boyd lived in London.

OFFERS CHEAP LIGHT

Montreal Company Makes Remarkable Offer to Toronto

It may be interesting to the people of Peterborough just now to learn that the Co-Operation Trust Company, of Montreal, has written to the Toronto City Council regarding cheap light as follows:

"If your heat, light and power costs you $2,500 or more, per annum, we can cut the cost in two for you. We will deliver you enough electricity to supply all your requirements at a cost not to exceed one-half your present cost, providing your present bills amount to not less than $200 a month.

"If you reply to this letter promptly, stating the number of horse power you use, the number and kind of electric lights, the quantity of fuel you use for heating purposes, giving the exact cost of the same to you for the past twelve months at least, we will send you by return mail, our prices, terms and full particulars, which we guarantee will be at least 50 per cent. below your present figures. The above guarantee supposes that you are using steam power, or that you are buying your electricity at current

MR. LEONARD'S RETIREMENT

He will Take a Well Earned Rest for a Few Months

Montreal, Dec. 29—Mr. J. W. Leonard, the former assistant to the general manager of the Canadian Pacific Railway for lines West, reached the city from Toronto this morning and registered at the Windsor.

In conversation with a Star reporter Mr. Leonard confirmed the news of his resignation from the Canadian Pacific Railway, after over a quarter of a century devoted to railroading.

For the present, Mr. Leonard does not intend to accept any other position, but will take several months rest, which he considers he has fully earned.

Neither does he contemplate accepting a position with an American line. He prefers to devote himself to the Canadian field, with which he is now wholly familiar.

But Mr. Leonard has no plans as yet for the future; his whole attention for the time being will be devoted to taking a needed vacation.

Mr Leonard has practically been a railroad man since boyhood, having commenced his career in that respect as an operator and agent for the Midland Railway in Canada in 1877.

Subsequently he joined the Victoria Railroad and later the Credit Valley with the latter assuming the position of assistant to the general superintendent.

His next move was to the Ontario and Quebec, and in 1884 he became superintendent of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

From 1889 to 1893 he was superintendent of lines east of Montreal later transferring to Toronto, and thence to Winnipeg about three years ago.

Here he made such a success as superintendent that he was given an appointment as assistant to the general manager.

Mr. Leonard asserts that the Canadian Pacific Railway handled adequately all the crop there was to handle in the Northwest this past fall. "All the grain that offered was taken to Fort William before the close of navigation," he said. "But there was not anything like the that existed the preceding year. The Canadian Pacific Railway and the Canadian Northern Railway had no difficulty in meeting all the demands that were made upon them."

Advertino to the persistent report that the Canadian Northern Railway would ultimately become part of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, Mr. Leonard said that no one either in the Northwest or in this country east, was in a position to say just what would be done in that particular.

THE NAVAL STATION

Americans Expect Trouble in Establishing Depots on Great Lakes

Detroit, Dec. 30—A Washington special says, "What looks like serious obstacle to a naval training station on the Great Lakes is the report which has reached Washington to the effect that the Canadian administration, as soon as the first move is made by our navy department towards building the station, will through England, register a protest on the ground that the maintenance of such an institution would be a violation of the spirit of the Rush-Bagot treaty. The Canadian government's contention is that before the United States can build a naval training station the treaty must be modified or entirely abrogated. There are indications that England will press the protest, if Canada makes it, for the reason that the home government would be getting back into the good graces of the Canadians, who have been sore since the Alaskan boundary award. Shipbuilders on the ocean do not want the treaty modified on the ground that lake shipbuilders might thereby become their competitors. Five sites have been reported by the naval board for the training station."

GRATEFUL ACKNOWLEDGMENT

From the Salvation Army Band to Their Friends

Dear Friends and Citizens:

We, the men of the Salvation Army Band, wish you one and all, on the eve of a New Year, the compliments of the season. We wish to take this opportunity to thank you for the way you assisted us in our $500 instrument fund. We are pleased to be able to say that our receipts shall go over that amount. What it will be we cannot say until the instruments arrive, as some donations will not be collected until then. The total amount collected will be published later.

Now, this is our serenading season. You have helped us loyally in our band fund, and this year when we make our regular calls we will try and repay you in a measure for your kindness and support by playing you a serenade during the Christmas week. Again wishing you the compliments of the season, we remain.

Yours sincerely,

J. W. LEONARD TO JOIN THE RAILWAY COMMISSION

Montreal, Dec. 29.—The announcement was made in Canadian Pacific Railway circles today that Mr. W. J. Leonard, who has resigned as assistant general manager of the company, is certain of being appointed a member of the Government Railway Commission.

RUSSIAN CZAR IS STRONG FOR PEACE

Nevertheless He Believes That Safety Lies in Making Ready

Tokio, Japan, December 30—An important joint meeting of the Cabinet and Privy Council takes place today to consider ways and means in view of the grave situation, but no difficulty is anticipated in providing for the extraordinary expenditure, including the completion of the Seoul-Fusan Railway.

It is believed that unless Russia modifies her reply, Japan will immediately safeguard Corea, though this will not necessarily mean war with Russia.

THE CZAR FOR PEACE.

St. Petersburg, December 30.—The consensus of unofficial opinion among those associated with the Government, but not responsible therefor, is that the Czar is so peacefully disposed that he will make such concessions to Japan as are necessary to prevent war, provided that no unforeseen events force the hands of the Governments concerned. At the same time His Majesty, it is pointed out, agrees with those who believe that preparation for war is the best safeguard of peace, and that apparent willingness to allow matters to be submitted to the test of arms is more likely to lead to a satisfactory compromise than an exhibition of over-much peacefulness.

There is not likely to be much difficulty in finding money in case of war. A foreign loan on acceptable terms is probably impossible, but the Russian banks and merchants have ample funds on which the Government could draw.

BIG ORDER FOR RUSSIA

Des Moines, Ia., December 30 — The Cudahy Packing Company, of South Omaha, is in receipt of a rush order for 1,000,000 pounds of extra mess meat for the Russian Government. The shipment must reach San Francisco before January 26. On that date two Russian ships will sail with the beef on board. The same ships will also carry a large amount of other supplies from various parts of the United States. All of these supplies, it is said, are for the war department of Russia.

London, Dec. 30 —The Daily Mail's correspondent at Kobe asserts that the Japanese army authorities have requested the newspapers to refrain from publishing news concerning the movements of troops or warlike preparations. In an editorial the Daily Mail says it regards this as a practical censorship and an ominous sign.

Editorials in other morning newspapers express concern over the movement of foreign warships towards the far east and particularly over the statement that United States marines have been ordered to Corea, fearing some unforeseen incident may precipitate events. On the other hand, the speech delivered by M. Delcasse, the French foreign minister, in the senate Saturday (saying that nothing had occurred to cause him to place faith in the alarming reports that were being published daily) is looked upon as reassuring, and it is believed that the efforts of the powers may still be successful in preserving peace.

The Daily Mail's Tokio correspondent reports the opening of negotiations with Prince Ching's party with the object of forming an offensive and defensive alliance between China and Japan.

The Morning Post's Pekin correspondent says that all classes of Chinamen unite in believing that in the event of war China must help the Japanese, and that if this help should not be given there will be a patriotic insurrection against the Manchurian dynasty.

FATHER AND SON BOTH WENT DOWN

Terrible Skating Fatality in Nova Scotia Lumbering Village

Amherst, N. S., December 30—The first skating fatality of the season in this county occurred about dusk Saturday, evening at Newville, a lumbering village on the Springhill and Parrsboro Railway.

A number were skating on a lake, known as Half Way River Lake, when the ice gave way, precipitating Clifford Robertson, aged 14, and James Lockhart, aged 21, into the water.

Robertson managed to hold on to the ice and his brother summoned help from the shore, but a few hundred yards distant. Among the first to arrive was Beverley Robertson, father of Clifford. He caught up a board thrusting it out over the ice to his son, but from cold or other reason not known he was unable to get hold of it, and his father crawled out to the edge of the ice to assist him. Just as he reached over to grasp the boy the board broke precipitating him into the water head first and father and son sank together.

In the meantime a boat had been procured and pushed out to the scene of the accident, and just as it reached the open water, it too slid under the ice and disappeared almost carrying the rescuers with it.

The elder Robertson leaves a wife and seven young children of whom he was the only support.

Lockhart, who also went down, was a young man, 21 years of age, unmarried and came from Canning, N.S., All were employed with the Newville Lumber Company. The bodies were all recovered on Sunday afternoon.

The Supremacy of the Mediterranean

Rome, Dec. 30—France and Italy are endeavoring to draw Spain into the entente with Britain to uphold Anglo-Italian supremacy in the Mediterranean. The Franch and Italian fleets will likely visit Barcelona in the spring to meet and fraternize with the Spanish squadron. Though the Spanish navy is insignificant the harbors of Spain are highly important.

An Imperial Number

The present interest in Imperial matters has apparently justified The Canadian Magazine people in making their January issue especially Imperial with an emblematic cover. The Imperial articles are three in number. The Hon J. W. Longley reviews the whole movement and distinguished Imperialism from Chamberlainism. J. M. McEvoy, K. C, gives a summary of the arguments for protection advanced by Professor Ashley in his book on "The Tariff Problem." Prof Ashley, who was once on the staff of Toronto University, is said to be the economic authority upon whom Mr. Chamberlain relies. "Mr. Gladstone and Imperialism" is the title of a defence of that distinguished statesman by Herman W. Marcus, editor of the British Empire Review. Among the other articles are, "Spain, as a Canadian Sees It," by W. A. R. Kerr, with some excellent illustrations. "Sir Henry Irving and Dante," by J. E. Webber, with two photographs; and "An Aquatic Reminiscence," by George Stewart, D.C.L., with a photograph of the famous "Four" that won the championship in Paris in 1867. A notable feature of the issue is the first instalment of A. G. Bradley's "Fight for North America," the new serial dealing with the events between 1750 and 1763. The stories are by E. P. Medley, R. D. Rudolf Hopkins J. Moorhouse, Grace Channell Duncan Campbell Scott and Mary Stewart Durie. As usual, the departments are well written and interesting. Every Canadian should read this publication during 1904.

RUSSIA OF COURSE WILL NOT LEAVE MANCHURIA

Minister Sessai Tells Chinese That It Is to Cold to Leave Manchuria

Pekin Dec. 29.—Lien Fang, First Secretary of the Board of Chinese Foreign Affairs, visited Russian Minister Lessar yesterday, and requested information concerning the intention of the Russian Government regarding the evacuation of Manchuria.

Minister Lessar said that nothing could be done at present with a view of evacuation for two reasons. In the first place the Minister pointed out that the cold weather made it impossible to remove the troops from their present positions, besides which there were no barrack accomodations to be had elsewhere and, in the second place M. Lessar said it would endanger Russian interests to undertake evacuation during the progress of the negotiations between Russia and Japan, for the reason that Japan might seize the opportunity to invade Manchuria.

China Frightened.

The Chinese Government is so alarmed at the prospect of becoming involved in the seemingly prospective war that it would prefer that Russia would remain in control of Manchuria. As an alternative the Foreign Office has indicated to the Ministers that a settlement satisfactory to China would be that Russia and Japan should retain their respective treaty rights in Corea and Manchuria if they agree not to attempt the obtaining of further advantages in either country.

The Russian commander in Manchuria recently imperatively requested the Tartar general to disband his militamen and to disarm them. The Tartar general issued an order in accordance with this request, but it is understood that the men are concealing their arms, supposedly with the general's connivance.

MILITARY EXPENSES MET.

Tokio, Dec. 29. — An extraordinary meeting of the Privy Council yesterday approved the issue by the Cabinet of an emergency ordinance authorizing the guarantee of the principal and interest of an issue of 10,000,000 yen debentures for the purpose of expediting the work on the Seoul-Fusan Railway, which is expected to be finished by the end of next year. The ordinances also provides for all possible military expenses for the protection of the railway and other interests.

PURCHASED WARSHIPS.

London, Dec. 29.—According to the London Daily Chronicle yesterday, the Japanese Government outbid the Russian Government and actually purchased the warships Moreno and Rivadavia, ordered by Argentina, and both of which are now nearing completion at Genoa.

Other papers print a report that the Japanese Ministerial Council has decided to transfer $25,0000,000 from the educational fund for emergency purposes.

IN CASE OF EMERGENCY.

London, Dec. 29.—An Admiralty order issued at Portsmouth requires the officers and men of the British naval reserve to notify the authorities of the addresses where telegrams can be sent in case of emergency should they be required for active service. The order is generally connected with the rumors that the fleet in the far East is to be strengthened, concerning which, however, the authorities profess ignorance.

CAVAN ELECTIONS

A Hot Contest Over The Long Swamp Drain Matter

There is a hot municipal contest raging in Cavan. The question of draining what is known as the Long Swamp is before the ratepayers, and is being championed by Mr. Chas. McNeil, reeve, who is making the question a feature of the election. The swamp comprises about 2000 acres, and will cost about $15,000 to reclaim, $8,000 of which the Government has agreed to supply. The road which runs from Mount Pleasant to Peterborough will be shortened by about four miles. Opposed to the scheme is ex-reeve Fisher.

Yesterday one of the leading citizens of Cavan called at The Times, and requested this great family journal, which is read throughout the township, to place the above facts before the ratepayers.

INDIANS ARE PLEASED

Department Has Agreed to Pay for Crown Lands Sold

About 28 years ago several islands belonging to the Chemong Lake Indians were sold by the Government, and although many appeals were made on behalf of the tribe, no settlement was made for the property taken. The matter was finally placed in the hands of Mr. J. H. McClellan, who took it up with the department at Ottawa, with the result that the Indians are to get the proceeds of the sale, with interest, amounting to about $18,000. The cash will not be paid over to them, but will be invested for their benefit.

There is great satisfaction over the result amongst residents of Indian village as well as amongst the Rice Lake Indians. The Indians of Rice Lake, Port Perry, Orillia and Chemung, are to hold a great Council meeting early in January, when this and other important matters will be dealt with.

RUSSIA ANSWERS DECLINING JAPAN'S REQUEST

Bennett Burleigh, at Tokio, Says China Would Attack Russia in Manchuria

New York, Dec. 29.—A special cable from London to the New York Herald to-day says:

Mr. Bennett Burleigh, in a cable message to the Daily Telegraph from Tokio, says:

"War trembles in the balance, if it has not already tilted the scale, for report affirms that Russia on Saturday answered declining Japan's request.

"Diplomacy is terrified as to what will happen in China if there is war between Russia and Japan.

"It is agreed, and Pekin despatches show, that the Chinese Imperial authorities are on the alert, and will attack Russia. Their best generals are eager to engage the enemy in Manchuria, but the real key to the seriousness of the situation is in the question. Will there be further terrible outbreaks against foreigners in China? Or in the equally dangerous problem. What steps will Germany and France take if disturbances break out? Great Britain and America should be prepared also to see that if Japan wages a successful war she is not prevented from reaping the fruits of victory."

London, Dec. 29.—Col. Denison's remarks regarding the honesty of Mr. Chamberlain's opponents have aroused the anger of the Glasgow Herald, which says that no man shouts for the Empire louder than Col. Denison, who is not a representative Canadian, but a home-grown Jingo, and many Britons resent his impertinence.

The Herald gives reasons for doubting that Canadians approval of Mr. Chamberlain, since the conditions are the leaving to Britain certain industries and a further reduction in the Canadian tariff, the possibility of Canadian bounty-fed iron being penalized like Germany's, and the loss of fiscal independence depending upon commercial treaties.

The Herald suggests that the economic commission should perambulate Canada, exhibiting hypothetical preference and taking notes pro and con.

Steps Towards Unity.

The Broad Arrow says the greatest steps towards Imperial unity during the last few years are the proposed new fiscal policy and the presence of Sir Frederick Borden on the Defence Committee. Canada realises the Imperial obligations, and the steps taken are full of magnificent Imperial promise.

Carnegie Talks Again.

Mr. W. R. Cremer, M.P., has received a congratulatory letter from Mr. Carnegie at New York, concluding; "A preferential tariff to Canada would change feeling here considerably. There is no doubt of that, but, fortunately, this will not be possible until an appeal to the country."

Scientific Thoroughness.

The scientific thoroughness of the experimental farms managed by the Canadian Government and Prof. Robertson's work are highly praised by the Telegraph.

India Wants To Know

In his address at the opening of the Indian National Congress at Madras, the president said he wanted Mr. Chamberlain to say if Canadian wheat is to be protected against Indian.

New York, Dec. 28. — The Russian Government is noting with the closest attention and keenest interest the quite uncommon energy now being shown by the Chinese in making warlike preparations under the guidance of a large number of Japanese instructors, says a St. Petersburg dispatch to the New York Herald.

This has grown so serious as to come into the first line of Russia's calculations, increasing, as it does, the possibility of war and broadening out the situation on quite new lines.

Nor does the attitude of the Chinese in the least dismay the war party here. Its members compare the possible entry of China into the arena to the following of the Orange Free State in espousing the Transvaal cause, with the results of losing its freedom and making the campaign doubly easy for the English.

In diplomatic circles, Russia's attitude is also a topic of constant interest, the view taken beingt hat if Russia is attacked by two powers, according to the terms of the Franco-Russian alliance, France must come to the aid of her ally, following upon which nothing could stop England from coming in, as she is bound to do by the recent treaty should Japan be attacked by more than one power.

The Possessor of 14 Diplomas and Certificates Who Wants No Money That He Does Not Earn.

both the method and the ability to do as he says, Dr. Goldberg, the discoverer, will send the method entirely free to all men who send him their name and address. He wants to hear from men who have stricture that they have been unable to get cured, prostatic trouble, sexual weakness, varicocele, lost manhood, blood poison, hydrocele, emaciation of parts, impotence, etc. His wonderful method not only cures the condition itself, but likewise all the complications, such as rheumatism, bladder or kidney trouble, heart disease, nervous debility, etc.

The doctor realizes that it is one thing to make claims and another thing to back them up, so he has made it a rule not to ask for money unless he cures you, and when you are cured he feels sure that you will willingly pay him a small fee. It would seem, therefore, that it is to the best interests of every man who suffers in this way to write the doctor confidentially and lay your case before him. He sends the method, as well as many booklets on the subject, including the one that contains the 14 diplomas and certificates, entirely free. Address him simply

The crisis in the Far East is so persistent that persons whose opinions have great weight in politics, conclude that war is the natural and inevitable outcome.

Excessive addiction to bicycling and other sports, is given by Dr. Steckel as one of the chief causes of the great increase of heart disease in Germany.

New York city is passing through an epidemic of pneumonia, due to the recent damp, cold weather, and aggravated by slushy streets and unsanitary conditions of the tenements.

The Boer prisoners remaining in India and Bermuda must be having a grand time at the expense of the British Empire. They refuse to take the oath, and act as if they thought the war still going on.

American marines are occupying Panama, and Colombian soldiers are marching thither to tell them something. If Japan and Russia stop talking and begin doing, the Panama affair will take on the appearance of "thirty cents."

Sixty per cent. of the infant mortality is caused by intestinal catarrh, and 90 per cent. of all cases of this catarrh is caused, as the eminent German bacteriologist, Dr. Behring has pointed out, by the feeding of babies with cow's milk, which also in his opinion, lays the latent basis for most cases of consumption that develop in later life.

Medical men now agree that pneumonia is infectious, and will some day be isolated as diphtheria and scarlet fever are. The decrease in the mortality of tuberculosis since its infectious nature has been understood, has been at least fifty per cent. But the case for pneumonia has not decreased at all. In fact, since we had the influenza plague in 1889 it seems to have increased.

In the pending dispute between Russia and Japan, the United States is deeply concerned along with other nations. The Gulf of Pechili is called the new Mediterranean. All the busy nations want to go in and out of this gulf without any hindrance. Port Arthur stands at the entrance. It is held by Russia. Dalny, a Russian town, is there also, and so are the three great treaty ports, Chefoo, Tientsin and Newchwang, where 90 per cent. of the cotton sold to China gains entrance. Both Japan and China desire to open new treaty ports in Manchuria to American trade. But a Russian paper at Port Arthur says in a bullying tone that no such treaty shall be made except as Russia dictates. Japan says it all depends.

Mayor Bible, of Iona, Mich., has been fined for buying a deer that another hunter killed in the upper peninsula. Herein lies a tale. It shows that the game laws of Michigan are for the few who can afford to spend days or weeks in the woods, and only then for their own amusement. Mayor Bible is a hunter also. He went out and armed with rifle and authorized by a regular license. He got no game, but being under moral obligation to present steaks and saddles to friends bought a carcass from a hunter who had the same right to shoot deer. The fool of a game act says you may kill but must not sell to any one else. One who has no skill or luck as a hunter may not have venison to eat, which leads the Detroit Tribune to remark that practically every line of legislation on this subject throughout the world is despotic, unjust and reprehensible. Except for protection of birds, animals and fish during their breeding seasons and the restriction of the kind of ruthless slaughter that destroyed the buffalo herds of the west, all game regulations are made in the interest of an exceedingly small portion of the people and are usually oppressive on ment at least to 99 per cent. of the population.

THE PEACE OF EUROPE

[illegible]

New York, Dec. 28.—The Russian Government is noting with the closest attention and keenest interest the quite unusual energy now being shown by the Chinese in making warlike preparations under the guidance of a large number of Japanese instructors, says a St. Petersburg dispatch to the New York Herald.

Nor does the attitude of the Chinese in the least dismay the war party here. Its members compare the possible entry of China into the arena to the following of the Orange Free State in espousing the Transvaal cause, with the results of losing its freedom and making the campaign doubly easy for the English.

In diplomatic circles, Russia's attitude is also a topic of constant interest, the view taken being that if Russia is attacked by two powers, according to the terms of the Franco-Russian alliance, France must come to the aid of her ally, following upon which nothing could stop England from coming in, as she is bound to do by the recent treaty should Japan be attacked by more than one power.

After that, possibilities of further international complications are unlimited.

STEAMER MYSTIC SEIZED

Halifax, N. S., Dec. 28.—Black Diamond steamer Mystic, belonging to the Dominion Coal Co., was seized at Sydney on Saturday by the Customs authorities, the charge being that a piano purchased in Boston, was landed without paying duty. The customary fine of $400 will likely be paid.

Sir James Watson

This eminent English physician is one of the greatest authorities on diseases of the respiratory organs

In a recent address Sir James Watson stated that the commonest of all disorders is Catarrh, and that not one person in ten thousand passes the winter without an attack of some sort.

Sir James advises local treatment very strongly, and says it is all nonsense trying to treat Catarrhal diseases by stomach medicines, atomizers, douches and snuffs.

Local treatment is applied most scientifically by Catarrhozone, which is inhaled into the nose, throat and lungs, and drives the disease completely out of the system.

Catarrhozone is a rational, common-sense treatment; it clears the air passages, makes breathing easy, and relieves at once. Physicians prescribe Catarrhozone with gratifying results, and pronounce it a specific for Catarrh in any part of the system.

Mr. Thos. Cox, one of the most prominent citizens of Minden, Ont., says: "I want to recommend Catarrhozone. It is a nice, clean cure for Catarrh. Cured me perfectly, and is well deserving of a trial from everyone at all affected by Catarrh or throat trouble."

Mr. G. F. Fadden, of Royam, Que., writes: "In my opinion Catarrhozone is the only cure for Catarrh. I had the disease in its worst form, but only got relief from Catarrhozone. It cured me quickly and permanently, and I have no fear of the Catarrh ever returning."

The foregoing brief extracts, like thousands of others that the proprietors of Catarrhozone have received, prove that the proper remedy to use is Catarrhozone. It is quite different from the ordinary Catarrh preparation, and is warranted to prove entirely satisfactory. If it fails your money will be refunded, so if not benefited you won't be out of pocket.

All druggists sell Catarrhozone. Complete outfit, hard rubber inhaler, liquid for recharging, etc., costs $1.00; trial size, 25 cents. By mail from N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston Ont.

About Furs.

Furs are always of supreme interest at the approach of winter, says The London Daily Graphic, and anything new in the way of skins is eagerly sought after. A well-known Old Bond street house has just introduced the "Russian mink" fur, which, unlike the ordinary mink, has no tinge of red, but is shaded almost identically with a sable. This fur deserves popularity, not only on account of its novelty, but for its intrinsic value, as it is unquestionably superior to any mink fur hither to in the market. A costly dress in the old shade of heliotrope cloth had the skirt very gracefully pleated and trimmed with a stole of Russian mink, falling from the waist at each side, terminating in five tails, and shorter stoles more towards the back. The bodice was a mink bolero applique on a blouse of heliotrope panne, ornamented with motifs of cream braid, passementerie, and Oriental embroidery. At the top was an embroidered shaped facing of green velvet, and the full sleeves were finished with lace ruffles. The toque intended to go with this handsome dress was of rough cream beaver, with turned-up directoire brim, overlaid with medallions of virgin gold embroidery, and a Russian mink placed flat on the outside, the tails falling over the back.

Monkey fur is likely to be fashionable for women's wear during the coming season, says an English exchange.

A French furrier is responsible for the introduction of this latest novelty, and already a few wraps of the lang-haired, silky, shining, uneven fur have been seen. One has cuffs, stole-collar and muff of dazzling white fox skins. English furriers prefer mole to monkey fur, as it is new to the public, and pretty. Sable, however, is still the standard fur, and ermine is being generally used. There are two novel fur models. One is a pelerine cape of Russian sable, cut rather low at the throat, with a line of dark fur edging the triangular opening. Round the shoulders is a hood-like drapery of ermine, fastening in front under grey satin rosettes, and cut to a point at the waist-line. From under the hood falls a flounce of sable, arranged in supple folds suggestive of plaiting. The other notable fur is a belted blouse of mink. Over the shoulders the fur is folded back, resembling a hood, the fur coming to a point in front and behind. Muffs are very large this winter, principally in sable, with the sides draped in box plaits, lined with ermine.

How to Clean a Brass Fender.

If you do not use any of the advertised polishes, make a paste with paraffin of a very little powdered ammonia and plenty of fine emery powder. Scour with this and then polish with a leather or cloth.

How to Wash Kid Gloves.

To wash kid gloves, first get the kind that will wash. Then wash them right. Don't imagine that any old way will do. The washable kid can be cleaned. But they demand that it be done properly. The glove must first be soaked for half an hour or more in a lather of tepid soap and water, then washed on the hand in a fresh lather, and finally rinsed and squeezed gently with a towel, so that when taken from the hand it is not dripping wet and dries quickly. These economical gloves can be had in kid or suede and in pretty shades of beaver and grey as well as in white.

The Christmas Turkey.

The question of stuffing or not stuffing the Christmas turkey is debated from year to year. Many people declare that the flavor of the bird is distinctly impaired by stuffing, and others exclaim that the stuffing is itself half the feast. Whether the old-fashioned bread-crumb, sage and onions, chestnut, or, as in the south, peanut dressing may be used, be sure that the turkey is roasted breast downward in the pan. There are dozens of good dressings for turkey, of which the following are recommended:

Sausage dressing—Crumble with the hands a baker's loaf, from which all the crust has been cut away. Moisten slightly with cold water. Stir in two tablespoonfuls of melted butter, half a pound of country sausage meat, a tablespoonful of finely chopped parsley, and, if liked, two or three sour apples. Season carefully, as the sausage is itself seasoning.

Chestnut dressing—Shell about three pints of large chestnuts and blanch in boiling water. Cover them with water or weak stock, and add a tablespoonful of sugar, a little salt, and a bay leaf. Boil until tender enough to put through a sieve. Buy a marrow bone, and, having covered either end with a thick paste of flour and water, wrap in a cloth and simmer in water for three hours. Scoop out the marrow and add to the chestnut puree, with a tablespoonful of butter. Mix to a stiff paste and fill the turkey. This recipe is taken from Good Housekeeping.

Serve cranberry jelly, instead of sauce with the turkey. It is as easy to make and not nearly as mussy to look at. To a quart of picked-over berries add a cupful of water and cook until the berries are soft. Strain through a jelly bag, add a pound of sugar, and boil fifteen minutes. Pour in a fancy mould, or in individual moulds, and set aside in a cold place.

For the supper table, chicken or turkey salad in a cranberry mould is delicious. Make the jelly as directed and mould in a ring. Turn out very carefully just before serving, and fill the centre with the salad. Turkey salad, by the way, is as good as, if not better than, chicken salad, when mixed with plenty of celery and a few walnut meats.

RUSHING TRAINS CRASH

Twenty-two Persons Killed in a Collision

Red Signal Light Blown Out by Wind and Train Rushed by

Grand Rapids, Mich., Dec. 28.—Twenty-two persons are dead and 31 injured several of them fatally, is the result of the collision early on Saturday night of two passenger trains on the Pere Marquette Railroad, one-half mile west of East Paris.

According to the statement of officials the trains were originally to have met and passed at Oakdale Park, but the orders were changed, and the west-bound train was to have been signalled at McCord's. Instead it rushed by that station, and the operator there found on going out to the platform that his red signal light, which had been burning two minutes before, was out, presumably extinguished by the high wind that was blowing.

A Terrible Crash.

The westbound engine drove through No. 6 engine like a wedge, separating the gear from the boiler and standing the latter on end, a broken, twisted steel. The running gear was crumpled up like so much twine, and the steel tires of the big driving wheels split and sprung from the wheels.

The boiler of engine No. 397 turned over several times, and the very force of the twisted impact seems to have been the means of saving the life of Engineer Waterman. He was flung 40 feet over the fence at the edge of the right-of-way.

As the trains came together the steam domes of each boiler blew off, releasing their contents.

Loaded With Passengers.

The westbound train was travelling down grade at the rate of 60 miles an hour. The eastbound train was climbing the hill at a speed of 40 miles an hour. The former carried probably 75 passengers, while the latter is believed to have been carrying at least 125 persons. The two trains collided at about the middle of a long, sweeping curve. On the inner side of the curve is a high embankment, preventing a view of the track ahead.

Engineer Frank Waterman, of the westbound train, who survived the catastrophe, says he and his fireman, R. B. Moon, were caught like rats in a trap. He never saw the eastbound train.

The crash and the moans of the injured were heard by nearby farmers, who rushed to the scene to lend assistance. No persons occupying cars other than the baggage and smoking cars, with a very few exceptions, were seriously injured.

Rescuers, by the light of lanterns, delved into the wreckage, and with fence rails and timbers pried out the sufferers. A special train bearing surgeons and officials was made up here immediately, and went to the wreck.

THOUSANDS of men are prisoners of disease as securely as though they were confined behind the bars. THE GREAT WORK GOING ON IN MUSKOKA.

1,000 Patients Treated in the Two Muskoka Hospitals — the Sanatorium and the Free Hospital for Consumptives.

Surprising Decrease of 25 Per Cent. in the Last Three Years in Deaths from Consumption.

Fifty-five Different Trades and Professions Represented by the Patients Admitted to the Free Hospital for Consumptives.

Two Pavilions have had to be Closed Owing to Lack of Funds, and the Number of Patients Reduced from 75 to 50.

$25,000 Wanted this Year to Carry on this Great Work.

With a view of helping to bring to the attention of the public the needs of the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives, we have pleasure in publishing the following letter, in which an appeal is made for funds.

Dear Friend,—

It again becomes necessary to make an urgent appeal for funds for the Free Hospital for Consumptives.

A very heavy debt is pressing upon the trustees.

In addition to this, funds must be provided for the maintenance of patients. Last month there was a deficiency of nearly $1,500 over and above receipts from all sources.

The Free Hospital for Consumptives was opened eighteen months ago. 225 patients have been admitted.

No patient has ever been refused admission because of his or her poverty.

1,000 patients have been cared for in the two Muskoka Hospitals, the Sanatorium and the Free Hospital for Consumptives.

The majority of these have either been cured, or so helped that they have been enabled to again become bread-winners for the family.

The public are beginning to find evidence of our work.

Already there has been a decrease of nearly 25 per cent. in the death-rate from consumption in the Province of Ontario.

The last report of the Secretary of the Provincial Board of Health shows that in the last three years the deaths from consumption in Ontario have decreased from 3,481 to 2,691, a decrease of 790, or nearly 25 per cent.

This is the more gratifying when we remember that for a number of years previously the same report showed a steadily increasing death-rate prior to 1899.

Who will doubt that the work of our two Hospitals in Muskoka, and the persistent educational campaign carried on, has not helped to secure this surprising result?

In what better way can your gifts bring so good a return?

We have no endowment, excepting the provision recently made by Canada Life, Confederation Life, and North American Life Insurance Companies for maintenance of 2 beds each for a year.

We can only rely on the philanthropy of our people and a knowledge of our needs.

Last year we asked $20,000 to reduce the debt and to pay for care of patients. We had a generous response, receiving $10,000, gifts coming from Halifax on the east and Yukon on the west. This year our needs are greater than ever. We will require $25,000.

The Bishop of Selkirk, Caribou Crossing, Yukon, sending $10.00, writes: "The trifling remittance I send is intended to express our sympathy for the sufferers in other parts, rather than to imply a special need for your institution here."

We are grateful for the large gift. We are grateful for the small gift; all gifts are helpful.

On account of our pressing needs, will you not make this your special charity?

During the year, for lack of funds, we had to close several pavilions, reducing the number of patients from 75 to 50.

The sorrowful part of our work is that nearly all of those in the Free Hospital are young men or women who were striving to make a place for themselves in the world. Many of them have wife, or child or husband anxiously watching the struggle for life.

Your gift will help to bring gladness to so many. Will you have the joy of giving?

Very truly yours,

W. J. Gage

Toronto, December 10, 1903.

THE WORD OF GOD

Rev. John J. Donlan, Church of the Nativity, Brooklin, New York.

If you continue in my word, you shall be my disciple indeed.—John, viii., 31.

All through the Scriptures great stress is laid upon keeping God's word. "If a man love me, he will keep my word;" and again, "He that loves me not keeps not my sayings." Discipleship in Christ, therefore, seems to depend on how clearly and closely we shall adhere to His teaching.

The question, then, is, Do I continue in God's word? How can I tell unless I know what His word is? The man who never reads his Bible and never attends at the preaching of the word must be ignorant of what is necessary for a Christian's salvation. Many a man without being a follower of Christ keeps his sayings just as a man may keep the law of the land without being a citizen. What, then, do we mean by the word? It is the outward expression of the inward thought. It is a mode of communication between mind and mind. As I can feel a living body and make myself felt by it through the sense of touch, so, too, soul can feel soul by means of the spoken word.

Christ's word, then, is the outward expression of His living thought. He would reach and influence our souls with it. He would have His thoughts to be our thoughts, His words to be our words, and thus draw us to fellowship by dispelling the darkness of the understanding and disarming our rebellious wills. "Faith comes by hearing" and "the love of Christ constrains us." By that hearing of the word we are warned into that activity which induces us "to take the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God, living and effectual, and more piercing than a two-edge sword." By it we battle our way through the darkness of ignorance to the light of inspiration where we discover what we ought to know and at the same time recognize what we ought to do. Thus the written or spoken word arouses in us a consciousness of duty which under the impelling grace of God we are led to accomplish.

Many, however, hear the word of God and yet absolutely fail to "bring forth fruit in due season." No impression is made on their souls, no change for the better is noticed in their conduct and mode of life; there is no avoidance of the wrongdoing the word condemns; no practice of what the word recommends. The reason why the word fails is because it is not allowed to sink deep down into the soul. Hence there is no meditation, no reflection, no recalling it to mind from time to time. The words of the great Lawgiver, "and these words which I command thee this day shall be in thy heart; thou shalt tell them to thy children, and thou shalt meditate upon them sitting in thy house and walking on thy journey, sleeping and rising," are forgotten. But the opposite is the rule. The word is soon forgotten. It is never spoken of in the household, at work in the shop or travelling about. Neither does it arouse in us any feeling of real pleasure, for our minds are consumed with idle or vain thoughts, or our temporal matters preoccupy us.

Such, indeed, the Apostle James compares to a man who looks at his countenance in a mirror. "He beheld himself and went his way, and presently forgot what manner of man he was." For what is God's word but the holding of the mirror up to nature that we may see ourselves as we are; that we may truly measure our worth by His standard? In the mirror of His sayings we behold the manner of man we are. We see our inward failings and we detect the very cause of our sinfulness. We are permitted to make no mistake; the reflection is too true. If we allow the word to escape our minds it is as if we turned our backs on the mirror, and in the turmoil, the care and the pleasure of life presently forgot the reflection. And with what result? No moral improvement, no change in manners; the same defilement remains. Under such conditions if I am an impure man I remain so; if I am a drunkard I remain one; if I am a blasphemer I continue my blasphemy. Why? Because the word of God, living and powerful as it is, "and reaching unto the division of the soul and the marrow, and a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart," cannot force a free being to any particular action, cannot coerce the human heart to beat in unison with what it dislikes. And yet we must continue in His word if we wish to follow after Him.

We should not forget, then, the word of God, which will never pass away, even though the heaven and earth cease to be. We should prepare the soil of our souls and make it fertile to give root to the seed, which is the word of God. Our constant prayer should be that of the royal prophet, "Thy words have I hidden in my heart that I may not sin against thee," and carrying out its prayer in our everyday life we may expect finally a reward from Him who said, "Blessed is the man who hears the word of God and keeps it."

One of the Finest?

The "greatest of the earthly rulers of men," we are assured by The Servet (Constantinople), organ of Takir Bey, a favorite at Yildiz Kiosk, is "Abdul Hamid, who excels in glory all former Ottoman rulers." "The more the years pass the greater becomes the affection of hosts of peoples for him who knows so well how to guide the Turkish Empire in the difficult path of prosperity and peace. In truth, at what epoch of glorious Ottoman history have we witnessed such febrile activity as we now behold? Everywhere we behold reconstruction and reform. . . The best thing that could happen to our empire is to have Abdul Hamid for our ruler many years to come. When a reign is so beneficent, when the well-being of the population is so dear to the ruler's heart, the future seems full of promise."

When Hetty Green was brought to court on complaint of not having a license for her dog Dewey, she said:

"I've got a New York license for the dog. Ain't that enough?"

"No, you must have a Jersey license."

"Must I? Well, it's mighty extravagant; but a dog's worth mor'n a lawyer, anyhow; barks louder for you, and don't cost near so much."—New York Times.

For the Ladies.

Knives.

The loosening of the handles of knives is due to the fact that the knives have been tossed into a pan of hot water, together with the forks and spoons, and, in consequence, the cement has melted away. Knives when brought from the table, should be scraped against the edge of a plate to remove as much soil as possible, and the blades should then rest in a jug, not a pan, of hot water, into which a little bit of soda has been melted, care being taken that the water does not reach the handle, where it joins the blade.

Bookish Women.

Bookishness is an unreliable test of ability. I have known bookish women who were profuse readers and delighted in study, but were not of much use for anything else, and I have known other women who took books rather hard, but amply made up for that disability by their closeness of observation and mental energy. As between persons who read to save themselves the trouble of thinking, and persons who observe and think, but find reading laborious, the latter are likely to be best worth while. But reading, observation and thought ought to work well together and to make for practical efficiency. A mind that is capable of Greek and analytical geometry is usually capable also, under proper training, of omelets, good coffee and household administration.—E. S. Martin, in Harper's Bazar.

Hindu English.

Lady Curzon, who was Miss Leiter of Chicago, gets a lot of fun out of her life in India. Among other fads, it is said that she makes a point of collecting any amusing attempts made by Hindus to write English that may come under her notice, and has many ludicrous specimens in her scrapbook. Recently she got from Bombay a letter that two brothers sent out to their patrons on the death of their father, who had been the head of the firm. The letter ran: "Gentlemen,—We have the pleasure to inform you that our respected father departed this life on the 10th inst. His business will be conducted by his beloved sons, whose names are given below. The opium market is quiet, and mal. 1,500 rupees per chest. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? We remain, etc."—Leslie's Weekly.

Care of House Plants.

The advent of colder weather means increased fire heat, the latter also meaning an increased aridity or dryness of the atmosphere. The latter condition will probably induce a visit from insect pests, unless precautions are taken to prevent their appearance. Green fly and red spider are most to be feared, especially the latter, as their appearance is not so easily detected as that of the aphis, or green fly.

Copious sprinkling and syringing with cold water is the best preventive for the attacks of the so-called spider. Salvias, fuchsias, roses and carnations are first favorites with this little pest. When first attacked, the leaves of these plants present a whitish, dusty-looking appearance, especially on the underneath side, and the leaves will soon commence dropping twice every day. Tobacco water is the best remedy for green fly, although tobacco leaf stems, or even a cigar thoroughly dried and rubbed into a fine powder and sprinkled on the plants infested with green fly will generally rid the plant of them. The latter application is best made after the plants have been recently sprinkled or syringed, as the tobacco dust adheres better when the foliage of the plant is moist.—William Hunt, Guelph, Ont.

Keep the Windows Open.

You would not think of drinking stale or poisoned water, would you? You know that if you were to be shut in an air-tight compartment death would result. Of all the necessities of life, you can live longer without any of them than air. Impure air and darkened apartments are the cause of an untold number of deaths annually. You know that on a sunless day, with a close atmosphere, you are out of sorts at the best, if you are lucky enough to escape physical ailments, while you are mentally depressed. But once let the sun shine brightly, and clear the atmosphere, how different how much better you feel in every way.

Cold weather is coming, and when you are tempted to close up the house as tight as it can be made, remember these things, and don't do it, especially at night. Keep the windows in the sleeping apartments open enough to at least give you sufficient fresh air. A cold room does not indicate that it is healthy, far from it. A sleeper will soon breathe up all the fresh air in a room, and if there is not a constant supply of fresh air, he simply breathes over and over again the poison thrown off by his lungs. And the breathing of this vitiated air only tends to lower the temperature and vitality of the system, so that it is not as capable of withstanding the rigors of winter. Fresh air is heating to the body; in fact, upon it depends the combustion of the fuel in the body and by which we are kept alive, which we should always bear in mind.

Even with open windows during the night, bed chambers and bed clothing should be thoroughly aired each morning, and allowed all the sunlight possible. During sleep, not only do the lungs throw off more poison than during the day, but it is especially so with the body in its relaxed condition and when the pores are all open. During sleep the body should have plenty of covering; better to have too much than not enough, both to induce deep slumber and to keep the skin moist and the pores open that they may have the opportunity to rid the system of poison. Bear in mind that death would follow the closing of the pores.

Fresh air in cold weather will cost money, as more fuel will be required, but it will be economy, for if it does not save sickness and doctor bills, and which it most likely will do, you will feel better and the stronger for it.—Cooking Club.

Poultry For England.

The Department of Agriculture has received the following communications from British dealers who desire to purchase Canadian poultry. One of the dealers is at present in Canada negotiating for the shipment of poultry. He writes the department as follows:—"I am in Canada soliciting consignments of poultry to England. My name has been before your department for several years as a large importer of poultry. You have sent me consignments of chickens. I should be glad if you would name the Canadian poultry shippers and mention my name if possible, so that they may commence to ship early in December. Yours truly (Signed) James Blackburn."

For four years the Department of Agriculture has exported chickens fatted at the illustration stations to Mr. Blackburn. His address is Wholesale Fish Market, Manchester, England. The dealings have been perfectly satisfactory, and the prices obtained for the chickens have been profitable. Mr. Blackburn stated that he would like to handle 3,000 cases of chickens per week. The department has also received a letter from Mr. William Rothwell, Manchester. Mr. Rothwell says: "There seems to be a very good prospect for all kinds of poultry this Christmas. If you can give or have any consignments sent me, you can rest assured of the utmost value being obtained. Cash and sales sent immediately goods are disposed of. The probable prices are as follows: large cock turkeys, plucked, 14 to 18 pounds, 9d to 10d per pound; plucked turkeys, 12 to 13 pounds, 8 1-2d to 9d per pound; plucked turkeys, 9 to 11 pounds, 7 1-2d to 8d per pound; plucked chickens, 8d per pound; plucked ducks, 7d per pound; turkeys in feather, 6 1-2d to 7d per pound. I trust that I may have consignments from Canada."

Mr. Hare, chief of the Dominion Poultry Division, stated that these approximate prices should offer substantial inducements to Canadian exporting firms to ship poultry to Great Britain. The poultry should be forwarded in a steamship equipped with cold-storage. Even on small consignments the freight charges will not be over one cent per pound.

British Object to Mixed Lots.

Writing to the fruit division, Ottawa, Mr. A. W. Grindley, inspector of the Department of Agriculture in Great Britain, quotes as follows from a letter received from a firm of fruit importers: "If your department, through a circular, could induce shippers to use some common sense in sending apples, you would do them much good financially. For instance, yesterday the Tunisian was cleared up, the bulk having been disposed of earlier in the week, and in the catalogues there were over 1,250 lines under 10 barrels each (we should guess averaging two and three barrels), of different varieties. We do not know of any trade where so much money is being wilfully thrown away."

Regarding this point, Mr. Grindley refers to one lot of apples catalogued on October 23, in which there were 30 varieties in a lot of 41 barrels, and says that no buyer will pay top prices for these mixed lots, and that the shipper loses heavily every time. The establishment of co-operative packing and shipping houses, advocated by Mr. MacKinnon, is pronounced by Mr. Grindley a splendid idea, and one that, if carried out, would, to a large extent, do away with the small lots of mixed varieties of which importers complain.

Equitable Gold Mining Co.

R. C. LANE, President. W. F. NORTON, Secretary and Treasurer.

Over $300,000 of development work already done. Main shaft 9 x 16 feet, down 700 feet. Over 3,000 feet of drifts, tunels and shafts showing immense ore body

Destined to become large and continuous dividend payer.

The Equitable Gold Mining Co.'s properties consist of three mines, known as the North Bonanza, Flowery and Kimbark. They are located in Six Mile Canon, less than four miles from Virginia City, Nevada, which is the nearest railroad station.

Years ago, over three hundred thousand dollars of development work was done upon the mines—so they are not mere "prospects" but actual mines. This work was done under the personal supervision of competent engineers, and was paid for by the owners of the mines themselves; thus giving double assurance that the work was well done and that the expenditure was justified.

The Main Shaft (triple compartment, 9x16 feet in the clear) is down seven hundred feet. From this shaft, running along the vein matter, east and west, are four drifts, at different levels, having a combined length (including the Rule winze and the tunnel) of 2,000 feet.

In addition to the above there are four small shafts, with a combined depth of about 800 feet; 585 feet of tunnels, and at least 500 feet of cross-cuts, upraises, etc.

All told, there is 4,050 feet of underground work—the most of which is in ore. Here is nearly one mile of openings in mineralized rock.

It is conservatively estimated by competent and reliable engineers and practical miners that there is developed an ore body of at least One Million Five Hundred Thousand Tons!

As a further evidence of the large amount of work done there is from 75,000 to 100,000 tons of ore on the dumps at the different surface openings—ore that, with modern cheapened processes, can be converted into gold bullion at a profit.

THE TITLE

Title to the Flowery and North Bonanza mines is by patent from the United States government, while the title of the Kimbark is by location and possession;

The Equitable Company obtained the Flowery and North Bonanza mines, both of which are patented, by purchase—the payments therefore to be made out of a share of the net proceeds of the mines. The Company has a written contract, duly recorded, for a deed, and is in possession of the properties, and is now operating them. The sum of $2,000 was paid on the contract, September 30th, 1902, and partial payments have since been made. The Company is entitled to $6.25 per ton as cost of mining and milling. One-half of all over and above this $6.25 per ton goes to the former owners till they receive the total sum of $105,000, without interest. There is no stipulation as to amount of work to be done within any specified time—and no proceeds, no pay. The Company can therefore pay it in one year or it can pay it in ten years. With this exception the Company is free from debt. Its policy is to pay as it goes. In this way it has no fear of financial embarrassments. The title to the Kimbark is by "location," under the mining laws of the United States. Work enough has already been done to entitle the Company to a patent, which in due time will be obtained.

Recent Development Work

Since the Company acquired the property, it has put up poles and wires for a distance of one mile for the transmission of electric power from the Truckee River Electric Power Plant. By this means unlimited power for mining, hoisting and milling is obtained.

It has built a dwelling house for the manager, a large boarding house for the miners, a barn, a power house and blacksmith shop.

It has put an electric hoist and skip into the [illegible]-tunnell; has purchased ore cars and the necessary tools for mining purposes.

It has acquired the Kimbark ground, adjoining the Flowery and North Bonanza mines, and is now developing the property by driving a tunnel.

Within the last few months the Company has mined and milled over 800 tons of ore—realizing therefrom about $10,000 worth of gold bullion. The out-put is constantly increasing and all the Company needs is more mill capacity to handle its ore.

This company has the right, without royalty payments, to use the new patent machine upon all the land it may own, acquire by lease, or operate, in Arizona. We invite special attention to the great commercial value and profit of this machine, and what can be accomplished by it.

What This Machine Will Do.

For the first time in the history of gold mining a machine has been invented which will handle the dry placer gold gravel without water, and in large quantities. This machine will save 98 per cent of all the gold in the gravel, and will do it at a lower working cost than by any existing process. It is operated by a small, compact engine, using crude oil as fuel. A complete plant, capable of handling 300 tons per day will weigh less than 1,200 pounds.

To secure the gold only those placer lands could be worked, which could command large supplies of water, hence the immense bodies of dry placer lands remote from water have never been worked.

Fifteen Hundred Millions in Gold

The United States has yielded nineteen hundred millions in gold, of which fifteen hundred millions—or more than 75 per cent.—were the product of its placers.

Ninety per cent. of the world's total gold supply has been taken from placers by processes which have admittedly lost the bulk of the values.

Simplicity of Machine — its Method of Operation

The machine is so extremely simple in construction and operation that any intending investor can operate it instantly. He can take a peck or more of sand, either ordinary house of sea sand, or sand as is found in the placer lands of Arizona and California, put into this sand ten or a hundred pieces of gold as small as the point of a toothpick, and from that to the head of an ordinary pin, mix the sand and the gold thoroughly, turn them into the hopper or feed of the machine, and in a few seconds the machine will separate the gold from the gravel and recover from 98 to 100 per cent of the gold. It is an absolute, infallible, ocular demonstration of the merits of the machine. It has solved the problem of handling sand or gravel containing gold in regions remote from water.

Cost of Handling Material

Each plant is portable, weighs less than 1,200 pounds and can be easily moved by a few laborers.

The two greatest authorities in the world on the moving of material are "Haswell" and "Trautwine." They say in their standard publications that a laborer can shovel horizontally, 12 feet, vertically 6 feet for 50 feet haul 17 cubic yards in 10 hours.

A well known engineer in his work for the U. S. Government at Sandy Hook, moved 18 cubic yards, 100 feet haul in 10 hours at a cost of 10 cents per cubic yard, paying laborers $1.75 per day.

The dry placer gold-bearing sands of California, Arizona and New Mexico are handled quite as easily as those of Sandy Hook.

Ten laborers can easily supply one machine with 204 cubic yards of gravel in 12 hours, working at the same speed as shown by Haswell, Trautwine or at Sandy Hook.

Placer work on above basis would cost about 11 1-2c. per cubic yard.

Do You Want Monthly Dividends?

We make a special offer of a limited number of shares of stock at this time, because the company requires immediately sufficient to build several machines to operate in the field.

Every machine at work will increase the intrinsic value of the stock.

Twenty machines in the field will increase the price and value of the stock more than double the present offering, and every additional machine means a further increase in price and value.

The Company intends to divide its net earnings every month, so that the stockholders may count absolutely on receiving monthly dividends in proportion to monthly earnings.

'Henry Fielding's Dream'

By CORTLAND MYERS

"Better get this world right before they talk so much about the next."

"Oh Henry, that is not the way Christ talked!"

"Yes, that is just the way Christ talked, and lived, too, if I remember the story right. Of course, I have not had much to do with it lately."

"I am sure that you do not understand the Gospel, or the purpose and work of the ministers and churches, or you would not feel just as you say."

"Now, Elsie, there is not any use in talking to me about this, because my convictions are fixed, and I believe in good reasons. I did not give up church and prayer and all my training without sufficient cause. You have not seen what I have, nor have you passed through some of my experiences. A good many things ought to be made right, and the churches ought to be the first to enter into the work; but they are the last, and most of them stand on the corner of the streets like sepulchres for dead people, instead of great centres where the business of Christianity is being transacted and the wrongs of human society are being righted. The working men do not cross the threshold of these tombs to-day. There are one hundred and fifty men where I work, and only three of them go to church. There are one hundred and forty-seven heathen right in that one place, and I am one of them—not by choice, but by compulsion."

"I cannot argue with you, Henry, but I am sure you are prejudiced, and don't really understand what the Gospel mission is, or what the churches are doing. You talk about the wrongs of society, and all this, but what would this great city be without the churches?"

Henry turned in his chair and drummed on the table with his fork, and said, with a disgusted air: "It couldn't be much worse. Say, Elsie, do you know that most working men think that the Church has not one particle of sympathy for them, but caters to the rich and well-to-do in order to be well supported and build first-class buildings, and have more stately services. I declare some of them are like great icebergs now and make you shiver even to pass them. They ought to warm the world instead of floating down from the Arctic regions of philosophy and dogma to chill human society. I can't help it—if all this is religion I don't want any of it. It was all well enough when I was up in the country, but in this great, struggling, seething mass of humanity, and in this whirlpool of injustices— in the same city with sweat-shops and tenements and strikes to get wages and to keep life, the Church ought to do something besides sing and pray. It would be better to dispense with the preaching and do a little practicing."

"Hearken," said Elsie, "I thought I heard a rap."

Then came that gentle tap, tap, tap, continuous and familiar. It was the noise peculiar, but always welcome.

"Come on, old fellow," shouted Henry.

In walked a stalwart young man of bright eye and smiling countenance, quick step and vivacity in every move, almost to the point of nervousness. It was Richard Harding, Henry's companion, and had been for several years. He sat down and then presently moved to another chair, and almost at the same instant arose and picked up a glass from the table and drank the remaining water in it, as he said: "That was a lively conversation in which you were engaged when I was coming up the stairs, and Henry seemed to be doing the most of it."

"Yes," said Henry. "I just shocked her as much as if a bolt of lightning had come right down through the roof and landed on the middle of the table. I don't know but that some of the dishes are broken."

"They are swept clean, anyway," said Richard; "perhaps that was the effect of the lightning."

"Anyway, it was not a quarrel, was it, sister?" said Henry.

"No," replied Elsie, "but I must confess to the shock, or rather a sensation, call it —a pleasing sensation."

"Well, what was it?" said Richard, "let me into the secret. You know I am one of the family."

"If you are one of the family," said Elsie, "then you will have to go, too."

"Go where?" said he.

"I will let Henry tell you," answered Elsie, with something of a merry twinkle in her eye.

Henry sat with his feet crossed and his head leaning on the back of his chair, gazing at the ceiling and again drumming with his fork on the table, apparently oblivious to all that was going on around him, but after a moment's silence, in which Elsie had changed glances with and winked to Richard, he rolled his head over toward them, and said, "What was you saying?"

"Oh, nonsense," said Elsie, "you know, come now, out with it, and then we will all three go together."

"Well, Dick, I am going to church to-morrow morning."

"Ha, ha, ha," came from Richard's side of the room. "After all you have said about the church, and you having no use for it any more —now, going? I thought as much; your sister has been working her scheme, and, like all these women, they get just about what they want if you only give them time enough, and most always it doesn't take much time. Well, I don't wonder at her influence. I think I might be moved myself."

"Oh, no, it wasn't for her this time; it was my own decision and wish. I asked her to go with me. We will take you, too."

"Where are you going, and what brought this into your mind. I don't believe it has gotten into your heart yet."

"Will you go," said Henry.

"That depends," replied he, "explain yourself."

"Wouldn't you like to hear a preacher answer this question: 'Would Christ belong to a labor union?'"

"Oh, I see," said Richard, "it is subject that interests you, not the church."

"I guess that's it," replied Henry. "Anyway the pastor of this large church up at the corner of North avenue and Thirteenth street has advertised that as his subject. He must be a pretty good fellow, and that church just a little different from most others. There must be some sympathy there and anxiety to solve the difficult problems of the present date. Do you care to go with me?"

"You know," said Richard, "I don't go to church, and in fact do not feel very guilty about it either, but wherever there is the slightest effort to give the great question of labor and its wrongs a hearing, I will be glad to go and listen with both ears. Yes, my whole heart, too."

"All right," said Elsie, "at ten o'clock I will be ready."

"Yes," said Henry, "at ten sharp the procession will start, and Elsie will be captain."

"Oh, no," said she, "this is your doing and you are the leader. Richard and I will walk together and you will lead the way."

"Say, Henry, have you seen the paper to-night?"

"No, I have not, Elsie has taken all my time talking about the Church; what is in the paper?"

"Oh, just filled about the strike. It is in a greater mix-up than ever. The concessions that seem just about to be made are farther away than yesterday, and the motormen and conductors are more determined than ever. The sad part of it is that they or their false friends have been destroying cars again, and even injuring some people in a car on the outskirts in the eastern part of the city. That is death to their cause, and ours, too. I kept saying to myself all the way up here, 'Oh, the folly and blindness of this method.'"

"That's so, I suppose," replied Henry, "but— well, I don't know what to say—I know this, they are overworked and under paid and ought to have their rights."

"Come out for a little walk to the barber shop, I will bring you back to your sister in a few minutes all cleaned up and in good religious shape

Massachusetts for Reciprocity.

The Minneapolis Journal (Republican) says:—"The action of the Massachusetts Democratic convention in unequivocally declaring in favor of reciprocity with Canada is significant. The Republicans do not seem to appreciate, at least officially, how widespread is the feeling in favor of reciprocity in general and reciprocity with Canada. They do not understand that thousands of manufacturers no longer care so much as they did for a high tariff, and are very much more concerned than formerly about getting their goods into other countries. There can be very little doubt that when the business men of New England read the reports of the convention their hearts were softened toward the Democrats."

All of this is very gratifying to the people of the Dominion, who do not, however, quite understand why newspapers and politicians of the United States treat the question as though no other country, no other desires but their own, need be considered in the matter. Canadians feel gratified that the Americans are now doing the "hustling and shouting" for reciprocity, and are thankful that the question rests with themselves and has not to be decided by a tribunal of "impartial jurists." But, while there is a growing feeling in the United States (according to the press of that country) for reciprocity with Canada, the extra session of Congress, called for Nov. 9, has to deal with a concrete reciprocity case in the shape of the Cuban treaty, and already there are indications that the solemn obligation of the Government in that regard will meet with strong opposition. The Brooklyn Eagle (Independent Democratic) says:—"In Mr. McKinley's call for the extra session of 1897 the legislators were notified that they were summoned to deal with revenue questions. The President's wishes were complied with, but Congress did not stop there. Upward of 6,500 bills of general purpose, besides a number of joint resolutions, were introduced in the House and in the Senate. These facts are merely recited to show that the President has less power to direct the action of the Federal Legislature than is possessed by the Governor of New York over the Local Legislature. The acceptance by Congress of the Cuban treaty is problematical. There are new members in the House of Representatives, whose views on the subject are unknown. Powerful interests will possibly be arrayed against the treaty next month, precisely as they have been arrayed against every proposition of the sort that has been put forward here or in Cuba. The pending treaty is less advantageous to us than that which we might have had in 1902, but that is not the fault of Cuba. We refused to enter into a reciprocal trade agreement with her at a moment when her distress was greatest. She is now fairly on her feet, and is proportionately less eager to give or receive preferential treatment. The value of Cuban trade to American exporters is proved by records that can not be disputed. It rests with Congress to say whether that trade shall be sacrificed in the interests of a comparatively small band of capitalists engaged in the cultivation of sugar beets."

This view of the situation finds a good many endorsers among the newspapers of both parties. Those who urged the ratification of the treaty point to the report of the United States Consul at Havana that British and German trade with Cuba is increasing, while American trade is decreasing.

FEARS WINTER WITHOUT EQUAL

Goose Bone Weather Prophet Sees Frigid Days in Near Future

Reading, Pa., Dec. 29—Elias Hartz, the veteran goose bone weather prophet made today what he declares will be his last prediction. He said "I have seen eighty nine winters, but this will be the severest of them all. I don't know of any that begun as this one did. It began early and was cold from the start. It changed from intense to severe cold and has remained cold. In other years it would be cold for four or five days and than for the same length of time it would moderate considerably. This winter surpasses all others, and I warn people to be on the lookout."

Storm King Group of Mines

TO CANADIAN INVESTORS

The property comprising what is known as the STORM KING GROUP OF MINES offers an attractive and safe investment. The property is the richest in the country and we believe it would be difficult to secure an investment that promises better returns. The following is a description of the mines written by Capt. A. M. Paul, whose reputation as an expert in mining matters is known far and near.

These properties are situated in the Cable Cove Mining District, about fifteen miles north of Sumpter, Oregon, and about one mile northwest of the Baby McKee mine, about two miles northwest of the Last Chance, the Alpine, the Imperial and the California mines.

The properties in this report consist of seven claims. The names of the seven claims being as follows: The Eureka and the Honest Dollar. These two claims are on the same vein. Adjoining these two claims and paralleling them on the northwest is another vein upon which there are two claims known as the Jennie and Golden Rule, and paralleling them on the northwest there is another vein upon which there are two claims, known as the Storm King and the Ozone. The last claim of this group lies to the northwest of the last two named, and is adjoining them. This claim is the Shannon Bell.

In making my report I will commence with the two first named claims of the group, the Eureka and Honest Dollar. The development on these claims consists of a tunnel ninety-seven feet in length, running along the course of the vein, showing two feet ten inches of ore in the top of the tunnel and a little over three feet in the bottom, which assays giving values of from $9.68 to $70 per ton in gold. About four hundred feet in a southwesterly direction there is a shaft on the vein ten feet deep, showing the vein to be from one to two inches wide on the surface and about twelve inches wide in the bottom of the shaft, in which assays give values of from $3.96 to $40 per ton in free milling gold ore.

This vein is exposed by small shafts and open cuts for a distance of fifteen hundred feet, and the course of this vein is north, ten degrees east, and the vein cuts the formation, showing it to be a true fissure, and the formation is granite. This vein shows in places a width of from ten to fifteen feet of mineralized matter, commonly called vein matter, but which is caused by hot solutions from below.

I will now pass to the Jennie and Golden Rule. There has been very little work done upon these two claims, there being one discovery shaft ten feet deep, showing ore on all sides of the shaft, and running in value of from $4 upwards. It is my opinion that with development, this, too, will prove valuable property.

The work on the Storm King and Ozone consists of a tunnel near the point of discovery and is driven along the vein for a distance of one hundred and eighty feet, showing ore all the way from the surface to the face of the tunnel, and averaging in width from six to eighteen inches. Three assays give the following values, $12.50. This being a general sample taken from the dump. The other two assays are $42.82 and $79.16 respectively, thus being the assorted ore for shipment. The course of this tunnel and vein are north, ten degrees west, and the vein cuts the trend of the formation obliquely (which is granite) and by driving this tunnel five or six hundred feet further it will come in contact a quartzite reef (which is running north, twenty degrees east) which would make this a contact vein between granite and quartzite, and should produce a large body of ore, at the intersection of the contact.

The only work done upon the Shannon Bell, the last claim of this group, is the location work, and is not enough to allow of a report being made.

There is water for power purposes one mile from the property, and timber on the ground, of a very fine quality, sufficient to run the mine for many years to come.

All the assays mentioned in this report were made by the assayer, of the Imperial mine at my request, and the ore was taken by me from the properties mentioned.

I will state that I have been a practical miner since 1870, and am now the manager and superintendent of the Imperial mine in this district.

(Signed) CAPTAIN A. M. PAUL.

Regarding Old Age.

It was stated in a former article that the essential underlying fact in the physical changes peculiar to old age is the encroachment of one set of cells—the common elements—upon the territory belonging to another set—the noble elements.

This encroachment weakens all the functions, reduces the power of assimilation, stiffens the arteries so that the blood charged with supplies for broken-down parts finds less ready access to the organs and tissues, and lower vital resistance. The fibrous structures having, in their overgrown state, no proper function to perform, degenerate and give way to deposits of earthy matter, and so man tends to return to the dust from which he was formed. How, then, to prevent this fibrous outgrowth, or rather retard it is the problem of the physician.

The great physical difference between the living machine and one made of inert matter is that the living machine wears out with non-use while the other wears out with use. Friction eats away the bearings of the steel structure, and finally the worn-out parts must be replaced by others. Use wears away the cells of the animal machine, it is true, but repair from within keeps pace with wear, and in early life outstrips it, so that the body grows and increases in strength. When two cells are used up in the functions of the machine, three are called into activity to replace them.

If, then, we would keep the "noble" elements of the body in condition to perform their duty well and to resist the encroachments of the "common" elements, we must exercise them. This does not mean that the man of fifty must keep up the athletic pursuits he followed at twenty, or that the man of seventy must toil with his brain as he did at forty. The inevitable has begun; the muscles and the brain are less sturdy than they were, and can do less; but they still can do much, and must not be allowed to degenerate by non-use.

The man who retires from business at the beginning of old age and suddenly exchanges an active life for one of sloth commits a fatal blunder. If he lays down the burden of business he must take up some other less exacting occupation to keep from rusting.

Exercise, mental occupation, fresh air, moderate eating and avoidance of excesses of all kinds, either of activity or of idleness—these are the brakes on the wheel of time which prevent a precipitate rush into old age.—Youth's Companion.

A Russian Railway.

There has of late been so much talk about the Siberian Railroad, its "fast freight" and its passenger trains "de luxe," that there is danger that some people will suppose it to be a steam highway comparable with our own transcontinental roads, says The New York Tribune. We have repeatedly pointed out in these columns that, despite the opening and operation of the railroad, it is still found best to send merchandise from Russia to China and to the Siberian coast by water. The sea route is as quick as that by land, and is much cheaper. This view of the case is amply confirmed by the latest authentic reports upon the Siberian Railroad. The distance from Moscow to Vladivostok is 5,166 miles. The choice express trains, passenger trains "de luxe," run as fast as thirteen and a half miles an hour. Thus, if they are not delayed, and are able to keep running steadily, night and day, they make the trip in sixteen days; but so unbroken and expeditious a run is infrequent, and judicious travellers allow three weeks for the journey. As for freight trains, they make at best about eight miles an hour. But they do little running at night, and are necessarily subject to frequent and prolonged stoppages, so that their running time is seldom less than fifty, and often reaches sixty, days, or even more. In view of such a schedule it is not surprising that for through traffic the ocean route is still preferred. Doubtless things will be better some day. The Siberian Railroad was hurriedly built. Its 5,166 miles of rails were laid in ten and a half years, while it took the Canadian Pacific ten years to lay 2,921. That does not mean that the Russians were the better railroad builders. It means that the Siberian road was built flimsily, with narrow embankments, short ties, little ballast, sharp curves, and steep grades, and with very light rails. Such conditions make it impossible to run trains at a high rate of speed. Already the work of practically rebuilding the road from end to end has been begun. When it is finished, at a cost not much less than the original cost of the road, a few years hence, it is promised that trains will be run as rapidly as twenty-two miles an hour—that is, the fastest expresses—reducing the time across the continent to less than ten days.

It would be a mistake, however, to deduce from these facts the conclusion that the Siberian Railroad is a failure, or that it is not proving of service and of profit to its builder. On the contrary, it is of enormous practical value. But that value—apart from military considerations—lies not in through traffic, but in war traffic, especially west of Lake Baikal. It is opening up and settling western Siberia in a marvellous manner. Hundreds of thousand of peasants are now yearly migrating from the overcrowded villages of European Russia to the virgin plains beyond the Urals, where each head of a family receives forty acres of land, free of taxes for three years and for three years more taxable at only half rate. The railroad does not amount to much as a leap across the continent. But as a part of a steady eastward march and growth its importance is inestimable.

United Kingdom's Foreign Trade.

The British Consular reports from Tangier and Laraiche, coupled with those from Dar-al-Baida, Mogador, and other ports on the west coast, show the great preponderance of the United Kingdom in the foreign trade of Morocco. Last year Great Britain took 37½ per cent. of the exports from Tangier and Laraiche and sent 51¼ per cent. of the imports. Spain took 49½ per cent. of the exports, but sent only 6 per cent. of the imports; France sent nearly 26 per cent. of the imports and took 9½ per cent. of the exports, while the German share of the exports was 1 per cent. and of the imports 3½ per cent. The total value of the trade was £1,174,814 (exclusive of bullion and specie), against £964,286 in 1901. The great increase last year was due to the presence of the Moorish Court at Fez, and the greater prosperity of the people, who have had good harvests and who have not been forced to pay the same exactions as in previous years. The chief increase in imports was in those from Great Britain and Spain; the French and German imports declined. But the Consul at Tangier warns British manufacturers that their present predominant position in Morocco is being assailed by active rivals, chiefly Austrian and German and French

Term sThat are Out of Date.

"No one says 'ladies' or 'gentlemen' nowadays, Sarah," said Aunt Betty Modish to her country-bred niece, whom she was endeavoring to "form" on the approved lines of the fashionable type of her world, before presenting her to society. "We are men and women now, Dieu Merci! And it sounds like a servant to speak of people in any other way. And for Heaven's sake, child," continued her up-to-date mentor, "never let me hear you use that dreadful word 'genteel' again. I heard you say that something looked 'genteel and ladylike' yesterday, and I nearly fainted."

"Gran," who was knitting a fleecy mass of white Shetland wool into soft, dainty little baby's garments, looked up quizzically.

"Yes, Sarah," she said, "it is quite true; there are no ladies, in the old acceptation of the term, left in these modern times. They are like old lace and lavender, and belong to a bygone age. The delicacy and refinement, the purity of speech and manners, the sweet primness which laid an embargo on over-free speech, the dignity of demeanor, and the graciousness of courteous deportment, which we used to consider indicative of a 'lady,' are all old-fashioned, and, of course, must not be cultivated. The gentlemen, too, as your Aunt Betty says, have disappeared. Chivalry is quite obsolete, courtly manners are considered ridiculous, and I do not think that Tom, Dick and Harry, whom you will meet when you go out, need fear to have the old-time appellation."

A Club for Women.

A scheme is on foot to establish in London an international club for literary and scientific women, under the name of the Lyceum Club, and the idea is meeting with warm support. A provisional committee, which is in process of formation, already includes the names of Lady Frances Balfour, Mrs. Moberly Bell, Mrs. Oscar Beringer, Mrs. Craigie, Mrs. Walter Crane, Mrs. Katharine Tynan-Hinkson, Mrs. C. E. Humphry ("Madge" of Truth), Mrs. Thomas Hardy, Mme. Longard de Longarde (Dorothea Gerard), Mrs. Katharine Macquoid, Mrs. Mary E. Mann, Mrs. Alice Meynell, Mrs. Molesworth, Mrs. Hubert Bland (E. Nesbit), Mrs. Reeves (Helen Mathers), Mrs. Clement Shorter (Dora Sigerson), Mrs. Flora Annie Steel, the Hon. Mme. Alethea Wiel, Mrs. L. B. Walford, Mrs. Humphry Ward, Miss L. Alma Tadema, Miss Jane Barlow, Miss Rhoda Broughton, Miss Jeannette Gilder, Miss Beatrice Harraden, Miss Ella Hepworth-Dixon, Miss Netta Syrett, Miss Alice Stromach, Miss Sarah Tytler, Miss McTaggart, Dr. Sophia Jex-Blake, and others. A representative provisional committee is being organized in every country on the continent, in the colonies and in America.

It is proposed that the Lyceum, besides offering the usual conveniences of a residential club, should maintain an information bureau for the use of authors, journalists and students. Members visiting countries other than their own for any length of time would receive introductions to members of the club residing in that country, and foreign members visiting the club in London would have introductions to English members, so that their stay might be made as pleasant as possible. Membership will be restricted to:—(a) Women who have published any original literary or black and white work, and wives of men distinguished in literature and journalism; and (b) women with university qualifications. This, it will be seen, embraces all writing women, black and white artists, doctors and women with university degrees. The capital necessary for the formation of the club has been guaranteed, and it is hoped to secure a club house in the neighborhood of the Strand.

The Deaf Heard.

Ex-Governor Hogg of Texas has the reputation of liking to play a practical joke every time he gets a chance. The last time he was in New York City, says The New York Times, the joke he tried to perpetrate was turned back on him in fine style.

It happened that he wanted a shoeshine. The bootblack, a small-sized Italian, began to chatter at him after he had taken his seat in the high chair. Not being in a conversational frame of mind the portly Governor thought it would be a good plan to feign that he was deaf and dumb. So he responded by signs to everything the bootblack said.

This proceeding naturally caused the desired silence on the part of the Italian and the Governor was wrapped in his own thoughts, when suddenly a little newsboy ran up and asked him if he wanted a paper. Before he could reply the bootblack turned to the boy and said:—

"You nota talka to him. He deaf."

The newsboy looked him over, says the Governor, and then remarked in a loud voice:—

"Well, say, he's a fat old hog, ain't he?"

The Governor, who weighs 300 pounds or more, relishes telling the story, but he adds feelingly that he kept up his bluff after hearing the brutal comment of the newsboy.

A private of an infantry battalion stationed at Mhow, India, was recently sentenced to 168 hours' hard labor for calling his lance-corporal a "Brodrick."

The private, after being sentenced, asked whether he was being punished for insulting the Secretary of State for War or the lance-corporal.

The court remained silent.

THE ANAEMIC YOUNG GIRL

Easily Noticed by Her Blanched Cheeks, Bloodless Lips and Dull Eye

Perhaps she is sixteen. Suddenly she seems to lose strength. Her beauty fades because her vitality is steadily decreasing. Dark circles appear under the eyes which become lustreless and dull. Her spirits droop, for no girl can be contented and happy in such condition.

This may be quickly corrected by taking Ferrozone. It supplies what is lacking in the blood, purifies and strengthens it, and keeps it in perfect order. Ferrozone makes plenty of red corpuscles that manifest themselves in a healthy ruddy complexion. It aids the stomach to do all its work, and creates a natural healthy relish for food.

Every organ of the body is benefited by Ferrozone. It rebuilds the entire system, makes new tissue, strengthens weak flabby muscles, makes thin people fat and sick people well.

No case of Anaemia is too chronic for Ferrozone. It may take time, but if persistently used will cure in the end. It will give you a well developed form, clear complexion, pure breath and will restore the bloom to faded cheeks and color to the lips more quickly than any other remedy.

Every woman who desire a vigorous constitution, and the good looks that come with good health, should take Ferrozone after each meal regularly. It is a wonderful tonic for the brain, the nerves and the blood, and acts also as an efficient but harmless regulator of the menstrual flow. In fact for all diseases peculiar to women and growing girls, Ferrozone has no equal as your druggist can tell you.

Three weeks treatment costs 50c., or three boxes for $1.25. Sold by druggists and dealers in medicine everywhere, or sent by mail if price is forwarded to N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

Mr. and Mrs. McIlmoyl will reside in Selwyn.

Returning to Canada

Yesterday Mr. J. J. Turner, Sr., received a telegram from Mr. Wildgust, formerly organist of St. Paul's church here, that he was about to embark for Canada.

It is only about four months since Mr. Wildgust resigned his position in St. Paul's and returned to England. He found when he got back that Canada had attractions that he could not resist, and he wrote to his friend, Mr. Turner, stating that he was anxious to return. Mr. Turner saw an advertisement for an organist for St. Andrew's Church, Carleton, Place and immediately wrote to a personal friend of his, who was on the Board of Managers of the church in that town, in Mr. Wildgust's behalf. The result was an engagement and a cablegram to come at once. Mr. Turner would make a first class government emigration agent.

REDUCE WIDTH OF ROADS

To the Editor of The Times:

Sir,—I have just returned from a visit to friends in Illinois, and desire to put before the farmers of Ontario a matter which I think concerns them very much. I found the farmers in Illinois in many localities are agitating the project of reducing the width of the country roads from sixty to forty feet. They claim that a great area of road land in the state is worse than wasted. The surplus land on either side of the track is allowed to grow up in weeds, the seed of which is blown over into rich fields. It is claimed that a much better road would be kept up if made narrower, allowing the surplus to be put to good use.

A good road movement was started by M. J. Carpenter, who is now general manager of the Pere Marquette system. He organized a company to break up a lot of rock that had been blasted from the bottom of the Kankakee River at Momence.

The crusher furnished crushed rock at such a cheap rate that hundreds of miles of Illinois roads were covered, and are now in a condition that enables them to be traveled in any kind of weather. These roads are narrow, but they are hard and serviceable and the weeds are kept down.

Here is a pointer for the Ontario farmers. H. R. ARTHUR.

MR. STUART SPEAKS

He States That He is Prepared to Build Street Railway

The Times is in receipt of the following letter, which speaks for itself;

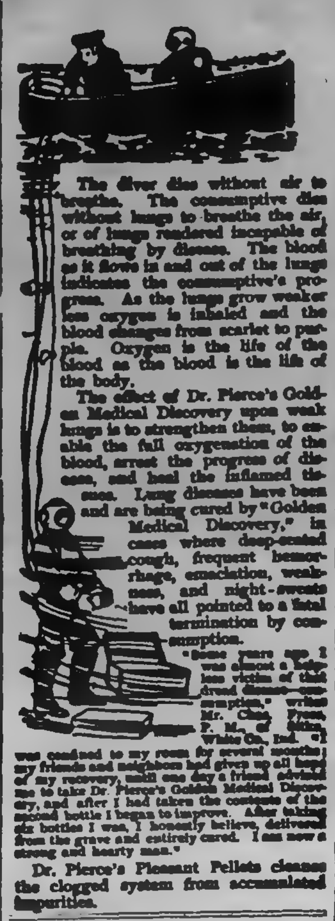
To the Editor of The Times;

Sir,—I am authorized by Mr. Robert Stuart to state that he has arranged for the assignment to his syndicate of the Radial Railway franchise, and will build and equip the railways if the citizens support the bylaws by their votes next Monday. This will enable the Council to carry out the arrangement made with Mr. Stuart last summer.

We must expect strong opposition at the polls from the Otonabee Power Company and the liverymen who are opposed to the street railway.

Mr. Stuart is unwilling to enter into an election contest and leaves it to the Mayor and Aldermen and the citizens generally to deal with the matter as they consider in the best interests of the town Yours truly,

R. M DENNISTOUN.



The diver dies without air to breathe. The consumptive dies without lungs to breathe the air, or of lungs rendered incapable of breathing by disease. The blood as it flows in and out of the lungs indicates the consumptive's progress. As the lungs grow weaker less oxygen is inhaled and the blood changes from scarlet to purple. Oxygen is the life of the blood as the blood is the life of the body.

The effect of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery upon weak lungs is to strengthen them, to enable the full oxygenation of the blood, arrest the progress of disease, and heal the inflamed tissues. Lung diseases have been and are being cured by "Golden Medical Discovery," in cases where deep-seated cough, frequent hemorrhage, emaciation, weakness, and night-sweats have all pointed to a fatal termination by consumption.

"Some years ago I was almost a helpless victim of that dread disease—consumption," writes Mr. Chas. Frese, P. M., of Sikin, White Co., Ind. "I was confined to my room for several months; my friends and neighbors had given up all hope of my recovery, until one day a friend advised me to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and after I had taken the contents of the second bottle I began to improve. After taking six bottles I was, I honestly believe, delivered from the grave and entirely cured. I am now a strong and hearty man."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cleanse the clogged system from accumulated impurities.

CONCERT AND XMAS TREE

Under the Auspices of Mark St. Sunday School

The annual concert and Christmas tree under the auspices of Mark street Sunday school was held in the Town Hall Ashburnham, last evening, and was well attended.

Addresses on the work of the Sunday school during the past year were made by the superintendent and teachers, after which a very lengthy and excellent program was rendred by the members of the school. The duet rendered by little Misses Maud and Janet Titterson was excellent, and was heartily applauded. The little girls were rewarded with handsome bouquets.

After the program the presents on the tree were distributed, and the delightful evening was brought to a close.

The Big Game To-Night

The big game takes place tonight—Queen's vs. Seniors.

Not since Peterborough was represented in the senior series has Queens visited this town, and they come tonight with a stronger aggregation than ever. So the public can look for an exceedingly fast game of hockey. The rink should be crowded. The game will start sharp on time.

An exhibition game of hockey was played last night between the Peterborough Junior O.H.A. team and the Lindsay Collegiate seven, and resulted in a victory for the home team by a score of 9—4. The game, which was witnessed by a fair crowd considering the short notice given, was spiritedly contested throughout, and some good hockey was exhibited.

The T.A.S. had a full practice last night, and had an excellent work out.

The Little Petes were successful in defeating the Little Victorias in a game of hockey on Simcoe street yesterday afternoon.

TO THE ELECTORS

of the Town of Peterborough, including Ashburnham, now part of Peterborough.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

Having received nomination as Alderman for our prosperous Town, I respectfully solicit your votes and influence.

It will be impossible for me to make a personal canvass and therefore I wish to state that I am opposed to giving the contract for lighting to the Peterborough Light and Power Co., at $50.00 per lamp as long as the Town can get as good lighting for $36.00 per lamp from the Otonabee Power Co., which has done so much to bring down the price of lighting, and whose tender shows a saving of over $14,000.00 in ten years. I am also opposed to the present street railway by-law but will support and vote for a good up-to-date street railway operated by good business men but without a bonus, and I will do my best, if elected, to advance the general interests of our prosperous town.

Wishing you all a Happy New Year, I am

Your obedient servant,
JOHN SAWERS.

29th December, 1903.

TO THE ELECTORS

Having received nomination as alderman for the town of Peterborough, I respectfully solicit your vote and influence, and if elected will use my best endeavors to advance the interests of the town. It will be impossible for me to make a personal canvas, but as I have had an experience of four years in the Ashburnham Council, I am willing that I should be judged thereby.

Yours faithfully,
W. J. JOHNSTON,
571 Aylmer street.

Troops Being Hurried Forward Russian War Minister Charged With

Having Failed to Live Up to His Opportunities

Pekin, December 31 — Uchadi Yasuya, Japanese Minister to the Court of Pekin, informed the Chinese authorities today that any concessions calculated to legalize Russia's occupation of Manchuria would be regarded as acts prejudicial to Japanese safety and expose Chinese territory to the threat of aggression on many sides. Uchida's action is Japan's reply to the renewed efforts on the part of M. Lessar, the Russian Minister, to force China to come to an agreement with Russia regarding Manchuria. The tension between the Russian and Japanese diplomatists is near the breaking point.

TO EASE THE SITUATION

St. Petersburg, December 31 — There are indications that the Government appreciates the danger of pressing Japan too far, and is disposed to adopt means for easing the situation. The influential press reflects the disappointment of the ruling class over Japanese pertinacity.

Official irritation at the temporary non-success of Russian diplomacy is vented in an attack on General Kuropatkin, Minister of War, who is charged with failure to prosecute the military preparations with proper energy, and particularly to hasten to the Far East an adequate equipment of field artillery. Kuropatkin replies that Russia's unpreparedness is not due to negligence but to the limited capacity of the Siberian railway.

OTONABEE POWER CO'S POSITION

Claim That Mr. Stuart is Not Bound to Run Street Railway

To the Editor of The Times:

Peterborough, Dec. 30th, 1903.

Sir,—We desire to place clearly before the ratepayers the position we take in respect to the street lighting contract.

We are prepared to enter into a contract with the Town of Peterborough to do the street lighting for $1,400 a year less than the Council are prepared to pay to the Peterborough Light and Power Company. In ten years this will mean a saving to the ratepayers of $14,000. In view of the fact that our assessments have been increased and that our taxes have been increased, we feel satisfied that the ratepayers will not support any Council who would pay $14,000 more for street lighting than it is worth.

If any ratepayer votes for the bylaw it means that he is in favor of paying this extra $14,000 to the Peterborough Light and Power Company, and then the Peterborough Light and Power Company are in a position to drop the railway and stick this extra amount in their pockets.

The ratepayers need not be mistaken about the meaning of his vote for this bylaw because, since Mr. Dennistoun's letter has appeared we went to the Town Clerk's office for the purpose of ascertaining if Mr. Robert Stuart had entered into any contract in writing, with the town in respect to this, and we could not find that the town had "the scratch of a pen" to bind Mr. Stuart to take over the street railway if he got this extra $14,000 for street lighting.

We further found in the Town Clerk's office that the Peterborough Radial Railway Company have a binding contract in writing with the Town giving them a thirty year franchise of the streets.

The parties represented by the Peterborough Radial Railway Company are the ones who put the old street railway under the ground. Moreover the affidavits of Mr. T. E. Bradburn, Mr. Joseph Shook, and Mr. R. M. Dennistoun, filed in court, show that Mr. Robert Stuart has not one cent's worth of interest in the Peterborough Radial Railway Company. Mr. R. M. Dennistoun now claims that it has been "arranged."

Why should the ratepayers of Peterborough pay $14,000 more for street lighting because it is pretended that it is "arranged" to have Mr. Stuart operate the railway. As soon as it is "arranged" to get the street lighting at this extra $14,000, Mr. Stuart is not bound in writing by the Town to operate the street railway.

Yours truly,
OTONABEE POWER CO., LTD.,
W. G. FERGUSON,
President.

SUIT AGAINST UNION MEN

Cincinnati, O., Dec. 31—R. M. Black, a plumber, who was attacked and badly beaten by union strikers for continuing at work after a strike had been declared has sued the Building Trades Council, as an organization, and as individuals, for damages for assault. The same action will be taken against Charles Murray and the Journeymen Plumbers' Union. The purpose is to establish a precedent for holding labor organizations recedent for holding labor organizations and individual members responsible for damages inflicted in furtherance of a strike.

[illegible] FROM MOB

Omaha, Neb., Dec. 31—While on their way home from Omaha last night, Mrs. Mary Stark and her daughter, Mrs. Harry Saunders, who reside in Council Bluffs, were assaulted and robbed by two negroes.

During the encounter Mrs. Stark was knocked down and held while the negro attempted to assault Mrs. Saunders. The women struggled fiercely and screamed loudly for help. During the struggle the clothes of Mrs. Stark were almost torn from her body and she was badly beaten about the face.

An infuriated mob in Council Bluffs is searching for the negroes and a lynching is probable.

Japan and England

The treaty of alliance between Japan and England provides that should either power "in defence of their respective interests" become involved in war with two other powers at the same time the ally must once come to its assistance" and "conduct war in common." This strengthens Japan greatly, as it is clear, but at the same time it has resulted in hampering her freedom of action, for she has naturally awaited England's approval before proceeding to extremities. All through the past fall England's influence has been of a restraining nature, but now if war comes, England will recognize that it has not rashly been occasioned by Japan, and will the more willingly give support.

BOUGHT TWO WARSHIPS

JApan's Latest Proposals are Receiving Serious Consideration of St. Petersburg Ministers

London, December 31 —Rumor continues busy with the Russo-Japanese crisis. The latest report credits Japan with insisting that Russia shall reply to its last note before January 10, on the ground of the rapid approach of Russian naval reinforcements to the scene of action. Enquiry in the best informed Japanese quarters, however, fails to find support for this statement.

Baron Hayashi, the Japanese Minister, paid a long visit to the Foreign Office yesterday. When seen afterwards he said he had no further information.

JAPAN BUYS WARSHIPS.

According to the Daily Chronicle, the Japanese Government outbid the Russian Government and actually purchased the warships Moreno and Rivadavia, both of whom are now nearing completion at Genoa.

Other papers print a report that the Japanese Ministerial Council has decided to transfer $25,000,000 for the educational fund for emergency purposes.

The Daily Telegraph's Tokio correspondent says that after the meeting of the Ministerial Council the Emperor entertained the councillors at luncheon. The Cabinet then held a sitting which was prolonged until late at night. The correspondent says that the Finance Minister on Sunday entertained the leading bankers at dinner, for the purpose of discussing with them the best means of meeting the emergency. Continuing, the correspondent says: "The Japanese officials have already taken over control of the Seoul Fusan Railway. The president of the railway has been dismissed and been replaced by Mr. Furuchi, chief of the Japanese Railway Board.

"The Japanese fleet has been organized and been disposed of in divisions and squadrons, prepared to check any Russian movements from Vladivostock, of Port Arthur."

The Daily Mail's Pekin correspondent sends an unconfirmed report that in the event of war, that China will join forces with Japan; that Japan will send an army corps to Pekin.

RUSSIANS REVIEW THE MATTER.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 31 — In official circles here, the delay in presenting Russia's reply is not regarded as ominous. On the contrary, the fact that Russia, in accordance with Japan's request, is actually reviewing the matters in dispute, is regarded as a favorable sign. It is pointed out that had Russia replied immediately, unfavorable deductions might have been drawn, and although Russia believes her proposals were extremely conciliatory, containing all the concessions she made, this does not exclude the possibility of finding alternative propositions in some portion of the general scheme of settlement, which may more closely coincide with Japan's wishes. If careful consideration discloses the possibility of such a course, it is said that there is every reason to believe that it will be gladly embraced.

AN EMERGENCY ORDINANCE.

Tokio, December 31— An emergency ordinance, promulgated late last night, invests the Government with practically unlimited credit for the purposes of military defence.

Three other ordinances were issued, relating, first, to the Seoul-Fusan railway, which is brought closer under official control; second to the revision of the organization of the Imperial military headquarters in war time; third to the creation of a war council in war time.

These ordinances, it is considered, completely provide for all emergencies.

TROOPS FOR FAR EAST.

Moscow, December 31—Twelve batteries of the four Grenadier brigades of field artillery stationed in and around Moscow have been selected for service in the Far East. Their early departure is expected, which will place 100 field guns at the disposal of Viceroy Alexieff.

It is said here that all the volunteers living at their homes, who, as graduates of high schools, are privileged to serve only a year with the colors, have been ordered into barracks. Extensive movements of troops eastward have been reported.

Russia and Japan Drifting Toward a Collision

London, December 31. — Observers who share much of the information in the possession of the Foreign Office, state this morning that Russia and Japan seem to be steadily drifting toward collision. Viscount Hayashi, the Japanese Minister, has informed Lord Lansdowne that circumstances no longer permit Japan to refrain from "taking measures of precaution in Corea."

The exact meaning of this language is not explained, but it is suspected to cover the movement of troops to strengthen the guards of Japanese railway telegraph, and other interests in the peninsula. It is feared that Russia will adopt a policy of counter action tending inevitably to bring the opposing armies into contact.

Downing Street's only hope of peace continues to rest on the hypothesis that Russia, at the eleventh hour, will take steps to mitigate Japanese anxiety. It is reported in diplomatic circles that Lord Lansdowne's attitude in support of Japan is assuming a more definite character and that he has even gone so far as to intimate to Count Lamsdorff that Great Britain could not witness any overturning of the balance of power in the Far East without extreme uneasiness.

These representations, it is thought, are intended to reveal to St. Petersburg the fact that London might be compelled to regard the construction of Japanese power as inimical to the security of British interests in Asia. No candid official in Britain denies that the situation teems with dangers to the general peace.

KISHINEFF TRIAL A FARCE

Officials Screened All But the Meanest Tools

London, December 31—The result of the trial in Russia of those implicated in the Kishineff massacre has excited widespread indignation, and the trial is regarded everywhere as a shocking travesty of justice. Although hundreds of Jews were murdered in open day before the eyes of numerous witnesses, not one Russian has been condemned to capital punishment, and only two have been sentenced to imprisonment or penal servitude beyond a period of two years, a small percentage of those charged being sentenced to lighter periods. Those in power were palpably bent upon protecting all influential Russians and preventing the complicity of the official classes from being disclosed. So grossly partisan were the judges that the lawyers who acted as counsel for the Jews, threw up their briefs, being convinced that it was impossible to obtain a fair trial. Those who were condemned were the poorest class of deluded wretches. Men of influence got off free, while the Jewish witnesses were rigorously restricted in their testimony, the official witnesses were allowed to introduce every kind of irrelevance calculated to fan anti-Jewish prejudices, and to hide the fact that the riots were fully organized.

THE U. S. PRESIDENCY

Boston, December 31— Hon. Richard Olney is a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination. He has consented to allow his friends to boom his name for they tell him he will never have a better opportunity to gain the nomination and that the chances of a New England candidate being elected were never better.

UNCLE SAM'S STRENGTH

Washington, D.C., December 31—Senator Hale, chairman of the Senate Commission of Naval Affairs, said yesterday that it is the intention to make provision for another addition to the navy during the present session of Congress. He says that when the additions already authorized are completed, the United States will have a more powerful navy than any other nation, except Great Britain.

CONSIDERABLE ALARM IN GERMAN SOUTH AFRICA

General Rising of Hottentots, The Outposts Have Been Overpowered

Cape Town, Dec. 30.—A despatch to the Cape Times from Kimberley says that considerable alarm is occasioned by the threatening attitude of the Hottentots throughout German south-west Africa.

Bands are ravaging the country and plundering Europeans. There are indications of a general native uprising.

The German outposts at Oapis have been overpowered by the Hottentots and the occupants are reported to have been killed.

A supposedly friendly chief, who was armed by the Germans, has joined the rebels.

MISSIONARY MURDERED

A Missionary and Eighteen Followers were Killed

Washington, December 31 — United States Minister Lyon has reported to the American State Department from Monrovia, Liberia, the details of the massacre in an African forest of a white missionary named John G. Tate, with all of his followers, eighteen in number. The massacre took place, on March 15, 1903. The first detailed account has just come to hand in an affidavit by Mrs. Mary L. Allen, a white missionary in Liberia. She had the story from one of the native Doo tribesmen. Tate had a large mission and farm and maintained a school, and altogether nineteen people were in the mission when it was surrounded in the night by the Doos. All were married and their heads taken as trophies. Minister Lyon has communicated with the Liberian Secretary of State, with a view to securing fuller information and perhaps the punishment of the Doo's.

EDISON BATTERY A SUCCESS

May Revolutionize Street Railway and Auto Locomotion

New York, December 31—After a thorough test the Thomas A. Edison storage battery, which may revolutionize street railway and automobile locomotion, is declared to be a complete success. It is claimed for the battery that it will weigh less than half as much as the storage battery now in use and will last many times as long.

The battery has been given a practical test by W. Hibbert, who announces the result as coming up to the most sanguine expectations of the inventor and his friends.

PETERBOROUGH DEFEATS QUEEN'S

In an Exhibition Game of Hockey on Brock Street Rink Last Night

A good crowd, about three-quarters of the seating capacity of the rink being occupied, witnessed the exhibition game of hockey, on the Brock street rink, last night between Queen's University and the Peterborough seniors, it being the opening game of the season. The match resulted in a win for the home team by a score of 6 to 3. The ice was in excellent shape, and the play at times was very fast, and very interesting for the spectators, although not being a league match.

The management of the rink are to be commended upon the stand taken by them in not allowing smoking in the rink during the match, which adds much more pleasure and makes the play more interesting to the spectators, who can follow the puck and distinguish the players much easier than when the rink is filled with a cloud of smoke, which is very objectionable to the ladies as well as the spectators, and is a great drawback to the players.

At 8.30 the players came on the ice. The Peterborough boys, wearing their new uniform of blue and white, received a great ovation, while the visitors, who were accompanied by about a dozen supporters, received their college yell. At 8.30 Lionel King, one of the sharpest and best referees that ever handled a bell, put the boys to work, and had little trouble in holding them in their places, and the game throughout was very clean, only one man going to the fence for a minor offence. The game had not been long in progress before Howell, who played an excellent game at point, rushed up the ice, passed the puck to Harold Armstrong, who passed to Roy, who placed it in the nets. The second goal went to the home team, Morgan scoring. The two succeeding goals went to Queen's, making the score 2—2. Peterborough took the third and last goal scored in the first half, Morgan doing the scoring, making the score at the end of half time 3—2. In the last half the play was faster, and the locals rushed things, and many attacks were made on the visitor's nets, but their goal tender saved them from having a big score run up against them. Peterborough succeeded in putting the rubber past him three times in the last half, Roy and Harold Armstrong, and Morgan, doing the scoring. Queen's added one to their number in this half, making the the score 6—3 at the finish.

The general opinion throughout the spectators was that the locals were playing a picked team from the Frontenacs and Queen's, which were defeated in Picton. This is entirely wrong. The team that played here was Queen's senior team which played in the Senior O.H.A. Only one player—the goal keeper—played at Picton.

The Peterborough boys displayed good team work, and their combination at times was very fast and effective considering this being the first game of the season. Mercer, in the flags, played a good game, and made some clever stops. He has a very keen eye, and is very active. Howell at point and Cavanah at cover are a great defence, and to pass them is almost impossible. This is Howell's first appearance in a game in Peterborough, and his playing impressed the spectators greatly. He displays great headwork and vim in his work. Harold Armstrong, who played cover point last season, took the position of rover, and played a good game, being very conspicuous in the combination. Fred Whitcroft played left wing, and during the first half seemed to be somewhat out of place as his position formerly was rover, but during the later end of the first half and in the last half he played a magnificent game, and put some hot shots on the nets. Morgan, at centre, played his usual steady game, and was right in his place when required. His attacks on the goal keeper, when the nets were in danger, were very conspicuous. Roy Armstrong played right wing, and had a piece of the combination. He also figured in the scoring, placing some hot ones on the nets.

The visitors lacked team work, and relied considerably on individual playing.

The Peterborough Juniors have a game on for Saturday night with the Waverleys, of Toronto, on the Brock street rink.

THE SAD DEATH OF ANDREW PATTULLO

London, Dec. 30.—Particulars of the death of Mr. Andrew Pattullo, M.P.P., for North Oxford, yesterday, show that for several days past he had been in a nervous condition, and had cancelled his speech to the Tariff Reform League of Ipswich, Mr. Barlow Cumberland speaking in his place. Mr. Pattullo seemed to be excited over the English press criticism of his speech of a few days before. His nephew, Geo. R. Pattullo, jr., a newspaper man in London, stopping with his uncle at 11 Montague place, says that Mr. Pattullo woke up early Tuesday morning gasping for breath, as though he had heart disease. He administered a dose of medicine prescribed by Dr. Ross, son of Premier Ross, and Mr. Pattullo felt better and went to sleep. Later in the morning he woke up seemingly very cheerful and arranged to attend a fancy dress ball on Thursday with his nephew, who, assured of his uncle's strength and cheerfulness, went to his newspaper office for about two hours work. On returning he found the door locked and Mr. Pattullo dead inside, with his throat cut by a razor.

JOKE ON BRIDAL COUPLE

Groom Held While Train Leaves with Better Half

Guthrie, Ok., Dec. 31—Miss Nannie Longenecker, neice of Joel M. Longenecker, of Chicago, and F. L. Welcha, a banker of Cashion, were married last night at the latter place. They were escorted to the railway station by a party of friends, the couple having planned a trip to Memphis and New Orleans. After the bride had been placed in the drawing room of the coach the groom returned to the station platform. He was seized by several of his rollicking friends and held until the train departed with his bride. Mr. Welcha bore the joke with remarkable grace and wired the next station for his bride to get off and await his coming on the next train.

ONE "DIVERSION" ON PANAMA CANAL

Gambling the One Amusement that the Ditch Diggers Have

Panama, Dec. 29.—There is practically no diversion in the canal strip except gambling. Of the problems which will harass the Americans when they commence to dig, this is worth attention. Mr. Pratt, of Pratt and Seymour, holders of the gambling monopoly, came here fourteen years or so ago with a light opera company, and never got away.

Everybody gambles. I was sitting with a banker the other day when he received a bag of silver, his winnings in last year's lottery drawing. High and dignified and rather strait-laced American officers, ashore to rest, find nothing to amuse them except to play the red and black. In the American colony distinction as entertainers often goes to the families which have the most satisfactory poker game. For the natives and the very poor there are various games. There are roulette wheels open to the street, but it seems that there are people who cannot afford the eight-cent of four-cent gold chips which are used upon them.

Play Ground For The Poor.

So Pratt and Seymour lease to a Chinaman the privilege of running curious little games, in which four or five cents is enough capital, till it is lost. One, called Dado, is played with dice. Every time six and five or double three comes up the "banker" takes ten cents, Colombia silver, about four cents gold, from the stakes on the table. He merely furnishes a place for the public to play, and acts as umpire. The men around the board play two by two against one another for such wagers as they please.

Another game is half lottery and half roulette. It is called Lotto. The players have sheets with numbers pasted upon them. They chip in four cents each or eight cents, as they please, as a pool. The "banker" whirls a cylinder containing numbered cubes, and when one drops out he calls the number. Thereupon each player places a kernel of corn upon the corresponding number on his sheet. Every sheet is differently arranged; and the game is to get a full row of kernels of corn across the sheet. The first to do it wins, and the "banker" takes ten cents from every dollar in the pool.

Monopoly to End.

Pratt and Seymour have been paying $200,000 a year for the gambling monopoly. Those who gamble, therefore, lose at least that much annually, and all told, women and children, there are but 15,000 people in the canal strip, including the towns of Colon and Panama. The chances are greatly against the players. Monte Carlo has but one zero on its tables, while Panama has two. This means that Monte Carlo exacts for itself, "the house," only half what Panama does. Besides, from five to eight o'clock daily Monte Carlo plays with the players on even terms, without a zero. Yet, notwithstanding the chances in their favor, Pratt and Seymour do not profit greatly by their monopoly. Whether the people have not the money, or whether the very openness and accessibility of the tables detract from the fascination, play is seldom high or long-continued. It frequently closes after two hours for lack of patrons.

The coming of 50,000 people to dig the canal is expected to change this condition. They will be away from home, with nothing to do after the daily labors, and the gambling concessionnaires look for times like those when the French were here, and officers of construction sat by the tables with huge bags of silver, sending their servants for more when luck was bad.

That is, the concessionnaires had hopes and expectations of this sort until night before last. Mr. Pratt went to call then upon Dr. Amador, just returned from Washington.

"All monopolies," Dr. Amador told him, "except lotteries, must go. A gambling monopoly is especially objectionable to the Americans."

There is yet a year for the concession to run. If not renewed it does not follow that gambling will thereby be suppressed. The $200,000 which it has been yielding to the Government would, of course, do much towards convincing the police that "quiet gambling," as they call it in Saratoga is not always objectionable to police authorities.

THE EUROPEAN POWERS COULD CRIPPLE RUSSIA

If the Country's Money Supply Were Shut Off The Great Bear Would be Helpless

Paris, Dec. 31—That every power in Europe is jealous of Russia and would be glad to see her schemes of conquest in the Orient defeated and the nation humbled in the dust, is too apparent to require emphasis. An article on Russia published in L'European, a journal of international influence, issued in Paris, has attracted no little attention in the European press. The author is the Danish publicist Bjornstjerne Bjornson. He assumes that Russia is an undesirable and dangerous element in Europe and Asia, and as a means of thwarting her further advance, proposes that other nations stop supplying her with money. Since 1899, the writer estimates, Russia has borrowed $700,000,000 with which to build fleets and to maintain an army, no less than to establish the gold standard and build railways, and M. Bjornson seems to take it very much to heart that "the larger part of this foreign gold, which has maintained the Russian institution and served its plan of oppression and of conquest, has flowed from the country of liberty, equality and fraternity."

"It is admitted in France and America," M. Bjornson goes on to say, "that without French gold the institution would have gone to smash long ago. No centralized power, even the best, is, for any length of time, capable of governing so many and varied peoples. No hand, no matter how powerful, can stretch over such an enormous territory, or unite so many contrary destinies, created by varied climates, and by numerous racial and religious differences. But what the best government, what the most powerful hand cannot perform, becomes chaos and misery under a feeble autocratic power of a bureaucratic institution that is mercenary and mendacious, unstable and oppressive. Without the foreigner's aid it would have destroyed itself, whether by revolution or by asphyxia. What, however, would have been a general disintegration of the administration of the colossal masses of Russia according to a scheme of federalization.

"With the aid of the foreigner's gold all the inflammable material of this formidable accumulation of injustice and distress has been able to subsist until it has become a danger to us all. Unless a war precipitates her upon her neighbors—a war which would be followed through long years by thunderings and tumults—she will continue to court them as of yore. On this point Russian and foreigner agree. But war will come. If up to the present time the all-powerful Russian institution has not recoiled before any of the means taken to prolong its existence, why should it recoil before war? Whatever the result of the war one thing is certain—the payment of interest will cease. Russia will thank the aid given her by state bankruptcy.

CANADA IS EAGER TO EXTEND BORDER

Government Anxious to Annex Newfoundland

AND ABSORB GREENLAND

One Result of the Alaskan Decision Has Been to Brook No Further Encroachment

Ottawa, Ont., Dec. 31—Canada is waking up suddenly to the feeling of aggression towards the United States. Premier Laurier's interview with the correspondent of the Daily Mail in London about the necessity for power for Canada to make its own treaties has started all sorts of talk about the possible acquisition of Greenland, while the question of coaxing Newfoundland into confederation is assuming daily a more serious aspect.

There is no doubt the Alaskan boundary award has given Canada a good scare. To have similar things happen to us on the shores of Hudson Bay and the Atlantic coast would be most uncomfortable, and it is almost certain that the cabinet, as soon as the excitement over the elections is past, no matter what party comes into power, will do its best to bring Newfoundland within Dominion boundaries, even if the attempts to purchase Greenland from Denmark fail. It is less than ten years ago when Sir Mackenzie Bowell was premier, that Newfoundland was prepared to join hands with Canada and a little diplomacy ough to bring it in now.

We are Building a Navy.

As a further proof of the Canadian spirit it can be announced that orders for the construction of the new Canadian navy have actually gone forth, not only in this country, but in Great Britain. Reference has been made to a twin screw cruiser to be built at the Polson Iron Works, in Toronto, to be 176 feet long and 22 feet beam. The cruiser will be of 1440 tons and carry a crew of forty-five men, with pompom and Nordenfeld guns and will be faster than anything at present on the great lakes, where her usefulness, it is expected, will come in.

A larger cruiser has been ordered in Great Britain, however, and that one is destined for the Atlantic coast. It will be 200 feet long, 25 feet beam, and will be a twin steamer of 900 tons. The Vickers-Maxim Company will carry out this order and there will be accommodation for a crew of sixty and a number of pompom and Nordenfeld guns, with a searchlight of 2,000 candle power.

Both these boats are to be finished within the next six months.

Wants to Rule Great Lakes.

The Alaskan award in itself did not seem to trouble us at all, for the two islands, Kanaghut and Sitklan, were of no strategic value on account of the distance they are from Port Simpson, and the manner in which they are situated in regard to Wales island. The matter was fully discussed at the time, and it was the general opinion of the military men that it would be out of the question at present for Canada to try to do without the assistance of Great Britain's navy.

One officer, Colonel Winter, insists that after protecting the Gulf of St. Lawrence the next thing for Canada to do is to show her superiority on the great lakes. Unless she can do that he thinks she will never be safe from the United States.

Considerable excitement has been caused by the reports about the United States superiority in commercial matters in South Africa. Complaints have been made about the Canadian commercial agent, Mr. Jardine, and the information received would go to show that unless Canada bestirs itself United States exporters will control the South Africa field exclusively.

Canadian firms do not seem to pay any attention to the manner in which they make their shipments, or the quality of them, and there seems not the slightest doubt about the United States people having monopolized the space in the boats of the direct Canada-South Africa line; the line subsidized by the Canadian Government, for months to come.

THE ELECTIONS.

The date of the Dominion elections has not yet been fixed, and will not be until after the new year, when Sir Wilfrid Laurier will have returned to the city.

Detroit Specialist Discovers Something Entirely New for the Cure of Men's Diseases in Their Own Homes.

You Pay Only if Cured

Expects No Money Unless He Cures You—Method and Full Particulars Sent Free—Write For It This Very Day

A Detroit specialist who has 14 certificates and diplomas from medical colleges and boards, has perfected a startling method of curing the diseases of men in their own homes; so that there may be no doubt in the mind of any man that he has

DR. S. GOLDBERG,
The Possessor of 14 Diplomas and Certificates Who Wants No Money That He Does Not Earn.

both the method and the ability to do as he says, Dr. Goldberg, the discoverer, will send the method entirely free to all men who send him their name and address. He wants to hear from men who have stricture that they have been unable to get cured, prostatic trouble, sexual weakness, varicocele, lost manhood, blood poison, hydrocele, emaciation of parts, impotence, etc. His wonderful method not only cures the condition itself, but likewise all the complications, such as rheumatism, bladder or kidney trouble, heart disease, nervous debility, etc.

The doctor realizes that it is one thing to make claims and another thing to back them up, so he has made it a rule not to ask for money unless he cures you, and when you are cured he feels sure that you will willingly pay him a small fee. It would seem, therefore, that it is to the best interests of every man who suffers in this way to write the doctor confidentially and lay your case before him. He sends the method, as well as many booklets on the subject, including the one that contains the 14 diplomas and certificates, entirely free. Address him simply Dr. S. Goldberg, 208 Woodward Ave., Room [illegible] Detroit, Mich., and it will all immediately be sent you free. This is something entirely new and well worth knowing more about. Write at once.

PETERBOROUGH, DECEMBER 31, 1903

A QUESTION OF MONEY

The question of peace or war in Russia is considered by many European diplomats and financiers a question of money. It is assumed that neither power can maintain war long enough to accomplish any result without placing a large loan. The peace making powers have been doing their best to prevent this. The British government has sternly discouraged the placing of a Japanese loan in London and is said to have been able to induce the French government to prevent the placing of a Russian loan in Paris. It is not certain, however, that either power would persist in denying its ally financial assistance after war actually broke out.

Modern wars are enormously expensive. This is one thing that makes them so short. Many doubt if we shall ever again see a war between two civilized powers lasting more than a year. The scale of expenditure that has become necessary would ruin the richest power in the world, if continued year after year, in the old fashion. Even the Boer war, conducted against a rudely pastoral people without costly means of defence, cost nearly half as much as the civil war, which is reckoned the most costly in history.

It is not certain how far Russia and Japan are exceptions to the modern rule that war is impossible without placing heavy loans abroad. Russia retains the old habit of maintaining what is called a "war chest." That is, the imperial treasury contains an enormous amount of actual coined gold. This is held nominally as a reserve to support the value of the paper rouble; but it is well understood that, in case of need, the government would suspend specie payment and send the gold abroad for war expenses.

Japanese finances are in somewhat better condition, though the empire has no such reserve of actual coin. But it is certain that the war spirit runs higher in Japan than in Russia, and that her people would sacrifice the last dollar, as well as the last drop of blood. The two powers may get at one another's throats in spite of the refusal of European bankers to take their bonds.

THE CHAMBERLAIN MOVEMENT

The extent to which Mr. Chamberlain is attracting attention in the United States is constantly growing. A casual glance at the leading American papers shows that his campaign is drawing forth more and more adverse comment. A rather striking utterance is that of "The Roller Miller," a Western grain trade paper, which says:

"The American milling industry is approaching one of the greatest crisis in its history—a crisis which Mr. Chamberlain is cooking up for it with his Imperial protection agitation. True, there are reasons, and good ones, too, for doubting whether that exceedingly energetic and ambitious statesman will succeed in carrying the United Kingdom on this issue; but there are also many indications that he has gained a tremendous following and that he may win at least a temporary success.

"Should England be induced to commit herself to a protectionist policy, American breadstuffs will be marked fore a virtually prohibitive duty unless something is done on this side of the ocean to prevent it.

"Such a duty would result in throwing back on this country something like fifteen millions of barrels of flour annually which now finds a market in Great Britain and Ireland.

"The effect, not only on our export, but on our domestic flour trade is not difficult to imagine.

"What are our millers doing by way of guarding against such a possibility? Apparently little more than hope and wish, and perhaps, even pray for the best, when they ought to be up and organizing for the purpose of influencing our Government to bestir itself in their behalf. This is a matter that concerns every miller who does any merchant business, be he exporter or not.

"Almost every considerable milling territory of our country now has at least the nucleus of a permanent organization. It is of the utmost importance that these organizations be strengthened and made effective through affiliation with the Millers National Federation, so that when the time comes for defensive action the Federation will have back of it a membership and influence so great that our Government will be unable to ignore it."

If Dunlop is elected Mr. Gamey may be arrested for stealing North Renfrew from the Ontario Government.

THE AMERICAN ATTACK

Says is a Prohibition of Warships on Great Lakes Protects Shipbuilding

Washington, Dec. 30.—An Ottawa despatch containing a statement credited to Under Secretary of State Pope regarding the presence of warships on the great lakes has been printed here. The American State Department has not been informed up to this moment that the Canadian Government contemplates placing an armed cruiser on the lakes in addition to the few small national vessels now maintained there.

Recently the Canadian Government laid down a couple of revenue cutters for lake service, and although these were better vessels than hose heretofore employed, their construction was not regarded as violating the treaty. Attention was called to the matter by some of the Congressmen from the great lake section, and a United States naval officer visited the place and examined the vessels under construction, which gave rise to some feeling on the part of the Canadians.

As soon as Congress reconvenes there will be a renewal of the attempt to secure a repeal or modification of that section of the Rush treaty between the United States and Great Britain that limits the use of naval vessels on the lakes. The activity of Representative Wm Alden Smith, of Michigan, has excited a corresponding move in Canada. He has heard that the Canadian Government is about to enter a formal protest against the location of the proposed United States naval training station on the great lakes. Mr. Smith is prepared to renew the attack upon the Rush treaty, holding that it has had a paralyzing and disastrous effect upon the shipbuilding industries of the great lakes.

Creeps Like a Serpent

Catarrh is an insidious disease, scarcely noticeable at first, but horribly relentless if not checked

No disease makes such inroads into weak constitutions as Catarrh. It spreads from the place of beginning to the lungs, bronchial tubes, stomach, intestines, and before long all the organs of the body are affected.

A splendid remedy, attended with remarkable success in curing Catarrh has lately come prominently to the front. Its name is Catarrhozone, and no case is recorded where it failed to quickly relieve and cure.

The strong points about Catarrhozone are that it is both a local and constitutional treatment. It not only affords quick relief to the local symptoms, but also purifies the blood of all Catarrhal poisons, builds up and strengthens the system.

Catarrhozone Inhaler supplies an abundance of medicated air which is breathed in at the mouth, and after passing through every air cell and air passage of the breathing organs, is slowly exhaled through the nostrils.

This penetrating, volatile antiseptic at once kills the germs that cause Catarrh and prevents the disease from spreading when once established. It is so healing and soothing that the inflamed membranes and sore spots are restored to normal and healthy condition in a few days.

Catarrhozone cleanses the nose and throat and keeps them entirely free of mucous discharge. It prevents dropping in the throat, cures headache and makes breathing easy and the breath pure and sweet.

To build up and invigorate the system, a blood purifier and tonic called Ferrozone should be taken after each meal. In conjunction with Catarrhozone it is a valuable aid in establishing such a healthy condition of the body that Catarrh cannot exist.

Other remedies have been known to give relief, but to permanently eradicate every trace of Catarrh you must use Catarrhozone. It is a common-sense, convenient, clean method of cure that is endorsed by the profession and all intelligent pharmacists.

You are sure to be benefited quickly and positively cured by Catarrhozone. Trial size, 25 cts. Sold by druggists and N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

NO TREATY LIMITS

Representatives of Britain and the States Enter Into Agreement

Ottawa, Dec. 30.—Mr. Joseph Pope, C.M.G., Under-Secretary of State, pointed out yesterday that it was a mistake to suppose that any treaty existed between Great Britain and the United States limiting the number and armament of the vessels to be maintained by the United States or Canada on the great lakes. There was no treaty Mr. Pope pointed out, but an agreement was entered into by Mr. Bagot, on behalf of the British Government, and by Mr. Rush, on behalf of the United States Executive, providing that the naval force to be maintained on the waters referred to would be confined to the following vessels on each side, viz.; On Lake Ontario to one vessel not exceeding one hundred tons burden and armed with one eighteen-pound cannon; on the upper lakes to two vessels; and on Lake Champlain to one vessel, not exceeding like burden and armed with like force.

"The agreement was to cease after six months notice by either party, but I doubt very much if even this stipulation is legally binding. There is no treaty forbidding either Canada or the United States from maintaining a naval force on the lakes.

above the 100 foot level, under the old management. During the last year the mine has been thoroughly opened up. New and richer ore bodies discovered. Large reserves now in sight.

Large and thoroughly complete Merralls mill now working. Besides this, six quadruple discharge stamps are now being installed. Each stamp will increase the present output at least 20 tons daily. The mine is now producing steadily and increasing output daily. As soon as the new stamps, now being installed, are running, the output will reach at least 125 tons daily. At a moderate estimate the monthly income should exceed

FORTY THOUSAND DOLLARS

During the coming year it is the intention of the management to install more stamps so that the output can be brought up to FIVE HUNDRED TONS DAILY.

Quick dividends are positively assured, and will most surely be large and continuous. The present Board of Directors is composed of competent business and mining men, who are giving their personal attention to the affairs of the Company.

THE GREAT WORK GOING ON IN MUSKOKA.

1,000 Patients Treated in the Two Muskoka Hospitals — the Sanatorium and the Free Hospital for Consumptives.

Surprising Decrease of 25 Per Cent. in the Last Three Years in Deaths from Consumption.

Fifty-five Different Trades and Professions Represented by the Patients Admitted to the Free Hospital for Consumptives.

Two Pavilions have had to be Closed Owing to Lack of Funds, and the Number of Patients Reduced from 75 to 50.

$25,000 Wanted this Year to Carry on this Great Work.

With a view of helping to bring to the attention of the public the needs of the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives, we have pleasure in publishing the following letter, in which an appeal is made for funds.

Dear Friend,—

It again becomes necessary to make an urgent appeal for funds for the Free Hospital for Consumptives.

A very heavy debt is pressing upon the trustees.

In addition to this, funds must be provided for the maintenance of patients. Last month there was a deficiency of nearly $1,500 over and above receipts from all sources.

The Free Hospital for Consumptives was opened eighteen months ago. 295 patients have been admitted.

No patient has ever been refused admission because of his or her poverty.

1,000 patients have been cared for in the two Muskoka Hospitals, the Sanatorium and the Free Hospital for Consumptives.

The majority of these have either been cured, or so helped that they have been enabled to again become bread-winners for the family.

The public are beginning to find evidence of our work.

Already there has been a decrease of nearly 25 per cent. in the death-rate from consumption in the Province of Ontario.

The last report of the Secretary of the Provincial Board of Health shows that in the last three years the deaths from consumption in Ontario have decreased from 3,481 to 2,694, a decrease of 790, or nearly 25 per cent.

This is the more gratifying when we remember that for a number of years previously the same report showed a steadily increasing death-rate prior to 1899.

Who will doubt that the work of our two Hospitals in Muskoka, and the persistent educational campaign carried on, has not helped to secure this surprising result?

In what better way can your gifts bring so good a return?

We have no endowment, excepting the provision recently made by Canada Life, Confederation Life, and North American Life Insurance Companies for maintenance of 2 beds each for a year.

We can only rely on the philanthropy of our people and a knowledge of our needs.

Last year we asked $20,000 to reduce the debt and to pay for care of patients. We had a generous response, receiving $10,000, gifts coming from Halifax on the east and Yukon on the west. This year our needs are greater than ever. We will require $25,000.

The Bishop of Selkirk, Caribou Crossing, Yukon, sending $10.00, writes: "The trifling remittance I send is intended to express our sympathy for the sufferers in other parts, rather than to imply a special need for your institution here."

We are grateful for the large gift. We are grateful for the small gift; all gifts are helpful.

On account of our pressing needs, will you not make this your special charity?

During the year, for lack of funds, we had to close several pavilions, reducing the number of patients from 75 to 50.

The sorrowful part of our work is that nearly all of those in the Free Hospital are young men or women who were striving to make a place for themselves in the world. Many of them have wife, or child or husband anxiously watching the struggle for life.

Your gift will help to bring gladness to so many. Will you have the joy of giving?

Very truly yours,

W. J. Gage

THINGS CHINESE.

Many Chinese temples have windows made from mother-of-pearl, found in oyster shells. The material is transparent and looks like opal glass.

The best quality of Chinese tea is very expensive and so little of it is grown that there is never any of it to export. The Chinaman knows good tea and keeps it all for his own consumption.

The Chinese think they occupy the middle of the earth, and that all other nations are merely dwelling on the edges. Their most respectful term to designate a foreigner is "the ocean men."

Millions have been spent in civilized countries in futile efforts to preserve grapes. The Chinese have known the secret for many centuries, and millions more have been vainly used in the effort to drag from them the recipe.

In northern China hot-water peddlers go about with a whistling kettle—the whistle announcing that the water is at a boiling point. When they hear the whistle the people run with their teapots and buy enough hot water for their day's tea.

A celebrated Chinese dancing master, Hung Foo-Choo, announces in a Chinese paper that he is to hold a religious service, to which he invites everybody, in honor of the 1000th anniversary of the death of his ancestor, who was the first of the family to take up the profession.

A curious industry in some of the provinces in China is the manufacture of mock money for offering to the dead. The pieces are only half the size of the real coins, but the dead are supposed not to know the difference. The dummy coins are made out of tin, hammered to the thinness of paper, and stamped out to the size required.

BACHELOR'S REFLECTIONS

No man loves his baby at first; he has to get used to it like a baseball finger.

It always makes a girl mad to be scared by a mouse when there aren't any men around.

Any man can get any woman to marry him if he only proposes to her in enough different ways.

It is generally easiest to kiss a woman right after you have begged her to forgive you for something.

After a man has argued a certain time with a woman he is either convinced or else he is willing to admit he is.

A man judges a woman's heart by her face; a woman judges a man's face by his heart.

A woman who loves too much sometimes loses, but a woman who loves too little never gains anything worth losing.

The women have got up a new story now about a girl that was so sensitive that it made her seriously ill to be kissed.

Every girl has an idea that when she is telling a man she loves him he will see her whole soul looking at him in her eyes.

Whenever a woman sees a picture in a book of a woman kneeling at a man's feet she feels that she ought to read it herself before she lets her daughter.

As soon as a woman falls in love her complexion gets better.

If modesty was the fool-killer most women would die of old age.

There are probably a lot of women that will find heaven awfully old-fashioned.

A minister doesn't have to know the marriage ceremony by heart, for if he forgets a word the woman can always prompt him.

The only thing which would punish a woman worse than having to say what she believed would be having to believe what she said.

The main difference between a cat and a woman is that the cat has whiskers.

Any man can go into a room ful of women and pick out the one that thinks she is "advanced."

As the women run things nowadays, nobody but an Emperor can go in good society without having to be a hypocrite.

A woman's club is a place where a woman can go and learn all about baby food, garbage and Rubinstein at the same time.

Whenever you hear a woman tell another she is sorry she read a certain book, you can make up your mind the other woman is going to read it.

Many a hero to the world at large sees a "no-account" every time he looks in the glass.

The man who talks business at home is in danger of getting well-meant but risky advice.

No man can stand on top because he is put there.

Jealousy is the flattery of love. Husband and wife should never cease to be jealous of each other.

In man's eyes disappointment in love is but a pretence for seeking amusements without love.

A very successful meeting was held last night in Heard's Hall, Young's Point in the interest of the Peterborough Farmers Produce and Cold Storage Company.

Addresses, in which the benefits to be derived from the establishment of a cold storage plant were delivered by Messrs. George Carton, James Middleton, C. Young, and J. J. Crowe.

At the conclusion of the meeting considerable stock was subscribed for by those present.

For Stockmen.

Sawdust is one of the best substances that can be used in the pig-pen, and it is also excellent in the stalls. While sawdust does not quickly decompose, yet it is an excellent absorbent, and in time is reduced to its original elements. It is clean, easily handled, and is not bulky, while its odor is not disagreeable. It also serves to keep the manure in a finely-divided condition.

Every farmer sometimes has a good cow—one above the average—in his herd, and he does not fail to notice her superiority. When such is the case the cow should be a standard by which to gauge all the others. The object should be to have no cows that do not equal the best one. Sell off the inferior ones as fast as calves from the superior cow will replace them. Use pure-bred sires, and do not attempt to improve the herds by buying elsewhere.

Ventilation of stables in winter is a matter which requires judgment. When a stable is ventilated it means that the cold air comes in. How to ventilate is a problem, both for dwelling houses and stables. A window left open, or a top flue to admit air, may serve the purpose as long as the wind is blowing from a certain direction, but when the wind changes the result will be a direct cold draught on the animals that may cause pneumonia. Cracks and crevices in the walls are more dangerous than open windows.

Coupling the Flock.

J. A. McDonald, Hermonville, P. E. I., writes:—The season is near when the ewes must be coupled if full profit is to be made from the flock. The early lamb is worth twice as much as the late one, and is more safely reared. Thus the choice of the ram and its introduction to the flock is a timely matter for consideration at the present moment. As to breed, it does not matter very much, unless this is a main point in keeping the sheep. If the flock is pure bred, of course, the breed is to be kept up, but even then it is good policy always to get a ram from another flock than from your own. This is an axiom which pertains to all classes of live stock—that is, get a pure bred male from some other flock or herd once every two years, and, if circumstances permit, get an imported male rather than a home-bred one. The ordinary farmer breeder will not, however, probably need to get an imported animal. He can get something good enough from those who make a business of supplying first-class males for breeding purposes. Close breeding is more disastrous to sheep than to cattle or hogs.

The best results are obtained by choosing a sound, well-formed, vigorous animal, rather than a bigger one without these qualities. This is an axiom which also works with other classes of live stock besides sheep.

The fleece is to be studied, for the lambs will take after the ram in respect to wool mostly, if the animal is from a good flock. Choose a well-formed, solid-bodied ram, with short legs and small, well-shaped head. The age of the ram is of great importance, for upon this to a very great extent will depend the sex of the forthcoming lambs.

There are many supposed laws of breeding. One of them is a wise provision of nature for the preservation of the species. When any race is in danger of extermination for any cause this law will operate to secure the extension of its existence in some way. When food is abundant and the race is vigorous we expect it to increase most rapidly. Then the younger males, active and full of energy, monopolize the females and drive off the old males. The result is a much greater proportion of female births than of male, even to the extent of three to one. On the other hand, ewes served by an old ram produce an equal proportion of male births. The breeder, then, who wants his flock to increase will choose young, vigorous rams, and will feed the flock liberally, so as to preserve the conditions suitable for rapid increase of the stock. The breeder, on the other hand, who makes his profit from young rams which he sells, will follow the opposite course, and so increase his income from a surplus of those to be disposed of.

Probably the months of March and April will be the periods when most people want the lambs to come, while there are not a few in the north and east who consider May early enough. This is a matter, of course, for individual consideration. The period of gestation in the ewe is five months. November coupling, therefore, means April lambs; December, May lambs, etc.

Good feeding of both ewes and ram from this time on is a desideratum, and the presence in the flock of a sturdy young ram, under two years of age. It is essential that he be well grown and matured. A ram eight months old may be used, if it be growthy and vigorous; but one twice as old is greatly to be preferred.

Feed oats and wheat bran in preference to corn, for nitrogeneous food will be the best stimulant for the ewes, and there is no grain that so stimulates the sexual system as oats. Fat is not desirable at the breeding season. The aim should be in both ram and ewes to get flesh and a strong nervous condition. The ewes should receive a half pint of oats and the same of bran every day from now on, while a pint of whole oats and as much bran a day will not be too much for a vigorous young ram. If the ewes are not in breeding condition, on account of neglect or poor pasture, or undue exposure, one or two grains of cantharides given to the ewes will usually bring them into condition for prompt breeding, provided it is observed they are lax in this respect. With intelligent feeding, largely of oats, it will seldom be necessary to resort to drugs. But the breeder of pure bred sheep who may want his lambs to come promptly on time, to sell for early breeders next fall, or for show purposes, or those in the winter lamb business, occasionally find it necessary to resort to drugs. Plenty of good, sound oats, however, are the best thing I know of to stimulate tardy breeding, of not only sheep, but all other of the domestic animals on the farm. —New York Tribune Farmer.

Russia and Japan.

Two Japanese papers, says Public Opinion (New York), The Jiji and The Yomiuri Shimbun, make the anniversary of the invasion of China by Japan in 1894 an occasion for comparing Japan's strength then and now. Contrasting the naval forces of the various powers in these waters at that time with their forces to-day—

	Displacement in 1894.	1903.
British squadron	41,729	138,808
Russian squadron	24,178	221,074
American squadron	2,500	62,306
French squadron	10,684	57,967
German squadron	978	34,426

All these figures are independent of torpedo craft, and, making the same exclusion, the Japanese navy now displaces 246,511 tons. The Jiji considers that this country is consequently in a position to hold its own against any single power, and if it were called upon to face two or more powers Great Britain would come to its aid. Further, Japan has great geographical advantages, and thus from every point of view she would have nothing to apprehend at sea. The Yomiuri's figures are much the same as those quoted, but this paper cannot see that Japan is profiting from her strength, for, "viewed by the light of her foreign policy, she seems as helpless as she was when the Liaotung mandate reached her." The Nichi Nichi of Tokio sees no cause to worry as to the future, even if Japan has to endure a good deal for the moment. "Supposing," it says, "that unfortunately war breaks out between Japan and Russia, and, further, supposing that China was so unwise as to cast in its lot with Russia, the consequence would be that England would, in compliance with the stipulations of her alliance with us, have to join in the fight on our side. In that event there would take place a fundamental change in the condition of things in the far east."

A Touchdown Imminent — Minneapolis Journal.

It is said that the British Government is doing all in its power to avert hostilities, and it may be that Russian statesmen believe that Britain would give way on every point rather than risk another costly war following so closely upon the enormously expensive conflict in South Africa. It is, however, significant that Japanese officials of the highest rank have recently reasserted the declaration that their Government is acting in full accord with British officials, and the Anglo-Japanese treaty. The British Foreign Office knows and undoubtedly approves of every move that the Japanese Government is making, and because of that Russia, the most shameless treaty-breaking power known to modern history at all events, is compelled to give greater heed to the Japanese remonstrances. Russian newspaper threats of what is likely to happen to Japan, and rumors from Pekin or Tokio, are not to be relied upon as a guidance of far eastern diplomatic developments, to the same extent as official utterances from the British Foreign Office.

Equitable Gold Mining Co.

R. C. LANE, President. F. F. NORTON, Secretary and Treasurer.

Over $300,000 of development work already done. Main shaft 9 x 16 feet, down 700 feet. Over 3,000 feet of drifts, tunels and shafts showing immense ore body

Destined to become large and continuous dividend payer.

The Equitable Gold Mining Co.'s properties consist of three mines, known as the North Bonanza, Flowery and Kimbark. They are located in Six Mile Canon, less than four miles from Virginia City, Nevada, which is the nearest railroad station.

Years ago, over three hundred thousand dollars of development work was done upon the mines—so they are not mere "prospects" but actual mines. This work was done under the personal supervision of competent engineers, and was paid for by the owners of the mines themselves; thus giving double assurance that the work was well done and that the expenditure was justified.

The Main Shaft (triple compartment, 9x16 feet in the clear) is down seven hundred feet. From this shaft, running along the vein matter, east and west, are four drifts, at different levels, having a combined length (including the Rule winze and the tunnel) of 2,850 feet.

In addition to the above there are four small shafts, with a combined depth of about 300 feet; 135 feet of tunnels, and at least 800 feet of cross-cuts, uprises, etc.

All told, there is 4,050 feet of underground work—the most of which is in ore. Here is nearly one mile of openings in mineralized rock.

It is conservatively estimated by competent and reliable engineers and practical miners that there is developed an ore body of at least One Million Five Hundred Thousand Tons!

As a further evidence of the large amount of work done there is from 75,000 to 100,000 tons of ore on the dumps at the different surface openings—ore that, with modern cheapened processes, can be converted into gold bullion at a profit.

THE TITLE

Title to the Flowery and North Bonanza mines is by patent from the United States government, while the title of the Kimbark is by location and possession.

The Equitable Company obtained the Flowery and North Bonanza mines, both of which are patented, by purchase—the payments therefore to be made out of a share of the net proceeds of the mines. The Company has a written contract, duly recorded, for a deed, and is in possession of the properties, and is now operating them. The sum of $2,000 was paid on the contract, September 20th, 1903, and partial payments have since been made. The Company is entitled to $6.25 per ton as cost of mining and milling. One-half of all over and above this $6.25 per ton goes to the former owners till they receive the total sum of $105,000, without interest. There is no stipulation as to amount of work to be done within any specified time—and no proceeds, no pay. The Company can therefore pay it in one year or it can pay it in ten years. With this exception the Company is free from debt. Its policy is to pay as it goes. In this way it has no fear of financial embarrassments. The title to the Kimbark is by "location," under the mining laws of the United States. Work enough has already been done to entitle the Company to a patent, which in due time will be obtained.

Recent Development Work

Since the Company acquired the property, it has put up poles and wires for a distance of one mile for the transmission of electric power from the Truckee River Electric Power Plant. By this means unlimited power for mining, hoisting and milling is obtained.

It has built a dwelling house for the manager, a large boarding house for the miners, a barn, a power house and blacksmith shop.

It has put an electric hoist and skip into the 265-tunnel; has purchased ore cars and the necessary tools for mining purposes.

It has acquired the Kimbark ground, adjoining the Flowery and North Bonanza mines, and is now developing the property by driving a tunnel.

Within the last few months the Company has mined and milled over 800 tons of ore—realizing therefrom about $10,000 worth of gold bullion. The out-put is constantly increasing and all the Company needs is more mill capacity to handle its ore.

This company has the right, without royalty payments, to use the new patent machine upon all the land it may own, acquire by lease, or operate, in Arizona. We invite special attention to the great commercial value and profit of this machine, and what can be accomplished by it.

What This Machine Will Do

For the first time in the history of gold mining a machine has been invented which will handle the dry placer gold gravel without water, and in large quantities. This machine will save 98 per cent of all the gold in the gravel, and will do it at a lower working cost than by any existing process. It is operated by a small, compact engine, using crude oil as fuel. A complete plant, capable of handling 240 tons per day will weigh less than 1,200 pounds.

To secure this gold only those placer lands could be worked, which could command large supplies of water, hence the immense bodies of dry placer lands remote from water have never been worked.

Fifteen Hundred Millions in Gold

The United States has yielded nineteen hundred millions in gold, of which fifteen hundred millions—or more than 75 per cent.—were the product of its placers.

Ninety per cent. of the world's total gold supply has been taken from placers by processes which have admittedly lost the bulk of the values.

Simplicity of Machine—Its Method of Operation

The machine is so extremely simple in construction and operation that any intending investor can operate it instantly. He can take a peck or more of sand, either ordinary house of sea sand, or such as is found in the placer lands of Arizona and California, put into this sand ten or a hundred pieces of gold as small as the point of a toothpick, and from that to the head of an ordinary pin, mix the sand and the gold thoroughly, turn them into the hopper or feed of the machine, and in a few seconds the machine will separate the gold from the gravel and recover from 98 to 100 per cent of the gold. It is an absolute, infallible, ocular demonstration of the merits of the machine. It has solved the problem of handling sand or gravel containing gold in regions remote from water.

Cost of Handling Material

Each plant is portable, weighs less than 1,200 pounds and can be easily moved by a few laborers.

The two greatest authorities in the world on the moving of material are "Haswell" and "Trautwine." They say in their standard publications that a laborer can shovel horizontally, 12 feet, vertically 6 feet for 50 feet haul 17 cubic yards in 10 hours.

A well known engineer in his work for the U. S. Government at Sandy Hook, moved 18 cubic yards, 100 feet haul in 10 hours at a cost of 10 cents per cubic yard, paying laborers $1.75 per day.

The dry placer gold-bearing sands of California, Arizona and New Mexico are handled quite as easily as those of Sandy Hook.

Ten laborers can easily supply one machine with 204 cubic yards of gravel in 12 hours, working at the same speed as shown by Haswell, Trautwine or at Sandy Hook.

Placer work on above basis would cost about 11 1-2c. per cubic yard.

Do You Want Monthly Dividends?

We make a special offer of a limited number of shares of stock at this time, because the company requires immediately sufficient to build several machines to operate in the field.

Every machine at work will increase the intrinsic value of the stock.

Twenty machines in the field will increase the price and value of the stock more than double the present offering, and every additional machine means a further increase in price and value.

The Company intends to divide its net earnings every month, so that the stockholders may count absolutely on receiving monthly dividends in proportion to monthly earnings.

'Henry Fielding's Dream'

By CORTLAND MYERS

for church in the morning."

Elsie laughed as they walked out, and called down the stairs: "Come back soon, Henry, I have something special for you when you get here."

They reached the street and had just turned toward the barber shop when Richard said: "Henry, what is that— see the crowd up the street, somebody must be injured."

They hastened toward the rapidly increasing number of men, women and children.

Henry pushed his way toward the centre, and his was not a push of curiosity, but of service. If there was any suffering, he always wanted to relieve it. If there was anybody receiving injustice he was anxious to fight for him. His noble, unselfish soul was crying with him, "Let me help," and his lips and hands carried it out into the world.

Richard tried to follow in the wake of the great ship ahead, but the crowd closed in behind him.

As Henry came toward the centre of the dense throng, he kept inquiring: "What is the matter, what is the matter?" but received no satisfactory reply. No one seemed to know just what had taken place, but Henry Fielding's quick eye and brave heart were enough. He saw an old man with snow white beard and with features and clothing of refinement lying partially in the gutter. His hat had rolled into the middle of the street, and his face was not covered, but marked with blood. An ugly bruise was upon his forehead, where he had struck the stones. Instantly, Henry said: "Why don't you help him up, why not carry him into the drug store over on the corner, do something for him."

Most of the crowd moved back, but Henry placed his strong arm under the fallen man's head and shoulders, while two other men seized the lower part of his body and carried him into the drug store.

With the aid of a physician the insensible old man came back to life. The doors had been locked and the crowd kept out. Richard followed to the door, and was waiting for the result and the story.

When the injured man recovered sufficiently, he said he could hardly tell what had happened, it all came so suddenly, and was the farthest from any thought of his. He was on his way to that very drug store with a prescription to be filled out, and had ridden in a downtown car. He was just alighting from the car, when three men approached him and asked him why he patronized a railroad run by scabs and owned by a bloodthirsty corporation. Before he could even reply one of them had struck him a blow which had felled him to the pavement. Then they instantly vanished in the darkness. He could not tell how they looked. It all happened so quickly, and, of course, did not know whether they were railroad men or what they were. "Oh," he said, "I remember, one of them asked me if I did not know that they had asked people not to ride on those cars, and had warned them repeatedly against it, but of course I did not have any chance to explain or declare my rights or apologize or anything."

Everybody was expressing their indignation against such a dastardly outrage, but Henry never said a word. He completed his errand of mercy to the last letter of every requirement, and then quietly, and unseen, withdrew. At the door he found Richard waiting and anxious to hear the story. Henry simply related the facts, but ventured no opinion only to say: "I am for the laboring man and labor union, first, last and always. I believe in a strike when necessary —yes, this strike; but he is an enemy of his own cause who strikes his fellow."

STORY

CHAPTER II.

The Startling Sermon.

The dawn of the next morning carried the prophecy of one of the brightest and most beautiful days. It was a perfect October day, when the whole earth seemed to be touched with the colors of another world and musical with the harmony of heaven. The birds were vieing with each other in their victorious efforts to reach the highest notes, and even the silent forces seemed to be giving motion to the waves of song and joy.

The trees of the city park and the proud one at the side of the street were clothed in the garments of autumnal glory, many colored and royal.

Twice during the night Elsie had awakened with the thought of the church service in the morning, and each time struggled against her delight to forget it and become sleepy again.

When at last it was daybreak and her eyes opened to the clear sky and joyful earth, she brought her hands together in the familiar style of ecstacy, and said aloud, "Oh, I am so glad I prayed last night for just this, and my prayer has been answered; I knew it would be and nothing would hinder our going."

Almost unconsciously she fell on her knees and uttered the simplicity and sweetness of her pure gratitude.

In the other room, Henry had awakened too, but with far different thoughts and feelings. He could hardly realize that it was Sunday and that his plans for the day were at such variance with the several years of the past. He wondered whether he wanted to go after all. We are such prisoners of habit that sometimes when we have broken the iron bars, we do not know whether we want to escape or not. Man's kingliness and divinity is in his power of escape, and becoming a free slave of the better.

Elsie called out in her happy tone a "good morning" and a "hurry up."

Their breakfast was soon ready and the preparation for church made.

Ten o'clock came, but Richard had not arrived. Elsie began to be restless and even nervous. She walked to the window, then into the other room, and said over and over again, almost in a prayer: "Oh, I wish he would come." She was so fearful that his not coming or something else might prevent Henry's going. He might say that they would be late, or he did not wish to go without Richard, or a thousand other excuses which flashed through her mind, but he did not, and when no step was heard at five minutes past ten, Henry said: "Come on, Elsie, we will go down the stairs anyway, and possibly we will meet him there. If not, we will hurry on without him."

When they came to the street, he was not there, and they were just returning toward the corner when from the opposite direction Richard was seen coming, walking and running in a sort of friendly tangle, first one and then the other.

Henry acted the sharp-shooter and fired at him at long range.

"Where is your alarm clock?"

"Yes," said Elsie, "when you make an engagement to walk to church with a young lady, and especially under such circumstances, with a protector and leader and guide, you ought to be on time. I rather expected you to be so happy about it and so anxious that you would have been an hour ahead of time."

"Forgive me this once out of seventy times seven, and I will do better next time," said Richard. "Really, it was not my fault. Come on and I will explain."

"Oh, we don't want any explanation," replied Elsie. "Guilty, that's all, just guilty, and the penalty will come some time."

"No mercy?" asked he, as he walked up to her side and to his appointed place.

"Well," answered Elsie, "we will see how good you are, and if you go every Sunday and become so accustomed to it that you will never be late again."

"I guess we have time enough anyway," said Henry, "there will be room enough. The churches are not not so crowded in these days that we need fear. The only question will be whether Dick and I know how to walk in and sit down and behave when we get there. Anyhow, I am going to lose my prejudice against the ministers and churches for this morning, and listen with an honest purpose. I have thought of that question a thousand times since I first saw it, and I wonder just how he is going to answer it, but I will wait until afterward."

(To be continued.)

MR. LEONARD'S RETIREMENT

He will Take a Well Earned Rest for a Few Months

Montreal, Dec. [illegible]—Mr. J. W. Leonard, the former assistant to the general manager of the Canadian Pacific Railway for lines West, reached the city from Toronto this morning and registered at the Windsor.

In conversation with a Star reporter Mr. Leonard confirmed the news of his resignation from the Canadian Pacific Railway, after over a quarter of a century devoted to railroading.

For the present, Mr. Leonard does not intend to accept any other position, but will take several months rest, which he considers he has fully earned.

Neither does he contemplate accepting a position with an American line. He prefers to devote himself to the Canadian field, with which he is now wholly familiar.

But Mr. Leonard has no plans as yet for the future; his whole attention for the time being will be devoted to taking a needed vacation.

Mr Leonard has practically been a railroad man since boyhood, having commenced his career in that respect as an operator and agent for the Midland Railway in Canada in 1877.

Subsequently he joined the Victoria Railroad and later the Credit Valley with the latter assuming the position of assistant to the general superintendent.

His next move was to the Ontario and Quebec, and in 1884 he became superintendent of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

From 1890 to 1893 he was superintendent of lines east of Montreal later transferring to Toronto, and thence to Winnipeg about three years ago.

Here he made such a success as superintendent that he was given an appointment as assistant to the general manager.

Mr. Leonard asserts that the Canadian Pacific Railway handled adequately all the crop there was to handle in the Northwest this past fall. "All the grain that offered was taken to Fort William before the close of navigation," he said. "But there was not anything like the that existed the preceding year. The Canadian Pacific Railway and the Canadian Northern Railway had no difficulty in meeting all the demands that were made upon them."

Adverting to the persistent report that the Canadian Northern Railway would ultimately become part of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, Mr. Leonard said that no one either in the Northwest or in the country east, was in a position to say just what would be done in that particular.

CONCERT AND XMAS TREE

Under the Auspices of Mark St. Sunday School

The annual concert and Christmas tree under the auspices of Mark street Sunday school was held in the Town Hall Ashburnham, last evening, and was well attended.

Addresses on the work of the Sunday school during the past year were made by the superintendent and teachers, after which a very lengthy and excellent program was rendered by the members of the school. The duet rendered by little Misses Maud and Janet Titterson was excellent, and was heartily applauded. The little girls were rewarded with handsome bouquets.

After the program the presents on the tree were distributed, and the delightful evening was brought to a close.

Storm King Group of Mines

TO CANADIAN INVESTORS

The property comprising what is known as the STORM KING GROUP OF MINES offers an attractive and safe investment. The property is the richest in the country and we believe it would be difficult to secure an investment that promises better returns. The following is a description of the mines written by Capt. A. M. Paul, whose reputation as an expert in mining matters is known far and near.

These properties are situated in the Cable Cove Mining District, about fifteen miles north of Sumpter, Oregon, and about one mile northwest of the Baby McKee mine, about two miles northeast of the Last Chance, the Alpine, the Imperial and the California mines.

The properties in this report consist of seven claims. The names of the seven claims being as follows: The Eureka and the Honest Dollar. These two claims are on the same vein. Adjoining these two claims and paralleling them on the northwest is another vein upon which there are two claims known as the Jennie and Golden Rule, and paralleling them on the northwest there is another vein upon which there are two claims, known as the Storm King and the Osone. The last claim of this group lies to the northwest of the last two named, and is adjoining them. This claim is the Shannon Bell.

In making my report I will commence with the two first named claims of the group, the Eureka and Honest Dollar. The development on these claims consists of a tunnel ninety-seven feet in length, running along the course of the vein, showing two feet ten inches of ore in the top of the tunnel and a little over three feet in the bottom, which assays giving values of from $9.65 to $70 per ton in gold. About four hundred feet in a southwesterly direction there is a shaft on the vein ten feet deep, showing the vein to be from one to two inches wide on the surface and about twelve inches wide in the bottom of the shaft, in which assays give values of from $9.75 to $40 per ton in free milling gold ore.

This vein is exposed by small shafts and open cuts for a distance of fifteen hundred feet, and the course of this vein is north, ten degrees east, and the vein cuts the formation, showing it to be a true fissure, and the formation is granite. This vein shows in places a width of from ten to fifteen feet of mineralized matter, commonly called 'vein matter,' but which is caused by hot solutions from below.

I will now pass to the Jennie and Golden Rule. There has been very little work done upon these two claims, there being one discovery shaft ten feet deep, showing ore on all sides of the shaft, and running in value of from $4 upwards. It is my opinion that with development, this, too, will prove valuable property.

The work on the Storm King and Osone consists of a tunnel near the point of discovery and is driven along the vein for a distance of one hundred and eighty feet, showing ore all the way from the surface to the face of the tunnel, and averaging in width from six to eighteen inches. Three assays give the following values. $12.50. This being a general sample taken from the dump. The other two assays are $61.63 and $79.65 respectively, this being the assorted ore for shipment. The course of this tunnel and vein are north, ten degrees west, and the vein cuts the trend of the formation obliquely (which is granite) and by driving this tunnel five or six hundred feet on its present course it will intersect a quartzite reef (which is running north, twenty degrees east) which would make this a contact vein between granite and quartzite, and should produce a large body of ore at the intersection of the contact.

The only work done upon the Shannon Bell, the last claim of this group, is the location work, and is not enough to allow of a report being made.

There is water for power purposes one mile from the property, and timber on the ground, of a very fine quality, sufficient to run the mine for many years to come.

All the assays mentioned in this report were made by the assayer of the Imperial mine at my request, and the ore was taken by me from the properties mentioned.

I will state that I have been a practical miner since 1876, and am now the manager and superintendent of the Imperial mine in this district.

(Signed) CAPTAIN A. M. PAUL.

There are no elevators in the house of success.

The "bad boy" often makes the best man.

A man can be too confiding in others, but never too confident in himself.

A college education is a good thing, but many a graduate finds himself over trained.

Clothes don't make the man, but good clothes have got many a man a good job.

If you have $25 and want a job it is better to spend $20 for clothes, $4 for shoes and the rest for a shave and a hair-cut and a clean collar, and walk to the place than go with the money in the pockets of a dingy suit.

The world depends on its school-children.

A town which has no school should be abolished.

The world is only saved by the breath of the school-children.

Even for the rebuilding of the Temple the instruction of the children must not be interrupted.

If you interrupt your studies for one day it will take you two to make up for what you have lost.

THOUGHTS OF A QUEEN

The woman who forgives unfaithfulness has ceased to love; true love does not know forgiveness.

Animals move freely in their element; man is often out of his element because he is the slave of habit.

If your wife deceives you it's your own fault.

Mistrust a man who doesn't believe in domestic happiness.

There is nothing in a man that two smart women can't worm out of him.

You, I, all of us, will throw the first stone on a woman who does what a man of honor is freely permitted to do.

A woman that is misunderstood is one who doesn't understand other women.

When a man sets out to destroy things he goes about it like a steer or bear; woman, in the same mood, imitates the gnawing mouse or the spring of a serpent.

FROM THE GOSPELS

By their fruits ye shall know them.

Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof.

Neither cast ye your pearls before swine.

Ye cannot serve God and Mammon.

Where your treasure is there will your heart be also.

Judge not.

Many varieties of colored marbles are found on the mountains surrounding Carrara, in Italy. Two varieties of blue, dove-colored marble, known as "Bardiglio" and "Pavonazzo," are well known in the United States, the latter especially being largely used and commanding a high price.

The Salvation Army in Chicago will try something new. Its members will produce plays. Major Winchell, of Peoria, says: "I have written 'Jonah and the Whale' in six acts." Here is a chance for realism and the play, faithfully produced, ought to delight the young.

The first paper money used in this country was issued by Pennsylvania in 1723. In the early part of that year $75,000 were issued on the credit of the colony, and a few months later $150,000 more followed.

It costs about as much to take part in a lynching bee in Illinois as to witness a first-class prize fight. Eleven men who joined in the former amusement have been fined $50 each.

New Story of Pius X.

The following story of the Pope is told in the Italian papers. A deputation of the monks of some Order had obtained an interview with him. According to the etiquette of the Vatican, only Cardinals are allowed to sit in the Pope's presence, and an invitation from him to do so is deemed equivalent to the promise of a Cardinalate. Pope Pius X. is a plain man, utterly indifferent to the etiquette of the Papal Court. He, therefore, begged the monks to take seats. They hardly know whether they could venture to do so, and whilst they stood hesitating he said to them, "You do not, I suppose, expect me to draw your chairs forward for you?"

Would that all other Sovereigns had strength of mind to put an end to the ceremonial tomfooleries of former ages that encircle them! devoutly exclaims "Truth." All the bowing and scraping, the kissing of hands, the retiring backward, and such like antics are out of date. I recognize the duty of every citizen to treat his official head with respect, whatever be the title by which he is known. But all such tricks only befit a performing dog, and are out of place when the performers are human beings. Court uniforms, to my thinking, are equally absurd. What can be more ridiculous than some peaceful citizen, fat and scant of breath, masquerading as a deputy lieutenant in a military uniform, or some worthy father of a family in a velvet coat, knee-breeches, and ruffles? Yet so silly and so little sense of humor have these guys that I have seen many of them disporting themselves in clubs in this array, and I am credibly informed that they actually exhibit themselves to their admiring families, as proud of their appearance as a barn door cock is of his feathers.

A Despiser of Letters.

"Sigma" in his reminiscences in "Blackwood's Magazine" (by the way, can "Sigma" be Goldwin Smith?) says that excepting Justin McCarthy, he has met in his time only two individuals who knew Thackeray personally—"one of whom certainly deserves immortality, though unfortunately I am unable to record the name, having forgotten it in the march of time. I met this individual at dinner nearly thirty years ago, when in my first 'Thackeray' enthusiasm. He was a gray-headed, square-jawed 'diner-out,' apparently of about sixty-eight or seventy, with an assertive nisi-prius manner, and one of those rasping voices that seem to dominate the dinner-table. After dinner, on the departure of an intervening lady, I found myself compelled to 'close-up' to this objectionable fellow-guest. As it happened, a minute or two previously I had heard him allude to the Charterhouse as his former public school. 'Why,' thought I, 'this old gentleman was most probably at the Charterhouse with Thackeray; suppose I break the ice by enquiring.' Accordingly, after an uncomfortable moment in which he seemed to be considering whether I was worth talking to or not, I timidly ventured to remark that I had heard him alluding to the Charterhouse, and wondered if by any chance he was there with Thackeray. 'Thackeray, sir; what Thackeray?' he answered with a contemptuous stare. 'I mean the great Thackeray,' I rejoined, rather astonished. 'What!' he rejoined; 'the fellow who wrote books? Oh yes, he was my fag, and a snivelling little beggar I thought him; often have I given him a sound kick for a false quantity in his Latin verses. I thought nothing of him, sir—nothing, I can assure you!' 'Ah, but,' I exclaimed, 'you have changed your opinion since, of course?' 'Not at all,' he growled, 'not at all; why should I?' 'Why, on account of his books,' I retorted, fairly staggered. 'Never read a syllable of them, I give you my word!' he growled with magnificent complacency; then, turning his back with a gesture of infinite disdain, he proceeded to tackle his neighbor on the other side. When I told this to Mr. McCarthy, he felicitously observed, 'What wouldn't Thackeray have given to have known that man!'"

Counsel (to witness)—How can you prove that the prisoner stole six of your handkerchiefs? "Why, because they were my handkerchiefs that were found on him. Look at them for yourself. They are exactly the same as mine." "That proves nothing. I have some handkerchiefs like those." "That's quite possible," replied the witness, "several more of mine are missing."—Ex.

He had risked his life to rescue the fair maid from a watery grave, and, of course, her father was duly grateful. "Young man," he said, "I can never thank you sufficiently for your heroic act. You incurred an awful risk in saving my only daughter." "None whatever, sir," replied the amateur life-saver; "I am already married."—Chicago "Daily News."

Lost Appetite Quickly Revived

A Fitful Appetite is generally associated with a general weakness of the system. Ferrozone the best tonic and appetizer should be taken after each meal and a rapid improvement is sure to follow

Distaste for food often follows La Grippe and fever, or is brought on by over excitement or worry. It is a dangerous condition and paves the way for more sickness. On this account it should be at once corrected by the regular use of Ferrozone.

A new and wonderful medicine is Ferrozone. It instantly imparts a real zest for food, and gives power to the stomach to digest and assimilate all that is eaten. Dyspepsia and indigestion are quite unknown to those who use Ferrozone, simply because it digests food so quickly, that it has no time to ferment or sour on the stomach.

Ferrozone regulates the bowels quickly remedies urinal disorders and causes all the organs of the body to perform their functions, with proper regularity. If the liver is torpid, or the kidneys not eliminating as they should, they are soon restored to normal action, and the poisons that might otherwise be retained in the body to cause disease and ill health, are carried off through natural channels.

The surest road to perfect health is Ferrozone. Young girls who have been accustomed to eat almost nothing at breakfast, soon get over the bad habit by using Ferrozone, and as a result grow into healthy vigorous womanhood. When people get up in years and lose the strength and vim of youth they need a good tonic and blood builder to enable them to resist the trials of our vigorous winter, and this is where Ferrozone can be used to great advantage.

Both the young and the old, the weak and the strong, male and female can derive untold benefit from Ferrozone. It is guaranteed to contain no opiates or injurious drugs, and will do just what is claimed for it.

Druggists recommend and sell it price 50c. per box or three boxes for $1.25. Sent to your address by mail if price is forwarded to N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

A MEAN INSINUATION

Messrs. "Meldrum, Hall & Co." Did Not Bring Italians to Peterborough

A letter appeared in an evening contemporary insinuating that "Meldrum, Hall & Co" brought a number of Italians to Peterborough "to work in the Cordage Works at 80 cents a day, and thereby taking the work away from the working men of the town."

This statement, we are informed, is utterly false. In the first place, even if it were true, what has that got to do with the lighting contract now before the ratepayers? Mr. Meldrum is not connected with the Cordage Works, although he assisted, like an energetic and progressive citizen that he is, in getting this large industry to locate in Peterborough. The policy of the management of the Cordage Works has always been most liberal, so far as wages of the employees are concerned.

Whoever wrote the article referred to is evidently neither a working man or a friend of the working man. Such tactics as these are not required in the present instance, and will not help those who are opposed to cheap light for the town.

A DECEMBER WEDDING

Nuptials of Miss Agnes C. Collins and Mr. W L. Gowie Both of Town

The residence of Mr. Wm. Collins, '36 Romaine street, was the scene of a pretty home wedding yesterday morning, when his fifth daughter, Miss Agnes C., was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. LeRoy Gowie, of The Examiner, town. The ceremony was performed by Rev W. L. Jolliffe, B.C.L., in the presence of the immediate relatives and friends of the bridal couple. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Clara A Collins, while Mr. A. S. Armstrong supported the groom.

A dainty wedding breakfast was served at the conclusion of the ceremony, and the happy young couple left on the 11.45 G.T.R. train for a trip to western points, and upon return will reside on McDonnell street.

INCIDENTS OF THE DAY

Newsy Paragraphs Picked Up By Reporters on Their Rounds

—A string of bells awaits an owner at the police station.

—A dance will be held in the Foresters Hall, Simcoe street, tonight.

—The annual meeting of the Albany Club will be held on Monday evening.

—There will be no issue of The Times on Saturday morning owing to New Year's day.

—With eighteen candidates there should be no trouble in securing a good council for 1904.

—The brigade was called out last night to extinguish a chimney blaze at Hopper and Harnet's candy establishment.

—Annual rally and watch service at Bethany Tabernacle tonight. The pastor will speak on "How to make the most of New Year. The public generally is cordially invited.

—"Are you Mr. Jones' little boy?" asked a citizen of a youngster at the hockey match last night. "I'm the captain and manager of the Cyclone Juniors Hockey Team. Mr. Jones happens to be me fadder."

—Don't allow a sore throat to go untreated, says the Health Department. Neither is it nice to allow a well throat to go untreated. Call your throat up to the bar and ask it what it will have before the New Year's regulations go in force.

—Just as the people were making up their minds that the wonderful storage battery invented by Edison a year ago was a huge fake the news comes from New York that it has been given a practical test and pronounced a complete success. The storage battery weighs less than one-half as much as those now in use, and will last many times as long. It is expected to revolutionize street railway locomotion, and the Peterborough Aldermen should make a note of that fact.

Douro Reeveship

Mr. John Quinn, who represented the township as reeve last year was renominated, but for personal reasons, has declined to become a candidate, and a contest is thus avoided. Mr. James McCliggot, the other nominee is reeve by acclamation

Forged a Check

A warrant was placed in Chief Rossie's hands at noon yesterday for the arrest of C. W. Throop, charged with raising a Canadian General Electric Company check from $1.25 to $9.25. Throop was arrested in Cobourg, and P. C. Stewart was sent to bring him to Peterborough.

A Protest Lodged.

A protest was lodged to-day with the secretary of the American Trotting Association against the official recognition as a record of Lou Dillon's mile in 1.58, with a high sulky. The protest is lodged by R. E. and F. Bonner, sons of the late Robert Bonner, who owned the great Maud S., 1.08 3-4.

The Burdens of Modern Civilization.

Normally a woman should have no discomfort so far as feelings of discomfort are concerned, at each recurring period. But modern civilization has added its conditions of ever-present suffering to a large proportion of American women. The great bulk of such cases is due to inflammatory or congested conditions within limited territories which can be overcome by the right treatment. Of course, this local irritation is followed by headaches, backaches, nervousness, irritability, and, indeed, often results in nervous prostration or collapse which might have been avoided by proper treatment.

$500 REWARD FOR WOMEN

WHO CANNOT BE CURED.

Backed up by over a third of a century of remarkable and uniform cures, a record such as no other remedy for the diseases and weaknesses peculiar to women ever attained, the proprietors and makers of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription now feel fully warranted in offering to pay $500 in legal money of the United States, for any case of Leucorrhea, Female Weakness, Prolapsus, or Falling of Womb which they cannot cure. All they ask is a fair and reasonable trial of their means of cure.

Election of Aldermen.

To the Municipal Electors of Peterborough:

Having been favoured with the nomination for Aldermen for our new city, I have consented to become a candidate. I think I can, with confidence, look to you for a continuance of your kind support. My record in the Council for the past four years is before you. Should you do me the honour of electing me for another term, I will continue to aim at the general welfare and progress of the municipality as a whole.

With thanks for your confidence in the past, and wishing all the Compliments of the Season I remain.

Yours truly,
R. CLINKSCALE
Peterborough, Dec. 29th, 1903.

To the Municipal Electors

OF

PETERBORO AND ASHBURAHAM

Ladies and Gentlemen,

In deference to the numerous representations made to me since my nomination, I have decided to place myself at your disposal as a candidate for Alderman for 1904.

While I cannot lay claim to all of the qualifications which an alderman should possess, such business capacity for the office as I do possess, is cheerfully placed at your service. I therefore ask your support in the effort to assist in maintaining the position and standing, as well as to advance, the welfare of our already progressive city.

As regards the street railway by-law, that, I understand, is definitely disposed of—the contract having been signed—and the people are only asked to express an opinion on the subject, and the result can only affect the action of the old Council.

In regard to the street-lighting by-law, if the appeal against the judgment quashing it should not be sustained and the question is re-opened, I shall favor the making of a contract for street lighting which will be in the best interests of the town, both as regards quality of light and cost of service.

The union of the municipalities of Peterborough and Ashburnham adds to the responsibility of an alderman; and the new ward of the town—No. 5—deserves at the initial stage of our municipal partnership, special attention to its interests, which, if elected, I am prepared to give, believing, as I do, that to make the union successful and in the interests of both parties, justice and fair play, irrespective of locality, should be the watchword of every alderman. Irre- your votes and influence.

As I do not approve of canvassing for votes I ask the electors to accord me their voluntary support at the polls.

Respectfully yours,
R HICKS.

Evangelistic Services

A series of evangelistic services will commence on Sunday next, January 3rd, at the Park street Baptist church. The Rev. T. T. Shields, of Hamilton, will be in charge. A clever and successful evangelist, his grasp of the Old Testament is phenomenal, and his style is out of the ordinary. He frequently uses allegories which are very effective. It has been said; "His is the preaching of a Bunyon, with all the sanctified imagination of the old Puritan.' Peterborough is privileged to have his services for two weeks.

TO THE ELECTORS

of the Town of Peterborough, including Ashburnham, now part of Peterborough.

Ladies and Gentlemen:

Having received nomination as Alderman for our prosperous Town, I respectfully solicit your votes and influence.

It will be impossible for me to make a personal canvass and therefore I wish to state that I am opposed to giving the contract for lighting to the Peterborough Light and Power Co., at $50.00 per lamp as long as the Town can get as good lighting for $36.00 per lamp from the Otonabee Power Co., which has done as much to bring down the price of lighting, and whose tender shows a saving of over $14,000.00 in ten years. I am also opposed to the present street railway by-law but will support and vote for a good up-to-date street railway operated by good business men but without a bonus, and I will do my best, if elected, to advance the general interests of our prosperous town

Wishing you all a Happy New Year, I am

Your obedient servant,
JOHN SAWERS.
29th December, 1903.

TO THE ELECTORS

Having received nomination as alderman for the town of Peterborough, I respectfully solicit your vote and influence, and if elected will use my best endeavors to advance the interests of the town. It will be impossible for me to make a personal canvas, but as I have had an experience of four years in the Ashburnham Council, I am willing that I should be judged thereby.

Yours faithfully,
W. J. JOHNSTON,
571 Aylmer street.

TO THE ELECTORS

OF UNITED PETERBOROUGH

Having been requested to stand for election as Alderman, and having been duly nominated for that office, I respectfully solicit your liberal support and influence. If elected, I shall endeavor to look after the interests of the town in a straightforward manner, and in honoring me with your confidence, you can rely upon my faithfully representing you on the Board of Aldermen for 1904.

Yours respectfully,
R. C. BRAUND.

TO THE ELECTORS

OF THE MUNICIPALITY OF PETERBOROUGH.

Your vote and influence is earnestly solicited for Alderman.

WM. SCOTT.

To the Electors

OF PETERBOROUGH.

Your vote and influence is respectfully solicited for

for Alderman for 1904.

To the Municipal Electors

OF

PETERBORO AND ASHBURNHAM

Ladies and Gentlemen.

As I have been honored with the nomination for alderman for 1904, I have accepted the same, and respectfully solicit your vote and influence.

Should you elect me to assist in the management of your affairs, I will use my best judgment in the interests of Peterborough and Ashburnham.

I have been a workingman all my life, and have had a good schooling in economy, which I think can be used to a greater extent in the management of our municipal affairs.

If the question of street lighting is reopened, as the result of the appeal now before the courts, I shall, if elected, give that matter that serious consideration which its importance deserves.

Wishing you, ladies and gentlemen, a very happy new year, I remain,

Your obedient servant,
JOHN KYLIE.
Peterborough, Dec. 30, 1903.

To the Ratepayers

OF PETERBOROUGH

Ladies and Gentlemen:

I solicit your votes and assistance to ensure my return as a member of the municipal council for 1904.

With the larger responsibilities devolving on the town and the administration of its affairs, I can promise if elected, to do all that careful judgment, earnest work, and the very best intentions can do to further your interests.

I hope to have your support,

JAPAN MAY STRIKE AT ANY TIME BOTH THE NAVIES IN READINESS

The Situation Is Positively no Longer Bearable Says Japanese

War Preparations Are Progressing Rapidly

Port Arthur, January 1 — Admiral Alexieff's fleet lies here in its war paint, all ready for the first move. Two new regiments, the 27th and the 28th recently entered the town. The Russians here are confident of success if war should begin. Snow lies on the ground and the cutting north-east wind, which will continue blowing till next March, would render the landing of a hostile force on this bleak coast difficult, even if there were no foes to offer opposition. It is confidently predicted here that there will be no trouble until spring.

All Japanese employes throughout Manchuria, have left, or are leaving. Most of the rich business men in this port have already sailed for Japan. Admiral Alexieff prevented a panic among them by assuring them that in case of hostilities he would send them safely out of Port Arthur in a neutral ship.

THE MIKADO'S DETERMINATION.

Tokio, December 31. — All classes are gratified that the Mikado, though eager for peace, has issued financial and military decrees that reveal a determination to go to war with Russia the moment diplomacy proves ineffectual to safeguard the interests of the State. It is believed that there is now no possibility that Japan will waver in the face of its formidable enemy. Japanese and foreign diplomatists agree that the Mikado and his advisers would never have announced publicly yesterday a series of war undertakings unless he had decided to fight if the Russian reply should prove unsatisfactory. Many leading politicians and soldiers declare that since the crisis has gone so far they hope that diplomatists will stand aside and let the armies and navies of the opposing powers affect a radical condition of the problem.

NO TIME LIMIT SET.

Yokohama, January 1— At an extraordinary meeting of the Privy Council today the fact was developed that no time limit had been set for Russia's reply to the last official note from the Japanese Government. A strong opposition is now publicly manifested to the Cabinet owing to the dilatory tactics they are pursuing. The latest ordinance announced invests the commander of Formosa with full authority to act in case war is declared.

The Government is completing the final preliminaries for placing the country on a war footing. Imperial ordinances issued authorize the Government to make an unlimited issue of treasury bonds to provide war funds, creating a special council of war and fixing the imperial headquarters. In the event of war, if a special issue of war bonds is made, it is understood that the bonds can be floated in England, whence, it is said, assurances have come that the money would be forthcoming.

Russia does not desire war, but nobody in Russia will permit the Japanese or other friends to execute a diplomatic dance upon Russia's peaceful disposition. In firm consciousness of her power Russia will await events."

Chicago's Fire Chief Insists That Firemen Must Leave Labor Unions

St. Louis, Mo., January 1— In a speech last night before representative citizens from every line of trade and commerce in the city, David M. Parry, of Indianapolis, Ind., president of the Citizens Industrial Association of America, spoke in favor of suppressing union leaders.

The meeting was held under the auspices of the Citizen's Industrial Association of St. Louis, which permanently organized and adopted resolutions strongly disapproving of the "closed shop," the eight-hour law and the violence and intimidation of labor unionism. The resolution declares that the eight-hour bill now pending in Congress is a serious menace to the business interests of the country and opposes its passage.

It has been said also that as a result of Mr. Hays' visit to Grand Trunk headquarters in London, the Ministry has been informed that the company is looking for a complete revision of the Agreement, and a return to the original Grand Trunk Pacific project for a road from [illegible] Bay westward to the Pacific.

Mikado's Determination to Go to War With Russia

The paper concludes: "The attitude of Russia on this question, may, therefore, be regarded as a further concession on her part."

WILL CHINA JOIN JAPAN?

London, January 1— The Shanghai correspondent of the Daily Mail reports that Russia is more inclined to make a concession to China with regard to Manchuria, and says that he learns that unless Russia pays consideration to the Chinese demand that China will join with Japan.

The correspondent also says that Yuan Shai Kai, who has been entrusted with the task of negotiating with Russia, has a decided predilection for an alliance with Japan and that the Empress Dowager also favors one.

The Daily Mirror asserts that Japan's note to Russia demands a material guarantee of honest intentions with regard to Corea by a reduction of the Russian fleet in far eastern waters to half its present strength.

MESS MEAT FOR RUSSIA.

New York, January 1 — Negotiations by cable are in progress between the Russian Government and the Schwarzschild and Sulzberger Company of this city for about 1,000,000 pounds of mess meat for immediate shipment to Port Arthur. An official of the firm said today that the contract was practically closed, and that it called for the delivery of the meat at San Francisco, January 22.

CONFESSORS WENT ON STRIKE

Berlin, Dec. 31.—All kinds of curious strikes have taken place in Germany during the past year, including a strike of physicians and that of the students at the University of Wurzburg. The oddest, however, is reported from Munich. All the Father Confessors in the City Hospital and Sanatoria ceased their occupation yesterday because the municipal authorities discharged one of their number. The authorities declare that they were compelled to do so, because the priest in question used to ply patients in the confessional and on the sick bed with indiscreet questions.

PNEUMONIA STIRS NEW YORK

Health Board Classes Epidemic Disease with Smallpox

New York, Dec. 31—Pneumonia has become so prevalent in this city that the health department has decided to amend the sanitary code by classifying that ailment with measles, scarlet fever, and smallpox, and making it compulsory on physicians to report every case of pneumonia promptly. This is said to be without precedent in America or Europe.

In the last five weeks, according to the health department, there have been [illegible] cases of pneumonia reported, an increase of 41 per cent over last year.

NEW LORD'S DAY ACT

Lord's Day Alliance is Opposed to Sunday Canals

Ottawa, January 1 — Rev. Dr. Potts, president, and Rev. J. G. Shearer, Field, secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance, interviewed the Department of Justice yesterday in reference to the proposed Lord's Day observance legislation owing to the Privy Council quashing the provincial legislation. An act drafted by the Alliance was submitted to the Deputy Minister of Justice and in the main won his entire approval, but he has to give it more mature deliberation to consider the question of jurisdiction. The bill as drafted aims to preserve the Lord's Day and to make it a day of rest from all labor except in works of actual necessity and mercy. Trains loaded with dead freight and merely local passengers, and all excursions for pleasure are carefully covered by prohibitory clauses. Ice cream, soda water, cigars, etc, are on the prohibited list.

An interview was had with the Minister of Railways and Canals opposing the proposal to open the canals on Sunday.

NOT HOPELESS, BUT ARE DESPERATE

Japan Defines the Position to the Great Powers

Paris, Dec. 31.—It is learned in diplomatic circles that the Japanese Government has informed the foreign diplomats that the situation with respect to Russia is desperate, but not hopeless. It is believed this information was communicated to the French Government for presentation at St. Petersburg.

A Yokohama despatch says; At an extraordinary meeting of the Privy Council to-day the fact was developed that no time limit had been set for Russia's reply to the last official note from the Japanese Government. A strong opposition is now publicly manifested to the Cabinet, owing to the dilatory tactics they are pursuing.

The latest ordinances announced invests the commander of Formosa with full authority to act in case war is declared.

The Government is completing the final preliminaries for placing the country on a war footing. Imperial ordinances issued authorize the Government to make an unlimited issue of treasury-bonds to provide war funds, creating a special council of war, and fixing the imperial headquarters. In the event of war, if a special issue of war bonds is made it is understood that the bonds can be floated in England, whence it is said assurances have come that the money will be forthcoming.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 31.—Russia will not recede an inch. She cannot. The Tokio despatch stating that Russia had made some concessions to the Japanese chauvinistic spirit is nonsense. The policy of this country has been laid down on hard, unbending lines. Russia's tradition, inherited from Peter the Great, is to never draw back from a position she has taken up. The present Emperor, while an apostle of peace, is first a Russian. An amicable worded "non possumus" will surely be given in reply to Japan, and probably also a kindly paternal lecture upon the folly of trying to match herself against Russia. That may or may not be considered an ultimatum, but it will be Russia's final word, not Russia's declaration of war. Russia wants no war. At the same time she cannot bow to Japan. Russia will declare no war; Japan may do so. Russia will readily accept the necessity forced upon her of fighting.

The foreign despatches received here yesterday afternoon are reflected today in more pessimistic editorials. The Novoe Vreyma begins its leader with;

"There is no war to-day. To-morrow there may be war."

The paper rather fatalistically directs attention to the fact that wars marked the opening of the seventeenth, eighteenth and nineteenth centuries. The Novoe Vreyma nevertheless, still professes faith in a peaceful settlement, saying;

"We believe Japan will not place Russia in a position where to yield would appear to be a renunciation of the defence of her vital interests in the Far East. Russia does not desire war, but nobody in Russia will permit the Japanese or other friends to execute a diplomatic dance upon Russia's peaceful disposition. In firm consciousness of her power Russia will await events."

THE CORDAGE WORKS

Only Eleven Italians Employed at the Factory—An Explanation

To the Editor of The Times,

Sir,—Permit me to answer a letter which appeared in Tuesday night's Review, wherein it is claimed that Messrs. Meldrum, Hall & Co. have imported thirty Italians into the Cordage Works at 90 cents per day.

I might say that I have not one dollar's worth of interest in the Canadian Cordage Company and have never had anything to do with the management of that company.

I find upon inquiry at the Canadian Cordage office that there never has at any time been thirty Italians in their employ.

The company are giving employment now to about two hundred hands, and of this number it appears that eleven of them are Italians, who obtained employment in the factory after the completion of the dam for the power plant of the American Cereal Company. If it is wrong for the Canadian Cordage Company to give employment to Italians surely it is equally wrong for the American Cereal Company to give employment to many times the number even though it is for the laudable purpose of constructing a dam to operate a street railway.

I find that beginners in the Canadian Cordage Company get from $1 to $1.25 per day for ten hours, and are allowed double time for over ten hours per day.

The Review correspondent evidently wrote the letter for the purpose of prejudicing the citizens of Peterborough against the Otonabee Power Company. The Otonabee Power Company have been the means of reducing the cost of electric lighting in town to such a figure that every working man in Peterborough can obtain electric lights cheaper than he can burn coal oil. In consequence of the Otonabee Power Company reducing the cost of house lighting [illegible] [illegible] Light and [illegible]

IMMENSE WAR ORDERS BY JAPAN AND RUSSIA

Rush Orders Received by Chicago Packes for Millions of Pounds of Beef

Chicago, Jan. 1—The preparations for war being made by both the Russian and Japanese governments are evidenced in Chicago by the receipt of immense orders from both countries for meats. Negotiations are in progress involving large contracts for even larger amounts, some of which, it is said, are to become effective when war is declared or when it is so imminent as to be almost a certainty.

Preparations for immediate shipments have been made by many of the large packing firms with which negotiations have been opened. Orders for beef, it is asserted, are made with the understanding that it is to be packed within a certain time, and when notice is given that it is ready for shipment, the governments will send directions for the delivery. It was reported yesterday that Armour & Co. had just shipped to ports in China 10,000 barrels of beef for the use of the Russian soldiers near Port Arthur.

"This report is not altogether correct," said J. Ogden Armour last night. "There is foundation for it, however. The fact is that negotiations for shipments of large quantities of meats to both Japan and Russia are in progress. Further than this I do not care to say anything about it. I cannot state what is the extent of the contemplated shipments or give any other particulars about them."

In Kansas City, it is stated on authority, the Russian government has just placed an order with the branch of Armour & Co. there for 1,000,000 pounds of mess meat for immediate shipment to San Francisco. The order calls for the delivery of meat at the coast by Jan. 22. The meat, it is said, is for the use of the Russian army, and its direction is said to be Port Arthur.

The Cudahy company, it is understood, has received from agents of the Japanese government an order for nearly 150,000 pounds of beef to be shipped immediately. The Cudahy Packing Company, of South Omaha, has been given a rush order for 1,000,000 pounds of extract mess meat for the Russian government. The shipment must be made from South Omaha, so as to reach San Francisco before Jan. 26. —On that date, it is reported, two Russian ships will be prepared to sail from that port with the meat. It is reported from Omaha that the ships would also carry a large amount of other supplies which are now on the way or are in preparation for shipment from various parts of the United States. All of these supplies, it is said, are for the war department of Russia.

Present Owners Under Contract to Sell to Him—Important Correspondence.

To the Editor of The Times;

Sir,—The letter of the Otonabee Power Company, published in your issue of yesterday, makes it necessary for me to repeat what I said on Tuesday.

I am authorized to state that Mr. Stuart is prepared to take over the railway franchise granted to the Radial Railway Company, and will build and operate the railway under the charter of that company, provided the ratepayers vote in favor of the bylaws next Monday and the Council carry out their wishes.

It is true that the Radial Railway Company is composed of the Dickson Company and Mr. Bradburn, as stated by the Otonabee Power Company last night.

It is also true, as sworn to by Mr. Stook, Mr. Bradburn and myself, that Mr. Stuart has no stock in the Peterborough Radial Railway Company.

Further, if the bylaws are defeated on Monday it is also true that Mr. Stuart will never have any interest in the railway project so far as we can now tell.

On Wednesday evening a very pleasing social event took place at "Ivy Mere," the handsome residence of Mr. William H. Her bouquet was of white roses. Miss Georgia Smith, who was bridesmaid, was prettily attired in green silk voile over cream taffeta and trimmed with silk cluny lace. She carried a bouquet of pink roses and a handsome pearl pendant, the gift of the groom. The groom was supported by his brother, Mr. Walter Brooks, of Cleveland, Ohio. The bride's mother was attired in black and white silk with lace trimmings, and the groom's mother was handsomely gowned in black silk grenadine. At the conclusion of the ceremony a dainty wedding breakfast was served, after which the happy young couple left on the 9 o'clock G.T.R. train for their future in Dayton, Ohio.

A large number of costly and beautiful presents were received, including a handsome piano from the bride's parents.

Ottawa, Dec. 30.—Members of the Cabinet [illegible] are passing the holidays in [illegible] to have taken full cognizance of the rumors in Toronto and Montreal [illegible] practical collapse of the [illegible] transcontinental railway [illegible] In official [illegible] to-day these rumors were denied positively.

The statement has been made, for instance, that the Grand Trunk Pacific would not consent to fulfil its obligation in respect of the Moncton section unless it were guaranteed from loss for the fifty years for which, under its contract with the Government, it must "operate" the road after completion. Mr. Hays's statements in Montreal, as published in the press, have not borne out these rumors. He is known, in Ottawa at least, as a man who, if he had something to say, would say it or say nothing at all for publication. In this case he has announced definitely his conviction that the transcontinental railway project is to be carried to completion. That is the view taken to-day by the Ministry. Mikado's Determination to Go to War With Russia

The paper concludes: "The attitude of Russia on this question, may, therefore, be regarded as a further concession on her part."

WILL CHINA JOIN JAPAN?

London, January 1— The Shanghai correspondent of the Daily Mail reports that Russia is more inclined to make a concession to China with regard to Manchuria, and says that he learns that unless Russia pays consideration to the Chinese demand that China will join with Japan.

The correspondent also says that Yuan Shai Kai, who has been entrusted with the task of negotiating with Russia, has a decided predilection for an alliance with Japan and that the Empress Dowager also favors one.

The Daily Mirror asserts that Japan's note to Russia demands a material guarantee of honest intentions with regard to Corea by a reduction of the Russian fleet in far eastern waters to half its present strength.

MESS MEAT FOR RUSSIA.

New York, January 1 — Negotiations by cable are in progress between the Russian Government and the Schwarzschild and Sulzberger Company of this city for about 1,000,000 pounds of mess meat for immediate shipment to Port Arthur. An official of the firm said today that the contract was practically closed, and that it called for the delivery of the meat at San Francisco, January 22.

CONFESSORS WENT ON STRIKE

Berlin, Dec. 31.—All kinds of curious strikes have taken place in Germany during the past year, including a strike of physicians and that of the students at the University of Wurzburg. The oddest, however, is reported from Munich. All the Father Confessors in the City Hospital and Sanatoria ceased their occupation yesterday because the municipal authorities discharged one of their number. The authorities declare that they were compelled to do so, because the priest in question used to ply patients in the confessional and on the sick bed with indiscreet questions.

PNEUMONIA STIRS NEW YORK

Health Board Classes Epidemic Disease with Smallpox

New York, Dec. 31—Pneumonia has become so prevalent in this city that the health department has decided to amend the sanitary code by classifying that ailment with measles, scarlet fever, and smallpox, and making it compulsory on physicians to report every case of pneumonia promptly. This is said to be without precedent in America or Europe.

In the last five weeks, according to the health department, there have been 510 cases of pneumonia reported, an increase of 12 per cent over last year.

NEW LORD'S DAY ACT

Lord's Day Alliance is Opposed to Sunday Canals

Ottawa, January 1 — Rev. Dr. Potts, president, and Rev. J. G. Shearer, Field, secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance, interviewed the Department of Justice yesterday in reference to the proposed Lord's Day observance legislation owing to the Privy Council quashing the provincial legislation. An act drafted by the Alliance was submitted to the Deputy Minister of Justice and in the main won his entire approval, but he has to give it more mature deliberation to consider the question of jurisdiction. The bill as drafted aims to preserve the Lord's Day and to make it a day of rest from all labor except in works of actual necessity and mercy. Trains loaded with dead freight and merely local passengers, and all excursions for pleasure are carefully covered by prohibitory clauses. Ice cream, soda water, cigars, etc, are on the prohibited list.

An interview was had with the Minister of Railways and Canals opposing the proposal to open the canals on Sunday.

NOT HOPELESS, BUT ARE DESPERATE

Japan Defines the Position to the Great Powers

Paris, Dec. 30.—It is learned in diplomatic circles that the Japanese Government has informed the foreign diplomats that the situation with respect to Russia is desperate, but not hopeless. It is believed this information was communicated to the French Government for presentation at St. Petersburg.

A Yokohama despatch says; At an extraordinary meeting of the Privy Council to-day the fact was developed that no time limit had been set for Russia's reply to the last official note from the Japanese Government. A strong opposition is now publicly manifested to the Cabinet, owing to the dilatory tactics they are pursuing.

The latest ordinances announced invests the commander of Formosa with full authority to act in case war is declared.

The Government is completing the final preliminaries for placing the country on a war footing. Imperial ordinances issued authorize the Government to make an unlimited issue of treasury bonds to provide war funds, creating a special council of war, and fixing the Imperial headquarters. In the event of war, if a special issue of war bonds is made, it is understood that the bonds can be floated in England, whence it is said assurances have come that the money will be forthcoming.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 30.—Russia will not recede an inch. She cannot. The Tokio despatch stating that Russia had made some concessions to the Japanese chauvinistic spirit is nonsense. The policy of this country has been laid down on hard, unbending lines. Russia's tradition, inherited from Peter the Great, is to never draw back from a position she has taken up. The present Emperor, while an apostle of peace, is first a Russian. An amicable worded "non possumus" will surely be given in reply to Japan, and probably also a kindly paternal lecture upon the folly of trying to match herself against Russia. That may or may not be considered an ultimatum, but it will be Russia's final word, not Russia's declaration of war. Russia wants no war. At the same time she cannot bow to Japan. Russia will declare no war; Japan may do so. Russia will readily accept the necessity forced upon her of fighting.

The foreign despatches received here yesterday afternoon are reflected today in more pessimistic editorials. The Novoe Vreyma begins its leader with:

"There is no war to-day. To-morrow there may be war."

The paper rather fatalistically directs attention to the fact that wars marked the opening of the seventeenth, eighteenth and nineteenth centuries. The Novoe Vreyma nevertheless still professes faith in a peaceful settlement, saying:

"We believe Japan will not place Russia in a position where to yield would appear to be a renunciation of the defence of her vital interests in the Far East. Russia does not desire war, but nobody in Russia will permit the Japanese or other friends to execute a diplomatic dance upon Russia's peaceful disposition. In firm consciousness of her power Russia will await events."

THE CORDAGE WORKS

Only Eleven Italians Employed at the Factory—An Explanation

To the Editor of The Times,

Sir,—Permit me to answer a letter which appeared in Tuesday night's Review, wherein it is claimed that Messrs. Meldrum, Hall & Co. have imported thirty Italians into the Cordage Works at 90 cents per day.

I might say that I have not one dollar's worth of interest in the Canadian Cordage Company and have never had anything to do with the management of that company.

I find upon inquiry at the Canadian Corage office that there never has at any time been thirty Italians in their employ.

The company are giving employment now to about two hundred hands, and of this number it appears that eleven of them are Italians, who obtained employment in the factory after the completion of the dam for the power plant of the American Cereal Company. If it is wrong for the Canadian Cordage Company to give employment to Italians surely it is equally wrong for the American Cereal Company to give employment to many times the number even though it is for the laudable purpose of constructing a dam to operate a street railway.

I find that beginners in the Canadian Cordag e Company get from $1 to $1.25 per day for ten hours, and are allowed double time for over ten hours per day.

The Review correspondent evidently wrote the letter for the purpose of prejudicing the citizens of Peterborough against the Otonabee Power Company. The Otonabee Power Company have been the means of reducing the cost of electric lighting in town to such a figure that every working man in Peterborough can obtain electric lights cheaper than he can burn coal oil. In consequence of the Otonabee Power Company reducing the cost of house lighting [illegible] [illegible]h light and I [illegible]

IMMENSE WAR ORDERS BY JAPAN AND RUSSIA

Rush Orders Received by Chicago Packes for Millions of Pounds of Beef

Chicago, Jan. 1—The preparations for war being made by both the Russian and Japanese governments are evidenced in Chicago by the receipt of immense orders from both countries for meats. Negotiations are in progress involving large contracts for even larger amounts, some of which, it is said, are to become effective when war is declared or when it is so imminent as to be almost a certainty.

Preparations for immediate shipments have been made by many of the large packing firms with which negotiations have been opened. Orders for beef, it is asserted, are made with the understanding that it is to be packed within a certain time, and when notice is given that it is ready for shipment, the governments will send directions for the delivery. It was reported yesterday that Armour & Co. had just shipped to ports in China 10,000 barrels of beef for the use of the Russian soldiers near Port Arthur.

"This report is not altogether correct," said J. Ogden Armour last night. "There is foundation for it, however. The fact is that negotiations for shipments of large quantities of meats to both Japan and Russia are in progress. Further than this I do not care to say anything about it. I cannot state what is the extent of the contemplated shipments or give any other particulars about them."

In Kansas City, it is stated on authority the Russian government has just placed an order with the branch of Armour & Co. there for 1,000,000 pounds of mess meat for immediate shipment to San Francisco. The order calls for the delivery of meat at the coast by Jan. 22. The meat, it is said, is for the use of the Russian army, and its direction is said to be Port Arthur.

The Cudahy company, it is understood, has received from agents of the Japanese government an order for nearly 750,000 pounds of beef to be shipped immediately. The Cudahy Packing Company, of South Omaha, has been given a rush order for 1,000,000 pounds of extract [illegible] meat for the Russian government. The shipment must be made from South Omaha, so as to reach San Francisco before Jan 26. —On that date, it is reported two Russian ships will be prepared to sail from that port with the meat. It is reported from Odessa that the ships would also carry a large amount of other supplies which are now on the way or are in preparation for shipment from various parts of the United States. All of these supplies, it is said, are for the war department of Russia.

MR. STUART WILL BUY THE RAILWAY

AN AUTHERATIVE STATEMENT FROM HIS SOLICITOR

Present Owners Under Contract to Sell to Him—Important Correspondence.

To the Editor of The Times;

Sir,—The letter of the Otonabee Power Company, published in your issue of yesterday, makes it necessary for me to repeat what I said on Tuesday.

I am authorized to state that Mr. Stuart is prepared to take over the railway franchise granted to the Radial Railway Company, and will build and operate the railway under the charter of that company, provided the ratepayers vote in favor of the bylaws next Monday and the Council carry out their wishes.

It is true that the Radial Railway Company is composed of the Dickson Company and Mr. Bradburn, as stated by the Otonabee Power Company last night.

It is also true, as sworn to by Mr. Stook, Mr. Bradburn and myself, that Mr. Stuart has no stock in the Peterborough Radial Railway Company.

Further, if the bylaws are defeated on Monday it is also true that Mr. Stuart willl never have any interest in the railway project so far as we can now tell.

MERRY WEDDING BELLS

Nuptials of Miss Ethel V. Wrighton and Mr. Burton H. Brooks

On Wednesday evening a very pleasing social event took place at "Ivy Mere," the handsome residence of Mr. William H Wrighton, when his daughter, Miss Ethel Valentine, was married to Mr. Burton Hotchkiss Brooks, M.E., of Dayton, Ohio. Rev J. P. Wilson, B.A., was the officiating clergyman. The bride was most becomingly gowned in white satin damasse trimmed with accordeon pleating of chiffon and [illegible] lace, and wore a sunburst of pearls and diamonds, the gift of the groom. Her bouquet was of white roses. Miss Georgina Smith, who was bridesmaid, was prettily attired in green silk voile over cream taffeta and trimmed with silk cluny lace. She carried a bouquet of pink roses and a handsome pearl pendant, the gift of the groom. The groom was supported by his brother, Mr. Walter Brooks, of Cleveland, Ohio. The bride's mother was attired in black and white silk with lace trimmings, and the groom's mother was handsomely gowned in black silk grenadine. At the conclusion of the ceremony a dainty wedding breakfast was served, after which the happy young couple left on the 9 o'clock G.T.R. train for their future in Dayton, Ohio.

A large number of costly and beautiful presents were received, including a handsome piano from the bride's parents.

The groom is at present general superintendent and construction engineer of the Home Telephone Company, of Dayton, Ohio. The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Brooks in town [illegible] them

Dry Placer Miner, formerly of California.

This company has the right, without royalty payments, to use the new patent machine upon all the land it may own, acquire by lease, or operate, in Arizona. We invite special attention to the great commercial value and profit of this machine, and what can be accomplished by it.

What This Machine Will Do.

For the first time in the history of gold mining a machine has been invented which will handle the dry placer gold gravel without water, and in large quantities. This machine will save 98 per cent of all the gold in the gravel, and will do it at a lower working cost than by any existing process. It is operated by a small, compact engine, using crude oil as fuel. A complete plant, capable of handling 300 tons per day will weigh less than 1,200 pounds.

To secure this gold only those placer lands could be worked, which could command large supplies of water, hence the immense bodies of dry placer lands remote from water have never been worked.

Fifteen Hundred Millions in Gold

The United States has yielded nineteen hundred millions in gold, of which fifteen hundred millions—or more than 75 per cent.—were the product of its placers.

Ninety per cent. of the world's total gold supply has been taken from placers by processes which have admittedly lost the bulk of the values.

Simplicity of Machine—Its Method of Operation

The machine is so extremely simple in construction and operation that any intending investor can operate it instantly. He can take a peck or more of sand, either ordinary house or sea sand, or such as is found in the placer lands of Arizona and California, put into this sand ten or a hundred pieces of gold as small as the point of a toothpick, and from that to the head of an ordinary pin, mix the sand and the gold thoroughly, turn them into the hopper or feed of the machine, and in a few seconds the machine will separate the gold from the gravel and recover from 98 to 100 per cent of the gold. It is an absolute, infallible, ocular demonstration of the merits of the machine. It has solved the problem of handling sand or gravel containing gold in regions remote from water.

Cost of Handling Material

Each plant is portable, weighs less than 1,200 pounds and can be easily moved by a few laborers.

The two greatest authorities in the world on the moving of material are "Haswell" and "Trautwine." They say in their standard publications that a laborer can shovel horizontally, 12 feet, vertically 6 feet for 50 feet haul 17 cubic yards in 10 hours.

A well known engineer in his work for the U. S. Government at Sandy Hook, moved 18 cubic yards, 100 feet haul in 10 hours at a cost of 10 cents per cubic yard, paying laborers $1.75 per day.

The dry placer gold-bearing sands of California, Arizona and New Mexico are handled quite as easily as those of Sandy Hook.

Ten laborers can easily supply one machine with 204 cubic yards of gravel in 12 hours, working at the same speed as shown by Haswell, Trautwine or at Sandy Hook.

Placer work on above basis would cost about 11 1-2c. per cubic yard.

Do You Want Monthly Dividends?

We make a special offer of a limited number of shares of stock at this time, because the company requires immediately sufficient to build several machines to operate in the field.

Every machine at work will increase the intrinsic value of the stock.

Twenty machines in the field will increase the price and value of the stock more than double the present offering, and every additional machine means a further increase in price and value.

The Company intends to divide its net earnings every month, so that the stockholders may count absolutely on receiving monthly dividends in proportion to monthly earnings.

'Henry Fielding's Dream'

By CORTLAND MYERS.

"There are other things in church service besides the sermon," said Elsie, "everybody ought to worship God, and I hope that spirit will be in all of us. It is one of the commands, and it must be just as wicked not to keep that one as not to keep the others."

Neither one of her companions made any reply, but walked on in silence for half a square, when Henry said again: "If curiosity is sinful then I am a sinner, because I will have to confess most of this comes under that name.

The bulletin faced them at the corner again as it had Henry the morning previous. They all glanced as it, and hastened in, because the sound of the organ was heard, and the service had already begun.

At the door a friendly hand greeted them and passed them on to another man of genial manner and a smile of welcome. He ushered them to a seat in the best place that was vacant, and it was not so formal and cold and funeral and unattractive as imagination had pictured it. There was life in the music, light in the building, sympathy in the prayer, earnestness and enthusiasm in spirit.

David Dowling was not an Apollo in appearance. He was neither striking in figure nor movement. Yet there was something about him that marked him as a man. He was just in the prime of life, with a quick, vivacious movement, a commanding attitude, and vigorous speech. Five years ago he had parted his hair on the left side; two years ago it was parted on the right side, and now it was departed. His intellectual quality was strikingly manifest, and yet it was not of the Arctic type. He lived in the temperate zone, and almost near the unseen line of the torrid. He had a great heart and knew the definition of sympathy. His pulpit seemed to change into a throne, and the king was in his place.

Henry and Richard both fastened their eyes upon him, and it was a look of increasing admiration. Especially was this true when he arose and announced his text and his subject, and declared his emphatic and deathless determination to help the workingman and bring him and his Christ into their right relation to each other. He said: "I have been criticised severely for asking this question: 'Would Christ belong to a labor union?' Some have said it was sensational. I am glad it is. Sensation is life. It has in it the life of to-day. Shame, thrice shame, upon a dead church and a dead preacher and a dead religion. If the Church does not touch the life of the people, build it in the cemetery and call it sepulchre. If the gospel has any meaning, it comes with tremendous force into every part of human life. Christ Himself created the greatest sensation by the subjects which He treated and the methods which He adopted. He is an enemy of the Church who whines and whimpers over sensation. He is preparing himself for death and judgment both. Some others have said it was bringing Christ down to ask this question concerning Him. He brought Himself down to the carpenter shop to save the workingman. God forbid that we should take Him out of His chosen place. The God of the heathen is not my God. He whom I worship and adore and am ready to die for is Jesus of Bethlehem and Nazareth and Calvary. He condescended to the level of every man's life and work. If He was on earth to-day He would have something to say concerning the labor unions and something to do with them. That is a part of His mission, and the Church has been traitorous to the trust He has placed in it."

Then, with a long and effective pause, he said in the almost oppressive silence of the audience: "Is not this the carpenter? Jesus Christ is the best friend the workingman ever had."

"Did not He stand by the bench? Was not every nerve and muscle in His human body weary with the hardest toil? Did He not wish some days that it was six o'clock when it was only three?

"How could it be possible that He would not have the deepest sympathy for the man in the same place? Would He not belong to any organization for the elevation of mankind? Anything that is good has the co-operation of the Son of God.

"Would He belong to a labor union to-day? Let any man who says not stand up and prove his case. I declare unhesitatingly that every principle, every interest, every act of the life He lived, every line of the Book He inspired, is on the side of toiling men.

"The Church which bears His name and the preacher who follows His example to-day must be in sympathy with every righteous effort on the part of organized labor.

"True Christianity must ever be in closest sympathy with the working classes. It is true that some members of the Church may oppress the workingman and have little regard for the needs of the poor, but that is not the spirit of the Gospel, nor what I believe represents the real heart of the Church.

"All members of the labor union are not true friends of the poor, however. It is conceivable that a walking delegate or an official may be friendly to the laborer in order to get and hold an easy position, and not be true to his profession. It is not just to condemn a thousand men because of the falsity of one.

"Christ taught and the Church still works toward the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. He drove that great truth into human society with every stroke of His hammer in the shop of Nazareth.

"It is an unadulterated mistake on the part of the working man to suppose that the Church has lost this spirit. Most churches are on his side, and have a royal welcome for the calloused hand that knocks at their doors.

"There are hundreds of churches in the cities which are now half empty, and would do anything legitimate to bring every member of the labor unions within their doors.

"I verily believe that the same spirit is in the preacher, and he is giving sacrificial blood to save the very men who will not come to hear him. The Church is not far away from Christ, nor is it far away from the labor union, as wicked and unjust enemies are constantly declaring.

"Apart from the Gospel the labor union would never have existed. It was born in the principles of Christianity and rocked in the cradle of the Church. There are no labor unions in the jungle of Africa. There is no Christianity there.

"Christ was the author of brotherhood. He uttered the sublimity of life, 'Do unto others as you would that others do unto you.' He taught 'Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.'

"The Sermon on the Mount ought to be the union's creed. He gave the only possible and practical solution of the labor problem.

"There is a labor question. There always has been. It existed when Christ was on the earth, only under a different form. At heart, it was the same. It may be more exaggerated now. The great labor movement is of modern times; revolts were local in the past, and neither so widespread or continuous as to-day. What is the purpose of this great movement now? It is simply to procure for the laboring man a fuller and more just proportion of the things which toil produces. Wealth has been marvelously increased by inventive genius, and the control of natural forces and riches. All men have shared in these advantages. The poorest man has that now which the richest could not have one hundred years ago, but there has not been justice in this division. The concentration of wealth has also impaired the interest of the workingman. This present day movement on the part of labor seeks to level wages, shorten hours, to make men less like machines, to break the shackles of slaves, to improve the sanitary conditions of the factory and place of toil, to remove danger and disease from their environment. It seeks to protect women and children and maintain the right to organize. This organized effort has had a marked and unquestioned effect in bringing wages at a point of possible and even comfortable living. All this makes the labor question a burning issue at the very heart of society. A glance at the unorganized trade will reveal the difference. The man who has no protection from an organization is at the mercy of an employer who may be a tyrant in spirit and selfish to the last degree. A man is justified in securing the men to perform his work as cheaply as possible, but it is the business also of the workingmen to get as much as possible for their work. The labor organization may be wrongly guided sometimes, but this is not an argument against its necessity or benefit either. In the whole circle of the years and effort, the result has been beneficial, and not only for the laborer but for society also. You improve the condition of the workingmen by wages, hours and opportunity, and you give greatest blessing to the community in which they live and work.

MISSIONARY MURDERED

A Missionary and Eighteen Followers were Killed

Washington, December 31 — United States Minister Lyon has reported to the American State Department from Monrovia, Liberia, the details of the massacre in an African forest of a white missionary named John G. Tate, with all of his followers, eighteen in number. The massacre took place, on March 15, 1901. The first detailed account has just come to hand in an affidavit by Mrs. Mary L. Allen, a white missionary in Liberia. She had the story from one of the native Doo tribesmen. Tate had a large mission and farm and maintained a school, and altogether nineteen people were in the mission when it was surrounded in the night by the Doos. All were married and their heads taken as trophies. Minister Lyon has communicated with the Liberian Secretary of State, with a view to securing fuller information and perhaps the punishment of the Doo's.

EDISON BATTERY A SUCCESS

May Revolutionize Street Railway and Auto Locomotion

New York, December 31—After a thorough test the Thomas A. Edison storage battery, which may revolutionize street railway and automobile locomotion, is declared to be a complete success. It is claimed for the battery that it will weigh less than half as much as the storage battery now in use and will last many times as long.

The battery has been given a practical test by W. Hibbert, who announces the result as coming up to the most sanguine expectations of the inventor and his friends.

A BUSINESS MAN'S LETTER.

Wm. Thomson, Esq., of Orillia, Vice-President Standard Chemical Company of Toronto, Tells of a Visit to the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives.

GREATLY IMPRESSED WITH WORK BEING DONE.

Personally Raises Several Hundred Dollars to Help Lessen the Load of Debt.

There can be little doubt that the National Sanitarium Association is handicapped in its great work for Consumptives in the fact that its two institutions in Muskoka are far away from any large centre of population. Few people have an opportunity to see for themselves the magnificent work that is being done.

These hospitals are away from the public eye. Any, however, who do visit them, are united in their commendation of the splendid appointments of the place, and, best of all, of the real joy and hope that is being brought to many suffering ones.

We are glad to have the opportunity of publishing the following letter from Mr. Wm. Thomson, of Orillia, one of Canada's best known lumbermen, which tells what he has seen himself. It reads:

W. J. GAGE, Esq.,
Chairman Executive Committee
National Sanitarium Association,
Toronto, Ont.

My Dear Mr. Gage,—

I have much pleasure in enclosing herewith cheque for One Hundred Dollars ($100.00) from the Tudhope Carriage Company of Orillia, a donation to the Free Hospital for Consumptives at Gravenhurst. Please acknowledge this to the Tudhope Carriage Company in the usual way.

I have written to a number of my friends, to try and get them interested in this good work. I hope to be able to send you further donations. I have written my friends a personal letter, something similar to the following:

> "Last week I paid a visit to the Free Hospital for Consumptives at Gravenhurst. I met some of the management there, and promised to try and interest some of my friends in this work.
> "I might say there were 49 patients there last week, all poor people, most of them without a dollar in the world, and suffering from the dreadful disease, Consumption. There are many sad stories, and I know I have thought a great deal about the work of the institution ever since my visit there. I do believe it is worthy of assistance, and we who have health and the necessaries of life should encourage this work along.
>
> "I understand the expenses lately have been double the income, and unless the management meet with more encouragement, I am afraid the work will have to be curtailed. I know you have many calls, but I do wish you would give this matter a thought, and, if possible, assist. I have written to two or three confidentially, and hope to be able to collect some more for this work. Should you not feel like contributing a donation, remember this request, and your reply is just between you and me, and strictly confidential.
> "I might mention, to show that I have confidence in the work, I have already given a donation of $100.00 and two row boats to the Free Hospital this year, and intend to give another $100.00 before the end of the year."

Sincerely yours,

Wm Thomson

Sir Wm. R. Meredith, Kt., or Mr. W. J. Gage, Toronto, will receive and acknowledge any contributions made.

Some Receipts

Cream sauce for pudding—Beat a piece of butter the size of an egg with powdered sugar until it is a light cream. Set to one side. Put a cupful of boiling water into a small saucepan and stir into it one tablespoonful of flour mixed with a little cold water. Cook until clear, smooth and the consistency of thin starch. Take up the bowl containing the butter and sugar mixture, and while one beats it energetically let another pour into it, slowly and evenly, the hot flour sauce. If the beating is not interrupted, the whole sauce will rise in a light, foamy froth. Season with sherry, vanilla, nutmeg or brandy, as preferred.

Christmas pudding—One-half pound of raisins stoned, one-half pound of currants well washed and dried, one-fourth pound of mixed candied peels chipped small, one-half nutmeg grated, one-half teaspoonful ground cinnamon, the yellow rind of two lemons grated, the juice of three lemons, a small particle of salt, one pound of bread crumbs, one-half pound of moist sugar, seven eggs, three-fourths pound of beef suet chopped very fine, one cupful of sweet milk, and two glasses of grape juice. Beat the eggs thoroughly, then add the spices and fruits mixed together, and next the suet, bread crumbs and liquids. Mix very thoroughly and turn into a well buttered round pudding mold with a lid, cover closely and boil for five hours. A two-quart mold will be required for this pudding. For the sauce, mix well together the yolks of three eggs, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, and a cupful of milk or cream. Stir it over the fire until thick, then add a glass of grape juice.

Sweet potato pudding—One pint of grated raw sweet potatoes, one-half cupful of molasses, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of butter, a little salt, one teaspoonful of ginger, two well beaten eggs and sweet milk enough to make a thin batter; bake slowly one and one-half hours; serve with whipped cream or with a hard sauce made of equal parts of sugar and butter beaten light and flavored with nutmeg.

Quick biscuits—One quart of flour and one tablespoonful each of salt, baking powder and lard, add milk till it can just be stirred with a spoon. Gently place one spoonful at a time in a floured tin, so they will touch. Bake in a hot oven, and they will rise and be found splendid, and very quickly made.

Cranberry fritters—Beat one egg thoroughly and stir it into one and one-half cups of milk, add one tablespoonful of sugar and one cup of flour in which has been sifted one teaspoonful of baking powder. When well mixed stir in one cup of thick, rich cranberry sauce, and drop in spoonfuls on a hot, buttered gridiron. Brown very lightly and serve with butter and powdered sugar.—Good Housekeeping.'

Imported Teeth.

The dentist was cleaning Mrs. Flannigan's teeth. "What a splendid set of teeth you have, Mrs. Flannigan," he remarked.

"Shure, they ought to be fine; they're imported," she replied.

"Imported?" said the dentist, in astonishment. Why, what do you mean? They're your own teeth."

"But I'm tellin' yer they're imported—imported from Ireland along with meself."

Possible Nominees.

The Atlanta Journal (Democrat) says there are few men only who can be considered as possible nominees for the Democratic nomination, namely Gorman, Cleveland, Judge Parker and Hearst. Of Gorman, who has bitterly denounced the action of the Administration in regard to Panama, The Journal says:—"Senator Gorman, by his recent brilliant victory in Maryland, commands to-day more power and prestige than he has at any previous time during his career. It was a bitterly fought campaign that he has just won, and he won it despite the efforts of President Roosevelt, who took an unbecoming and almost hysterical personal interest in it. Moreover, Gorman, by a clever manoeuvre, suddenly put the President on the defensive on the race question; and clearly enunciated its importance as a campaign issue for next year. Gorman is the recognised leader of the Democratic minority in the Senate; and he possesses in remarkable combination the qualities which make a profoundly deep politician and a magnetic leader. He has the ability to organise and to execute. Moreover, he is a man who has never been allured by the gleam of pinchbeck doctrines into casting away the real gold of his Democracy.

"The South will, as usual, go solidly for whatever candidate is nominated. Of the varying degrees of popularity enjoyed in this section by the four men mentioned we should say that Cleveland and Gorman had more of the kind which materialise into delegates at a national convention. Gorman has vastly increased his hold on the South and the border States by his stand on the race question."

Potato Crop in Europe.

It will astonish most people to hear that 28,356,667 acres are annually under potato culture in Europe, and that the total yield therefrom is estimated at 2,230,211,800 hundredweight. The Gardeners' Magazine (London) states that in the matter of area Russia occupies the highest position, with 9,645,300 acres. Germany ranks next with 8,004,236 acres, and France occupies the third place, with 3,818,378 acres. The potato areas in the other countries of Europe are as follows:—Austria, 2,882,677 acres; Hungary, 1,677,184 acres; United Kingdom, 1,303,184 acres; Italy, 516,600 acres; Holland, 386,000 acres; Sweden, 361,973 acres; Belgium, 340,386 acres; Denmark, 132,367 acres; Norway, 90,661 acres; Roumania, 26,642 acres; Servia, 16,540 acres, and Bulgaria, 4,681 acres. In the matter of yield, Germany is first, with 856,277,085 hundredweight, Russia second with 540,046,982 hundredweight, and France third with 226,600,441 hundredweight. The yields of other countries are:

	Hundredweight.
Austria	334,160,682
United Kingdom	113,306,380
Hungary	95,442,285
Holland	77,329,580
Sweden	54,321,880
Belgium	47,062,147
Norway	21,306,142
Denmark	21,177,681
Italy	18,916,280
Roumania	2,095,314
Servia	835,682
Bulgaria	410,778

These figures illustrate the great difference in the yield per acre in the different countries. The United Kingdom, which is sixth in area, is fifth in yield, heading Hungary by nearly 25,000,000 hundredweight, although having an area of about 272,000 acres less.

Drink water and get typhoid. Drink milk and get tuberculosis. Drink whiskey and get the jim-jams. Eat soup and get Bright's disease. Eat meat and encourage apoplexy. Eat oysters and acquire taxemia. Eat vegetables and weaken the system. Eat dessert and take to paresis. Smoke cigarettes and die early. Smoke cigars and get catarrh. Drink coffee and obtain nervous prostration. Drink wine and get the gout. In order to be entirely healthy, one must eat nothing, drink nothing, smoke nothing, and even before breathing one should see that the air is properly sterilized.—Southwestern World.

Anecdotal.

Queen Victoria, on her last trip to Italy, visited a church at Assisi, where she met a very devout monk, who escorted her through a chilly corridor. His head was shaven, and she asked him if he did not feel the draughts, wearing the tonsure in the way his order did. His reply was not in Italian, as she expected, but in perfect English, tinctured with Celtic brogue: "No, madame, I don't suffer at all in that way. You know, we Irish are a hot-headed race!"

The long-suffering disposition of the London Bobby is well known. Once upon a time, however, an old lady buttonholed one of these obliging officers of the law and proceeded to put to him a string of questions compared with which the Shorter Catechism simply did not amount to a circumstance. Finally, having exhausted her stock of queries, she asked: "Why do you wear that funny sort of strap under your chin, constable?" "That, madam," he replied, gravely, "is to rest our jaws when they get tired of answering silly questions."

Howard Paul says that on one occasion William J. Florence, at the end of a not very prosperous engagement in San Francisco, announced a benefit for himself and his wife. The late John W. Mackay happened to be in town at the time, and wrote to Florence for one orchestra seat. It was duly sent, as a matter of course, and Mrs. Florence remarked to her husband that, considering the friendship existing between the two men, she thought Mr. Mackay might have taken a private box at least. "Wait," said Florence, "he has not paid yet, and I am in no hurry." The benefit took place, Mr. Mackay came from Virginia City to occupy the seat he had taken, and a day later he sent Florence a cheque for $1,000.

A woman was charged the other day in Paris with shoplifting, to which she indignantly pleaded not guilty, her contention being that it was a case of mistaken identity. But the judge, who was a wily old gentleman, addressed her as follows: "I understand, madam, that you contend that the detective is altogether wrong in thinking that you are the lady who attempted to remove a variety of articles under cover of a cape? And yet the description which is given of her exactly corresponds with you. (Reading): 'A young lady, tall, striking, and remarkably handsome, lustrous eyes, a perfect figure, small feet and hands, exquisitely dressed—'" "Stop, Monsieur le Juge," exclaimed the young lady, with a far-away look in her eyes, "I plead guilty." "Ah!" said the judge.

Talleyrand used to excuse his marriage with a woman so lacking in tact and sense on the ground that clever women might compromise their husbands, whereas stupid women only compromised themselves. One day Denon, the famous Egyptologist, dined with the Talleyrands. M. Talleyrand instructed his wife to read Denon's books. She dutifully went to the library, but on the way forgot the name. She could only remember she wanted the book of a famous traveler whose name ended in "on." The librarian gave her "Robinson Crusoe." Mme. Talleyrand read the book, marveling that a great traveler could write such an interesting work. At dinner she astonished her guests by suddenly exclaiming: "Mon Dieu, monsieur, what joy you must have felt on your island when you found Friday!"

The historian Freeman had always been a very regular attendant at church services, and knew almost all the Psalms by heart. Sometimes, according to Professor William Clark, he gave evidence of this knowledge in a manner savoring slightly of irreverence. Writing of Dean Alford in the "Saturday Review," to which he was a frequent contributor, he made a reference to the copiousness of the dean's contributions to the periodical literature of the day. Dean Alford, he said, seemed incapable of abstaining even for a single month, so that, he said, if ever a month passed by without his appearing in the "Contemporary Review" or the "Sunday Magazine" or some similar publication, we can imagine his taking up the language of the Psalmist, and saying: "I kept silence, yea, even from 'Good Words,' but it was pain and grief unto me."

An Informal Call.

That a certain degree of formality is desirable is suggested by an amusing story from the Chicago "News" of a neighborly call. The far-reaching results of the visit can readily be imagined.

"Good evening," said the elderly woman, approaching the steps. "I see you are enjoying the fresh air. It's a luxury to be able to sit outside again, isn't it?"

"It is pleasant," responded the woman who was sitting on the front steps.

"I don't believe you know me. I am Mrs. Baxter, your neighbor, two doors off. No, don't get up. I'll just sit down here beside you. Don't say a word now. I have intended to call ever since you moved in, but you know how it is. There's always something. And when I saw you come out and sit down I said to my husband, 'I'm just going to run over right now. If she thinks I'm informal I don't mind, because I am informal, I always was.' And he just laughed and told me to go ahead. He says he thinks he met your husband some years ago. How do you like your house? You needn't tell me, though, for I hardly suppose you've got used to it yet, and it's so discouraging getting settled; and then I saw Mrs. Thomas, your next-door neighbor on the other side, a day or two ago, and she tells me that you've been having awful trouble getting a servant. You needn't say anything. I know exactly what it is. I don't know what the girls are coming to. They don't seem to want to work, and they're most of them worthless when you do get one. I've had more ——"

The other woman had twice made a movement as if to rise, but had been prevented by the detaining hand of the informal caller. This time, however, she got up.

"If you're wanting to see Mrs. Gossage, ma'am, you'll have to call again, for she's gone to the theayter and won't be back till late," she said, with cold dignity. "I ain't Mrs. Gossage myself, I'm the cook."

The Resemblance.

Jack—These summer engagements are like automobiles. Vivian—How so? Jack—Well, they jar one so, they are so easily broken, and a girl is never happy unless she's in one; and some of them are decidedly dangerous.—"Judge."

Little Emily Kingsbury, aged four, who attends the kindergarten and calls it the "kidney garden," was being examined as to the senses.

"What are your ears for, Emily?"

"To hear with," was the answer."

"And what are your eyes for?"

"To see with."

"And what is your nose for?"

"To blow," was the innocent answer.—Lippincott's Magazine.

Archie Shade's Watch.

"While picnicking with a crowd in the country the other day," says the Joplin "News-Herald," "Arch Shade accidentally dropped his watch in a spring, and, quite naturally, it has since refused to run. He took the timepiece to a jeweler, and the following conversation ensued:

"'Here's my watch; can you fix it?'

"'What's the matter? Did you break the spring?'

"'No; the spring broke the watch.'

"The man wondered, but proceeded to examine the injured article.

"'The spring is broken,' he finally announced.

"'No wonder,' said Arch; 'I dropped the watch in it.'

"It began to dawn upon the jeweler that the young man was certainly insane, and just as he was glancing around for some avenue of escape Arch explained the situation."

Artistic and Beautiful.

The use of electric light is becoming so general for house lighting in Toronto that it seems almost unnecessary to demonstrate the many beautiful effects which may be had by the use of electric lighting in the home. The Electric Light Company find, however, a very good purpose is being accomplished by having the art showrooms in their new office building in Adelaide street east thrown open to the public. It is their intention to have an exhibit of the latest things in electric fixtures there, in order that Toronto people may have the benefit of a large variety of beautiful pieces to select from. Their wish is that everyone who takes an interest in the artistic and beautiful should call and see their display.

Cockneyisms.

The following dialogue between a 'bus-driver and a droopy-looking youth with a well-watered silk hat who was handling the reins on the box of a brougham is a fair sample of the ready wit and the equally ready animosity of the London Jehu. The youth had evidently inconvenienced the 'bus-driver in some subtle way—a state of affairs in which each party, according to the other, is to blame.

'Bus Driver—'Ere; you ought to be drivin' cows in the country, you ought!

Droopy Youth—Garn! w'ere's the reg'lar man? The company don't know you're takin' 'is job, do they?

'Bus Driver—You're the man wot washes dahn the brougham, ain't yer?

Droopy Youth—No wonder you ain't got many passengers; they judges by the fiee, yer know.

'Bus Driver—Fice! Wot d'you call that thing you've got? W'y, it only wants a 'andle to be a 'atchet.

Droopy Youth (whipping up his horse) — —— —— —— ——! !

'Bus Driver—That's right; you 'urry home; yer farver wants 'is 'at!

A Wise Man.

He was padding the hoof through a prosperous village, when, turning a sharp bend in the road, he nearly collided with a man running as if for his life, and a little farther saw a great smoke. He asked the fellow where he was going and whether the smoke was a house on fire. "No," he said, "that's a neighbor of mine burning weeds. She's a widow," he said, beginning to move on again, "and when I see a widow burning her weeds I'm off to a safer place," and with a wild howl he galloped away.

Equitable Gold Mining Co.

R. C. LANE, President. W. F. NORTON, Secretary and Treasurer.

Over $300,000 of development work already done. Main shaft 9 x 16 feet, down 700 feet. Over 3,000 feet of drifts, tunels and shafts showing immense ore body

Destined to become large and continuous dividend payer.

The Equitable Gold Mining Co.'s properties consist of three mines, known as the North Bonanza, Flowery and Kimbark. They are located in Six Mile Canon, less than four miles from Virginia City, Nevada, which is the nearest railroad station.

Years ago, over three hundred thousand dollars of development work was done upon the mines—so they are not mere "prospects" but actual mines. This work was done under the personal supervision of competent engineers, and was paid for by the owners of the mines themselves; thus giving double assurance that the work was well done and that the expenditure was justified.

The Main Shaft (triple compartment, 9x16 feet in the clear) is down seven hundred feet. From this shaft, running along the vein matter, east and west, are four drifts, at different levels, having a combined length (including the Rule winze and the tunnel) of 2,850 feet.

In addition to the above there are four small shafts, with a combined depth of about 300 feet; 535 feet of tunnels, and at least 500 feet of cross-cuts, upraises, etc.

All told, there is 4,650 feet of underground work—the most of which is in ore. Here is nearly one mile of openings in mineralized rock.

It is conservatively estimated by competent and reliable engineers and practical miners that there is developed an ore body of at least One Million Five Hundred Thousand Tons!

As a further evidence of the large amount of work done there is from 75,000 to 100,000 tons of ore on the dumps at the different surface openings—ore that, with modern cheapened processes, can be converted into gold bullion at a profit.

THE TITLE

Title to the Flowery and North Bonanza mines is by patent from the United States government, while the title of the Kimbark is by location and possession.

The Equitable Company obtained the Flowery and North Bonanza mines, both of which are patented, by purchase—the payments therefore to be made out of a share of the net proceeds of the mines. The Company has a written contract, duly recorded, for a deed, and is in possession of the properties, and is now operating them. The sum of $3,000 was paid on the contract, September 30th, 1902, and partial payments have since been made. The Company is entitled to $4.25 per ton as cost of mining and milling. One-half of all over and above this $4.25 per ton goes to the former owners till they receive the total sum of $106,000, without interest. There is no stipulation as to amount of work to be done within any specified time—and no proceeds, no pay. The Company can therefore pay it in one year or it can pay it in ten years. With this exception the Company is free from debt. Its policy is to pay as it goes. In this way it has no fear of financial embarrassments. The title to the Kimbark is by "location," under the mining laws of the United States. Work enough has already been done to entitle the Company to a patent, which in due time will be obtained.

Recent Development Work

Since the Company acquired the property, it has put up poles and wires for a distance of one mile for the transmission of electric power from the Truckee River Electric Power Plant. By this means unlimited power for mining, hoisting and milling is obtained.

It has built a dwelling house for the manager, a large boarding house for the miners, a barn, a power house and blacksmith shop.

It has put an electric hoist and skip into the 200-tunnel; has purchased ore cars and the necessary tools for mining purposes.

It has acquired the Kimbark ground, adjoining the Flowery and North Bonanza mines, and is now developing the property by driving a tunnel.

Within the last few months the Company has mined and milled over 800 tons of ore—realizing therefrom about $10,000 worth of gold bullion. The out-put is constantly increasing and all the Company needs is more mill capacity to handle its ore.

FERROZONE

Will give you an Appetite and with Appetite and good digestion comes health and strength

Ferrozone will in one week give you a splendid apetite, and will so improve digestion and assimilation that full benefit will be derived from everything eaten.

There is nothing like Ferrozone to create a keen healthy relish for food for the brain, and a tonic for the nerves and brain. To those leading a sedentary life it is a perfect boon.

The reverend Dennis O'Brien, D.D., the well known Evangelist says of Ferrozone: "I have pleasure in saying that I have found Ferrozone a remarkably good preparation. It keeps up one's appetite, cures nervousness and sleeplessness, and perhaps the very best tonic I have used. Being in the form of chocolate coated tablet, it is both pleasant and convenient to take and is well worthy of my highest recommendations."

This is an example of the way people speak of Ferrozone who have used it, and should be convincing evidence of its unusual merit. It is warranted to cure Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Lost Appetite, Rheumatism, Kidney and Liver Troubles, Catarrh, and all other diseases arising from impairment of blood or nerve tone. Refuse to accept a substitute for Ferrozone. Every druggist sells it 50c. per box, or three for $1.25. Prepared by N. C. Polson & Co., Hartford, Conn., and Kingston, Ont.

Mr. Batten Confident

Ald. Batten, who has been a member of the Council for the past four years, is again seeking re-election, and refers to his past record as an evidence of what he may do in the future. Mr. Batten claims to have done everything in his power to advance the town's interests, and his practical knowledge of the corporation justifies him in seeking a renewal of public confidence.

THE ASHBURNHAM CANDIDATES

Messrs Frank Adams and Wm. Scott Should be Elected

The Times hopes that the ratepayers will take good care to see that Messrs. Frank Adams and Wm. Scott, of Ashburnham who are all in the field as Aldermanic candidates, are elected. It would be a very ungenerous thing if these gentlemen were defeated, although we do not think this at all likely. Mr. Adams has occupied the position of Reeve of the village for many years, while Mr. Scott is also not without municipal experience. We ask every ratepayer to include Messrs. Adams and Scott when marking their ballot on Monday next.

—Rev Father Patrick Kelly, who was recently ordained to the priesthood in St. Peter's cathedral, has gone to Trout Creek, where he will enter upon his duties as curate to Rev. A. F. Kelly, the priest in charge of the parish. Father Kelly carries with him the hearty good wishes of his many Peterborough friends.

MR. HICKS AND THE COUNCIL

He is in the Field as an Aldermanic Candidate for 1904

The interest being taken in civic affairs this year is most encouraging. Many good men have consented to stand for the Council, which is somewhat of a new experience in local municipal affairs. It is felt by many that while the business of the town has probably not been badly managed during the past year or two, there is room for considerable improvement.

Amongst the number of new aspirants to municipal honors none perhaps has better qualifications for the position than Mr. Robert Hicks, the well known coal and wood merchant. Mr. Hicks is a young and successful business man, and would be a safe man to place at the Council board. His address, published in another column, shows that he has the proper conception of the duties pertaining to the position of Alderman. While he is in favor of the town's advancement, he believes that the rate of taxation should not be increased, but rather decreased. The Times would like to see Mr. Hicks elected.

A PRETTY WEDDING

Nuptials of Miss Victoria Thornton and Mr John Henry

At 244 Aylmer street, the home of Mr. David Thornton, a very pleasing event took place on Wednesday afternoon, when his eldest daughter, Miss Victoria, was married to Mr. John Henry, of town.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. G. Potter, of St. Andrew's church. The bride wore a gown of slate gray voile trimmed with chiffon and applique. Her travelling suit was of dark green cloth, with green velvet hat to match. Mr. and Mrs. Henry left on the G.T.R train for a wedding trip to points west.

A PRETTY HOME WEDDING

The bridesmaid was also attired in white silk and carried a bouquet of pink carnations. The bride's traveling suit was blue ladies cloth, with hat to match. Bargains in Pianos

There are some first class bargains to be had in some new and second hand pianos and organs, at W. G. Landreth's, 170 Charlotte street, agent for Heintzman & Co., Toronto. Call and see for yourself.

Why can't we come over to your house and play any more?

Because papa gets so mad when we make a little bit of noise.

What makes him that way?

Mamma says it's dyspepsia makes him act so crazy.

That's about the way it strikes the small boy. The dyspeptic has no idea of his own unreasonableness or harshness. Little things are magnified and seem to justify his quick anger.

There's health for the dyspeptic and happiness for the family by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition, and restores perfect health and strength, by enabling the perfect digestion and assimilation of food.

$3,000 FORFEIT

Will be paid by the World's Dispensary Medical Association, Proprietors, Buffalo, N.Y., if they cannot show the original signature of the individual volunteering the testimonial below, and also of the writers of every testimonial among the thousands which they are constantly publishing, thus proving their genuineness.

"I have taken one bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for indigestion and liver complaint," writes Mr. C. M. Wilson, of Yadkin College, Davidson Co., N. C. "Have had no bad spells since I commenced taking your medicine—in fact, have not felt like the same man. Before I took the 'Golden Medical Discovery' I could not eat anything without awful distress, but now I can eat anything I wish without having unpleasant feelings."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cleanse and regulate the bowels.

VOTE FOR GIBBS

To the Municipal Electors of Peterborough and Ashburnham:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—At the request of many ratepayers I have decided to offer myself a candidate for Alderman for 1904. I have been a member of the Ashburnham Council and am familiar with the live questions before the electors of the village as well as the important questions engaging the attention of the Town of Peterborough. If elected I will give these and all other matters that may come before the Council my careful consideration. As a workingman I will be particularly anxious to keep down taxation and curtail all useless expenditure of the people's money.

Hoping to receive your cordial support at the polls.

I remain, yours truly,

WILLIAM GIBBS.

December 31, 1903.

NOT FROM WARD 5

Mr. W. J. Johnston is a Resident of the Town

To the Editor of The Times;

Sir,—In the aldermanic contest I desire to call the attention of the ratepayers to the card of Mr. Wm. J. Johnston, who is asking the votes of the electors on the strength of his "experience of four years in the Ashburnham Council."

Very many are under the impression from reading Mr. Johnston's card, that he is a representative from No. 5 ward, whereas he is a resident of No. 3 ward, having removed from Ashburnham some time in 1903. I feel sure that Mr. Johnston did not intend by the wording of his notice to mislead the public, and it only requires the attention of the people to be called to it to remove the wrong impression conveyed. There are only three candidates from No. 5 ward, Messrs. Scott, Gibbs and Adams.

Yours, etc.,

EVERYBODY READS THE TIMES.

TO THE ELECTORS

of the Town of Peterborough, including Ashburnham, now part of Peterborough.

Ladies and Gentlemen.

Having received nomination as Alderman for our prosperous Town, I respectfully solicit your votes and influence.

It will be impossible for me to make a personal canvass and therefore I wish to state that I am opposed to giving the contract for lighting to the Peterborough Light and Power Co., at $60.00 per lamp so long as the Town can get as good lighting for $36.00 per lamp from the Otonabee Power Co., which has done so much to bring down the price of lighting, and whose tender shows a saving of over $14,000.00 in ten years. I am also opposed to the present street railway by-law but will support and vote for a good up-to-date street railway operated by good business men but without a bonus, and I will do my best, if elected, to advance the general interests of our prosperous town.

Wishing you all a Happy New Year, I am,

Your obedient servant,

JOHN SAWERS.

29th December, 1903.

To the Electors

OF PETERBOROUGH.

Your vote and influence is respectfully solicited for

FRANK ADAMS.

for Alderman for 1904.

TO THE ELECTORS

Having received nomination as alderman for the town of Peterborough, I respectfully solicit your vote and influence, and if elected will use my best endeavors to advance the interests of the town. It will be impossible for me to make a personal canvas, but as I have had an experience of four years in the Ashburnham Council, I am willing that I should be judged thereby.

Yours faithfully,

W. J. JOHNSTON,

471 Aylmer street.

TO THE ELECTORS

OF UNITED PETERBOROUGH

Having been requested to stand for election as Alderman, and having been duly nominated for that office, I respectfully solicit your liberal support and influence. If elected, I shall endeavor to look after the interests of the town in a straightforward manner, and in honoring me with your confidence, you can rely upon my faithfully representing you on the Board of Aldermen for 1904.

Yours respectfully,

R. C. BRAUND.

To the Ratepayers

OF PETERBOROUGH

Ladies and Gentlemen;

I solicit your votes and assistance to ensure my return as a member of the municipal council for 1904.

With the larger responsibilities devolving on the town and the administration of its affairs, I can promise if elected, to do all that careful judgment, earnest work, and the very best intentions can do to further your interests.

I hope to have your support,

E. F. MASON.

To the Municipal Electors

OF

PETERBORO AND ASHBURNHAM

Ladies and Gentlemen:

As I have been honored with the nomination for alderman for 1904, I have accepted the same, and respectfully solicit your vote and influence.

Should you elect me to assist in the management of your affairs, I will use my best judgment in the interests of Peterborough and Ashburnham.

I have been a workingman all my life, and have had a good schooling in economy, which I think can be used to a greater extent in the management of our municipal affairs.

If the question of street lighting is reopened, as the result of the appeal now before the courts, I shall, if elected, give that matter that serious consideration which its importance deserves.

Wishing you, ladies and gentlemen, a very happy new year, I remain,

Your obedient servant,

JOHN KYLIE.
